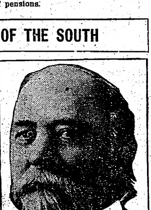
When Timothy T. Ansberry, in congress from the Fifth district of Ohio, heard the news, he hastened to the White House. "Make out the papers," he told the president, "in the name of my constituent, Gaylord Miller Saltzgaber of Van Wert. He served four years in the army, he is as good a Democrat as there is in the party, and he is a young man."

"Young?" the president repeated, with one of his flickering smiles.

"Yes, for a Saltzgaber," replied Mr. Ansberry. "The Saltzgabers are only in their prime at seventy-five. Samuel Saltzgaber, the father of my candidate, lived to be one hundred and three years old."

Gaylord Miller Saltzgaber was invited to Washington that he might undergo an inspection. He did not want an office, but he came—an erect, robust man, with military manners and a very friendly disposition. On May 20, 1913, he was appointed commissioner of pensions.

LEADS MASONS OF THE SOUTH



When the Scottish Rite Masons of the southern jurisdiction at their recent convention in Washington named Judge George Fleming Moore of Montgomery as sovereign grand commander of the order, they selected one of the most prominent Masons in the whole South for the honor.

Judge Moore was born in Talladega, Ala., educated at Central institute there and at the University of Virginia. After a law course at that university he was admitted to the bar, practiced for a while in Rockford, Ala., and later in Montgomery until 1902. He was appointed special United States attorney by Attorney General Garland during Cleveland's first administration, and was next appointed assistant United States district attorney, serving in this capacity through Cleveland's first term, Harrison's second term and part of Cleveland's second term. He was then appointed United States district attorney and served until after McKinley's inauguration. He served as judge in several important cases.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

District of Columbia to Be Square With Uncle Sam

WASHINGTON.—With the payment by the District of Columbia to the federal government next spring of a balance of $76,283.29 on account of advances for special park improvements, the municipality will have completely discharged all indebtedness to the United States under the several acts of congress directing reimbursement for advances. This is shown by the annual report of the auditor, Alonzo Tweedale, submitted to the District commissioners.

I ALWAYS PAY MY DEBTS
U.S.
D.C.

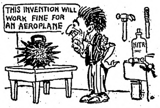
During the year just closed the District reduced its indebtedness by reason of cash payments made thereon in the amount of $1,986,250.23. Its total debt at the close of the year amounted to $7,015,433.29, made up of the item referred to on account of advances for park improvements and $6,939,150 of the bonded debt, which does not expire until 1914.

The report shows that the payment of $621,521.71 to the United States on account of advances, general fund, for extraordinary improvements, closes the account made during the fiscal years 1901 to 1909, inclusive, for certain extraordinary projects of permanent improvement in the District. Total advances on this account amounted to $4,144,690.35 and the interest charges thereon paid by the District to $587,887.04.

"During the period in which the foregoing advances were made," it is stated, "there was expended on account of permanent improvements over eighteen million dollars, one-half of which, paid from District revenues, amounted to between nine and ten million dollars. All of these extraordinary improvements have been paid in cash from current revenues, without resorting to long-term loans, or permanent improvement bonds, which is the usual practice in other municipalities."

Crank Inventions for War Offered the Government

WITH the outbreak of war in Europe even more than the usual large number of crank inventions and ideas relating to war on land and sea and in the air poured in to the army and navy departments, and there is no letup in the flood. Most numerous of the recent inventions which have been sent to the departments in Washington are those relating to bomb-dropping devices. The bombs assume many ingenious forms. Some are loaded with a vapor which produces sleep, so that an enemy may be lulled to slumber and easily captured without loss of life and the suffering which comes from the explosion of bombs of more destructive character. One man suggested that the bomb be filled with printed leaflets that should make an appeal to an enemy, and so instill a spirit of forgiveness and generosity, and thus produce the sentiment of peace.



THIS INVENTION WILL WORK FINE FOR AN AEROPLANE
NITR

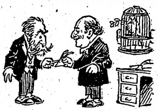
There are also incendiary projectiles and bullets that, as the name and title implies, produce conflagration and are capable of creating havoc by fire.

In the class of devices that are defensive rather than offensive there is the arrangement of huge mirrors set up at such angles that the approaching enemy does not see the opposing force behind these mirrors, but gets the impression of terrain, which is merely the reflection of that over which they are traversing. Then there are the electrical devices which betray the approach of an enemy, such as threads stretched across the country which on fracture communicate with signals or sound alarms indicating the location of troops. There are hidden platforms which can be so nicely adjusted that there will be an indication at headquarters of the strength of the enemy and its character, whether infantry, cavalry or artillery.

One invention has to do with what is described in the files as "composite armor," which may be of alternate thicknesses, or, as in one case, be mounted on powerful springs, affording no adequate backing for the attacking shell to penetrate. The projectile, it is represented, will bounce back.

Secretary Bryan Beats Swords Into Plowshares

ANOTHER delicate hint to the European belligerents to cease their fighting is contained in a present which Secretary of State Bryan has made to each of the 29 ambassadors and ministers who have signed with him one of the Bryan peace treaties. Included in the number are the representatives here of Great Britain, France, Russia and Belgium, all of which countries are at war.



Recalling the Biblical text, "They shall beat their swords into plowshares," the secretary obtained from the war department a number of obsolete swords, the blades of which he had made into miniature plowshares. On them he had engraved the text quoted.

It is the secretary's hope that these plowshares be always on the desks of the diplomats as paperweights, as perpetual reminders of "the better way." The handles of the swords Mr. Bryan has had made into paperweights for the members of the senate committee on foreign relations, who passed on the peace treaties, while the scabbards were cut into short pieces, filled with lead and polished up so that they also may serve as paperweights of peace.

Poor Thomas Jefferson May Have to Move Again

WASHINGTON'S most artistic bronze statue—that of Thomas Jefferson by the French sculptor, P. T. David Angers—has had many locations since it was presented to the United States in 1834 by Capt. Uriah P. Levy, U. S. N., and may before long be told again to "move on," finding a final resting place in Monticello. For several years after the statue was delivered it remained in obscurity for some reason not explained, but it was finally placed in the semicircle in front of the White House, about where the fountain now stands. In 1874 it was removed to Statuary hall in the capitol, and occupied a position between the plaster statue of Washington, after Houdin, and the statue of Edward Dickinson Baker of Oregon, where it remained for several years. It was then transferred to the rotunda of the capitol and placed between the pictures representing the surrender of Cornwallis and General Washington surrendering his commission, by Trumbull. After occupying this position for some time it was again removed and placed on the right hand side of the east entrance to the rotunda, opposite the statue of Washington, where it now stands, but just how long it may continue in this position is not certain.

IT'S FIERCE TH' WAY THEY KEEP MOVIN' POOR TOM'S STATUE
YES, YOU CAN HARDLY KEEP TRACK OF IT

Just why Thomas Jefferson, third president of the United States (1801-1809), should change his location so often is rather peculiar; surely Thomas Jefferson of Virginia (1743-1826) and author of the Declaration of Independence and signer of the same, member of congress and minister to France, is entitled to have his statue located in some permanent and conspicuous place.

Russians Are Operating on Gigantic Scale

BELGIAN OUTPOST PHOTOGRAPHED IN ACTION

© INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE

BLIZZARD CAUSES LULL IN BATTLE IN WEST FLANDERS

FOUR WEEKS OF DESPERATE FIGHTING FINDS GERMANS STILL INTENT UPON REACHING COAST.

TEUTONS TURNING BELGIUM INTO A GREAT FORTRESS

Means Kaiser's Forces Are Preparing for Winter If Advance Is Halted —Berlin Reports No Decisive Battle in East Prussia as Yet.

London, Nov. 17.—After four weeks of most desperate fighting there is a lull in the battle in Flanders. With this lull, however, has come little relief for the men in the trenches, as the artillery and rifle fire, to which they have been subjected with hardly any intermission, has been replaced by one of those severe storms which so often accompany November in this latitude.

Proportions of Blizzard.

In some parts of England the storm has reached the proportions of a blizzard; on the sea a heavy gale rages, and the battlefields are getting their full share of wind and rain. For the most part the opposing armies have been content to shell each other at long range, but the Germans have made several attacks around Ypres which, according to the French general staff, have been repulsed with heavy losses.

Despite these losses it is not believed the Germans have any intention of giving up their attempt to reach the French coast, and the allies are making elaborate preparations to block any further advance in force.

Defense Works Pushed.

Extensive defense works have been erected along the Yser canal, and the French armies are holding that line from the Belgian border south to the River Oise and pushing forward approach works which place them in a better position for either defense or offense.

The Germans report they have taken a few hundred British and French prisoners, but that the unfavorable weather has impeded their progress.

Concerning the fighting around Dixmude, the public must rely on unofficial reports. Here, it is said, the Germans are finding the destroyed village a death trap. They have been unable to debouch from this point in the daytime as all the approaches are commanded by the allies' guns and night attacks have met with disaster.

Neither Side Can Advance.

The fact is apparent that neither side has been able to make any sensible advance, both being so well entrenched that neither artillery nor infantry can move them.

The Germans are turning Belgium into a fortress, which means that if they do not succeed in advancing they intend to be prepared for a winter in Belgium. The whole coast from Ostend to the Dutch border has been placed in a state of defense, and civilians are rigorously excluded from that area.

Fighting in East.

Fighting continues in east Prussia and other regions in the eastern area between the Russians and the Germans and Austrians, but without any decisive result, according to the Berlin official statement.

Bulgaria also has set at rest the report that she had an agreement with Turkey, and has issued a statement that no such agreement exists.

The Servians and Montenegrins who started out to invade Bosnia and Herzegovinia and were at one time approaching the Bosnian capital of Sarajevo, are now back in their own territory, where, according to their own accounts, they are offering stubborn resistance to the Austrians. The weather is favorable to them as snow is falling.

Great Battle Developing.

London, Nov. 16.—While the battle in west Flanders continues to hold public attention because of the desperate character of the fighting, the numbers of men engaged and the territory at stake, military men now look upon east Prussia as the center of gravity of the war.

In the latter field of operations a tremendous battle is developing. The Russians are pushing vigorously a great enveloping movement. They are engaged with the Germans along a wide curve of 150 miles from Stalluponen, in the northeast, through Goldap and Kruglanken, which is well within the tangle of lakes, down to Soldau in the southwest.

Military observers say the Germans apparently have checked their retreat in Poland and by counter attacks are endeavoring to create diversion. They say, however, that the Russians are not to be turned from their plan, which is believed to be an attack on Danzig. They argue that the Germans either must allow east Prussia to be overrun a second time, or bring up reinforcements and that they can hardly weaken their army along the Polish frontier, for that would leave Posen and Silesia open to invasion.

Allies Hope for Sacrifice.

The allies naturally are hoping an effort will be made to relieve east Prussia at a sacrifice to the German armies in Belgium and France.

In any fighting in their own country the Germans will have the advantage over the Russians as they have a network of strategic railways to move their troops quickly and they use motors to a larger extent than their opponents. Military men are watching operations in this region with deepest interest.

Austrians Admit Evacuation.

Vienna admits the Austrians have evacuated eastern Galicia, but as an offset to this says the Servian resistance has been broken and the Austrians have crossed the Danube, driving the Servians back into their own country.

Vienna also reports that the Austrians have turned their attention to the Montenegrins and are endeavoring to force them back. According to a Montenegrin report they have failed. Accounts from this part of the world are so contradictory, however, that the only thing clear is that the Austrians, by sending up reinforcements virtually have cleared their country of the enemy.

German Attack Continues.

London, Nov. 14.—A critical stage in the battle in West Flanders has been reached and the next few days, if not hours, should produce something more decisive than has yet occurred. The Kaiser's army seems determined to reach Calais and Dunkirk.

The Germans continue to attack, with all the forces at their command, the British and French who hold the line between Dixmude and Ypres. With the exception of the capture of Dixmude and some little progress around Ypres, they have not been able to make any material advance.

Russians Take Johannisburg.

The Russian army, under General Rennenkampff, is fighting its way into east Prussia and has taken Johannisburg, which is on the railway from Lyck to Soldan, both of which towns are in Russian hands. This gives to Russia the control of an important railway line, which skirts the frontier in German territory and several branch railways running into the interior.

The central army, which drove the Germans back from the Vistula, has had only unimportant engagements, but it is known to be pushing forward to the borders of Posen and Silesia, which the Germans are crossing.

Russians Near Cracow.

The Russian left wing has followed the Kielce railway to the Austrian frontier, and is within a few miles of Cracow, the siege of which is imminent.

The southern army, under General Ruzsky, is at Rzeszow, between Przemysl and Cracow, and its crossing of the San river is being opposed by the Austrians. Another detachment continues the siege of Przemysl, while another is operating against the Austrians who are holding the passes of the Carpathians.

The army of Armenia, whose base is on Kars, Transcaucasia, is approaching the Turkish fortress of Erzerum.

The manner in which Grand Duke Nicholas, the Russian commander-in-chief, is wielding these armies and the mobility they are showing is the subject of admiration on the part of military men here.

Austrian Divisions Annihilated.

A message from Bucharest, according to an Exchange Telegraph company dispatch from Rome, says two Austrian divisions have been annihilated along the river Pruth.

A message from Sarajevo says the governor of Bosnia has addressed a proclamation to the Austrian army declaring the Servians must be completely defeated before winter.

Marks Invasion of England?

By International News Service.

London, Nov. 13.—The official press bureau announces that H. M. S. Niger has just been torpedoed by a German submarine in the Downs and foundered. All her officers and crew were saved. Four men were injured.

The Niger was a comparatively unimportant unit in the British fleet.

The sinking of the Niger is declared to mark the opening of the threatened attack on the English coast by German submarines. The Downs is a section of the Kentish coast just south of the headlands that guard the entrance of the river Thames. It is a protected harbor, made so by the Goodwin Sands and is the nearest point on the British coast line to the French port of Calais.

Germans Take Dixmude.

Paris, Nov. 13.—Dixmude, the Belgian town around which was centered the hardest fighting in Flanders, has been captured by the Germans. This was admitted in an official statement issued here.

Canadian Troops Under Fire.

Paris, Nov. 16.—Reports here declare that Canadian troops or at least a portion of them, are now in France, participating in the terrific fighting to prevent the German drive to the coast.

★ LATE WAR DEVELOPMENTS ★

A terrific storm which is now sweeping Flanders, the North Sea and the English coast has brought about a comparative lull in the fighting in the battle of Flanders. There is no rest for the entrenched armies, however, for the desperate fighting of the last few days has been replaced by driving wind and rain. The opposing armies seem content with long range artillery shelling.

* * *

The official Paris communication asserts that the German forces have been absolutely driven from the left bank of the Yser. The dispatch admits, however, that the Teutons still hold Dixmude. A few German attacks, it said, had been repulsed with heavy losses.

* * *

Satisfied that the Germans have not given up their attempt to reach the French coast, despite their enormous losses, the allies are making elaborate plans to resist any further advance while the Germans in turn are declared to be turning Belgium, from Ostend to the Dutch coast, into a veritable fortress.

* * *

Berlin declares that there has as yet been no definite battle fought in the eastern theater of war. The Russians again say they are making progress in east Prussia and are about to attack Cracow, in Galicia, for a second time.

* * *

Servians and Montenegrins have now been driven back into their own territory by the Austrians, but here, it is reported, the Austrians are being met by a stubborn resistance which is all the more unfavorable to the Austrians because of the snow.

* * *

Three British cruisers have been sighted in the Atlantic, heading for the Panama canal which, it is thought, they maye use to reach the Pacific and join Japanese vessels in pursuit of German ships.

* * *

A cargo of German dyestuffs, worth over $1,000,000, has just reached the United States. American textile industries will thus be enabled to resume operations.

Vienna admits that the Austrians have evacuated eastern Galicia, but as an offset says the Servian resistance has been broken, the Serbs driven back into their own country and Austrian troops to have crossed the Danube.

* * *

Eight German airmen in four machines are dashed to earth in a fight with two French and two British machines. The allies drew the Germans over their lines, where shrapnel brought them crashing to earth.

* * *

The Japanese fleet reported off the Chilean coast turned out to be a German squadron. Another naval engagement is consequently expected in the South Pacific.

* * *

Russians have occupied three more towns in Galicia, according to an official Vienna announcement, namely Tarnow, Jaslo and Krono.

Wealthy Belgiums send check for $3,000,000 on Bank of England to American commission in London for the relief of their countrymen.

* * *

Thousands saw the sinking of the British gunboat Niger at the mouth of the Thames by the German submarine. English naval history contains no such daring raid. It is now thought the Teutons will try to enter London harbor.

* * *

Washington has so far been unable to locate the U. S. cruisers North Carolina and Tennessee off the coast of Turkey, but officials say they would have been notified before this if anything had happened to one of them as reported.

* * *

London is jubilant over the Kaiser's loss of two cruisers, the Emden, which has been terrorizing British shipping in Southern waters, and the Koenigsberg, also operating in Southern waters. The first has been destroyed and the latter bottled up in a small stream in Africa.

"AUDACIOUS" SUNK; $10,000,000 BRITISH DREADNAUGHT LOST

THIRD LARGEST AND ONE OF NEWEST OF ENGLISH FLEET HITS MINE OFF COAST OF IRELAND.

NEWS OF CATASTROPHE IS WITHHELD BY ADMIRALTY

SHIP COST $10,000,000.

The Audacious was built in 1913 and cost approximately $10,000,000. It was of 23,000 tons displacement and carried 10 12½-inch guns, besides many smaller pieces. The ship had a speed of 22 knots and was rated as one of the largest and most powerful battleships of the British navy.

New York, Nov. 16.—Reports of disaster to the British super-dreadnought Audacious, which have persisted ever since the White Star liner Olympic, diverted from its course, arrived at Lough Swilly on Oct. 29, are confirmed in mail advices received by the Associated Press from a point in Ireland.

Less Than Two Years Old.

After a career of less than two years the Audacious, of the King George V class, third in tonnage and armament of his majesty's warships, lies at the bottom of the ocean off the north coast of Ireland. It was hit by a torpedo, or more probably disabled by a mine, just before 9 a. m., Oct. 27.

With the possible exceptoin of one or two men, the crew of 800 officers and men was rescued by small boats from the Olympic.

The rescue was made in a rough sea through brilliant and daring seamanship on the part of the White Star crew.

Secrecy Is Enjoined.

Secrecy regarding the loss of the Audacious was enjoined upon the crew and passengers of the Olympic, who were urged to refrain from discussing the naval tragedy which they had witnessed, pending a complete investigation.

Presence of Mines Known.

The Audacious met its fate 25 miles off the Irish coast, which the Olympic was skirting. The liner sailed from New York for Glasgow on Oct. 21. It had been warned that there were German mines off Tory island and fear of these mines was the official explanation when it unexpectedly put into Lough Swilly.

The Olympic's passengers saw the flash of the explosion and watched the mighty warrior settle.

Casualty List Staggers England.

London, Nov. 14.—England is staggered by an announcement from Premier Herbert Asquith stating that the British casualties in the war up to Oct. 31 were 57,000 killed, wounded and missing. The German casualties for the same period were 509,000. With this toll paid in the fighting so far, more men are to be rushed to the front. A supplementary estimate from the war office declared that with 1,000,000 more men the total British strength of all ranks would be 2,186,400, of which probably 350,000 are at the front.

Thrilling Airship Encounter.

Paris, Nov. 16.—A thrilling encounter in which figured eight aeroplanes, four German, two French and two British, occurred in the vicinity of Ypres. The German machines were destroyed finally by artillery and the eight officers they carried were killed.

CARRANZA HAS COMPROMISE

WILLING TO QUIT MEXICO IF VILLA WILL LEAVE ALSO.

Agents of Latter Protest Announced Intention of U. S. to Evacuate Vera Cruz.

Mexico City, Nov. 17.—General Obregon received a dispatch from Cordoba saying that General Carranza had made an offer to General Eulalio Gutierres to turn over the military forces to General Gonzales and leave for Havana, to arrive there not later than Nov. 25, if General Francisco Villa would turn over his command to General Gutierrez and be in Havana the same date. The Aguas Calientes convention must meetin Mexico City the day Generals Villa and Carranza arrive in Havana, according to General Carranza's offer.

Villa Protests Evacuation.

Vera Cruz.—General Francisco Villa's agents continued to send messages to their northern chief and to influential members of their faction in protest against the early evacuation of Vera Cruz by the United States forces, alleging that such a step would be manifest support by the United States of General Venustiano Carranza.

The hotels here are filled with refugees. Women and children of the better class are becoming a common sight in their corridors. Many families, once wealthy, but ruined by the warfare, are compelled to remain in Vera Cruz as they are without money to pay their passage abroad.

Just beyond the American lines General Candido Aguilar has only a few men on his outpost positions. Scrupulous care appears to be taken to prevent any friction with the Americans, to speed whose departure Aguilar is said to have begged General Eulalio Gutierrez to join him in an agreement not to begin hostilities until they had departed.

General Higenio and Benjamin Argumendo have not succeeded in capturing Puebla, but have interrupted traffic to that place.

General Carranza's strength at Tampico appears to have been increased by the arrival there of the gunboat Zaragoza and the declaration of Captain Malpica, commanding the vessel, that he was for Carranza. The gunboat was detained by the Constitutionalists at the entrance to the river and her commander compelled to declare for which side he would fight.

All Assurances Given.

Washington, Nov. 16.—Monday, Nov. 23 has been fixed as the date for the evacuation of Vera Cruz by the American forces. Secretary Bryan issued this announcement:

"Both General Carranza and the convention at Aguas Calientes having given the assurances and guarantees we requested, it is the purpose of the administration to withdraw the troops of the United States from Vera Cruz on Monday, Nov. 23.

"All the persons there for whose personal safety this government has made itself responsible have left the city. The priests and nuns who had taken refuge there and for whose safety fears were entertained are now on their way to this country."

PACIFIC BATTLE IMMINENT

German Fleet in Waters off Chile Signifies Engagement Is Near.

Valparaiso, Nov. 16.—The "Japanese fleet" reported to have been seen off the Chilean coast appears now to have been a German squadron which is cruising near Valparaiso. The report that Japanese warships had been seen near Punta Carranza was denied officially.

German naval officers deny absolutely that another action besides the battle which occurred between German and British warships on Nov. 1 has taken place off Chile. It is expected here, however, that the British and German fleets may meet again at any moment.

The taking on of provisions by the German cruisers Leipzig and Dresden, which steamed into Valparaiso, was delayed for a short time because of a protest made by British officials to the Chilean authorities. The German minister made satisfactory arrangements with the government and the warships continued to replenish their supplies.

Lorimer Asks Immediate Trial.

Chicago, Nov. 14.—Former Senator William Lorimer, under indictment for participation in the wrecking of the La Salle street bank, of which he was part owner, appeared before Judge Kersten and demanded an immediate trial.

Much South American Grain.

Washington, Nov. 16.—Argentina—one of the world's principal sources of grain supply, will have a bountiful crop to export the coming year, according to the Argentine ambassador here from Buenos Aires.

Bomb In Tombs Court Room.

New York, Nov. 16.—A bomb, somewhat similar in construction to the one that wrecked the entrance to the Bronx county court house last Wednesday night, was found in the Tombs court room, just under the district attorney's offices occupied by Governor-elect Whitman. The bomb contained gunpowder, slugs and bullets. Its fuse was partly burned. George L. O'Connor, policeman, saw smoke from the burning fuse of the bomb, ran to the spot, picked up the missile, and tore off the fuse.

GENERAL HUGH SCOTT

G. Harris & Ewing

GEN. SCOTT HEADS U. S. ARMY

BECOMES CHIEF OF STAFF TO SUCCEED WOTHERSPOON.

Latter's Place to Be Filled by Funston, Now Commanding at Vera Cruz —General Bliss Also Advanced.

Washington, Nov. 16.—Brigadier General Hugh Scott has been selected by President Wilson to be chief of staff of the United States army upon the retirement today of Major General Wotherspoon.

The vacancy of major general created by General Wotherspoon's retirement will be filled by the nomination of Brigadier General Frederick F. Funston, now in command at Vera Cruz.

Brigadier General Tasker H. Bliss will become chief of the mobile army division and upon the retirement of Major General Murray on April 20, 1915, General Scott will be appointed a major general.

General Scott, who became assistant chief of staff when General Wothespoon succeeded General Wood as chief, graduated from the Military academy in 1875. He has spent all of his military life in the cavalry branch, with the exception of periods when he was engaged in staff or special service.

More closely than any officer of his rank in the army he has been identified with the Indians and semi-civilized wards of the government and a remarkable measure of success has attended his administration.

General Scott spent 17 years in the grade of first lieutenant at lonely western army posts, during the stagnation in promotion which attended the old practice of regimental promotion. This trying experience proved of great benefit to him because through his association with the Indian tribes he became an adept in their various tongues, especially in the Indian sign language.

This special qualification brought him much delicate and difficult service to the great credit of his record. Only about two years ago he earned the great gratitude of the administration by going single-handed into a swarm of angry Indians in Arizona intent on the war path and bringing them to ways of peace.

Most Unique Political Record.

Carrolton, Mo., Nov. 14.—Hundreds of visitors were here yesterday to witness the unveiling of the monument of the state of Missouri to General James Shields in the court house square here. General Shields was the first territorial governor of Oregon, he served a full term as United States senator from Illinois, he was one of the first two senators from Minnesota and he served out an unexpired term as senator from Missouri.

American Nearly Albanian King.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 16.—If George Fred Williams, late minister to Greece, had posted $25,000 he would have been king of Albania today. In fact, Mr. Williams asserts that the people begged him to become their ruler. Mr. Williams arrived in Boston Saturday. He wants it understood that he resigned from his office of his own free will and was not in any way asked to quit his job by the United States authorities.

Want More Canadian Troops.

Winnipeg, Nov. 16.—Great Britain has sent another call to Canada for troops. Word received here, announces that 6,000 additional men will be sent with the second contingent, which sails in January, bringing the strength up to 21,000, sintead of 15,000 as originally intended. There are 10,000 soldiers drilling here at present.

Millionaire Brewer Killed; Nurse Held.

San Antonio, Texas, Nov. 14.—Miss Emma Burgemeister, a trained nurse, at whose home Otto Koehler, millionaire president of the San Antonio Brewing Association, was shot and killed, and who is under arrest, is believed to be in no danger from the wound in her wrist which she is said to have inflicted after the death of Koehler. She is said to have made a statement that the shooting of Koehler was to protect herself and Emma Daschiel, another trained nurse who lived with her.

The Ambition of Mark Truitt

By

HENRY RUSSELL MILLER

Author of
"THE MAN HIGHER UP," "HIS RISE TO POWER," Etc.

(Copyright, 1913, by The Bobbs-Merrill Company)

SYNOPSIS.

Mark Truitt, encouraged by his sweetheart, Unity Martin, leaves Bethel, his native town, to seek his fortune. Simon Truitt tells Mark that it long has been his dream to see a steel plant at Bethel and asks the son to return and build one if he ever gets rich. Mark applies to Thomas Henley, head of the Quinby Iron works, for a job and is sent to the construction gang. His success in that work wins him a place as helper to Roman Andrzejaski, open-hearth furnaceman. He becomes a boarder in Roman's home and assists Piotr, Roman's son, in his studies. Kazia, an adopted daughter, shows her gratitude in such a manner as to arouse Mark's interest in her. Heavy work in the intense heat of the furnace causes Mark to collapse and Kazia cares for him. Later Roman also succumbs and Mark gets his job. Roman resents this and tells Mark to find another boarding place. Five years elapse during which Mark has advanced to the foremanship, while his labor-saving devices have made him invaluable to the company. In the meantime Kazia has married one Jim Whiting. Mark meets with an accident which dooms him to be a cripple for life. He returns to Bethel intending to stay there. He finds Unity about to marry another man and wins her back. Unity urges him to return to his work in the city. Mark rises rapidly to wealth and power in the Steel business, but the social ambitions of his wife make their married life unhappy. Constant bickerings wear out Mark's patience and he makes threats of divorce.

CHAPTER XIV.

In the Mold.

Then began what promised to become a rake's progress. Mark sought out new companions and got himself invited to join their revels. He tried hard, at first recklessly, then determinedly and then wistfully to enter into the spirit of dissipation. The attempt was a flat failure. The thoroughgoing habit of mind that looked unerringly for the last result saw through at once to the dregs in the cup. His companions privately laughed at the spectacle of this hard serious man awkwardly essaying the role of devil of a fellow; but for the humor he thus unwittingly provided they would soon have got rid of him as a death's-head at their feasts. He succeeded only in still further impairing his health, in acquiring a bad taste in the mouth and relaxing all along the line his habit of rigid abstemiousness.

After a few months he returned to the old routine.

"I hear," Henley interrupted a consultation one day to remark, "you've been sowing wild oats. Got 'em all harvested?"

Mark nodded, grinning sheepishly. "Crop's in the barn—and for sale cheap. I agree with the prophet that all is vanity."

"What made you do it?"

"I don't know. To see what it's like, I guess. But I didn't have the knack of it."

"Trouble at home," thought Henley shrewdly.

Aloud he said: "I imagine not. You'd better stick to business, where you fit in."

"I sometimes think that's all vanity, too."

"At least we have something to be vain over. And on the whole there's more romance in making steel than in helping to support the Tenderloin."

Mark made a gesture of disgust. After a frowning pause, he answered: "I don't know. The trouble is, I've lost the romantic point of view. To me the business is nothing but a money-making machine now—and something to do. I wonder why we work so hard to get money we don't need. We get no good out of it. Timothy Woodhouse gets more pleasure out of his flying machines that won't fly."

"Just wait," said Henley dryly, "until somebody tries to take it away from you. Nearly every man of unusual vitality goes sooner or later through the stage of questioning the existing scheme of things. Things are, is all the answer he gets. The sooner he quits asking questions, the better for his peace of mind."

They returned to the matter in hand, which was the fleecing of Timothy Woodhouse.

No one would have been more surprised than Timothy to learn that he had any fleece worthy of the attention of such shearers as Henley and Truitt. But years before a Lochinvar had come out of the West with stock to sell in the Iroquois Iron Ore Mining, Development & Transportation company. He had a gifted tongue. He departed for his own place, a richer and doubtless a wiser man, having received a profitable lesson in the credulity of his fellows. Later inspection revealed that the long-named company's properties consisted of an immense field of admittedly good ore, but its development work only of the extraction of the sample so proudly exhibited by the promoter and its transportation facilities of a franchise to build a railroad through 300 miles of wilderness. In those days the building of railroads was not lightly undertaken. The investment seemed to fall short of Lochinvar's prospectus.

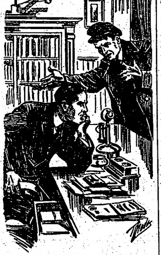
"Naturally!" Timothy once said ruefully. "Since I invested."

But a time had come when makers of steel began to operate on a larger scale and to look far ahead into the future. The MacGregor company conceived the project of buying that ore field and building that railroad. It commenced secretly and leisurely picking up blocks of stock in Lochinvar's company; it could be bought for the proverbial song. But Henley got wind of it. He, too, began buying stock, secretly and swiftly, also for a song. By the time the MacGregor company learned of his rivalry, he needed but a thousand shares to own control of the company, its properties and franchises.

"And I know just where those shares are to be had," Henley told Mark. "Do you know one Timothy Woodhouse?"

"I bought my house from him. And he wants me to lend him money to build his new flying machine. He came to me," Mark chuckled, "as one inventor to another."

"Get that stock," Henley commanded. "Act quick and you can get it cheap. We can't build that railroad. Or rather, we won't. 'Let the other fellow blaze the path!'" This sneering quotation was from the illustrious but cautious Quinby. "That's what comes from working with a coward. But that's no reason why we shouldn't turn an honest dollar at the expense of MacGregor, is it?"



"I'll Give You," Proposed Timothy Eagerly, "a Half Interest in the Machine."

It is not, however, true, as alleged in the bill in equity Timothy was afterward induced by MacGregor agents to file against Mark, that "the said Truitt falsely and fraudulently and with intent to deceive and defraud, represented to the said Woodhouse that said stock was of no value whatsoever, the while knowing that said stock had the value hereinbefore set forth." Mark, who prided himself on his honesty, was always careful not to lay his projects open to legal interference. In this case, that special Providence which seems to guide the schemes of men of such honesty, graciously rendered legal fraud unnecessary.

"By George!" he exclaimed when at their next meeting Timothy, with the model before them, had explained his plans for the new machine. "By George! It may be—it may just be—that you've hit it. It sounds plausible, anyhow."

"I prize your opinion," said Timothy gratefully, "the more because you've done something mechanically yourself. I meet so much skepticism. Do you think you'd care to finance this?"

"Well," Mark returned to caution, "after all, aerial navigation is hardly in my line. I really ought to have some security, don't you think?"

"I'll give you," proposed Timothy eagerly, "a half interest in the machine."

Mark seemed to be fighting down an impulse. But he shook his head. "You see, its value would be scientific rather than commercial. And I'm just a plain money-grubber, you know."

Timothy sighed. "That ends it, I guess. All I've got is mortgaged to the limit now. I'm disappointed, though."

"Still," Mark went on slowly, "I'd like to do it. Haven't you anything that would give business instinct even an excuse to be silent?"

"Nothing. Unless," Timothy ventured timidly, "you could call Iroquois Iron an excuse."

Mark grinned broadly. "I've heard of that bubble."

Timothy, too, grinned, though unhappily. "Bubble, I'm afraid, expresses it exactly."

Mark spent a minute in frowning study of the model. "It would be something," he admitted at last, "to contribute even money to what might turn out to be the invention of the age. I believe—I believe I'll take the excuse." He made a sudden reckless gesture. "I'll do better. I'll go the whole hog and buy the stock. Mr. Woodhouse, you would talk the birds out of the trees!"

It was ridiculously easy.

But the event had a sequel. Scarcely a week passed when Timothy returned. Timothy was evidently excited.

"Have you discovered some new important principle of your machine?" Mark inquired.

"No," Timothy answered. "I have come to buy back that stock."

"Oh, no! I'm satisfied with my bargain."

"But," Timothy explained innocently, "I have discovered that it has a value in excess—very much in excess—of what you paid me for it."

"The less reason then," Mark smiled, "why I should sell it back to you."

"But," Timothy swallowed hard and down went pride, "you don't understand. It would be a great favor to me. I have been careless—I may as well speak out and say that I am a very poor business man. I have lost almost everything I inherited. What is left is mortgaged almost to full value, except this stock which I now find I can sell for enough to clean up my obligations and give me a new start."

"And which is now mine."

"Which is now yours, through a hard bargain—an inadvertently hard bargain, of course," Timothy added hastily. The troubled look in his eyes deepened. "And now I come to you as one gentleman to another, to ask you to release me from it."

"That would hardly be businesslike."

"But this is not business. I said, as one gentleman to another." Timothy was guiltless of humorous intent. "For myself I shouldn't think of disturbing any advantage your interest in my work might accidentally give you. But to my wife and daughter, who are entirely dependent upon me, this would mean much."

"Isn't it a little late, after wasting your substance in riotous invention, to begin thinking of them? Besides," Mark looked at his watch pointedly, "I hardly see your right to ask me to give them the consideration you've never given them."

Timothy flushed painfully, rising. "You refuse, then?"

"I do."

"Then you had this stock in mind all along?"

"If you'd made as shrewd a guess before—" Mark grinned.

"I was told you are apt to do this sort of thing."

"The loser in a deal," Mark reminded him coldly, "always finds something to criticize. If there's nothing else I can do for you—good day, Mr. Woodhouse."

"So this is what you call a deal? I should choose another term. I shall take enough of your time to give you my view of it. You came to me to get that stock, but you did not come frankly. You resorted to subterfuge. You flattered me. You took advantage of your inside knowledge of its value and of the fact that I'm rather a fool in such matters to get it absurdly cheap. But I suppose one need hardly expect particularity of conduct from your sort."

Mark sneered. "At least you felt no obligation to particularity of conduct when you thought you were getting a good round sum for something of no value at all."

"That," said Timothy with dignity, "I supposed and you pretended was practically a gift to science. I shall keep you no longer, sir."

And Timothy stalked away. For several days Mark's familiars observed in him an unusual irritability of temper.

Steel had come into its own. It was the first principality of industry. Swiftly as the sun seeks its zenith, its leaders were rising to power and prestige, doing big things in a big, bold, precedent-defying fashion that stirred the world to a just admiration. And above the others—in the estimation of all who did not march with the army of steel—towered that giant MacGregor, and in his shadow but too big to be obscured wholly, Jeremiah Quinby, their names and fame known wherever the stout fabric was used.

After many years Quinby's project was a fact, the more splendid for the delay. It stood just across the street from MacGregor's library. This proximity called for a comparison, by which the Institute of Paleontology suffered no whit. Somehow its noble lines and masses, in exact copy of the Parthenon, seemed to suggest in its founder a simple majesty of character not shared by the author of the elaborate library.

MacGregor could not have believed that a comparison was intended, since he accepted an invitation to share with Quinby himself and an ex-president of the United States the honors on the occasion of the dedication. He, as did the ex-president, made a speech, in which he paid a high tribute to his "brother in the great work of distributing surplus wealth." This tribute Quinby, when his turn came, formally assigned to "the thousands of obscurely faithful" who had "given their strength, their courage, their patience and talent, nay, oft their very lives, to upbuilding the industry which made this project possible." Some of his hearers interpreted this merely as the too great modesty of superlative, triumphant genius. But when, expanding this text, he thus brought his peroration to a close: "Let labor and capital, the Siamese twins of production, dwell together in unity, in amity, in the forbearance that springs from love!" the audience applauded enthusiastically; reckless of damage to new kid gloves.

That evening, in the cells of the institute, was held a great reception. The Truitts were there—as who that counted was not?—but together only until they had reached the end of the receiving line. Mark betook himself to a chair in a corner occupied by the skeleton of some prehistoric monster and there watched the crowd.

He caught a glimpse of Unity, a beaming happy Unity, the center of a laughing group, and scowled angrily.

Though their life had been superficially unchanged, he had had his freedom. It had been a partial useless freedom that he did not want, paid for by the loss of even the pretense of affection, by an ill-disguised mutual aversion.

His reflections were interrupted by a hand on his shoulder. Henley sat down beside him.

"Taking it in?"

Mark nodded.

"We're outshone."

"As the stars by the sun. Do you care?"

"No!" snarled Henley, in a tone that gave his words the lie. Mark repressed another sneer. Here was Henley, the man of magnificent achievements, of real genius, jealous as a woman over Quinby's hollow glory!

"He seems," Mark nodded toward the resplendent Quinby, "to attract the women."

"It's mutual. As I happen to know."

"So? I'd have classed him with the vestal virgins. Isn't he a little old for the woman game now, though?"

"He's in his fifties," Henley said, "and well preserved. And the man who has nothing to do but to idle around the globe and spend the money others make is always easy picking for the Delilahs."

"Quinby doesn't just meet my notion of a Samson."

"Samson," returned Henley, who felt the better for his outburst, "was a penny-wit."

Later, Henley and Mark left their refuge and sauntered through the crowd. It chanced that Quinby espied them. He deserted an admiring group to greet them paternally.

"A lifelong dream has been realized, thanks partly to you"—he placed a hand on Henley's shoulder—"commander in the field. And to you"—he laid the other hand on Mark—"his chief lieutenant."

It was a striking tableau. Quinby, modestly unaware of the many eyes upon them, held it a moment, then gracefully withdrew.

"My commander in the field!" sneered Henley. "Drunk! Blind drunk with self-importance!"

"How much better are we?"

"Sometimes," Henley said coldly, "you talk like a fool." He strode away.

Mark, left alone, began to pick his path gingerly around trailing gowns and chattering groups, in search of fresh air and quiet. But once, as he was passing a group of men, a remark arrested his attention. He did not know the speaker, but he halted sharply and addressed him.

"Who was that you said committed suicide?"

The man looked at him strangely a moment before answering.

"Timothy Woodhouse. It was practically suicide. He insisted on going up in his new flying machine. Broke his neck, of course."

Mark passed on quickly. Not so quickly but that he overheard an explanation.

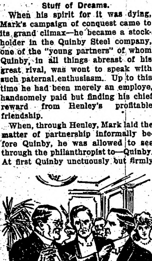
"The man that skinned Woodhouse."

CHAPTER XV.

Stuff of Dreams.

When his spirit for it was dying, Mark's campaign of conquest came to its grand climax—he became a stockholder in the Quinby Steel company, one of the "young partners" of whom Quinby, in all things abreast of his great rival, was wont to speak with such paternal enthusiasm. Up to this time he had been merely an employe, handsomely paid but finding his chief reward from Henley's profitable friendship.

When, through Henley, Mark laid the matter of partnership informally before Quinby, he was allowed to see through the philanthropist to—Quinby. At first Quinby unctuously but firmly refused his assent, turning arguments aside by the simple expedient of ignoring them. When Henley, at whose suggestion Mark had demanded the right to purchase stock, insisted with rising anger, Quinby donned a frigid dignity.



He Placed a Hand on Henley's Shoulder.

"Do you want the company to lose Truitt?" Henley demanded.

"I can not conceive," Quinby answered coldly, "that any man who owes as much to my company as Truitt does could be so lacking in loyalty and all fine sensibilities as to desert me."

"That," said Henley curtly, "is damned nonsense. The company owes more to Truitt than the stock we ask can ever repay, more than to any other man—with one exception."

"I am glad," Quinby thawed slightly, "that you make an exception."

"Yes. Myself."

Quinby's face was a study.

"And," Henley continued, "you can let him have this stock or lose Truitt and me."

Thereupon Henley wrote out and gave to Quinby his resignation from the chairmanship. There was a tense silence while Quinby studied the paper.

"Very well," he said at last. He tore the resignation into little bits.

But it was a graceful surrender. During the pause Quinby had regained his poise. He was once more the gracious patron, apparently blind to Henley's show of dislike.

"Ah! my dear Tom," he shook his head smilingly, "that was hardly fair. You played upon my affection. You know there is no sacrifice I would not make rather than lose you."

"Humph!" grunted Henley. "This is no sacrifice."

"Of course," the philanthropist went on, "Truitt takes under our agreement."

And this launched another long argument. For under the Quinby company agreement—borrowed, indeed, from his friend and rival, MacGregor—any stockholder, upon written demand by three-fourths of the stockholders owning three-fourths of the outstanding shares, could be compelled to surrender his stock at its "book value;" a provision from the threat of which Quinby, owning the majority of the stock, alone was exempt. Had his own interest not been so deeply concerned Mark might have relished the spectacle of the tremendous arrogant Henley hurling himself in vain against the paternal Quinby. Mark did not deceive himself as to Henley's real purpose, which was not to serve him but to set up a precedent to upset the agreement.

"It isn't fair to Truitt," Henley protested vehemently. "It isn't fair to any one but you. How can he, how can I, how can any of us, know when you're going to make a deal with the others to kick him out and cheat him out of the real value of his stock?"

Tact was the one weapon Henley knew not how to wield. Quinby gave him a pained glance.

"You know I'm not a hard man. And you know that is a contingency not likely to happen."

"It happened to Cauler and Stebbins and New."

"Ah! But they," Quinby reminded him, "got an exaggerated idea of their importance to the company."

Henley glared. Quinby smiled.

The mellifluous voice flowed on. "You should know that men in my position may not consider their private impulses. Our wealth is a trust—a sacred trust." He paused, perhaps to control the rising emotion inspired by thought. "The secret of my success has been harmony in my organization. Harmony I must have—I will have. And so I must reserve the right and means to oust any who seek to disturb it. The work to which I have given myself—the projects you, I fear, hold so lightly—depends too closely on my business success to allow me to violate successful precedents. Even,"—he beamed on Mark, "even for the sake of your brilliant young friend. Even for you."

Quinby's face had not put off its smiling benevolent mask. His voice had not risen nor lost by so much as a note its wonted musical stately cadence. But Mark, a silent and almost forgotten listener, knew that in the last words menace spoke as clear and venomous as in the hiss of a snake. He could interpret the menace; Henley had rested too securely in his importance to the company; he now had his warning; like Damocles' sword the power of Quinby's contract rested heavy overhead.

If he had not known from Quinby's voice, Mark would have understood from him to whom the menace had been spoken. Henley's hands, resting on the desk, clenched until the nails bit into the palms. The ugly imperious face was deathly white. His black eyes blazed. Mark thought for a moment he was about to spring upon Quinby and inflict physical injury, or at least hurl at the vain shallow poseur the splendid defiance of the man of real worth, of invincible and unpurchasable spirit. Because he had a profound respect and a sort of love for Henley, he wanted to see and hear that defiance. He forgot his own interest in the scene.

Henley reached again convulsively, for pen and paper. Quinby raised a hand—a beautiful, soft, perfectly manicured member—in humorous protest.

"My dear Tom!" How the purring paternal phrase, addressed to Henley, stung! Mark felt the hot blood rise, resentful for his master. "If you are about to resign again, I beg of you, consider. I have made one concession to that threat. But if you make it again, I shall be obliged to break off a relation that has been both pleasant and profitable. It will cost me something, perhaps, but—it will cost you more."

"Now!" muttered Mark.

Now was the time to hurl defiance, to overwhelm Quinby and Quinby's power under manly scorn. . . . Quinby, outwardly serene as midsummer's skies, smiled on. Henley was silent. The blazing anger in his eyes died down to a smoldering, sullen, futile rage. The pen dropped from his hand.

What a shattering of idols was there! Mark turned away that he might not see.

His glance fell upon Quinby. The mask of benevolence had been pulled aside. Ugly triumph and still uglier hate shone. In that moment Quinby's revenge for a thousand sneers and the open contempt of years was taken. Mark hated him.

After a long heavy silence Quinby turned to Mark. "Do you accept the agreement?"

"It seems to be Hobson's choice."

Quinby rose and took Mark's right hand in both of his.

"Let me be the first to welcome you into the company. I'm sure we shall be—harmonious."

"I can see," Mark answered with a shrug, "that harmony pays."

Quinby was gone. Mark, sickened and saddened, watched a man, for the moment mad, belatedly giving voice to his rage. He paced swiftly back and forth across the room, like the wild beast he had become. He cursed incoherently the departed Quinby, pouring forth a flood of coarse blasphemies. He flung his arms about, smote and kicked chairs and desk as though they had lives to be taken. This, with Quinby present, would have struck a responsive chord in Mark's barbaric soul. But this, with Quinby gone, from the man who had sat silent under threats, called forth only contempt.

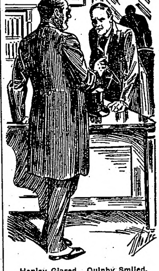
"My success! My company! My work!" Henley stopped, panting and glaring, before Mark. "My God! Did you hear him? Fool—fool—fool!"

Mark shrugged his shoulders. "Your mistake was in thinking him a fool."

"And I—I had to sit there and take his oily threats—"

"At least, you took them."

"—I, who made this company—I, who gave him the money to advertise himself around the world—I—! I'm the fool. You're the fool. We're all fools, working our lives out to build up this business while he, who does nothing, gallivants about spending millions on his accursed institutes—never knowing when he'll close in on us and rip us out of our jobs and rightful profits—"



Henley Glared. Quinby Smiled.

"I used to think that about you, when I was in the mills. I suppose the men think that about us now." Mark's laugh was a sneer.

Henley turned on him. "And you," he snarled. "I made you, too. And I suppose, when Quinby cracks his whip, you, too, will fall into line and help to rob me of the stock I've made valuable. You, with your 'Harmony pays'—"

An hour before Mark might have quailed before Henley's wrath. Now he did not quail.

"See here!" he said sharply, pushing away the fist under his nose. "Probably you're right. Probably I'll fall into line. I hope not—for my own sake. But you can talk to me like that when I give you the excuse. And now you," he added coldly, "had better pull yourself together. There are clerks within hearing."

Henley dropped heavily into a chair. Slowly the paroxysm subsided. In silence Mark watched the white, still working face.

It was Henley who spoke first, and surprisingly. "What are you thinking?"

"I'm wondering, does money make cowards of us all?"

Henley stared hard. For a moment Mark thought that again a match had been touched to the magazine of his rage. Then the red of shame crept into the older man's countenance. He made a gesture of dejection.

"You're a witness that it does."

Mark limped slowly away from the Quinby building.

Now, by all the rules of the game he played, was the time to exult. The monster was tamed, or at least forever baffled; it need not, looking upon him, lick its slobbering chops. Whether or not the partnership—final trophy of Eldorado's conquest—survived Quinby's treacherous caprice, the adventurer would never again know the haunting fear that lashed the crowd. He had no need to catch its hurrying pace.

Yet he did not exult. He had what he had set out to win, and he had it not. His triumph was fact. But the sense of it, the swelling of soul, the surging passionate pride he had foretasted in his young dreams, were not. Success was but figures on a balance sheet.

He had succeeded in a life in which sentiment, brotherly kindness, mercy, were the badges of failure; yet the thought of a weak Timothy Woodhouse, dead in an hour of recklessness bred by a cheat, could drive sleep from his pillow.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Found in Sing Sing Prison.

Found, a photograph, a tintype of a young girl. Owner may secure it by applying to the editor-in-chief.—Sing Sing Star of Hope.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3.1879

Now comes the next talk of bonding the county for only $5000 this time to build a sanitorium at Thief River Falls. It seems they are determined to keep up some bonding proposition until they finally land on the farmers.

Trovaton sprang a roarback circular on the eve of election, that was somewhat of a surprise to some of the candidates. Fasel started the circular business, and Trovaton thought he might as well get into the game. There is always a difference of opinion as to the effect of circulars, and while it may be all right to roast an individual by circular, it is unfair to try to create predjudice by trying to array one class of business against another class, as Mr. Trovaton did the farmers against the bankers.

The saloon lid is surely on for a large slice of northern Minnesota, under that old 1855 treaty. and the only way it can be raised is by an act of Congress. But who would introduce the bill? The law only effects part of the 8th and 9th Congressional Districts, and the bill should of course be introduced by members from those Districts. Should a member from either of these Districts attempt to reopen those saloons he will turn the solid temperance and county option vote against him, and he would surely be badly defeated at the next election, so we opinion that the saloon keepers of that dry belt had better make preparations to move to some other locality, or go into some other business.

Crookston will not be effected by the order of the government Indian bureau to close all saloons in northern Minnesota covered by the Chippewa treaty of 1855, prohibiting the sale of intoxicants. The saloons must lock their doors by November 30, according to word from Bemidji where Special Agent H. A. Larson, representing Cato Sells, commissioner of Indian affairs, has personally notified the men engaged in the liquor business to quit.

About 200 saloons in 59 towns are effected. Drug stores which also sell liquor come under the order, but a modifying order from the government is expected. This action of the government follows the recent decision of the United States supreme court that provisions prohibiting the sale of liquor under the treaty of 1855 were valid.

Two years ago when T. E. Brents acting for the government, sought to close the saloons under provisions of the treaty 12 Bemidji saloonkeepers served an injunction, and it was by means of this instrument that the saloons have succeeded in doing business since that time. No further resistance on the part of the saloons will be made and the owners will clean up their stocks between now and the fatal November 30.

Bemidji one of the largest towns to be affected has 21 saloons with two at Nymore, a suburb. Hibbing is the largest town in the territory. The announcement closing the saloons caused no demonstration. Groops stood about the streets until late discussing the last move of the Indian department.

It is the general belief that the government will police the district thoroughly after the saloons have been closed to see that the ruling is obeyed.—The Crookston Daily Times.

C. L. Hanson thanks his friends.

Thief River Falls, Minn.
November 13, 1914.

To the People of the 65th.
Senatorial District:

I wish to express to my loyal supporters my heartfelt gratitude for the vote they gave in support of my candidacy for the State Senate.

In a letter sent out over Andrew Trovaton's signature, to the farmers of Pennington County at the last moment, without giving me an opportunity to answer same, I find the following statement:

Mr. Trovaton says in part, "I am supporting O'Neill and Stenvick, because the bankers interests are many times directly opposed to the rest of the people. They want high rates of interest, and other people want low rates, and government credit direct to the people. There are entirely too many bankers there already, and bankers have the strongest organization in the country. Theoretically it might be all right to have the bankers make the laws, but practically, it is about as consistent as to send Saloon-Keepers to make Prohibition laws."

In the face of the above misleading statement I am surprised that I only lost by 153 votes. The forces which have worked together to build up the great Northwest, includes the farmers and all classes, and of this bankers are a part. "United We Stand." applies to us as a people and should not apply to anyone class. It simply means the people as a whole.

Being a young man in politics, I am not without hopes for the future and I feel sure that my friends of to-day will be my friends in the future if the occasion demands. This is the part that I appreciate most and the conditions that I shall continue to work for.

Again assuring all those who supported and worked for me of my sincere thanks and deep appreciation of their efforts in my behalf, "with malice toward none, with charity for all." I am,

Sincerely yours,
C. L. HANSEN.

The Perfect Life.

"Their home life is ideal."

"Is that so?"

"Yes; she goes abroad in the summer, and he goes south in the winter. Perfect, isn't it?"—Buffalo Express.

IT REALLY DOES RELIEVE RHEUMATISM.

Everybody who is afflicted with Rheumatism in any form should by all means keep a bottle of Sloan's Liniment on hand. The minute you feel pain or soreness in a joint or muscle, bathe it with Sloan's Liniment. Do not rub it. Sloan's penetrates almost immediately right to the seat of pain, relieving the hot, tender, swollen feeling and making the part easy and comfortable. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25 cents of any druggist and have it in the house—against colds, sore and swollen joints, rheumatism, neuralgia, sciatica and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief.—adv.

DON'T DELAY TREATING YOUR COUGH.

A slight cough often becomes serious, Lungs get congested, Bronchial Tubes fill with mucous. Your vitality is reduced. You need Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey. It soothes your irritated air passages, loosens mucous and makes your system, resist Colds. Give the Baby and Children Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey, It's guaranteed to help them. Only 25c. at your Druggist.—adv.

WE HAVE

$150,000.00

TO LOAN ON FARMS IN

PENNINGTON COUNTY

Write Or Call on Us At FIRST NATIONAL BANK

THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN.

FARMERS & MERCHANTS STATE BANK

Oklee Minn.

The rapid growth of this bank is the best evidence that its policy and methods meet with the approval of the people in our community.

You will find this bank as liberal in its dealings as is consistent with sound banking.

We are at all times prepared to discuss your requirements with you and invite consultation.

Pay your bills with checks on this bank.

Farm Loans At Lowest Rates And On Easy Terms.

Six per cent interest paid on time deposits.

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS————————$14,500.00

J. A. C. Torgerson, V. P. W. B. Torgerson, Cashier.

NOTICE OF CONTEST
DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,

UNITED STATES LAND OFFICE,
Crookston, Minnesota;
Oct. 24, 1914.

To John O. Vathe of Erie, Minnesota, Contestee;

You are hereby notified that Julia Halvorson who gives Thief River Falls, Minnesota, as her post-office address, did on October 2nd, 1914, file in this office her duly corroborated application to contest and secure the cancellation of your homestead Entry, Serial No. 07887 made May 1st., 1912, for W ½ of S E ¼ Section 24, Township 153 N., Range 39 W. Fifth Principal Meridian, and as grounds for his contest he alleges that John O. Vathe has wholly abandoned said land for more than six months last past and immediately prior to the making of this affidavit; that he has never cultivated said land as provided by law.

You are, therefore, further notified that the said allegations will be taken by this office as having been confessed by you, and your said entry will be canceled thereunder without your further right to be heard therein, either before this office or on appeal, if you fail to file in this office within twenty days after the FOURTH publication of this notice, as shown below, your answer, under oath, specifically meeting and responding to these allegations of contest, or if you fail within that time to file in this office due proof that you have served a copy of your answer on the said contestant either in person or by registered mail. If this service is made by the delivery of a copy of your answer to the contestant in person, proof of such service must be either the said contestant's written acknowledgment of his receipt of the copy, showing the date of its receipt, or the affidavit of the person by whom the delivery was made stating when and where the copy was delivered; if made by registered mail, proof of such service must consist of the affidavit of the person by whom the copy was mailed stating when and the post-office to which it was mailed, and this affidavit must be accompanied by the postmaster's receipt for the letter.

You should state in your answer the name of the post office to which you desire future notices to be sent to you.

Peter M. Ringdal, Register.

Date of first publication Oct. 30, 1914.
Date of second publication Nov, 6th 1914
Date of third publication Nov. 13th 1914
Date of fourth publication Nov, 20th 1914

Feasted on Candles.

Russian soldiers, according to the author of "Eat, Drink and Be Merry," esteem tallow candles a great luxury. He facetiously describes how they came across a huge store of them among the French baggage on the retreat from Moscow and summarily shuffled them out of existence. "Never were they consumed in such a style before. The enraptured warriors drew them across their mouths like a bow across a fiddle and left only the bare wicks as a proof of how easily their coverings, so necessary for lights, can be readily utilized for livers."

U. S. Mail.

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 1.05 p. m., on Tuesday Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.55 p.m

Wm.G. Hunt, p.m,

Subscribe for THE SUNBEAM.

We have for sale one of the best quarter sections of land in the town of Highlanding, located one mile south of Highlanding, Creamery. This farm will be sold cheap as the owner is a non resident and desires to use the money invested in other business. For terms and full particulars call on W. G. Hunt, Sunbeam, Minn.

FOR SALE: 120 acres in Section 14, Hickory Township, Pennington County, Minn: Price $1,800.

Nels Fore, Roland, Minn.

HIGHLANDING BLACKSMITH SHOP.

A Tharaldson, blacksmith of Highlanding will have a full line of buggy and wagon repairs on hand, and will be glad to oblige.

A. Tharaldson

MONEY TO LOAN ON FARM LAND

MACKEY J. THOMPSON
FARM MORTGAGES
ST. PAUL MINNESOTA

CONTRACTS, FIRST AND SECOND MORTGAGES BOUGHT

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Sept. 25th 1914

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land office at Crookston September 23rd. 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Hans T. Hanson of Homme, Minn. who on Jan. 27th, 1912 made Homestead Application Serial No 07218 for N.½ N.W.¼. Section 27. Township 152 N. Range 39 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 10th, day of November 1914.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Halvor G. Homme, Gjermund H. Homme of Homme, Minn. Carl J. Lee, Jake R. Tuff, of Rudell, Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register.

Corrected.

Teacher—Earl, did you whisper today? Earl — Yes; wunst. Teacher—Clarence, should Earl have said "wunst?" Clarence — No; he should have said "twicet."—Everybody's.

FIRST STATE BANK,
Of Plummer Minnesota.

SERVICE
SECURITY
STABILITY

STOP to consider what a GOOD BANK ACCOUNT INSURES. The business man can employ the best help and insure SERVICE. Depression may come in his line, but his big CASH ON HAND means SECURITY. The fine line of credits may be drawn tight, but none will question his STABILITY. Give your business SERVICE, SECURITY and STABILITY with your bank deposits.

J.A.DUFFY President, Henry Enderlie, Cashier

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Oct. 30th 1914

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Oct. 23rd, 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Henry Bost, of Highlanding, Minn. who on Nov. 28th 1911 made Homestead A [illegible] No. 06953. for Lot 3. Section 31, Township 153, N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before John Petterson, U. S. Commissioner at Oklee, Minnesota, on the 30th day of November 1914.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Frank LaCounte, Louis LaCounte, Joseph LaCounte and W. G. Hunt, all of Sunbeam, Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register.

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Oct. 23rd 1914.

Department of the Interior.U.S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Oct. 16th 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Halvor Hoberg of Rhoda, Minnesota. who on April 22nd, 1913 made Homestead Entry Serial No. 09017 for W.½ N.W.¼, Section 20 Township 152 N. Range 40 W. 5th Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Commutatition Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before John Petterson U. S. Commissioner, at Oklee Minn., on the 27th day of November 1914.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Adolph Lindberg, Alfred Anderson, Henry Peterson, Willie Rodman, all of Rhoda, Minn.

Proof mader under act of June 6, 1912.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Registe

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington D C

Old Time Bathing.

What would mixed bathers in England think of Blackpool as it was a little over a century ago? When ladies went to bathe a bell was rung to announce the fact, and any gentleman discovered on the parade after it had sounded was fined a bottle of wine. When the ladies had been bathed and completed their toilet the bell was rung a second time, and the gentle- [illegible] turn.—London Opinion

State of Ohio, City of Toledo, }
Lucas County, } ss.

Frank J. Cheney makes oath that he is senior partner of the firm of F. J. Cheney & Co., doing business in the City of Toledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for each and every case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by the use of HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

FRANK J. CHENEY.

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D. 1886.

(Seal) A. W. GLEASON,
Notary Public.

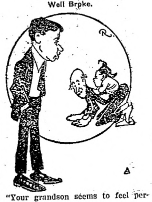
Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for testimonials, free.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

Sold by all Druggists, 75c.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

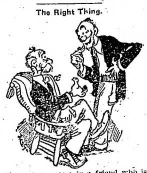
Well Broke.



"Your grandson seems to feel perfectly safe riding you."

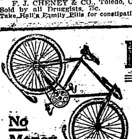
"Yes. Before he mounted he looked at my teeth and decided that there was no danger that I was too young and high spirited."—Pittsburgh Press.

The Right Thing.



"I want to entertain a friend who is a cubist artist. I wonder what would be an appropriate thing to do?"

"Why don't you give him a square meal?"—New York Evening World.



Boys!

Do you want this dandy BICYCLE ?

No Money Needed

This is not a Prize Contest. Every boy who fills out and mails the corner coupon can earn this high-grade Bicycle for very little effort during spare time. ASK "The Bicycle Man." Mail this coupon TO-DAY.

FILL OUT AND MAIL THIS COUPON TO-DAY

"The Bicycle Man"
℅ The McCall Co.
236 W. 37th Street
New York City

Dear "Bicycle Man":
Please tell me how to get one of your high-grade Bicycles, without money, and for very little effort.

Name

Address

THE LOCAL NEWS

Have you got that Thanksgiving turkey yet?

T. G. Rome was transacting business here yesterday.

C. L. Clark made a business trip to Thief River Falls today.

Read our Thanksgiving stories published on page six of this issue.

Red Lake River is now frozen solid enough so we will have bridges for at least three months.

There will undoubtedly be more grain hauled from the south side of the river to Goodridge now, after the farmers can cross on the ice.

This week has certainly broken the record for cold weather at this season of the year, as it has been more like January than November weather.

Ye editor drove down to Plummer with a load of flax to-day. Nothing like having a farm to pay expenses while running a newspaper for the fun of it.

The Ladies Aid Society of Mayfield have prepared a fine Thanksgiving entertainment for next Thursday at the Malone school house, which you are invited to attend.

The people of America have reason to be thankful next Thursday, that they are not at war, but at peace with all nations, and that we have a man at the head of this government who is a man of peace instead of war.

C. L. Hansen publishes his thanks to the voters in another column of this issue, Mr. Hansen received a good vote among the farmers of this territory, notwithstanding the circular letters sent out on the eve of election.

How long since you paid any subscription to this paper? This is the time of year that our bills as well as yours become due, and we ask those who know they are indebted on subscription to please remit one or two years subscription to this office.

Post mortems are most always gruesome affairs, but the ones being held by the defeated candidates are far from being doeful, and as a matter of fact it is quite interesting and amusing to hear the various stories as to how it happened.—Thief River Falls News-Press.

Even J. Sund bought a team at the auction sale in Hickory township last week. He says that all property sold very cheap at that sale. The probable reason for this was that Singers had charge of the clerk's work and taking of the papers, which of course made the farmers a little shy about buying.

On Thanksgiving Day, November 26th, the Ladies Aid of Mayfield township, will hold an Auction Sale, in the Malone school house. In the forenoon from ten to twelve o'clock the children of the school will render a fine program, and at noon lunch will be served. The auctioning of the articles starts at one o'clock.

About every stranger that comes up in this part of the country, looks at Red Lake River, and asks how it is that there are no bridges across it, and we have to answer, "this is a NAVIGABLE RIVER," but of course it is only navigable for canoes. Surely Uncle Sam has a fine fence running through this territory.

Woolwich Arsenal.

Woolwich arsenal owed its establishment to an explosion which took place at a foundry in Moorfields. Until 1716 the government obtained its ordnance from private manufacturers, but in that year the explosion decided it to build a foundry of its own, and Woolwich, already famous as a naval station, was chosen as the site. Woolwich was only a small fishing village until the sixteenth century, when Henry VIII. laid the foundations of its prosperity by making it the royal dockyard.—London Chronicle.

6 Per Cent MONEY 6 Per Cent
MONEY 6 Per Cent

Loans may be obtained for any purpose on acceptable Real Estate security: liberal privileges; correspondence solicited.

A. C. Agency Company.
758 Gas & Electric Bldg.,
Denver Colorado,
and 446 Pierce Bldg.
St. Louis.

AN ACTIVE LIVER MEANS HEALTH.

If you want good health, a clear complextion and freedom from Dizziness, Constipation, Billousness, Headaches and Indigestion, take Dr. King's New Life Pills. They drive out fermenting and undigested foods, clear the Blood and cure Constipation. Only 25c. at your druggist.—adv.

TRY THIS FOR YOUR COUGH

Thousands of people keep coughing because unable to get the right remedy. Coughs are caused by Inflammation of Throat and Bronchial Tubes. What you need is to soothe this Inflammation. Take Dr. King's New Discovery, it penetrates the delicate mucous lining, raises the Phlegm and quickly relieves the congested membranes. Get a 50c. bottle from your druggist. "Dr. King's New Discovery quickly and completely stopped my cough" writes J. R. Watts, Floydale, Texas. Money back if not satisfied, but it nearly always helps.—adv.

A Wreck on a Railroad.

—Philadelphia Record.

Conserving Energy.

Publisher—My dear young lady, only two novels out of twenty pay for the publishing!

Girl—Oh, very well, then, I'll only write two.—Boston Globe.

New Zealand Nicknames.

New Zealand is described by its inhabitants as "the happiest country in the world." It is now a dominion Some of the pretty names given to it by New Zealanders are "The Fortunate Isles," "The Wonderland of the Pacific," "All Lands In One" and "The Star of the South."

Well, Aren't They?

"Yes, I certainly advertised for a valet," said the gentleman in reply to the man on the lookout for a berth, "but you're as old as the hills."

"Well, sir," answered the applicant, "begging your pardon, aren't valleys always as old as the hills?"—Exchange.

A Reproof.

Parent—Willie, my father used to whip me when I behaved as badly as you are doing. Willie—Well, I hope I'll never have to tell my little boy that.—Exchange.

Medical Men.

"What a little, frail looking man your family doctor is!"

"He may appear so, but he really is a man of powerful fee seek."—Baltimore American.

So Confusing.

Caller—Is your daughter an equestrian? Proud Mother—Either that or valedictorian. These class offices are so confusing, don't you know.—Buffalo Express.

Each good thought or action moves the dark world nearer to the sun.—Whittier.

Well Named.

"What do you call your dog?"

"Stock Market."

"What a peculiar name! Any particular reason?"

"I should say so. Most unreliable dog you ever saw. You can never tell what he's going to do next."—Life.

LUMBER AND BUILDING MATERIALS.

When you get ready to build, come in and let us figure your bill and show you our stock of lumber and building materials.

Complete stocks at Thief River Falls, Mavie and Goodridge, Minn.

WINTON-NICHOLS LUMBER COMPANY.

Stevenson's Retort.

An interesting letter is Stevenson's in reply to an autograph hunter who had spelled his name with a "ph" instead of a "v."

"The few lines with which you have found time to honor me," he replied, "contain certain indications of your character on which I take pleasure in dwelling. They show you so illiterate that I cannot judge your admiration flattering, they show you so careless of giving trouble to me that I am myself careless how much offense I may convey to you, and they are so ill penned that I am tempted to hope you will discover a difficulty in perusing my answer and place it unread in your collection. The next time it shall occur to you to trouble an author as you have troubled me find out—I do not say what he has written; far less would I suggest that you should read it—but find out how he is in the habit of spelling his unpretentious name and give him upon that point the flattery of imitation."—Chicago Herald.

Making Shot.

Even among sportsmen there are probably many people who are not acquainted with the manner in which shot is made. The process is carried out at what is known as a shot tower. This a tall tower of metal or stone with a tank at the top filled with molten lead. The bottom of this tank is perforated with holes, and there is a slide underneath it, also perforated This slide is pulled from side to side, and every time two holes come opposite each other a small quantity of molten lead falls through. As these drops fall through the air they assume a globular shape, and if the tower is of sufficient length they solidify before reaching the bottom. Here they fall into a tank of cold water and are cooled. When the shot has to be small the slide is worked more quickly than when it has to be larger.—Pearson's Weekly.

Her Seven Sons.

A mother who had only one child, a son, lost him through an accident by drowning when he was seventeen. His body was washed out to sea and never recovered. She very much wanted a portrait of him, and she called a famous artist who was a friend of the family. He asked for every photograph she had of her son from babyhood onward. When the painting arrived it represented a glade in a wood. Playing about were five little children of various ages, but all the same boy as his mother had known him. Coming down the center, joyous, gay, was the seventeen-year-old lad leading his baby self of one year by the hand The mother looked at the picture and burst into tears. "I have lost seven sons!" she said.

"You had lost six of them before your son died," the artist replied.

Law Lord In a Cell.

Lord Russell once gave a lecture on his imprisonment in Holloway jail. The thing that impressed him most strangely during the early period of his confinement was being without his pipe and watch. He was perpetually feeling in his pocket to see the time or for matches or tobacco. He soon got over the want of smoking and after six weeks obtained leave to wear his watch, the absence of which worried him more than having no tobacco pouch. When he went into prison the governor asked his religion, and he replied, "Agnostic." This answer seemed to puzzle the official, who said he supposed it was Protestant, not Catholic. And as "Prot." Lord Russell was entered on the card outside his cell.—London Spectator.

Something Wrong.

"Keep clear of Machin. He must be in a very bad way. He actually asked me yesterday to pay him back the half dollar I borrowed off him two years ago."—Philadelphia Press.

A Horse Laugh.

Motorist (blocked by load of hay)—I say, there, pull out and let me by. Farmer—Oh, I dunno es I'm in any hurry. Motorist (angrily)—You seemed in a hurry to let that other fellow's carriage get past. Farmer—That's 'cause his horse wuz eatin' my hay. There hain't no danger o' yew eatin' it, I reckon.—Springfield Republican.

ULTRA VIOLET LIGHT RAYS.

How Man May Some Day Extract His Food From the Air.

Science begins to dream of a day in which man will gather his food direct from the air and digest it without much aid from the various ferments and juices which are now mainly instrumental in that work.

The chief agent in this mighty revolution, according to no less an authority than Bertholet, will be the ultra violet light rays. These are not visible to the human eye. They do not appear upon the spectroscope. They affect the photographic plate, however, and are probably discerned by some of the lower animals, whose sense of sight is much more acute than that of man.

Much is known of their chemical effects. Few microbes can long withstand their power. The redness and pain of "sunburn" are their work. They are particularly injurious to the eye, which upon exposure to them becomes totally blind in a little while.

Through the agency of these rays Bertholet has actually combined carbon dioxide and water vapor into sugar and other carbohydrates. He has inclosed carbohydrates, fats and albuminoids in sealed vessels of quartz and has seen them digest under the rays. The process is very expensive, of course, but it is hinted that modern inventive genius will so cheapen it in time that fields of wheat may be replaced by factories where food is manufactured from the gases of the air.

And should the men of that day be troubled with indigestion the same agent that makes their food will come to their relief. Stomach troubles will disappear at once before a little bulb of light rich in the ultra violet rays.—Boston Herald.

BIFOCAL LENSES.

They Had Their Origin In Ben Franklin's Double Glasses.

Everybody who uses bifocal glasses probably wonders where the idea originally came from. Bifocal glasses are the kind that possess two separate lenses cemented together so that by looking in the upper part one can see at a great distance and by looking through the lower half one can read.

Most authorities are inclined to give Benjamin Franklin credit for the invention. He was, so the story goes, an inveterate reader and could not use his reading glasses when looking any distance away.

Finally the notion came to him that he could combine his glasses, and he thereupon had the lenses cut in half and one-half of each lens placed in the rim of each spectacle rim. The result was that a single pair of glasses was sufficient, though present day oculists state that the sharply drawn line must have affected his eyes.

From this idea the oculists gradually developed a glass in which the lower part was arranged for reading and the upper part for long distance vision, while the annoying "marking line" was eliminated.—Washington Star.

A NEW CREATION
WEBSTER'S NEW INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY
THE MERRIAM WEBSTER

The Only New unabridged dictionary in many years.

Contains the pith and essence of an authoritative library. Covers every field of knowledge. An Encyclopedia in a single book.

The Only Dictionary with the New Divided Page.

400,000 Words. 2700 Pages. 6000 Illustrations. Cost nearly half a million dollars.

Let us tell you about this most remarkable single volume.

Write for sample pages, full particulars, etc. Name this paper and we will send free a set of Pocket Maps

G. & C. Merriam Co.
Springfield, Mass.

FIRST STATE BANK,

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS $11000.00

not merely name—But a fixed policy.

The men who founded and organized the First State had a definate policy in mind, namely: To organize and conduct a bank that would give to all its patrons the best possible service and the most liberal returns on money deposited that can safely be given by a strong conservative institution.

FIRST STATE BANK,
OKLEE Minn.

A. P. [illegible], President. John Pettersen, Cashier.
[illegible], Asst Cashier.

THE PRICHARD Co.
Thief River Falls Minn.

DEALERS IN LUMBER AND FARM MACHINERY

Located west of the new Soo Depot. Give us a call, and look over our stock of Lumber and Farm Machinery.

H. O. KJOMME
Attorney and Counselor at Law
McGinn Block
Thief River Falls, - - Minn.

Wilhelm Michelet
U. S. COMMISSIONER
COURT HOUSE
THIEF RIVER FALLS,
MINN.

Dr. Humphreys'

Specifics cure by acting directly upon the disease, without exciting disorder in any other part of the system.

NO.	CURES.	PRICES.
1	Fevers, Congestions, Inflammations	.25
2	Worms, Worm Fever, Worm Colic	.25
3	Teething, Colic, Crying, Wakefulness	.25
4	Diarrhea, of Children or Adults	.25
7	Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis	.25
8	Neuralgia, Toothache, Faceache	.25
9	Headache, Sick Headache, Vertigo	.25
10	Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Weak Stomach	.25
11	Suppressed or Painful Periods	.25
12	Whites, Too Profuse Periods	.25
13	Croup, Laryngitis, Hoarseness	.25
14	Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Eruptions	.25
15	Rheumatism, Rheumatic Pains	.25
16	Malaria, Chills, Fever and Ague	.25
19	Catarrh, Influenza, Cold in the Head	.25
20	Whooping-Cough	.25
27	Kidney Diseases	.25
28	Nervous Debility	1.00
30	Urinary Weakness, Wetting Bed	.25
77	Grip, Hay Fever	.25

Dr. Humphreys' Manual of all Diseases at your [illegible] Mailed Free. [illegible] on receipt of price [illegible]

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Oct. 23rd. 1914.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office, at Crookston Minnesota Oct. 20th, 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Elmer N. Olson, of Esplee, Minn. who on March 31st 1913, made Homestead Application serial No, 08959 for Lots 1, 2, 7 and 8 Section 1, Township 154 N. Range 39 W. Fifth, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make Final Commutation proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for Dist. of Minn., at Thief River Falls Minn on the 26th day of November 1914.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Nils T. Jorgenson, Eno G. Olson, of Torgerson, Minn. Albert M. Olson, Peter Nelson, of Esplee, Minn.

Proof made under act of June 6 1912.

PETER M. RINGDAL,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Oct. 30th 1914.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office, at Crookston Minn. Oct. 26th 1914.

Notice is hereby given, that Clarence E. Peterson, of Kratka, Minn., who on June, 3rd, 1911, made Homestead Entry serial No. 06259, for Lots 1,&2, E.½ N.W¼, Section 13, Township 153 N. Range 40W. 5th, Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before N. W. Tarrent, Municipal Judge for the City of Thief River Falls, Minn. at Thief River Falls, Minnesota, on the 8th day of December 1914.

Claimant names as witnesses

Ray Hoffman, of Erie, Minn. Stephen Singer, Carl Klemmetson, Ole Nelson, all of Kratka, Minn Peter C. Wold and Jack Dunn of Kratka, Minn.

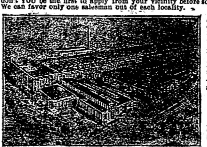
Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal.
Register.

Cuts, Burns,
Bruises, Sores, Wounds and Piles quickly healed with Arnica Salve. It prevents infection, is antiseptic, soothing, healing. Try it once. Money Back If It Fails. The Original and Genuine.
Bucklen's Arnica Salve
Heals the Hurt
All Druggists and Dealers, 25c.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH - - That's $50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day

[illegible] Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes [illegible], doctors, lawyers, dentists and [illegible] farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 200-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were piloting them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing talking points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Why don't YOU be the first to apply from your vicinity before someone else gets the territory? We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.



Our New Home. Capacity [illegible] Safes Annually.

The 25th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide-awake men who received our special selling inducement, rendered it necessary to double our output. We are spending many thousands of dollars enlarging our sales organization, but to learn all particulars. it will cost you only the price of a postal card.

Ask for Catalogue 16 T.

THE VICTOR SAFE & LOCK CO.
CINCINNATI, OHIO

PROPER CREDIT FOR GRANDPA

Happy Father Wanted Generous Contribution Entered Under the Proper Heading.

When Mr. Otis returned from the office one afternoon, he was met at the door by his wife, who cried, excitedly:

"Oh, Herbert, love, I received a lovely letter from father today."

"Yes, my dear?" queried he.

"Yes, dearest," repeated Mrs. Otis, enthusiastically, "he congratulates us on the birth of our baby."

"That's good," was the reply.

"Yes," went on Mrs. Otis, "and he says it will cost us more to live now—that babies are expensive."

"I suppose that is true, dear," assented the husband.

"And, Herbert, just think!" said the wife, joyfully, "father has sent us a check for $1,000. Isn't that just lovely of him?"

"I should say it was!" said Otis. "I'll sit right down, dear, and thank him for his generous contribution to the Fresh Heir fund."

SUFFERED FOR FOUR YEARS.

Mr. J. M. Sinclair of Olivehill, Tenn., writes: "I strained my back, which weakened my kidneys and caused an awful bad backache and inflammation of the bladder. Later I became so much worse that I consulted a doctor, who said that I had Diabetes and that my heart was affected. I suffered for four years and was in a nervous state and very much depressed. The doctor's medicine didn't help me, so I decided to try Dodds Kidney Pills, and I cannot say enough to express my relief and thankfulness, as they cured me. Diamond Dinner Pills cured me of Constipation."

Mr. J. M. Sinclair.

Dodds Kidney Pills, 50c. per box at your dealer or Dodds Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Write for Household Hints, also music of National Anthem (English and German words) and recipes for dainty dishes. All 3 sent free. Adv.

CAR GOES 28.7 MILES ON GALLON OF GASOLINE

Red Crown Shows Remarkable Test.

Judged by C. A. C. Committee.

Surprising results were obtained Tue day in Chicago, when, in a distance test on the boulevards, a 1915 big six went 28.7 miles on a gallon of Red Crown gasoline. The test was made to demonstrate the fuel economy of high test gasoline, by the technical committee of the Chicago Automobile Club.

Red Crown gasoline, 58 test, was decided upon by the judges and drivers as the best gasoline to be used. All through the trip the clutch was not slipped, except when traffic congestion made it necessary. The dash adjustment on the carburetor was disconnected, and in order that the test be a fair one, the fan was in operation throughout the run.

Next came the acceleration test. With the carburetor adjustment the same as during the economy run, the car was driven from standing start to thirty miles an hour in 12 4-5 seconds. The flexibility test saw the car run at four miles an hour, then speeded up to forty-four.

The test proves that the six is not an excessive fuel consumer, where the best gasoline is used.

A debt defies all the laws of nature. The more debts are contracted the more they expand.

DOCTOR KNEW

Had Tried It Himself.

The doctor who has tried Postum knows that it is an easy, certain, and pleasant way out of the coffee habit and all of the ails following and he prescribes it for his patients as did a physician of Prospertown, N. J.

One of his patients says:

"During the summer just past I suffered terribly with a heavy feeling at the pit of my stomach and dizzy feelings in my head and then a blindness would come over my eyes so I would have to sit down. I would get so nervous I could hardly control my feelings.

"Finally I spoke to our family physician about it and he asked if I drank much coffee and mother told him that I did. He told me to immediately stop drinking coffee and drink Postum in its place, as he and his family had used Postum and found it a powerful rebuilder and delicious food-drink.

"I hesitated for a time, disliking the idea of having to give up my coffee, but finally I got a package and found it to be all the doctor said.

"Since drinking Postum in place of coffee my dizziness, blindness and nervousness are all gone, my bowels are regular and I am well and strong. That is a short statement of what Postum has done for me."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

The cost per cup of both kinds is about the same.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

—sold by Grocers.

WITH THANKSGIVING AND JOY

For when we gladly eat our daily bread, we bless
The Hand that feeds us;
And when we walk along life's way in cheerfulness,
Our very heart-beats praise the Lord that leads us.
—Henry Van Dyke, D. D.

ILLUSTRATING THE REAL JOY OF THE DAY

PHOTO BY FRANK FOURNIER STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Lord, we, thy children, small and great,
Beneath thy care, where'er it be,
The while thy grace we supplicate,
Give thanks to thee.
—Clinton Scollard.

THE ROYAL GORGE

Mrs. Twitter's Little Dissertation on Mother's Joy in Preparing the Great Dinner.

She Didn't Seem to Take a Very Enthusiastic View of the Matter, But There Was a Reason for Her Well-Expressed "Grouch."

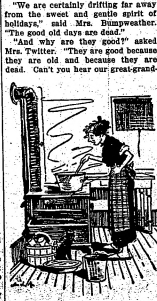
"YES, ma'am," said Mrs. Bumpweather, "the mince pie is loaded, and the deadly conflict between peace and comfort on one side and pain and pepsin on the other is about to be performed. The coming Thursday will witness our great epicurean festival, which might be technically termed the Royal Gorge."

"I'm not 'specially keen to listening to any sentimental ravings about the day," said Mrs. Twitter, with her usual suspicious and refrigerated tone of voice.

"It's put in the calendar to pester us, that's all. Autumn brings us every kind of a misery it can pick up and lug home, after which we are cordially invited to gather together and be thankful. Thanksgiving day, like matrimony, is a good joke. You pawn the family jewels to send the kid-child to an expensive school. Blow one. You cavern into the recesses of a dark clothes closet and disinter your furs. They are somewhat deader than they were ever dead before. In fact, they are not fur at all, ha, ha! They are merely skin what has been skun. Swat two. The first cold day blows in and the radiator of the motor car freezes up, sneezes once, and calmly expires. Slam three. Grand opera stars collect, but father can't. So you don't go to the opera. Grief four."

"We are certainly drifting far away from the sweet and gentle spirit of holidays," said Mrs. Bumpweather. "The good old days are dead."

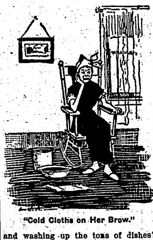
"And why are they good?" asked Mrs. Twitter. "They are good because they are old and because they are dead. Can't you hear our great-grandmothers scoffing about new ideas and all that? Don't you suppose they were roaring about the dear old times that had passed? Up to date though you are, my lamb, with your slit skirt and rubber buttons; in your tango shoe soles, your chin strap on your little bonnet, and your own interpretation of the Castle walk—even you, my love, will some time belong to the good old times."



"For Weeks She Made Mince Pie."

"Even thus," agreed Mrs. Bumpweather, "even so. 'Tis truth, I vow. But I shall belong to my own old times; I shall not be classed with my grandmother's old time. I shall keep alive with the elixir of the present moment. Do you know, I think our Thanksgiving days are really much nicer than those old ones. I can't see anything particularly roaring jolly about exploring to church through three feet of snow and meeting a flap-hatted gent carrying a wild turkey. All the Thanksgiving pictures are like that."

"But," continued Mrs. Twitter, "do they ever tell about dear mother and what sort of a time she had? For weeks she made mince meat and stewed pumpkins, and during the summer she sweltered over the fire to make the jelly. Imagine the thankfulness in her heart when she saw whole days of hard work gobbled up at one meal. How charming to have all the little folk around the house? Yes, ma'am? But what about sweeping up the mud tracks afterwards and plucking raisin seeds off the best hair cloth furniture, and washing up the tons of dishes? Mother did not sit before the fireplace and tell stories. She was putting little cotton blankets on her burnt thumbs, for basting a turkey is perilous business, let me tell you. How jolly it was to crack nuts, too. But where was mother? Oh, she was busy somewhere. Yes, we recollect now. She was putting a cold cloth on her throbbing brow; she had to pull herself together so as to have strength enough to serve a bit of supper afterward."



"Cold Cloths on Her Brow."

"They didn't have the movies then to furnish them with recreation," said Mrs. Bumpweather, "or theaters or tango dances. Visiting and eating were about the best they could do, and, after all, that's more fun than anything else. Give me time to get up a good, old-fashioned dinner and I can have the biggest spread of my sweet, middle-aged life. Compare such a meal to anything you can get downtown, or at any country club! My child, there's nothing equal to it, and it is really a lark to cook it."

"Blithers!" remarked Mrs. Twitter.

Mrs. Bumpweather said nothing, as if she meant it.

"Blithers!" exclaimed Mrs. Twitter again.

Mrs. Bumpweather slipped her hand through Mrs. Titter's arm.

"You're tired, little one," said she. "When the enthusiasm gets out of your system, it's a sure sign that some other less pleasant microbe has crept in. You can't afford to let yourself slip away like that. You've got to keep holding on, and feeling keen about human events, and being interested, even if you're mending a pair of your old man's trousers or picking the roast beef bones for hash. You'll come and eat your Thanksgiving dinner with me, won't you, honey?"

Mrs. Twitter wriggled about in a naive, shy twist, supposedly to signify inexpressible joy.

"What for did I do all that growly talk?" asked she. "Little Tommy Tucker sang for his supper, but I'd rather growl for mine."

And she said it without the slightest show of shame.

Mrs Wood B. Highbrow on Thanksgiving

YES, yes, indeed! We would have had a perfectly lovely time at our house on Thanksgiving if it hadn't been for an accident that happened at the dinner table. At the time I felt terribly misanthropic about it and really had a very bad movay quart dour for a minute, but I soon consoled myself by recalling dear Robert Burns' precious words, "The best laid plans of mice and men gang bide awee."

We only had a small dinner party, just the Bolivards and Wood's sister and her husband and their little boy, Harold. Did you ever meet Wood's sister? My dear, between you and I—remember this is strictly sotto voce—she is very ignorant and snobbish, and such a talker! Wood himself acknowledges that she would surely explode if she ever got tetanus, and ever since she went abroad she holds her head as high as Marie Antoinette going to the Moulin Rouge and talks nothing but Paris—a perfect parricide, I call her!

And ignorant! Why, do you know, she brought me back a little statuesque of Venus from Italy and apologized for its broken arms, by telling me it was that way the diagonal was found! Ha, ha, ha! I could scarcely retain my specific gravity, I was so amused. She didn't know that Mickey Angelo had carved it that way on purpose to make it look old and debilitated because the Romans dearly loved antique things. I don't blame them either, I do myself, don't you? I have a colonial monogamy antimacassar 500 years old with all the knobs broken off.

I had a high noon dinner at one o'clock—"when jocund day stands tipsy on the misty mountain top," you know, as dear old Will would say. It was a strict New England dinner, of course, in honor of the day and Wood's ancestors—I am an F. F. V., myself—and before it was served we each agreed to tell the one thing we were most thankful for.

Wood was first. He said words couldn't express his gratefultude because he didn't have to pay an income tax. Poor Wood! He staid up all the night before, figuring out what he would have to pay at the source. He was terribly puzzled at first and wanted me to help him, but I was too busy assisting Nora to make the stuffing.

He didn't know whether to multiply the least common multiple by the fourth dimension and add 1 per cent of the remainder, or extricate the cuberoot of the net proceeds and square the result. One thing, he said, was certain. He'd just like to get square once with the Democrats! My, but he was tickled when he came upstairs the next morning to tell me he had escaped after all, but, he said, it was a very close shave.

I don't know whether to tell I was thankful because I had been elected president of my suffrage club, or because I had such a wonderful child as Gwendolyn, but I finally decided to intimate Cordelia, the mother of the Gratchy, and display my jewel child. Besides, I am far too modest to boast of myself.

So I had Gwendolyn read a composition on "The First Thanksgiving," in which she told all about the hardships of the poor Pilgrims who came over in the Maybell with Lord Baltimore to Plymouth, and how they sat down to their first Thanksgiving dinner of hominy and codfish balls, and gave thanks because they hadn't been scalped or burned as witches.

Then Wood had her bind every state in the Union and tell what time it is in the Scandalous peninsula when it is six o'clock here. Then she showed all of her beautiful sketches and played several duets on the piano. She is Mr. Boguslatchkey's favorite pupil, and he often tells me that she will be a perfect tyro when she grows up. Just then, the "tocsin of the soul, the dinner bell," rang and we had to evade the rest of the program. I was glad, too, because the Bolivards looked awfully bored when Wood's sister asked Harold to recite—my, my, how she does love to show him off!

We had a lovely meal. Nora certainly is a fine cook, even if she is Irish. I had her mix the mincemeat with strong tea and cane pepper instead of wicked things like cider and brandy, and the pies were delicious. Everything was. Nora hasn't quit talking about her fine cooking that day yet. That's one trouble with the Irish, they are so boastful! I firmly believe it is the reason that Julius Caesar, when he conquered Ireland, christened it "Erin-go-Brag," don't you?

Beg pardon? Well, the dinner had passed off beautifully. Wood had kept the table in a roar—you know what a delightful bon mot he is!—and had carved the turkey just like a surgeon. But first I must tell you about Harold. The little wretch, instead of peeling his banana into strips and laying them carefully on the table like Gwendolyn, turned his skin back and, after eating the fruit out of it in two bites, threw it under the table. He said afterwards it slipped off his plate. At any rate it fell right at Wood's feet.

Poor Wood! He had on some new shoes without any heels—he didn't want to buy them in the first place, but I begged him to, because I love him to be the observed of all observers and have a moldy form, as my beloved Shakespeare would say—and he wasn't used to them, so that when he got up to leave the table he slipped on the peel.

Ours is an extension table with ball gearing rollers, and when he grasped the edge of it to save himself from falling, alas, alas, it parted in the middle and all the combustibles of the dinner were participated onto the floor and Wood fell backwards on top of his chair with the most violent emphasis.

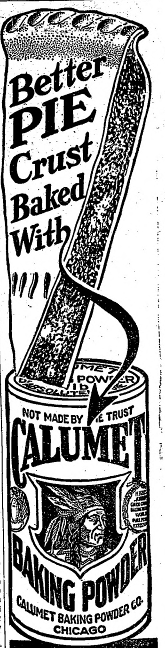
Poor boy! He had been telling a baseball story and had been using such shocking paraphrases as "jammed the cushion," "swatted the sphere," "clattered across the pan" and "dented the platter." Don't you think it was a dreadful coincidence that just as he said "platter," down went the turkey? Oh, dear! I just can't help but feel someway that perhaps the whole thing was a nemesis on him for using such dreadful, undefiled slang.

Well, he paid dearly for it, poor fellow! I'm afraid it will be weeks before his solar system will be entirely renovated. When we disinterred him that day we found that his parallax was dreadfully bruised, and that he had a severe attack of nostalgia—I declare I thought his dear nose would never, never stop bleeding!

Yes, we all partook of some injury—Mrs. Bolivard hasn't spoken to me since because her new scrape-de-shin skirt was ruined; that is, all but Harold and his mother. It seems like the very ironing of fate that they were the only ones present who escaped from damage, don't you think so?

Real Cause for Thanksgiving.

On every side there is cause for thanksgiving. We are at peace with all, even our enemies, if there be such. Our past achievements stimulate to further efforts, and our present difficulties breed fresh determination to overcome them.



Better cookies, cake and biscuits, too. All as light, fluffy, tender and delicious as mother used to bake. And just as wholesome. For purer Baking Powder than Calumet cannot be had at any price.

Ask your grocer.

RECEIVED HIGHEST AWARDS
World's Pure Food Exposition, Chicago, Ill.
Paris Exposition, France, March, 1912

You don't save money when you buy cheap or big-can baking powder. Don't be misled. Buy Calumet. It's more economical—more wholesome—gives best results. Calumet is far superior to sour milk and soda.

Time to Go.

"Right in the midst of the advice you were giving him you broke off and hurried away."

"That's what I did!"

"But he was listening deferentially to all you had to say."

"You bet he was. I never had a man listen to me that deferentially that he didn't try to touch me for five dollars before I got away."

YOU'LL like Fatimas—a really delightful, mild Turkish blend. Try the taste of their choice leaf that has made FATIMA the greatest selling brand in the land.

If you cannot secure Fatima Cigarettes from your dealer, we will be pleased to send you three packages postpaid on receipt of 50c. Address Fatima Dept., 212 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y.

"Distinctively Individual"

Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

20 for 15¢

FATIMA
TURKISH BLEND CIGARETTES
Cameron & Cameron Co. RICHMOND, VA.
NO GOLD TIPS BUT FINEST QUALITY

JACK C. MILES
SCULPTOR—TAXIDERMIST
Tanning, Mounting, Fur Work. Price lists free—Write today. New Taxidermy book—50 big game pictures on 11x14 enamel paper mailed for 10 cents postage.
1710 N. Broadway, Denver, Colorado

Highest Cash Prices
Paid For CHICKENS, VEAL, CREAM
WRITE FOR SPECIAL PRICE LIST.
THE R. E. COBB CO., 14, 3rd Street, St. Paul, Minn.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

MODEL FARMSTEAD TO BE EXHIBIT OF STATE AT FRISCO

EXPOSITION COMMISSION DECIDES ON NOVEL METHOD TO ADVERTISE MINNESOTA.

COMPLETE IN ALL DETAILS

No Detail of Ideal Rural Home and Equipment Will Be Left Out—Even Attendants to Dress in Approved Rural Style.

St. Paul.—The pestige of Minnesota as a farming state will be exemplified to the eyes of the world in a novel and convincing manner in the state's exhibition at the Panama-Pacific exposition next year.

Instead of a formal building, such as are placed at expositions by most of the states, Minnesota will show a model farmstead complete in every particular.

Farmstead Idea Settled.

The farmstead idea definitely was decided on by the Panama-Pacific exposition committee appointed by Governor Eberhart, at a meeting in the capitol. All previous plans for the Minnesota exhibit were abandoned and an entirely new scheme decided on.

The building and art features of the Minnesota exhibit have been placed in the hands of Maurice I. Flagg, director of the Minnesota State Art society. Mr. Flagg will leave for San Francisco soon to take charge of the work.

Will Cost Much Less.

The new plan will cost a little more than half of what it would have cost to represent Minnesota at the exposition under the scheme first proposed. The model farmstead will cost $36,000. The former plan contemplated an expenditure of about $60,000.

Correspondence with authorities of the fair has assured the commission that a bigger and more prominent site will be set aside for the newly planned Minnesota exhibit.

Fine Model Farmhouse.

One of the principal features of the Minnesota exhibit will be a $3,500 model farmhouse designed by the State Art society. A model of this farmhouse has been exhibited at the state fair, giving Minnesota people opportunity to become familiar with its utilitarian and architectural features.

The exhibit will contain a model farmhouse, model barns, model poultry sheds, model dairy and all the smaller buildings of a model Minnesota farm.

The farmhouse will be furnished complete. No detail of a model farm home will be missing. Each article within it, including every pan in the kitchen, will be marked with its cost. Under the direction of the State Art society, rugs, pictures and all furnishings will be placed in the home.

Other Features, Also.

A model cow barn will be one of the farmstead features. In it will be housed some of Minnesota's world-famed cattle.

In the piggery will wallow the prize hogs of the state. In the poultry houses visitors to the exposition will see the best that Minnesota can produce in the poultry line.

During the fair Mr. Flagg will have entire charge of the Minnesota show. He will be assisted by students from the agricultural department of the University of Minnesota.

So as not to leave any detail incomplete the commission decided that the student helpers would be attired in the most durable and best looking farm clothes that can be used for everyday work on the farm.

A model dairy, depicting dairying methods of Minnesota, will be part of the model farmstead equipment. Minnesota vines and shrubbery will be transplanted on the farmstead in an artistic manner.

Hot Time on Reservation.

White Earth.—Reservation Indians were given their annuity payments last week, amounting to about $18 each. Immediately bootleggers arrived on the scene with generous supplies of firewater and orgies among the Indians have been frequent. Indian police have been busy making arrests and settling brawls. Deputy United States Marshal Carson of Detroit arrested several bootleggers and has confiscated more than 100 gallons of liquor.

Albert Lea Victims Buried.

Albert Lea.—A double funeral of the late D. C. Armstrong and Clinton L. Luce occurred at the Presbyterian church in this city Wednesday at 2:30 p. m. The Rev. Mr. Hatton of Mankato and the Rev. J. B. Lyqle of Albert Lea conducted the services. Owing to the intimate relations of the two deceased men in all their walks of life, the Business Men's league had their remains placed side by side in Graceland cemetery. The services at the grave were conducted simultaneously.

ST. PAUL LUMBERMAN SUICIDE

Aged Millionaire Shoots Self at Room in Hotel—No Motive Is Assigned.

St. Paul.—William Sauntry, prominent millionaire lumberman, shot himself in a room in the Ryan hotel and died a few minutes later. He discharged a pistol into his mouth.

Mr. Sauntry was 61 years old and for more than forty years had been identified with the lumber industry of Minnesota. Mrs. Sauntry, at her apartments, said after the shooting that she could not assign a reason for her husband's self-destruction.

Mr. Sauntry came to Stillwater when 20 years old. He entered the lumber industry as a river driver and for a time drove oxen in the lumber and logging camps, which then was the most prominent industry. His business ability brought him rapidly to the front. After being for about five years employed by lumber firms he formed a partnership with Albert Tozer and their company grew rapidly. Later he bought out his partner and for a time was the sole owner of the company. Later he was identified with the Frederick Weyerhaeuser industry, and became one of the most prominent figures in the Minnesota lumber industry.

ANTI-CATHOLIC TALKER FINED

District Court Upholds Judgment of Municipal Judge Fining Woman Speaker for Obscenity.

Judge Arthur H. Snow of the district court has just handed down a decision sustaining the judgment of the municipal court in Winona in fining Anna Lowry, an anti-Catholic lecturer, guilty of using obscene language in an address she gave to women only in Winona last spring. A fine of $35 was imposed in the lower court.

Judge Snow defines as obscene language "that which shocks the ordinary and common sense of men as an indecency."

"If the language used was obscene," he says further, "previous use of it by another person or persons would not make it any less so or excuse or palliate the employment of it by defendant."

It is said that Anna Lowry may appeal the case to the state supreme court. A stay of ten days was granted.

FOUR SANATORIA ARE VOTED

Counties of Blue Earth, Lac Qui Parle, Grant and Douglas to Benefit by Recent Election.

St. Paul.—Four Minnesota counties voted in the recent election to erect tuberculosis sanatoria, according to advices to the state board of health. They are Blue Earth, Lac qui Parle, Grant and Douglas.

The state law providing for county sanatoria specifies that they may be authorized by county commissioners or by vote of the people of the county. In the four counties named the county boards refused to act and the issue was placed before the voters. The law provides that a majority of all the votes cast on the question will carry, the failure to vote one way or the other not counting as a negative vote.

In Blue Earth the vote was 2,157 for and 1,656 against. The total vote cast at the election was 6,023, but the sanatorium movement won out, having a majority of the votes cast on the issue itself.

State Board Inspects Asylum.

Rochester.—Practically all of the state institutions under the supervision of the state board of control were represented at the quarterly meeting in Rochester. Members of the board visited the state hospital and were taken through the different wards at the state farm and over the new power house, which is conceded to be the most modern and best in the state. Several papers of importance were read by various members.

Dairy Fire; Incendiarism Suspected.

St. Cloud.—Three horses, valued at $300 each, were killed and a barn valued at $800 was destroyed in a fire at the Highland dairy. Robert Schneider, one of the owners, was burned in an attempt to rescue the animals. His condition is serious. The fire marshal has been summoned, and incendiarism is suspected.

Sixteen Children in 25 Years.

Waseca.—Mr. and Mrs. George Kahnke have just celebrated their silver wedding anniversary. They are parents of 16 children, 12 of whom are living. Rev. J. J. Treanor, who performed the ceremony 25 years ago, was a guest of honor.

Jail Recommended for Brainerd.

Brainerd.—The grand jury has returned 28 indictments, of which 12 have been made public. Eleven are indictments for selling liquor without a license and include Eveleyn Powell, Thomas G. Wellington, H. J. Breen, E. Lovdahl, Mike Stimach, Charles N. Cannon and Frank Cannon. All pleaded not guilty when arraigned. Blanche Johnson, charged with keeping a resort, pleaded not guilty. The jury recommended to the county commissioners that steps be taken to build a new jail.

MAKE INDIAN TREATY LAND DRY

ALL SALOONS IN TERRITORY MUST CLOSE BY NOV. 30.

Government Officials So Announce—Throws 200 License Holders Out of Business.

Bemidji.—Every one of the saloons operating within the territory embraced in the Indian treaty of 1855, must close their doors by Nov. 30. Henry A. Larson, special Indian agent, who is in Bemidji, issued this order on behalf of the United States government.

It is also said that the drug stores in the district would be prohibited from selling liquor.

Mr. Larson, with J. B. Brandt, another Indian agent, has been sent to the affected district to see that the order is enforced. They expect to remain in Bemidji for some time. The action is taken upon the recent decision of the United States supreme court, denying an application for a rehearing from the attorneys representing the saloon men.

Approximately 200 liquor licenses will have to be cancelled by the last of the month in sixty-six cities, villages and towns of the territory affected by the treaty. The order also will affect a number of drug stores insofar as their licenses to sell liquor are concerned.

Most of the retail liquor dealers have been disposing of their stock in anticipation that the order to close would soon be given. Some will need longer than Nov. 30 to wind up their business ffairs. Employes of the government disclaim any responsibility for this condition, holding that the law is plain, and that no other recourse than to close was left the saloon men after the Supreme Court order denying a rehearing had been filed.

The saloons in the following counties will be closed: Beltrami, Crow Wing, Cass, Koochiching, Itasca, Becker and part of St. Louis.

Among the 66 cities, villages and towns which will be affected by "dry" territory are the following: Hibbing, Bemidji, Big Fork, Brainerd, Cass Lake, Chisholm, Cohassett, Deerwood, Coleraine, Crosby, Cuyuna, Detroit, Frazee, Grand Rapids, Marble, Nashwauk, Park Rapids and Walker. The list includes several other smaller places.

TO RETURN CORN EXHIBITS

New Rule of West Central Association Will Boost Coming Show at Benson.

Benson.—Officials in charge of the second annual corn and alfalfa exposition, to be held here Nov. 26 to 28, shattered a big corn show precedent when they decided to return to exhibitors after the exposition the exhibits which have won the sweepstakes prizes. Corn samples that will be given over $1,000 in prizes are affected.

It is a ruling of long standing in corn show management that all sweepstakes samples shall be kept by the association putting on the show. Many corn breeders in west central Minnesota, however, feel that an exhibit good enough to win $200 or more in prizes is too valuable to lose. It is this reason that several of the more prominent breeders have objected to the rule.

Those in charge of the exposition believe that this contention is a good one and that such valuable corn should be used in corn breeding work. In the past these samples have been kept for exhibition purposes and have rarely been planted. It is probable that the decision of the West Central Development association will have some effect in bringing about the abolishment of this rule at other big shows.

The new rule will result in the display of more and better corn than has been expected, even though the original estimate was placed at 50,000 ears in the regular classes—the largest amount of selected corn ever placed on exhibit in the northern part of the corn belt. It is believed that over 1,000,000 ears will be shown in the wagon load class.

Women Are Fire Heroines.

Minneapolis.—Fire that threatened to destroy an entire neighborhood was brought under control by a dozen women, hastily formed into a fire brigade Tuesday, after two dwellings were destroyed and three children carried to safety. With blackened faces and burned hands and arms the women fought the flames with a garden hose and water from a rain barrel.

Corn and Alfalfa Show Queen.

Benson.—West central Minnesota is looking for a queen. More than that west central Minnesota will crown a queen with fitting ceremony Nov. 28. To stimulate interest in the second annual corn and alfalfa exposition at Benson, Nov. 26 to 28, a queen contest is being conducted in each of the sixteen counties belonging to the West Central Minnesota Development association. Each contestant for the throne is working with an army of devoted followers for the largest number of votes.

ACTUAL OPERATION OF NEW CURRENCY SYSTEM IS BEGUN

RESERVE BANKS NOW OPEN FOR BUSINESS AFTER YEAR OF PLANNING BY ADMINISTRATION.

TOTAL CASH RESERVE IS $243,000,000 TO START

Main Aim Is to Give Great Elasticity to Money Market of Country In Order That Panics Such as That of 1907 May Be Impossible.

Washington, Nov. 17.—With the opening of the twelve federal reserve banks, the nation has begun actual operation of its new currency system designed to provide an elastic circulation medium, based upon modern ideas of finance and economics.

Year for Details.

It has taken the reserve banks organization committee and the federal reserve board almost twelve months to work out details of organization to the point where an opening date was chosen. Notwithstanding the careful deliberations which preceded every preliminary step, the twelve banks will not for many weeks take up and exercise all the functions bestowed upon them by congress.

Such evolution as will result from an old national banking system of necessity will in most respects be slow. The reserve board, the guiding spirit of the new system, is itself feeling its way over strange ground and the men in charge of the twelve banks probably will feel the same desire to work slowly and with sureness rather than be venturesome.

Really a Compromise.

The new system is generally conceded to be a compromise between a central bank and the present system with its thousands of units, scattered reserves and fixed limits of currency. Its chief attraction and value, those who interpret it find in the elasticity it will give to recognized paper currency.

Under the present law national bank currency is almost a fixed quantity, based upon national bank capital, issued upon United States bonds and unresponsive to the chill of hard times or the exultation of boom days. Its use led, the experts say, to unrestricted loans and speculation in the days when money was easy and to a hoarding of resources and a tightening of the purse strings of credit when they were hard. It is said to have bred the panic of 1907 when solvent banks with large credits in reserve, and central reserve cities, were helpless and could get back to their own counters none of the millions they had placed with their larger and stronger correspondents.

The New System.

Under the new system the federal reserve notes, which, in time, probably will entirely replace the national bank notes, now so familiar, will be issued upon commercial paper, arising out of actual business transactions. It seems plain that they will rise and fall in amount as the tides of business rise and fall, and that there will be no plethora of money to lie idle. They will be obligations of the United States government, which national bank notes are not, and will have back of them a large reserve of gold in the regional banks. Through them the reserve banks are expected to come to the aid of any needy member bank which has plenty of good paper, but needs cash. To further insure the flow of money, reserve banks themselves may be required to rediscount the discounted paper of other reserve banks.

More than $250,000,000 of the new notes have been ordered by the comptroller of the currency for the twelve banks. They are in $4, $10, $20, $50 and $100 denominations, and are to be accepted by all member banks and for all customs taxes or other dues. The federal reserve agent of every bank in the system, who is the government's representative there, has these notes in custody ready for the application of member banks.

Reserve of $243,000,000.

As it stands, the twelve banks start out with a total cash reserve of about $243,000,000.

The reserve banks are not to do a banking business, except with member banks. They are empowered, however, to engage in open market transactions in the buying or selling of cable transfers and bankers' bills of acceptance and bills of exchange.

In the future, the clearings of the banks of the country are expected to be made through these regional banks.

Ostriches Stampede; Cause Panic.

Phoenix, Ariz., Nov. 14.—Three hundred ostriches stampeded from an ostrich ranch near here and swarmed over a carriage driven by Mrs. L. D. Rosseal, instantly killing the woman and both of the horses she was driving. The huge birds became frightened at something in their stockade. A panic followed on the ranches in the neighborhood, and families of ranchmen fled in terror. An alarm was sent out and all the cowboys in the vicinity on fast horses are trying to lassoo and round up the birds.

WESTERN CANADA'S STRONG POSITION

"THE WHEAT GRANARY OF THE WORLD," A WELL APPLIED TERM.

Western Canada occupies a stronger position today than it ever has occupied. Taking one year with another, the efficiency of its lands to produce has been well proved. It has not been said of it that year in and year out there were bumper and bounteous crops. If such a condition existed it would be phenomenal in the history of any country. With an extensive territory producing grain, hogs, cattle and sheep, of some 800 miles wide and 1,000 miles long, it is easy to conceive of a wide variation in temperature and climate; there is variation in rainfall and snowfall; every section is not the best in the district—some are better than others and some worse, but as a general thing, the great percentage is "better." This past year has shown that some portions are not altogether immune from periods of drought. The same may be said of adjoining states to the south. But this year has also shown that in the greater portion of Western Canada drought does not appear, but even in the drought-stricken area of this year, past years have shown that the soil produces wonderfully well and even this year, with modern methods, known as "dry-farming," good crops were harvested. The large number of Americans who during the past sixteen years have been attracted to Canada have not gone simply because of the advertising of that country, but because their friends and their old-time neighbors have done well there, and with careful and judicious farming almost everyone has done well.

As a result of the great influx of immigration the open or prairie homesteading area is being rapidly taken up. The fact that this is so is evidence that Western Canada lands are productive, and on these open plains today are to be seen the homes of successful farmers from almost every state in the Union. They have earned their patents and now own outright their 160 acres of land, together probably with an adjoining 160 acres, which they have purchased or preempted, all of which is worth from $25 to $30 per acre. They originally started by growing grains altogether, but they found that they could secure a better price for much of their grain by feeding it to hogs and cattle, and the most successful ones are those who have followed this course.

But to meet the wants of the newcomer a new homestead area has been opened up, known as the "park country." In this park country are to be found beautiful groves of poplar and willow, small lakes and streams with sufficient open area to enable one to go into immediate cultivation of crop, and in due time when they wish more land to be put under cultivation, they may at small cost cut down some of the groves, which in the meantime have been valuable in providing fuel and in giving shelter to cattle.

Notwithstanding the high character of the open prairie lands and the fact that farmers there have realized in a splendid way, there is the opinion backed up by a lot of experience that this parklike country contains soil even better than that of the open area referred to.

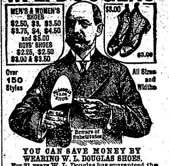
The opportunities, therefore, for money making are as great today as they ever were. The opportunities for carrying on farming successfully are fully as great as they ever were. Of this park area we have an immense quantity of land yet to be settled. It is true that the railroads have not yet penetrated these districts to the extent that they have the open area, but this will come and as settlements advance, so will railroads build. For the present there is a temporary lull in railroad building, but it is always the case that where there is a demand there will come a supply, and it will not be long before the park country will be penetrated by railroads that will give sufficient accommodation for all needs, but to those who prefer it there are lots of opportunities for purchasing land nearer towns and villages and at low prices and on easy terms.

Whether one cares to purchase or homestead it can better be done by paying a visit to the country and it will repay you to spend some little time visiting the different districts.—Advertisement.

Anticipating It.

"You know Ethelbert Wombat, that model young man?"

"Yes; what has he been caught doing?"



W. L. DOUGLAS

MEN'S & WOMEN'S SHOES $2.50, $3, $3.50 $3.75, $4, $4.50 and $5.00 BOYS' SHOES $2.25, $2.50 $3.00 & $3.50

$3.00

Over 150 Styles

All Sizes and Widths

Beware of Substitutes

YOU CAN SAVE MONEY BY WEARING W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES.

For 31 years W. L. Douglas has guaranteed the value by having his name and the retail price stamped on the sole before the shoes leave the factory. This protects the wearer against high prices for inferior shoes of other makes. W. L. Douglas shoes are always worth what you pay for them. If you could see how carefully W. L. Douglas shoes are made, and the high grade leathers used, you would then understand why they look better, fit better, hold their shape and wear longer than other makes for the price. If the W. L. Douglas shoes are not for sale in your vicinity, order direct from factory. Shoes sent everywhere. Postage free in the U. S. Write for Illustrated Catalog showing how to order by mail. W. L. DOUGLAS, 210 Spark St., Brockton, Mass.

Why They Settle.

Wife—Who can doubt the power of woman's love! Think of the thousands of wild youths who have settled down as soon as they married?

Husband—They couldn't afford to be anything else after they got married.

Reduction in Living Costs Made Possible by Perfect Product.

The sudden and highly alarming increase in cost of food necessities, such as sugar and flour, demand increased domestic economy. For incomes have not advanced with this war-time soaring of food prices.

Waste of food as well as cost of food must be considered and minimized in these days of exorbitant prices.

Fortunately the greatest food waste with which the housewife has to contend—bake-day failures and the waste of costly baking materials—is rendered preventable by the perfect leavening power of Calumet Baking Powder.

Calumet is an absolutely sure baking powder of absolute purity. It never fails to produce fully raised bakings that are tender and temptingly delicious. For its wonderful leavening strength never varies. It's always uniform—and always unexcelled.

To pay more than is asked for Calumet simply means a useless waste of money. To pay less, and obtain an inferior powder, means the useless waste of Baking Materials.

Order a can of Calumet. Save a substantial sum on the price asked for Trust Brands when you buy it. Save the flour, sugar, butter and eggs so often wasted by Big Can Powders—when you use it. You are safe in ordering Calumet, in trying it, in testing the truth of these claims, for if you are not thoroughly satisfied the purchase price will be refunded by your local dealer.

In buying a can of Calumet send the slip found in the one-pound can to the Calumet Baking Powder Co., Advertising Department, Chicago, Ill., and you will receive one of their handsome 72-page Cook Books, illustrations in colors, and a book that will be a guide to economy in the kitchen.—Adv.

True Love's Blight.

"Why are you so depressed today?"

"I'm suffering from heart failure."

"Nonsense. There's nothing like that the matter with you."

"Yes, there is. She said her heart would never fail me, but it has."

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over 30 Years.

Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

His Line.

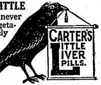
"What's his business?"

"He's a press agent."

"Oh; what make of press does he sell?"

YOUR OWN DRUGGIST WILL TELL YOU Try Murine Eye Remedy for Red, Weak, Watery Eyes and Granulated Eyelids; No Smarting—just Eye Comfort. Write for Book of the Eye by mail Free. Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago.

Engineers estimate the available water power of Oregon as more than 13,000,000 horsepower.



Constipation Vanishes Forever

Prompt Relief—Permanent Cure

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS never fail. Purely vegetable — act surely but gently on the liver. Stop after dinner distress—cure indigestion, improve the complexion, brighten the eyes.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM

A toilet preparation of merit. Helps to eradicate dandruff. For Restoring Color and Beauty to Gray or Faded Hair. 50c. and $1.00 at Druggists.

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 47–1914.

That Weak Back

accompanied by pain here or there—extreme nervousness—sleeplessness—may be faint spells—or spasms—all are signals of distress for a woman. She may be growing from girlhood into womanhood—passing from womanhood to motherhood—or later suffering from that change into middle life which leaves so many wrecks of women. At any or all of these periods of a woman's life she should take a tonic and nervine prescribed for just such cases by a physician of vast experience in the diseases of women.

DR. PIERCE'S

Favorite Prescription

has successfully treated more cases in past forty years than any other known remedy. It can now be had in sugar-coated, tablet form as well as in the liquid. Sold by medicine dealers or trial box by mail on receipt of 50 cents in stamps.

Miss Elizabeth Lordahl of Berkeley, Cal., in a recent letter to Dr. Pierce said: "I was completely broken down in health, I was aching and had pains all over my body and was so nervous that I could scream if anyone talked to me, but I had the good fortune to meet a nurse who had been cured by Dr. Pierce's Prescription. I have never had an occasion to consult a physician since—am in excellent health."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate stomach, liver and bowels—sugar-coated, tiny granules

Revelations of the Kaiser's Personal Spy

By Dr. Armgaard Karl Graves

Who, for a Number of Years Prior to His Arrest and Betrayal in England in 1912, was Emperor William's Most Trusted Personal Spy.

(Copyright, 1914, by the Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.)

Mission That Led to Abdul Hamid's Overthrow.

As I have told you, I entered the German secret service through the admiralty department, the chief of which was Captain von Tappken. In July, 1905, there came a hurried summons from Captain von Tappken for me to report at Koeniggratzerstrasse 70. I lost no time in getting around, nor did I have to wait to be ushered up. I was shown direct to the captain's office and as he received me, I noticed that he was in a rather excited frame of mind.

"Verdammt! Doctor! I am going to lose you. I am requested by the Wilhelmstrasse (the German foreign office) to hand you over to them. Very annoying. I do not like to lose you from our branch here. But we must obey, and, Doctor, you are bettering yourself. It is seldom that they over there take any notice of us over here, or request the services of any of my men. But your work has attracted some attention. I shall request that your services are not entirely lost to this department. Herr Stammer will take you over. Good-by and good luck!"

He gave me a hearty handshake and my connection with the intelligence department of the Imperial navy came to an end. Stammer and I hailed a taxi and drove to the Wilhelmstrasse, where the doorkeeper put me through an official ceremony similar to the procedure at Koeniggratzerstrasse 70. Stammer gave the commissaire his card and we were shown into a chamber and bidden to wait. I was frankly curious about what was in store for me, but I knew better by now than to ask questions. Presently there entered a tall, thin, iron-gray gentleman, the very type of a Prussian bureaucrat. Walking with quick nervous steps to his desk, he acknowledged our bows with a curt nod and turning to Stammer he said:

"Well, Stammer?"

"This is Doctor Graves, your Excellency."

"Ah, yes. Sehr schoen! Convey my thanks to Captain Tappken, Stammer."

Stammer then bowed himself out, I was asked to step into an anteroom. There a secretary took me in hand and informed me that the tall, thin, iron-gray gentleman was Graf Botho von Wedel, Wircklicher Geheimrat and Vortragender Rat S. M. des Kaisers—(Privy Councilor to the German Emperor.)

The Kaiser's Right Hand Man.

So—Count Wedel. H'm! Although this was the first time I had seen the count, I had heard a great deal about him. The emperor's private councilor and right hand was the head of the political sections of the secret service. This promised to be interesting. I wondered what the likely upshot would be but I was interrupted in my soliloquy by a summons to reenter the count's chamber.

I was shown to a seat. Graf Wedel looked me over carefully and minutely for a considerable length of time with a frank stare of appraisal.

"How old are you, Doctor?"

I must confess my extreme youth always made this question one of secret annoyance.

"Twenty-five, your Excellency."

"Very young, very young." He stared at me again and after a pause said:

"Yet the reports about your work are satisfactory and show discretion and intelligence above your years."

I bowed in acknowledgment.

"You will from now on," he said, "become attached to this section of the service. You will be trusted with some very grave and important matters. You will receive your orders and instructions only from me. You will report only to me direct. On no account will you see any subordinate or any person, no matter what his official status, without my expressed permission. Verstehen Sie?"

"Yes, Herr Geheimrat."

"For funds," he continued, "you will apply to my secretary. Of your expenses you will furnish a monthly account. How soon can you be ready to go on a mission?"

I told him in two hours.

"Good!" he exclaimed; "the sooner the better. This is what I want you to do. You will go at once to Constantinople and find out which of the court officials are in French and Russian pay. You will find out the favorites of the high officials and officers, especially the nationality of these women. I will not give you any points of introductions. They might lead you to be suspected. They are a crafty lot down there. Be careful and take your time. You know nothing can be done in a hurry down in that country,"—he paused as if waiting for questions from me. We discussed a few minor points, then he said:

"Your official number with us from now on will be 1734. You will always use 17 to sign personal cipher messages sent to me. You will use 34 in signing official reports and communications."

The necessary arrangements for my preliminary expenses were discussed with one of his secretaries and I then went back to my quarters to think over a plan of campaign and prepare myself for the mission. The transfer from Captain Tappken's department pleased me for I knew that at the Wilhelmstrasse I would be in closer touch with the bigger affairs of diplomacy. Tappken had hinted at my finding favor with the Wilhelmstrasse and I guessed one cause for this.

Germany keeps a watch on all her officers. When one of them is spending more money than his income, he is promptly investigated. I recalled how they had sent me to the Spandau garrison to inquire into the affairs of an officer who was too lavish with his money to suit the intelligence department. He was an ordnance officer in a small arms factory at Spandau and it was the natural conclusion that he was obtaining this extra money by selling state secrets.

I encountered, however, an entirely different situation. I learned that he was absolutely innocent on that score but that he was receiving money from a certain princess who had become infatuated with him. She was of a very high house and I realized that her name could not be mentioned in a report to Captain Tappken. This situation required delicate treatment. I solved the dilemma by reporting to Tappken that the ordnance officer was guiltless of any act of treason against his country. I then made a private report, covering the intimate facts, which went direct to officials of higher responsibility. The princess' name did not appear as far as subordinates were concerned and the whole affair was hushed up. My fortunate discretion in this matter undoubtedly strengthened my standing with the Wilhelmstrasse.

By this time I had installed myself in quiet quarters on the Mittelstrasse, and Kim, whom I had brought from South Africa with me, and who had been transformed from a Basuto boy into an efficient man servant, looked after my comforts. To secure myself from the questions of prying neighbors, I had caused it to be known that I was a retired South African planter inclined to poor health. This was the most likely explanation for my curious mode of living and my sudden periodical disappearances, for I was away from the Mittelstrasse for months at a time. Presumably I was traveling about to the different watering places on the continent for my health.

I Decide on My Role.

My mission to Constantinople called for some considerable thought in selecting the most advisable character to impersonate

I finally decided to travel as a physician, or, to use the Turkish word, a Hakim. A Hakim is always accorded respect, even reverence, by Turks and Arabs. This character determined upon, I went to the telephone and requested the service intelligence department to give me letters of introduction to the German hospital and the Pera hospital in Constantinople. They were sent to me signed by the authorities of the Charite in Berlin and described that I was going to study tropical and Asiatic diseases and requested that the hospitals give me every facility for reseach work.

I had Kim pack a case of medical instruments and told him to have everything in readiness to leave Berlin that night, on the Orient Express. He was necessary to my plans and was to accompany me. A messenger from Wedel brought a few final verbal instructions. I was bidden to keep away from all official German intercourse in Constantinople. Wedel might have saved himself the trouble of that word of caution, for I knew enough to keep away from anything that would raise suspicion in regard to my identity. If I pride myself in anything, it is a knowledge of Eastern character. With the instructions were a thousand marks cash and a draft for 5,000 marks on the Ottoman bank of Constantinople that had been deposited in my name.

It may strike the reader as curious that I took Kim with me, but I knew he could be of tremendous use to me in Constantinople. In addition to speaking his Kafir dialects, he knew Arabic. Any negro boy who could speak Arabic could learn almost anything in Constantinople, which abounds in black men of all tribes and nationalities. Among the servants of every household, Kim would find many compatriots from whom he could get information impossible for any European to obtain.

Preliminaries.

After an eventful trip to Constantinople, I took preliminary quarters in the Brasserie Kor, a quiet, second-rate hostelry on the Rue Osmanly. I went to an unpretentious place to avoid attracting any particular attention. Had I put up at an expensive hotel there would immediately have been queries about me. Who is this stranger? He seems to have money. If it isn't his money, whose money is he spending? It is not well to invite a Turk's suspicion.

As I was totally unacquainted with Constantinople, I used the first week for getting familiar with the geography of the city

On the second day of my arrival, I had presented my credentials and letters at the German and Pera hospitals, and had my name entered as a visiting honorary surgeon. Every day thereafter, rain or shine, I made it a point to spend some time at these hospitals, and it was well that I did. Once a day and often twice I would sign the book at the hospital and I believe the signature Dr. Franz von Graver appears on the record books of the Pera and German hospitals in Constantinople, at least one hundred times. Was I not fulfilling my duties as a physician doing research work?

I finally located myself in the resident district of Pera where I rented a small residence, typical of the well-to-do Turk of the middle class and quite in keeping with my assumed character. An elaborate residence would have aroused immediate suspicion, for there is no country on earth where curiosity and suspicion is so easily roused as in Turkey.

Kipling, who knows the east so well, portrayed Port Said as the dwelling place of concentrated wickedness. He is right, but I do not think has has ever visited Stamboul. In Stamboul there is with no exception the most conglomerate mixture of nondescript nationalities on the face of the earth.

In the course of my preliminary observations, I found Constantinople to be a city of sharp contrasts. The quarters inhabited by your true Ottoman are characteristically clean and comfortable. The remainder of the city except foreign quarters is intolerably dirty. With true Oriental tolerance, the Turk lets things gang their ain gait. The casual observer and traveler always confounds the Turk with the rest of the nondescript mass of humanity that swarms in Constantinople. That is a crass mistake. Your true descendant of Osman is a clean, dignified, easy-going gentleman with a deep philosophical strain in his make-up, contaminated by hundreds of years of contact—not association, for your true Turk does not associate—with the outcast Mischling of southern Europe and Asia Minor.

The Invaluable Kim.

My mission was indeed a difficult one and only by tedious, painstaking work, observing the life of the city and its character, I succeeded in isolating the individual who gave me the key to the circumventuous political life and the government of Constantinople. It took me a full month of night work to become familiar with the innumerable demi-mondaines. They were of French, Russian and Circassian birth and extraction, and were identified with the Grand Vizier down to an officer in the Janizaries.

In this work Kim was of inestimable value to me. In fact, without him I would not have succeeded at all. All the households kept by the Turkish officials and their favorites swarm with negroes of the various types. A white man has not the slightest chance of finding the way into their confidences. The universal golden key does not unloose tongues in such cases in the Orient. But Kim as a member of the once mighty Zulu nation (he was really a descendant of a prince of the house of Dingaan) was able, through a mysterious freemasonry still existing among colored races the world over, to obtain most valuable information.

My method of campaigning was to ascertain the name of one of the favorites of the Turkish officials, to locate her residence and then put Kim to work. Finally locating one of these women, I would manage to learn her name and where she lived. Then it was time for Kim.

"Kim," I said, "I want you to find out who comes to see her, whether it is always the same official and if so, how frequently. I want you to learn everything you can about any letters she may receive. I want to know just where she gets her money from, if she has any outside resources of revenue, other than in Constantinople. I want every scrap of any kind of information about her."

And Kim would go his way, seek out the servants in that household and he would generally come back with all this information.

A Certain Mlle. Bainiaux.

Now I noticed that a certain Mlle. Bainiaux was very much in the company of Abdulla, who was at that time the influential adviser of the Grand Vizier. It was known in Berlin that the Grand Vizier had lately become very deaf and antagonistic to German influence. The Wilhelmstrasse knew that France and Russia were at work, but were in the dark as to the channels. Therefore I sent Kim to ascertain if Mlle. Bainiaux was visited by Abdulla at her private residence. I told him to learn the exact hour of arrival in each instance and the length of the visits.

The bare fact that Abdulla might be seen in her company in public bore no particular significance These women are always accompanied by a whole retinue of officers and officials, attach them to their person, make them spend huge sums of money and then play their card. I noticed that the money Turkish officers squandered on these women compared with their pay and income was tremendous. They think nothing of going ahead blindly and buying the most expensive jewels; I have seen them even buy motorcars. The result is not difficult to forecast.

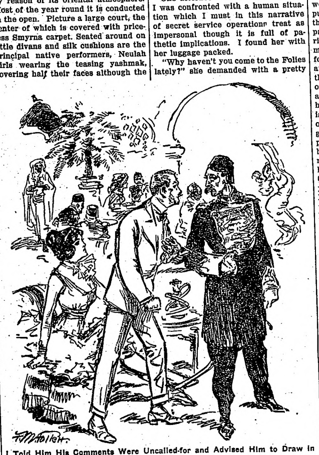
The young officer soon finds himself head over heels in debt. Two courses are open to him. Either he must pay the debt or be transferred to some dreary interior post, and a Turk who has been in the gay life of Constantinople would rather commit suicide than go to any inland garrison. Those women then pay the debts, exacting state secrets as the price of their timely assistance.

Abdulla, therefore, might only be one of these hangers-on. Kim established connections with Mlle. Bainiaux's household and soon I had the required information. He brought me letters and scraps of paper that Mlle. Bainiaux's dark skinned servants had stolen for him. He supplemented this by conversations that the servants had overheard and told to Kim. All this showed me that more by good luck I had stumbled upon the hotbed of the prime mover of the whole intrigue, Mlle. Bainiaux. There was not the slightest hope of intimidating or buying over this particular lady's allegiance. I had to learn exactly who was subsidizing her machinations and there was no possibility of obtaining the clue from her.

A Search for the Accessible Person.

I must find the accessible person among her intimate friends. From time to time I had seen her with a pretty little dark-haired girl who danced in the Folies Arabiques. I learned her name was Cecelia Coursan. I began to frequent the Folies, a kind of cabaret crowded every night with Turkish officers. Admiration was no longer a delight to her and she accepted it with a wooden smile.

The Folies is quite dissimilar from its European or American prototypes, by reason of its oriental atmosphere. Most of the year round it is conducted in the open. Picture a large court, the center of which is covered with priceless Smyrna carpet. Seated around on little divans and silk cushions are the principal native performers, Neulah girls wearing the teasing yashmak, covering half their faces although the rest of their figures are visible through gauzy Damascene shawls. The European performers, dressed in the latest and most startling Paris creations, flirt and flitter among the audience—seated around on dainty marble-topped bamboo tables, inhaling, in the case of Madame, a dainty "Regie," or if Bey or Effendi, a Tshibuk or Narghile, gravely drawing on the amber mouthpiece and slowly exhaling the perfumed smoke. The gorgeous officers' uniforms, mostly a vivid red, blue and gold; the picturesque flowing robes and burnouses, with here and there a six-foot stalwart silk trousered Albanian with gold and silver inlaid daggers and pistol thrust in his sash, make a picture reminding one of the Scheherazade.



I Told Him His Comments Were Uncalled-for and Advised Him to Draw in His Horns a Bit.

Observing that everyone was bent on spoiling this popular little houri by emphatic admiration, I made myself conspicious by a peculiarly British stony indifference. Nor was I wrong in my tactics. The piqued little dancer was not to be ignored.

One night she approached my table and challenged me in French, at which I gave a noncommittal smile. I pretended that I did not know French. Then she tried indifferent German and I looked at her with puzzled blankness. Finally she spoke to me in a piquant English and I answered. She spoke English extremely well and it developed that she had been a choryphee at the London Empire. I let the acquaintance grow leisurely.

I Forget My Play Acting.

One night I found her in a fit of despondency, over a quarrel with her friend, Mlle. Bainiaux. My subterfuge getting effective, I was just beginning to ply her with questions when a Turkish officer full of cognac wandered by and dropped a remark to her in French. It went against the grain for those swine to cast inuendoes to a white woman, and, forgetting my play acting, I told him his comments were uncalled for and advised him to draw in his horns a bit. After a little bluster to which I angrily replied in French, he disappeared, and, as I sat down at the table, Cecelia was looking at me with a queer smile.

"I thought you did not understand French," she said. "I observe you have a pretty good Parisian accent." Then the full significance of my blunder came to me and I felt like the classic capricornus, meaning goat. She said she was tired of the Folies that night and suggested a drive. I called a carreta and as we were driving down the boulevard I said to her:

"Is this existence always pleasant? Is it not as it was with that officer, often unendurable?"

She replied in a bantering tone, only half hiding a hurt undertone.

"I'm getting used to it," she said. "A Turkish pig is no worse than an English cad or a German boor."

The typical, philandering Broadway or Bond street masher makes the psychological mistake of undervaluing the innate sense of decency inherent in every woman. Gentle courtesy and manners impress a courtesan by reason of the novelty. The inverse is often useful in dealing with a pampered society woman.

I am Confronted With a Human Situation.

Much to the annoyance of the Turkish officers, I often thereafter took the pretty Cecelia away from the Folies, after her performance, for a drive, and I began to compare her small confidences with certain bits of information that Kim had given me. I knew, or I could pretty well guess, that she was not staying in Constantinople, enduring the insults of those Turkish officers, simply for the money she could earn as a dancer. Then I made my second dramatic play for confidence. I suddenly stopped going to the Folies. I suppose it was rather lonesome in Constantinople and a man who was not a Turk was a novelty.

One afternoon she sent for me and I was confronted with a human situation which I must in this narrative of secret service operations treat as impersonal though it is full of pathetic implications. I found her with her luggage packed.

"Why haven't you come to the Folies lately?" she demanded with a pretty air of bossing the situation.

I told her my work at the hospital had made heavy inroads upon my time.

"Oh," she began, tapping a little boot impatiently on the floor; then, after a pause, "I have to leave for Paris, . . . Well?"

"That is most fortunate."

"Is that all?"

"To say anything more would be painful, ma chere Cecelia."

"But there is no need of our being blue. Why not make the occasion a happy one? Why not come along to Paris?"

She looked up at me with an impudent little smile.

"My dear little girl," I said, "I am no man of means and I cannot go gadding about Europe. Besides, I have my work here. I will be busy at the hospital for another month."

"You Ought to Be Valuable to Certain Men in Paris."

That seemed to displease her. She looked at me carefully, unconsciously her manner changed. She became somewhat appraising. It seemed as though a different woman was speaking.

"Franz," she said, "a man like you is wasting his time pottering around a hospital with your evident knowledge of the world and people. With your education and travels you ought to be very valuable to certain men back in Paris."

I felt what was coming, but I asked her to explain. She did so and from her I received a tentative offer to enter the French secret service. I had difficulty in mastering the muscles of my face to keep from betraying the laughter that was almost ready to break out. Very gravely I asked her to tell me more about secret service. Proudly, Cecelia showed me letters that she had received from Paris. From the addresses and the signatures I thus learned the individuals in direct control of the system that was undermining German influence by using demi-mondaines such as Mlle. Bainiaux. I gathered that Cecelia Coursan was only a go-between for Mlle. Bainiaux in making her reports to the French government. I asked her some more questions, exclaiming that her proposal interested me tremendously.

I pretended to be particularly anxious as to what pay I would receive were I to come to an understanding with "her friend in Paris." She assured me it was liberal and urged me to hasten to Paris. I told her that as soon as I finished my work at the hospitals I would do so. She then asked me to take charge of her mail and to forward any letters that might come for her. I did—to the Wilhelmstrasse.

That incident is one of those in my secret service work of which I am not entirely proud. Of course from my viewpoint Cecelia Coursan was not a woman, she was simply the paid agent of another government and it was a case of her wits against mine; at least with this sophistry I quieted my doubts.

Three Years Later.

Three years later I found the same little woman in an obscure cafe in Antwerp. She was no longer in the French service. I concluded that her blunder in Constantinople had "broken" her, for she seemed to have gone down the ladder. She did not recognize me, but as she seemed to be in straitened circumstances, I found a way to assist her to at least three months' board and lodging by sending her anonymously 500 francs. It was conscience money.

When I thus located and coupled up the chiefs of the French secret service with the situation in Constantinople, I began quietly to cultivate the acquaintance of the average Turkish officer. I had to learn the tendency of their thoughts. I met officers and merchants, administrators and students. From them all I learned that they were sick of the intrigues and wire-pulling of the harems. I learned of the discontent of the Young Turk party. I gathered that the time was ripe for an overturning of the government. In my report I made a correct forecast of the trend of affairs. I drew attention to Enver Bey, who was even then considered clever, even dangerous, by the Grand Vizier. As a most aggressive Young Turk, they had sent him to an obscure post in Thessalonia, but upon sounding out the younger officers I found that he was still regarded highly. Without doubt, my reports, in addition to the reports made by Von der Golz, the accredited German instructor of the Turkish army, helped me to shape the policy of the German foreign office. I learned beyond all doubt that the Sultan Abdul Hamid was nothing but a figurehead, that the Grand Vizier, bought by Russian and French gold, was running the government in a way that was antagonistic to German influences and that the swarms of demi-mondaines in French and Russian pay were corrupting the higher Turkish officials to their cause. All these things I included in my report and after four months I was back in Berlin.

What the Kaiser Set Out to Do.

To better understanding the diplomatic significance of this mission, I shall recast the political situation. The modern German policy in the European Orient, inaugurated by Bismarck as a defense and check against Russia, has always been keen on the friendship and good will of the Turk for reasons which will be obvious enough later. During the Caprivi chancellorship, the relation between the two empires became rather lax. Wilhelm II, with his keen farsightedness, set about to remedy this. In his usual spectacular, but in most cases efficient, manner he went with his royal consort in state to Palestine, calling first on the Sultan. The tremendously enthusiastic reception that the Moslem countries accorded him is a matter of contemporary history. This was really a master stroke of diplomacy although sharply criticized at the time.

Until the kaiser's visit, France, with more or less right, considered herself protector general of all Mohammedans. From now on this began to change. The immediate result of the emperor's visit was a close understanding between the Wilhelmstrasse and the Sublime Porte. The buying of vast quantities of guns, ammunition, and the influx of Prussian officers and drilling instructors, besides huge orders of all sorts of German goods was significant.

The always uneasy jealousy of France and Russia was at once aroused, England, in this instance, not taking any stand in affairs. England had spent many lives and much money, notably in the Crimean war, to keep Russia out of Turkey and was averse to encouraging Russo-French influences at the Sublime Porte. How far England would like either Germany or France to acquire control of the Dardanelles remains to be seen. With Russia, it has been bloody wars and grim struggles since the days of Catherine the Great to gain control of the Dardanelles. Unceasing intrigues have been and are still going on at Stamboul. Russia's influence has been steadily undermined by Germany, in Turkey and Asia Minor.

The Result of My Mission.

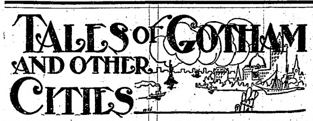
Germany, always including Austria (the external policy of both countries on all these questions is synonymous), found French-Russian influences at work. Through their marvelous, efficient intelligence system Germany soon learned who were the prime movers and puppets; in this instance the grand vizier and the seraglio officers; the then sultan, Abdul Hamid, "The Damned," being completely cowed and under the thumb of his grand vizier, could not be relied on for a moment. After my mission they knew in Germany that the time was ripe for a radical change and they engineered it. Result: A revolution and the Young Turks in power, with the Sultan Abdul Hamid in exile and Enver Bey, Tuofick Pasha, Ibraham Mander Bey and similar men, with German training and leaning, directing affairs. German regained complete sway and is today easily the most powerful influence in Turk

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

THE SUNBEAM.

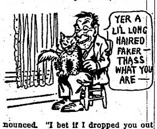
VOL. XIV. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 27, 1914. NO. 37.

TALES OF GOTHAM AND OTHER CITIES



Omar Turned Out to Be a "Regular Cat," After All

CHICAGO.—Mrs. Joseph Clemens is looking for Omar Khayyam, her blue ribbon Persian cat. Her husband is looking for George Allen, a boarder in the Clemens apartment, who used to be regarded as one of Omar's best friends. Allen, who is a salesman, got home at three o'clock in the morning. Mrs. Clemens and Omar were alone in the house, for Clemens works nights. Allen's voice roused Mrs. Clemens. The boarder was in the front room. On his knee sat Omar, contented and purring. Omar, of course, did not know what Allen was saying—but Mrs. Clemens heard the terrifying words.



YER A LI'L LONG HAIRED FAKER—THASS WHAT YOU ARE—

"You're jus' a li'l old long-haired faker—thass what you are," Allen announced. "I bet if I dropped you out the window you wouldn't land on your feet like a reg'lar cat. No, you wouldn't. Not you. You'd break your neck. Oh, you wouldn't, wouldn't you? All right. We'll see."

The boarder rose and carried the unsuspecting Omar to the window. The Clemens live on the fourth floor, and Mrs. Clemens loves Omar. She screamed.

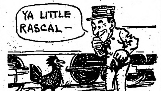
"Oh, don't, don't!" she cried.

But Omar, with a despairing squawk, had vanished into the night.

Mrs. Clemens raced to the sidewalk, but no broken necked Omar lay there. Omar was a regular cat, after all.

Sadie, the Joy-Riding Leghorn Hen of Cleveland

CLEVELAND, O.—There must be a gypsy strain, a vagrant, nomadic streak, in "Sadie" somewhere. "Sadie" is a brown leghorn hen of uncertain age, outwardly no different from any other respectable, nest-loving bird, but in reality a "harum-scarum," a "fly-by-night," and a "ne'er-do-well," no better than the worst nighthawk. "Sadie" is the joy-riding hen.



YA LITTLE RASCAL—

"Every night of late she has stolen a ride underneath Scovill avenue trailer No. 322, clinging to her precarious and perambulating perch from the Bolton car barns, Quincy avenue and East Eighty-ninth street, all the way to the city and back to the barns. Little does "Sadie" care whether the fare is three cents or five, whether the penny transfer charge is refused or gobbled up to appease a hungry deficit. "Sadie" must have her ride, and have it she does.

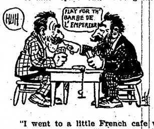
Commissioner Witt's attention was first called to "Sadie" one night when she hopped from beneath the Scovill trailer at Superior avenue and West Third street, where a traffic jam caused a delay. "Sadie" wanted to know what the trouble was. When she found out she hopped back to her place.

It was suggested to Mr. Witt that he have a nest put under the trailer for "Sadie's" convenience and for the practical reason that she would, if given this inducement, probably pay her fare by laying an egg each trip.

John Burt, starter at the Bolton barn, discovered and named "Sadie." Merritt Bean, dispatcher, and Fred Knight, barn clerk, did not believe Burt's story until they had "Sadie" watched one night. The three men now contribute to a fund to buy corn, wheat and chopped meat for "Sadie."

Chef Gambles Away His Fine Barbe de l'Empereur

NEW YORK.—Taking a few hours off from making tasty pastry and ice cream for persons who go to the Vanderbilt hotel, Nicolas Herbschleb, head of that department, had a great adventure the other night. However, he appeared smiling in the kitchen of the hotel and wondered at the looks of surprise that greeted him. He had shaved off his beard. Jean Ricroch, the head chef of the Vanderbilt, did not even recognize his assistant. Mr. Herbschleb had worn a beard, black and fairly long, for the last seven years. Finally, when matters of recognition had been adjusted, Mr. Herbschleb proceeded to tell how it came to pass that he appeared without a beard.



HUH
PLAY FOR TH' BARBE DE L'EMPEREUR

"I went to a little French cafe with un ami, who is in the automobile business," he began. "I will not tell his name, for that would not be fair. We played pinochle. First of all, we played for a few quarters we had in our pockets. We lost and won, and finally spent the money.

"'Play for the barbe de l'empereur,' I said to my friend, but just at that instant I realized that he did not have a beard. But he did have a pair of mustachois that were splendid, and much like the kaiser's. My friend he look at my beard and laugh. I look at his mustachios and grin. It was too funny to miss. So I say, 'All right, we play for the barbe de l'empereur,' as the saying is in France, 'against the mustachios of the kaiser.'

"It was with keen interest that we play, very, very carefully. But, mon dieu, I lose! But I was, as you say in this country, game. I ask the patron of the cafe to give me a pair of chizzors. He look amazed, when I take them and cut off the beautiful beard without so much as a tear."

Hop Alley Makes Big Feast, Like the White Men

ST. LOUIS, MO.—The Chinese Merchants' association celebrated the removal into its new headquarters at 20 South Eighth street the other day. The exterior of the three-story structure was decorated gorgeously. The flag of the new republic was entwined with the Stars and Stripes, and the dragon and other emblems of the Chinese nation before it became a republic, were on equally good terms with everything American.

This association is to the Chinese about what the Business Men's league is to the rest of St. Louis. The Chinese have been reading of the functions of the B. M. L. and their celebration possessed all features of that organization, and then some.

First, they had a banquet. It has come to be recognized in St. Louis that no function of the B. M. L. is complete without a banquet. The Chinese brethren had a series of them. Music, too, features the functions of the B. M. L., and the Chinese were not daunted. While they had no celebrated vocalists they got along fairly well. Harmony has no particular place in a Chinese musical production. But they sang, anyhow.

Each Celestial chose his own song, and delivered in his own pet key. While the words were not overly intelligible to the American ear, that made no particular difference.

Everybody talked, or apparently seemed to, without intermission. It was a gala day in Hop Alley, and business was suspended in the Chinese marts, other than at 20 South Eighth.

NEW YORK'S NEW BISHOP

Mgr. Patrick J. Hayes, the new bishop of the Roman Catholic archdiocese of New York, has the distinction of being one of the last two bishops appointed by Pope Pius X, the other being Mgr. Thomas J. Shahan, rector of the Catholic university at Washington. Bishop Hayes, who is forty-seven years old, is one of the youngest of the American hierarchy. Furthermore, he has never been a pastor, having been busy in official positions during his 22 years of service as a priest. He was consecrated, with imposing ceremonial, as titular bishop of Tagaste, a diocese in Africa, where St. Augustine was born.

Mgr. Hayes holds the joint positions of chancellor of the diocese and president of Cathedral college, his office being in the basement of the college, Madison avenue and Fifty-first street. He resides with Cardinal Farley in the archiepiscopal residence, 452 Madison avenue. He is ever ready to assist the cardinal with all his duties and is never too busy to help a brother priest.

When Mgr. Hayes sleeps is not known. If one of the clergy has to go to the hospital suddenly, before he is settled in his room there is a soft rap at the door, and in walks "the little chancellor." When death takes away a mother, an only sister or a favorite niece or nephew of a fellow priest a gentle hand grasps his and a voice as tender as a woman's whispers in the ear, "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord," and "He giveth his beloved sleep." This is Mgr. Hayes.

CINCINNATUS OF GERMANY

In the German army is one general who enjoys popularity throughout the empire. He enjoys also the confidence and the best good will of men of his own class. He is Paul von Benckendorff und von Hindenburg, general-oberst, commander in chief of all the German forces in East Prussia.

Hindenburg is the German Cincinnatus. He was at the plow when the war trumpet sounded on August 1; not literally, perhaps, but figuratively. In 1911 he was retired at the age of sixty-four, and for three years after had lived without military responsibility on his estate in Posen, near where he was born. Then, when the principal German armies were rushing into Belgium toward the plains of France, there came a call to the obscure little village where General Hindenburg lived. He was ordered to take command of the kaiser's armies appointed to meet the czar's forces.

Born in 1847, Hindenburg entered the Third regiment of Foot Guards as a subaltern in 1866. In the war against Austria he commanded a company after the death of the captain, who was his immediate superior. At the battle of Koniggratz, with about forty men, he took an Austrian battery. A few days later the emperor conferred on him the Order of the Red Eagle.

UNFORTUNATE MARIE ADELAIDE

Poor little Marie Adelaide, grand duchess of Luxembourg, is in distress and deserves the sympathy of mankind. Her tiny principality, a buffer state between Germany and France, has been absolutely overrun by the kaiser's armies, and if Wilhelm should come out of the war victorious it is almost certain the grand duchy of Luxembourg, only 1,000 square miles in extent, would be wiped out as a sovereign state.

When little Marie heard that the kaiser's soldiers were on the way she jumped into her automobile and headed for the bridge that crossed the river between her and Prussia. She swung her car across the bridge and when the kaiser's officers came along she stamped her little foot at them and said: "Don't you dare set foot in my kingdom."

The kaiser's big, fine looking officers were fiercely polite.

"We are sorry, your highness," said they, "but we have been ordered to proceed through your kingdom. You need have nothing to fear from us or our soldiers and we will pay you every cent for any damage that may be done."

Poor little Marie stamped her feet and shook her finger at the upturned mustaches of the officers and told them just exactly what mean sort of villains she thought they were. The officers were still polite and very, very firm, and in the end Marie sat down in her automobile weeping in vexation and drove away. And the kaiser's soldiers poured into her lands.

SEES A NEW EUROPE

No man in the United States is better entitled to estimate the probable social and economic outcome of the present European debacle than Prof. Franklin H. Giddings of Columbia, one of the most distinguished sociologists and political economists in the United States.

"Today all Europe fights," he says, "but, also, today all Europe thinks."

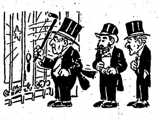
He believes that this thinking of the men who crouch low in the drenched trenches and of the women who tragically wait for news of them will fashion a new Europe. He sees the probability of broadened individual opportunity in it, accompanied by the breaking down of international suspicions; and he thinks that all these processes, which surely make for peace, will surely bring a lasting peace.

"This war may be the greatest good the world has ever known," says Professor Giddings, "if it leaves Europe in a mental state disposed to broaden opportunity, to break down suspicions, to eliminate barriers, and make commerce much freer than it has been."

WASHINGTON CITY SIDELIGHTS

How the Chief Justice Finally Gained Entrance

WASHINGTON.—It was the voice of the chief justice of the United States. There was no response. The chief justice stood before the huge, bronze, barred doors of the Pan-American building. The chief justice waited in dignified silence for the doors to be swung open, but the doors did not move. They were locked and double bolted. It was nine o'clock at night. A chill breeze blew up across the Mall from the river, fanning the swallow-tails of the chief justice's evening coat. All the associate justices of the Supreme court stood silently behind the chief justice, watching their chief hopefully. It was absolutely imperative that they gain entrance, for they were to give a reception in that very building to the members of the American Bar association, and the reception was scheduled to begin in a few minutes.



The chief justice merely shouted: "Open up."

Somebody snickered, but nobody answered the summons. The associate justices grew uneasy and shifted from foot to foot. Inside, through the bars of the big bronze doors, was a scene of light, and cheer. Men in evening garb stood chatting gayly, awaiting the arrival of the Supreme court.

The chief justice looked about for a knocker. There was none. He peeped here and there for a door bell. There was none. Suddenly he discovered he held a cane in his hand. He raised the cane menacingly. Once again his order rang out in the night air: "Open up."

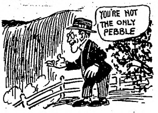
Bang! Bang!! Bang!!!

It was the ferrule of the chief justice's cane against that valuable plate glass. Instantly there was a commotion inside. No less than half a dozen uniformed servants dashed toward the door to save that plate glass. But the chief justice did not see the commotion and his cane banged loudly against the plate glass until it seemed the glass surely must yield and shatter into bits.

Then, the glass doors were swung open, the bolts on the bronze doors were shot, locks were turned and wide swung the great bronze doors to admit the chief justice of the United States.

President Wilson Has Supplanted Niagara Falls

FOR many years it was customary for Englishmen on meeting an American tourist for the first time to open the conversation with: "From America, eh? You must be very proud of your Niagara falls?"



YOU'RE NOT THE ONLY PEBBLE

This was considered quite the proper thing, and highly complimentary, since Niagara falls was the only thing that England did not have which excelled anything America had, in the Britisher's opinion.

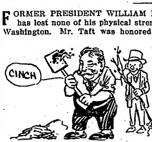
Ed Kenna, former Missourian and former vice-president of the Santa Fe railroad, but a resident of France and England for the past 14 years, tells a new one on the Englishman.

Kenna is a neighbor of Kipling in Sussex, and the two are great friends. Kenna and Kipling were in conversation one day, with America and Americans for the theme. Something said by Kipling, who has a fondness for both, led Kenna to remark:

"Yes, for years and years you Englishmen, in the preliminaries following an introduction to an American, would ask that question about Niagara falls. Now you say, on being introduced to an American: 'You must be very proud of your Woodrow Wilson, eh, what?' Woodrow Wilson seems to have succeeded Niagara falls in your estimation."

Just as Easy as Burying a Politician, Said Taft

FORMER PRESIDENT WILLIAM H. TAFT proved the other day that he has lost none of his physical strength in the time he has been away from Washington. Mr. Taft was honored by the Chevy Chase club, which purchased an oak tree to be planted by the former chief executive. The tree was five feet tall, and required a large space for the roots, but Mr. Taft handled the spade with ease, and it took him less than five minutes to level the ground after the oak had been placed in position.



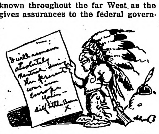
"It's as easy as burying a politician," he declared, as he smoothed the earth admiringly after the task had been completed.

Mr. Taft thanked the members of the club for the honor they had bestowed upon him, and declared he was happy upon his return to Washington to find that he had not been forgotten by his associates while here.

"The Chevy Chase club," he said, "is doing a vast amount of work for which it is not given credit." His remark that the expansive grounds offer "a safety valve to politicians who cannot give expression to their sudden emotions in public places" brought a chorus of laughter.

Chief Little Bears Promises to Remain Neutral

THE secretary of the interior has received a letter from Little Bears, the chief of a roving band of Indians known throughout the far West as the "Rocky Mountain Boys," in which he gives assurances to the federal government that "his forces will remain absolutely neutral during the present war in Europe." Newspapers are not delivered regularly in the neighborhoods which Little Bears frequents, and it seems evident that somebody with high ability in descriptive language must have told him about the quantity and quality of the fighting now going on. Little Bears has a local reputation as a man unafraid of anybody in the world, but it appears that he is not ignorant of the limitations of his own forces; he must have been thoroughly impressed with the scale of the European war, for he lost no time in sending his letter to Washington.



I will remain absolutely neutral during the present war in Europe
Yours—
Chief Little Bears X

It is said that Secretary Lane immediately submitted the communication to President Wilson, who asked that Little Bears be thanked for his patriotic attitude.

That a roving band of North American Indians should be so deeply impressed by the kind of fighting which goes on day after day on the European battle grounds is pretty strong evidence that the ordinary noncombatant living in Washington, for instance, has full justification for his attitude of blank dismay at the enormity of the field operations.

Result in East Will Have Decisive Effect

RUSSIANS FIGHTING THREE BIG BATTLES; WEST ARENA QUIET

CONFLICT OF MOST FAR-REACHING IMPORTANCE RAGES BETWEEN RIVERS VISTULA AND WARTE.

ALL CONDITIONS FAVORABLE FOR A DECISIVE RESULT

Other Engagements in East Are on Cracow-Czanstochowa Front and in East Prussia—Bulgaria and Italy Uneasy Because of Austrian Moves.

London, Nov. 23.—Two big battles, either or both of which may have decisive results are being fought in Poland and a third conflict of almost equal importance is progressing in East Prussia.

500,000 Germans Brought Up.

Of the three battles, that which is now at its height between the Vistula and the Warta rivers and in which the Russians claim partial success is exciting the greatest interest. The Germans, it is believed, have brought up by their line of strategic railways in Posen and Silesia at least half a million men in an effort to break the Russian line at this point.

Weather conditions, the frozen ground and the situation of the battlefield, favor a battle decisive to a degree not equaled on any other field in the present war.

Second Poland Battle.

The other battle in Poland is taking place on the Cracow-Czenstochowa front and both the Russians and the Germans claim it is proceeding satisfactorily for them.

In East Prussia the Russian advance is moving slowly through the country surrounding the Mazurian lakes, which is difficult of passage. In Galicia the Russians are moving steadily westward and at the same time are seizing the passes of the Carpathians.

Fighting Slackens in West.

There now is almost a complete absence of infantry attacks in the western arena and the artillery fighting is of much less violence. All that region about Dixmude, through which the Yser canal passes, is inundated and the only serious fighting at present appears to be taking place to the south of Ypres, where cannonading of considerable intensity is in progress. Very bad weather, which necessarily hampers operations, has been experienced and snow has fallen in some places.

The activity of the Germans in the vicinity of Rheims has slackened.

Bulgaria Again Uneasy.

The advance by Austria into Servia is creating uneasiness in Bulgaria as to the future of the Balkan states. Italy, too, has been affected by the Austrian advance and her ambassadors at the European capitals have been called home to confer with the cabinet.

England Prepares for Raid.

The admiralty has taken further steps for the protection of the east coast ports by the extension of the mine field. This seems to give some support to the rumors prevalent for several days that a German raid on the east coast is expected. In fact, it is generaly believed here that if Germany is balked in her other designs she will attempt to attack England, no matter how desperate such an expedition is considered.

Subscriptions to the war loan continue to come in and it is reported unofficially that the applications aggregate between three and three and one-half billion dollars. The loan calls for only $1,750,000,000.

Say Allies Lost 21,500.

Berlin, Nov. 21 (by Wireless to Sayville, L. I.)—Reports received from Holland, according to information given out in official circles here, are to the effect that in the fighting near Bixschoote and Dixmude the French lost 20,000 men and that 1,500 British were drowned in the Yser canal.

Little Information Obtainable.

London, Nov. 20.—Public interest is largely centered in the battle between the Russians and Germans between the Vistula and Warta rivers in Poland, as it is believed the result of the fighting there will have a very marked effect on the operations elsewhere and on the duration of the war.

In Flanders and France.

In Flanders and France the battle which has been going on for thirty-five days has again developed into an artillery duel, and infantry attacks which formerly were so frequent have decreased. This doubtless is due to the inability of the infantry on either side to operate successfully over the muddy ground and also because of the extended area which the allies have flooded between the coast and Dixmude.

While they are moving men eastward to oppose the Russians, the Germans are reported to be bringing more big guns to the western front, having determined to carry on a big gun bombardment of the allies' entrenchments.

Belgrade Again Attacked.

Reminiscent of the early days of the war is the report from Vienna that Belgrade has been called upon to surrender. This city, the capital of Servia, was under bombardment for weeks and was relieved only when the first Russian advance in Galicia compelled the Austrians to look after their northern frontiers. Now the Servians, like the Montenegrins, are back in their own country, and the Austrians, unmindful of the second invasion of their national province, are endeavoring to destroy the two little armies.

Allies' Line Holds.

London, Nov. 20.—The latest official communication recording the operations on the western battlefields are much the same as those of preceding days. There has been fighting virtually all along the front, but without any appreciable change in the situation.

From the coast of Flanders to the River Lys on the Franco-Belgian border, much of which has been flooded by the allies to hinder German attacks, there has been a repetition on a somewhat smaller scale of the bombardment which the invaders invariably resort to in the hope of breaking down the allies' resistance before infantry attacks, and in isolated spots attacks in force, but, according to the French and British reports, all these have been repulsed.

Both sides, as shown by the casualty list of the officers, are losing heavily in the fighting but the Germans, on the offensive, and so often enfiladed after success was nearly in their hands, are said to have suffered enormously.

Continuous Artillery Duel.

London, Nov. 19.—Undeterred by wintry weather and floods the Germans are still making an effort to break down the allies' defense along the Franco-Belgian frontier.

Although the Berlin official report refers to the day as having been a quiet one, there has been an almost continuous artillery duel, with occasional infantry attacks, but apparently without either side making any progress.

Cracow Report Unconfirmed.

There was an unofficial report that Cracow was burning, but this has not been confirmed.

The Servians and Montenegrins continue to fall back before larger Austrian forces. It is stated from Vienna that Belgrade again is about to be attacked.

General Botha, commander of the Union of South African forces, again has been engaged with General De Wet's rebel commandoes, but the final result of the battle is not yet known.

Years' Cost to Britain $2,250,000,000.

David Lloyd George, chancellor of the exchequer in the house of commons, estimated that the cost of one year of the war for this country would be £450,000,000 ($2,250,000,000), the largest Britain has ever spent on a war and more than twice what was spent in the four years' conflict in South Africa.

Blizzard Causes Suffering.

London, Nov. 18.—The coming of winter has partly paralyzed the movements of the troops both in the east and west.

The Russians on the border of east Prussia are reported to be marching through snow clad in sheepskin jackets similar to those which the Japanese wore in Manchuria.

Blizzards have swept the trenches in Belgium and northern France, and brought great suffering to the wounded as well as to the men in the fields.

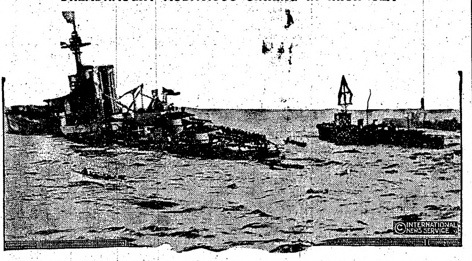
A large area of West Flanders, around Dixmude, has been flooded by the heavy rains and is impossible for fighting.

The Germans are turning Belgium into a fortress, which means that if they do not succeed in advancing they intend to be prepared for a winter in Belgium. The whole coast from Ostend to the Dutch border has been placed in a state of defense, and civilians are rigorously excluded from that area.

More British Officers Killed.

London, Nov. 21.—A casualty list received in London from the British army headquarters in France under date of Nov. 15 contains the names of nine officers killed, eighteen wounded and two missing.

DREADNAUGHT AUDACIOUS SINKING IN IRISH SEA



This remarkable photograph shows the British dreadnaught Audacious after she had struck a mine in the Irish sea and while her crew was being rescued by boats from the liner Olympic. At the right are two torpedo boats that were called to the scene. The great battleship could not be saved and so was sunk by the cruiser Liverpool.

SHIP COST $10,000,000.

The Audacious was built in 1913 and cost approximately $10,000,000. It was of 23,000 tons displacement and carried 10 12½-inch guns, besides many smaller pieces. The ship had a speed of 22 knots and was rated as one of the largest and most powerful battleships of the British navy.

★ LATE WAR DEVELOPMENTS ★

Three important battles are raging in the eastern war zone, two in Poland and the other in East Prussia. The one between the Vistula and Warta rivers is expected to have the most decisive results of any struggle in the war. The Germans are reported to have brought up half a million men in an effort to break the Russian line in Posen and Silesia.

* * *

The other batle in Poland is taking place on the Cracow-Czenstochowa front and the Germans are claiming the advantage. In East Prussia the Russians are reported as advancing, but having a hard time on account of the difficult country.

* * *

In the western arena, the only severe fighting is reported south of the Ypres. In the Argonne region the French claim to have repulsed German attacks. On the French right wing the Germans have retaken the village of Chauvoncourt.

* * *

The mine fields on the east coast of England have been extended in anticipation of possible German raids.

* * *

Many German prisoners are reported killed and many others injured in an outbreak in the concentration camp in England.

* * *

Another naval engagement is thought imminent in the South Pacific. Allied warships are reported mobilizing off Lower California preparatory to sailing southward to attack the German sudron.

* * *

According to official announcement received in Berlin, reports received in the German capital from Holland state that in the recent fighting near Bixschoote and Dixmude the French lost 20,000 men and 1,500 British were drowned in the Yser canal.

* * *

Despite the great amount of relief work being done in Belgium by the American committee the situation is declared to be growing more alarming.

* * *

Russians claim naval victory in the Black Sea over the Turkish fleet. The German manned warship Goeben is eported to be badly damaged.

* * *

The British cruiser Glasgow is given seven days by the Brazilian Government to complete repairs and put to sea.

* * *

The Austrians are again hammering at the gates of Belgrade after driving back the invading Serbs and Montenegrins.

* * *

The United States Government has instructed American Ambassador Morgenthau, at Constantinople to ask the Ottoman Government for an explanation of the firing by Turkish land forces on an American boat near Smyrna.

* * *

Commanders of the U. S. A. Tennessee and North Carolina have been instructed not to do anything that would embarrass the United States Government.

* * *

Winston Spencer Churchill, first lord of the British admiralty, announces that the British naval losses now amount to more than 8,000 men.

* * *

The Kaiser's legions in Belgium continue their efforts to break through the allied line and reach the French coast, despite the severe wintry weather and floods. Artillery firing is reported to be almost continuous with occasional infantry attacks. No progress is mentioned, however, by either side.

* * *

Despite further clashes in South Africa the rebel leader General De Wet is declared to be still at large and causing General Botha and his union forces considerable trouble.

* * *

The cost of one year's war to Great Britain will be $2,250,000,000, according to the chancellor of the exchequer. This is twice the cost of the four-year conflict in South Africa. A war loan of $1,175,000,000 is to be raised. Income tax doubled and a special tax declared on beer and tea.

GERMAN LOSSES TOTAL 1,250,000.

Dispatch to Copenhagen Says Such Is Berlin Estimate.

Copenhagen, Nov. 21.—Berlin military circles estimate German losses to date at 1,250,000 in killed, wounded and missing, according to a dispatch received here. This estimate, it is declared, does not include at least 500,000 sick. The actual casualty lists, including those of Saxony, Wuertemburg and Bavaria, admit losses of 980,000.

SOUGHT TO SHELL CZAR'S HOME

TURKISH WARSHIPS WERE TO ATTACK SUMMER RESIDENCE.

Goeben and Breslau, When Overtaken, Were Heading for Yalta, Petrograd Reports.

Petrograd, via London, Nov. 21.—From reports received here of the naval engagement off Sebastopol between Russian and Turkish warships, it is apparent that the former German cruisers Goeben and Breslau, which now fly the Turkish flag, were bound for Yalta, with the intention of bombarding the summer residence of Emperor Nicholas at Livadia, just outside Yalta.

There seemingly was much confusion aboard the Goeben when the Russian ships appeared off Chersonese lighthouse at the mouth of Sebastopol harbor. The Goeben made no immediate alteration in her course, nor did she open fire at once.

The Russian fleet steamed in battle formation, bringing the Goeben between them and the coast.

The Russian flagship Ievstafi opened a broadside with her 12-inch guns, hitting the Goeben's upper deck and setting the ship on fire in several places. The Goeben replied, but in spite of the short range, "forty cable lengths," her shots resulted in no serious damage to the Ievstafi.

The Goeben fired no shots at the other Russian ships which then came into action. It was apparent that the Goeben's upper works and one funnel were badly damaged before she drew off.

While turning to pursue the Goeben, the Ievstafi landed several more shells on the Turkish boat, evidently crippling the main turret, as her fire ceased.

The Breslau took no part in the fighting, standing a long way off during the battle.

NIP PLOT TO KILL SULTAN

Many Arrests Are Made in Constantinople—Prominent Turks in Plot.

London, Nov. 21.—Telegraphing from Petrograd Friday the correspondent of the Daily News says:

"Bucharest reports many arrests in Constantinople consequent to an attempt against the life of the Sultan. Among those arrested are members of an association organized by Mehmed Burhan-eddin, favorite son of the former Sultan, Abdul Hamid. It is also suspected that Prince Yussof Izzedin, eldest son of Abdul Hamid and heir presumptive to the Turkish throne, participated in the plot."

Russians Wound Own Consul.

London, Nov. 21.—An Amsterdam dispatch to Reuter's Telegram Company says that during the bombardment of the Turkish port of Trebizond, on the Black sea, by the Russian fleet, the Russian consulate was demolished and the consul was severely wounded.

Przemysl About to Fall.

Paris, Nov. 21.—A dispatch to the Havas Agency from Petrograd says: "It is announced here that the siege of Przemysl appears to be rapidly approaching its end. Trenches surrounding the fortifications are in the possession of the Russian troops.

Outbreak; Prisoners Killed.

Paris, Nov. 21.—Authentic news was received here from official sources that many German prisoners of war were killed and many others injured in an outbreak in the concentration camp in England.

Ship Sails Without Papers.

Santiago, Chile, Nov. 21.—The German steamer Luxer, which was detained at Coronel for loading 3,000 tons of supplies for the German fleet, slipped out of the harbor. Tre Luxer sailed, despite the refusal of clearance papers from the Chilean authirities. A strong protest will be made to the German government.

FUTURE CLEAR AND BRIGHT, PROMISES BEST OF THINGS

SO DECLARES PRESIDENT WILSON, WHO SEES NEW PROSPERITY ERA.

CURRENCY SYSTEM CAUSE OF CONGRATULATORY LETTER

Means by Which Credit Is Set Free Held Heart of All Things—Executive Says War Makes Mobilizing Country's Resources Necessary.

Washington. Nov. 19.—"A future clear and bright with promises of the best things," was the way President Wilson summed his views of the business prospect in a letter to Secretary McAdoo of the treasury department, congratulating him upon the opening of the new federal reserve bank system.

A Common Purpose.

"Fundamental wrongs once righted as they may now easily and quickly be," wrote the president, "all differences will clear away. We are all in the same boat though apparently we had forgotten it. We now know the port for which we are bound. We have, and shall have more and more as our new understandings ripen, a common discipline of patriotic purpose, and advance together with a new spirit, a new enthusiasm, a new cordiality or spirited co-operation. It is an inspiring prospect."

Mr. Wilson referred to the new tariff law, the new currency law, the new trade commission law and the labor provisions of the antitrust law as the means through which "the soil has everywhere been laid bare, out of which monopoly is slowly to be eradicated."

Credit Is Keypiece.

He added that "undoubtedly the means by which credit has been set free is at the heart of all these things; is the keypiece of the whole structure."

Referring to the "opportuneness" of the currency law, the president said: "The war which has involved the whole of the heart of Europe has made it necessary that the United States should mobilize its resources in the most effective way possible. He spoke of the difficulty of marketing the cotton crop of the country, and added that "no doubt in the light of the new day with its new understanding, the problems of the railroads will also be met and dealt with in a spirit of candor and justice.

Future Different From Past.

"The future will be very different from the past which we shall presently look back upon, I venture to say, as if upon a bad dream. The future will be different in actions and different in spirit, a time of healing because a time of just dealing and co-operation between men made equal before the law in fact as well as in name. I am speaking of this because the new banking system seems to me to symbolize all of it. The opening of the Federal Reserve banks seems to me to be the principal agency we have created for the emancipation we seek. The sixteenth of November, 1914, will be notable as marking the time when we were best able to realize just what had happened."

The president's letter was in reply to one from Secretary McAdoo announcing the opening of the Reserve banks.

URGES INCREASE IN U. S. ARMY.

Retiring Chief of Staff, General Wotherspoon, Sizes Up Defense Problem.

Washington, Nov. 19.—Declaring it would be impossible to defend the Panama Canal and American territorial possessions against attack with present or proposed garrisons unless they could be rapidly reinforced, Major General Wotherspoon, retired Chief of Staff, in his report, recommended the increase of the regular army to a strength of 205,000 enlisted men. He proposed that that force be augmented, through a system of reserves, until there was created a mobile strength of 500,000 first line troops equipped for a six months' campaign.

General Wotherspoon said there was need for more forces to protect rear approaches to American coast defenses and those points not covered by fortresses, and urged that the organized militia be developed to a strength of 300,000 men.

South Must Use New Methods.

Washington, Nov. 20.—Warning has been given by officials of the federal reserve board and the treasury department thmat the south must learn diversification of crops and make a reduction of cotton acreage next year, if it is to get the full benefit from the $135,000,000 loan fund just completed and insure a material increase in the price of raw cotton for next year's crop. Secretary McAdoo, in a formal statement, called this "the other pressing and important problem" with which the south must deal.

INSTRUCTIONS NOT TO FIGHT RECEIVED BY U. S. CRUISERS

CAPTAINS OF TENNESSEE AND NORTH CAROLINA IN WESTERN MEDITERRANEAN WIRE ASSURANCES.

WARSHIPS WILL NOT BE WITHDRAWN FROM REGION

Vessels to Remain in Vicinity, Ready to Protect Americans in Turkish Cities—No New Light Concerning Attack on U. S. Barge.

Washington Nov. 23.—Secretary Daniels received messages from Captain Decker of the cruiser Tennessee and Captain Omar of the cruiser North Carolina, according receipt of his order that no action be taken by either ship in Turkish waters without specific instructions from Washington.

No Additional Information.

Neither commander supplied additional information concerning the shots that were fired at the Tennessee's launch at Smyrna several days ago and the state department also still was without advices from Ambassador Morgenthau.

Secretary Daniels said he thought Captain Decker had sent as much information about the incident as was available to him and probably now was waiting to get into communication with Ambassador Morgenthau before sending a complete report. Close examination of Captain Decker's first message reveals that when the launch was fired upon from shore it immediately turned back to the ship, which was several miles away, near Vourlah. From that point it is now supposed Captain Decker reported to Mr. Morganthau what had occurred and took the Tennessee to Grecian waters, 50 or 60 miles distant at the request of the ambassador while the latter endeavored to get in communication with the consul-general at Smyrna to learn the exact cause of the firing.

Explanation Hourly Expected.

State Department officials estimated from past delays in messages from Constantinople they should hear any time now from Ambassador Morgenthau on the incidents connected with the firing. They had no doubt, however, that all would be satisfactorily explained. It is considered quite probable that as a result of the mining of several Turkish ports and the sensitiveness of the Ottoman government on account of the presence of foreign warships, even of neutral nations, near here, American ships may be kept at Chios, Greece, or some of the other numerous islands belonging to Greece, which are but half a day's journey from Asia Minor.

Whereabouts of Cruisers.

For the present the Tennessee is being held at Chios, while the North Carolina is at Beirut, Asia Minor. The captain of the latter ship, however, sent his message to the Navy Department from Alexandria, Egypt. Both commanders had been asked to acknowledge receipts of Secretary Daniels' orders as officials here were particularly anxious that the naval commanders take no action of their own initiative, the naval regulations giving officers wide discretion ordinarily under such circumstances.

The Tennesse and North Carolina will not be withdrawn from the Western Mediterranean, it was stated at he Navy Department, no matter where the responsibility for the firing lay. The vessels will be kept within easy reach of Turkish ports to afford every possible assistance to Americans.

ROADS TO INCREASE FARES

Nearly All Lines Are to Raise Passenger Rates From 2¼ to 2½ Cents.

Washington, Nov. 21.—Material increases in passenger fares practically throughout the country, except in Southeastern territory, will be caused by advances announced by railroads in trunk line territory between New York City and Pittsburgh and in Central Passenger Association territory, between Pittsburgh and Chicago and St. Paul and St. Louis. Practically the basis for readjustment is 2½ cents a mile, the present basis being 2¼ cents.

Within Central Passenger Association territory the new fares will become effective on Dec. 1, and in trunk line territory and between the two territories they will become effective on Dec. 15.

Excess Baggage Rates Upheld.

Washington, Nov. 20.—Existing excess baggage rates were held by the Interstate Commerce Commission to be not unreasonable. Charges, however, for baggage of excess value were held to be excessive and a rate was established by the commission at 16 cents for each $100 or fraction thereof above the agreed upon maximum value. The minimum charge for increased valuation will be 10 cents. The case was brought to the commission originally by commercial travelers.

The Ambition of Mark Truitt

By
HENRY RUSSELL MILLER

Author of
"THE MAN HIGHER UP," "HIS RISE TO POWER," Etc.

(Copyright, 1913, by The Bobbs-Merrill Company)

SYNOPSIS.

Mark Truitt, encouraged by his sweetheart, Unity Martin, leaves Bethel, his native town, to seek his fortune. Simon Truitt tells Mark that it long has been his dream to see a steel plant at Bethel and asks the son to return and build one if he ever gets rich. Mark applies to Thomas Henley, head of the Quinby Iron works, for a job and is sent to the construction gang. His success in that work wins him a place as helper to Roman Andzrejzski, open-hearth furnaceman. He becomes a boarder in Roman's home and assists Piotr, Roman's son, in his studies. Kazia, an adopted daughter, shows her gratitude in such a manner as to arouse Mark's interest in her. Heavy work in the intense heat of the furnace causes Mark to collapse and Kazia cares for him. Later Roman also succumbs and Mark gets his job. Roman resents this and tells Mark to find another boarding place. Five years elapse during which Mark has advanced to the foremanship, while his labor-saving devices have made him invaluable to the company. In the meantime Kazia has married one Jim Whiting. Mark meets with an accident which dooms him to be a cripple for life. He returns to Bethel intending to stay there. He finds Unity about to marry another man and wins her back. Unity urges him to return to his work in the city. Mark rises rapidly to wealth and power in the steel business, but the social ambitions of his wife make their married life unhappy. The big steel interests are secretly anxious to get hold of stock in the Iroquois Iron company, supposed to be worthless. Timothy Woodhouse seeks financial assistance from Mark and the latter buys Woodhouse's Iroquois stock at a small figure. Henley forces Quinby to let Mark have stock in the Quinby company, through a threat that if he does not he will lose both of them.

CHAPTER XV—Continued.

It was the less satisfying because he foresaw the end of a chapter. He had spent himself: in body—he was no longer capable of long intense application, he had fallen back upon the invalid's last resort, drugs; in mind—the creative faculty seemed dead, that very morning a young man in the mills had announced an important invention that was to have been Truitt's magnum opus and upon which his sterile brain had labored in vain; in soul—he could no longer dream. And for reward he had—the dry fact of a triumph he could not sense and the prospect of an empty, useless, discontented future.

He was a critic, you see; but not of himself. The world was out of joint.

Passers-by were diverted from their own cares by the sight of a well-dressed man stamping his cane on the pavement and muttering aloud: "An evil fate pursues me. Other men do as I do, desire as I desire and find content. Why can't I be contented—and happy?"

A thousand faces streamed past him, unrecognized and unrecognizing. Then, at a corner where two currents dammed each other, appeared one that seemed oddly familiar. It was of an undistinguished homeliness, pasty pale, morose, matching well the general shabbiness of its owner. At first Mark, confused by the dirty brown beard, did not recognize him.

The man had no doubts. At sight of Mark an evil glitter sprang into the sullen eyes.

"You!"

By the hate that had lived through fifteen years Mark placed him.

"Piotr Andzrejzski!"

"Peter Anderson," the man corrected him.

"That's a good American name. I'd forgotten you had a preference." Mark smiled and held out a friendly hand. "How are you, Peter Anderson?"

The hand was ignored. When Peter Anderson sneered, his homeliness became almost grotesque.

"Since you're so interested, I manage to keep alive."

"How do you manage it?"

"I'm a compositor on the Outcry—when there's any money for an issue."

"The Outcry?"

"You'll hear of it yet. It's the paper of our Cause."

Mark knew of but one cause that employed the capital. "Socialism, I suppose." He smiled indulgently. "I hope it's in funds sufficiently often."

"I look it, don't I?"

The answer was so obvious that Mark avoided it. "How," he asked hastily, "is Roman?"

"He breathes and sleeps and eats. But he's dead."

"Is that a Socialist parable? I'm not a Socialist, so you'll have to explain."

"His mind's gone. It began to go soon after you stole his job. But probably you've forgotten that, too."

"I have no recollection," said Mark coldly, "of any such occurrence." With a curt nod, he passed on.

He had gone but a few steps when he halted and looked back. Peter, unmindful of elbowing pedestrians, was still at the corner, glaring at him.

Impulsively he turned and retraced his steps.

"See here, Piotr," he said. "Let us not use hard names. There are a good many things we'd never agree on. But we can agree on this—you're hard up. I've been luckier than you. What can I do to help you?"

Piotr's lips formed a surly, "Nothing." But the refusal did not fall. A look of transparent craft displaced malevolence.

"Do you mean that?" he asked suspiciously.

"I'm not in the habit—"

"I don't care about your habits," Piotr interrupted ungraciously. "If you want to do something, you can lend me a hundred dollars."

"Lend," evidently, was a euphemism.

"What will you do—still, that's your business. Of course, I will. I wish you'd asked me something harder. Come along to the bank."

The bank was a few blocks away. Mark improved the time by asking the details of Roman's circumstances. Piotr, sullenness not lifted by the prospect of money, answered shortly. It was a pitiable story of descent—of the gradual dissipation of the savings of Roman's active years and the swift failure, through idleness and too much alcohol, of his mental powers, leaving him and Hanka dependent upon Piotr's scanty and uncertain earnings.

"Where," Mark asked, as they entered the bank, "do you live now?"

"Rose Alley."

"Rose Alley!" Mark stopped short. "My God!"

"What does your sort know of it?"

"Quite enough. Come along."

A few minutes later they were in the street again, Piotr the richer by the sum he had asked.

They stood facing each other—the strong man who had conquered and the inefficient, one of life's guerrillas, who had just taken of the strong man's largess. But the inefficient was not grateful; a hundred dollars could not conquer his hatred.

"I s'pose," he sneered, "you want me to thank you?"

"No. If you need more, come to me. And, see here, Piotr, I want you to get Roman and your mother away from Rose Alley."

"You want—!" The money in his pocket, Piotr threw craft to the winds. "What have you to do with us? Do you s'pose we'd let you help us?"

"But you took—"

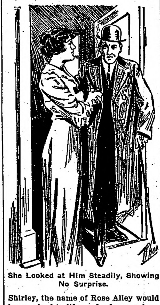
Piotr chuckled—a chuckle of triumphant malice. "Did you think it was for us?" The chuckle grew into a laugh, as though he pondered some mammoth jest. "You—you—have just paid for the next issue of the Outcry!"

He wheeled and went haltingly away. Mark watched him until he turned a corner.

"Poor devil!" Mark shook his head pityingly. "He's mad."

It was not Mark's habit to waste precious hours wandering the crowded city streets in introspective meditation. He now went to the appointment with his lawyer to keep which he had left Henley.

It was a long and tedious consultation, having to do with a big real estate deal in which Truitt had shown his customary shrewdness. He displayed little interest. More than once Shirley, the lawyer, had to recall his straying attention. Shirley was astonished at this; his client was notable for his concentration on the matter in hand. He would have been even more deeply astonished, could he have looked upon the picture that lured away Mark's thoughts. But then, for Shirley, the name of Rose Alley would have raised to life no dead memories.



She Looked at Him Steadily, Showing No Surprise.

Shirley's astonishment, however, reached its climax at the close of the consultation.

"It's a good deal," he remarked, "for you."

Mark answered with a nod and opened another subject. "I don't suppose Timothy Woodhouse left much."

"Practically nothing."

"How does our case stand?"

"We'll win it."

"You're sure of that?"

"Absolutely. His estate will never push it to trial."

"Then settle it."

Shirley whistled his surprise. "Has the philanthropic bee stung the whole Quinby concern?" he grinned. "I wouldn't do that, though. It would be an admission. As a lawyer, I couldn't advise—"

"I don't ask advice. Settle it."

Shirley waved a concessive hand. "It's your case, of course. For how much? They'll take any figure."

"For whatever you think fair. Not as a lawyer, however. Think of it," Mark smiled wryly, "as a gentleman—if the word means anything to you."

"It's your case," Shirley repeated. "But my notion is, people will think you don't want the publicity—for social reasons. That sort of talk—"

Mark rose abruptly. "I can't help," he replied, with an impatient frown, "what people think, can I? Fix it up as soon as you can."

But the day's adventures were not ended. The ghost of Timothy Woodhouse could not oust Rose Alley from Mark's mind.

The blacks, ordered by telephone, waited him. Swiftly, Mark holding the reins, they were guided across a bridge, along rough-paved, tumble-down streets, into a quarter such as their aristocratic feet had never trod. Grime and decay were everywhere.

It was 15 years since he had seen Rose alley, but he found the way as though he had taken it but yesterday.

He drew up at the mouth of a narrow shallow court, and giving the reins to his man, got down from the trap.

A few children—dirty, sallow, undersized—had been playing in the court. With difficulty, for they had not his tongue and were afraid of the stranger, he learned from them in which tenement Peter Andersen lived.

He groped and stumbled up two flights of stairs that groaned protestingly under his tread. He found a door and knocked. It opened. . . .

For a full minute, speechless, he stared at the woman who stood on the threshold.

CHAPTER XVI.

Glowing Embers.

The figure silhouetted in the doorway was one to make men dream, full curved, strong with the strength of women whose forbears have always toiled, yet without heaviness; it was the strength that lies in quality, not in bulk.

She looked at him steadily, showing no surprise. And by that he read that she had learned to take life, its coincidences and its climaxes as they came, calmly, without loss of poise.

She spoke first, in a low even voice that hinted even less than her manner at inner excitement. "I thought it was Piotr. Your step sounds like his."

They might have been daily familiars.

"Yes," he flushed. "I am somewhat in his case."

He almost missed the swift glance she cast toward his cane. But he was grateful that she had no comment for his injury. In the presence of her splendid perfections his own physical shortcoming seemed almost cause for shame.

"How do you do, Kazia?" he said gravely. "I didn't expect to find you here."

He held out an uncertain hand. She took it, neither hastily nor reluctantly, for a brief meaningless clasp.

"I am here sometimes. Will you come in?"

She stood aside and he entered, trying to overcome his limp. It was the kitchen, which in Rose alley—as he remembered—had to serve as living room as well. It was clean, but bare; pitifully bare.

By the stove stood a little faded woman, much stooped, her hair white and thin, her pale lack-luster eyes for the moment brightened by a startled question. He went over to her and took her hand. She shrank away from him.

"It is Mark Truitt, Matka," said Kazia in Polish. "Don't you remember?"

Hanka said something in the same tongue.

"She says," Kazia interpreted, "they have never forgotten."

Their eyes met again. . . . His turned away quickly and went to the other occupant of the room. He sat in the only armchair, a huge mass of inert flesh, head slouched forward and fingers playing aimlessly with the long unkempt beard that reached half-way to the bulging waist. Mark laid a hand on his shoulder. Roman looked up. But Roman saw as the new-born babe sees.

The grasp on his shoulder tightened. "Roman, don't you know me? I'm Mark—Mark Truitt, you remember."

The shoulder stirred a little under the tight grasp. Roman's head slouched forward again and he began once more his aimless twisting of the long beard.

"How long," Mark's voice had become sharp, "has he been this way?"

"Almost three years."

"And here?"

"A year longer."

Kazia's eyes said: "What is that to you?"

"Why," he demanded, "didn't you let me know about it?"

She smiled—contemptuously, as it seemed to him.

"We must get them out of here," he went on hastily.

"We can't. Piotr won't let us."

"He must," Mark declared curtly.

"He will not," she repeated.

"I saw him today. He's crazy."

"He is. He's a good compositor and could make enough to keep them at least decently. But he prefers to work for the Outcry—for little or nothing. Generally it's nothing. He says it's for the cause."

"But that's no reason why he shouldn't let me help them."

She shrugged her shoulders. "To Piotr it is. I know, because I've tried."

"Then," he said, "we'll take them away and settle with Piotr afterward."

He said it crisply, with the assured air of fortune's darlings who, having made their resolve, take its consummation for granted. Her faint smile showed again.

"It isn't so simple as that. They won't go."

"They won't go!" He stared. "Why not?"

"For one thing," she returned quietly, "the Matka loves her son. I'll ask her."

She turned to Hanka and for several minutes the two women talked earnestly in their native tongue. Hanka shook her head continuously.

"She says," Kazia returned to Mark, "'My Piotr wouldn't like it.'"

Hanka interrupted, laying a hand on Kazia's arm and looking anxiously toward the door. Kazia nodded.

"She says also," she interpreted again, "that we'd better go. It's most time for Piotr to come home. She's right."

"I think," Mark answered, "I'll stay, since I'm here, and have this out with Piotr."

"You'd better not." Her swift glance seemed to measure his physical frailty. "Piotr's temper is uncertain. He found me here once and drove me out. It—" The gloom could not quite hide the color that surged into her cheeks. "It wasn't nice."

"I'm sorry for them, but just the same, since I've started, I'll see this through and wait for Piotr."

"No, you'd better not," she repeated with cold emphasis. "You can prove your inflexibility in some other way. Piotr is apt to have been drinking and if his temper is stirred up, he'll make them suffer." She nodded toward Hanka and Roman. "Really, you're quite helpless in the matter."

"I seem to be." He laughed shortly, to conceal a disappointment as undefined as the emotion set stirring by the sight of his old friends. "But, at least, I can leave some money."

But she shut him off from this, too. "No. What money they can use without Piotr's knowing of it, I can furnish."

He limped stiffly toward the door, more hurt than he was willing to admit to himself by the rebuff and the failure of his impulsive mission.

He went quickly out into the dark passage, that he might not have to look longer, and there awaited her. When she came, he led the way down the rickety stairs and out into the foul smelling court, lighted up now by a swaying arc lamp.

"One would think," he blurted out, "you wanted to stay there."

"Do you find that so wonderful?"

"I'm glad you can't. It's no place for such as you."

"Many people have lived here."

"But not from choice. I know. I lived here once myself, before—" He hesitated a moment. "I left it to live with Roman."

She made no reply. He stopped, facing her and blocking her egress.

"You're thinking my going there was to the advantage of no one but myself?"

"Why else should you have gone there?"

"That's almost cynical, isn't it? I might have had several other reasons—but didn't. At least I did you no harm."

"Neither harm nor good."

"One doesn't like to think of one's self as reduced to even a harmless nonentity. Still, most of the virtues are negative, I believe. Though I'm vain enough to wish I could have been a positive influence in the making of the woman you've become. It's rather remarkable, Kazia."

"It isn't remarkable—or excuse for vanity."

She had not winced, nor had her steady gaze wandered. But for just an instant a fleeting somber shadow had rested in her eyes.

"I must go," she said.

They walked in silence to the mouth of the court. At their approach Mark's man got down from the trap, touching his hat.

"Can't I set you home?" Mark ventured, not at all sure that she would accept. But she affected no reluctance. She glanced at a little watch she wore. "I go to the Todd hospital, and I've overstayed here a little."

He helped her up to the seat. The horses sprang forward, swung into the car tracks and quickly left the tenement neighborhood behind. For a time Mark gave his attention to guiding their swift course around overtaken cars and the slow lumbering teams that drew the heavy traffic of the street. They were on the bridge before either spoke.

"You said, to the hospital," he began suggestively. "Do you—"

"I'm on a case there."

"You're a nurse, then? I remember you had a knack for that sort of thing. Your husband—er—I hadn't heard—"

"I haven't seen him for 12 years."

"Kazia," he asked gravely, "will you tell me about yourself?"

"There is nothing to tell—any more than there is about you."

"That is, you're not interested in what has happened to me. You're frank."

"Because a chance has thrown us together for an hour is no reason for us to pretend an interest neither of us can feel."

"You may speak for yourself, please. At least, we can oil the wheels of circumstance by going through the polite forms. You could smile very graciously on my man Felix, but to me—" He broke off with a short laugh. "History has a way of repeating itself. I remember saying something of the sort to you once before. Of course, you've forgotten."

"I forget—nothing."

"Ah!" He turned quickly to her again. "Then I did do you harm."

"I can't see—"

"It follows," he interrupted. "If I had done you no harm, you would remember charitably, not coldly or worse, and you would be at least as cordial to me as to my groom."

"Now it is you," she answered after a thoughtful pause, "who will not let me oil the wheels. Probably what you say is right. I haven't thought much about influences—I haven't had time."

"I'm sorry. Which seems all I can do about it. You and Piotr and Hanka seem in a conspiracy to teach me that for regrettable things we can pay only with regret. But I promised to save you time."

Darkness had fallen when they drew up before the hospital. Mark descended painfully to help her down—a rather superfluous courtesy, since she was better able to alight alone than was he. "You're in good time, I hope?"

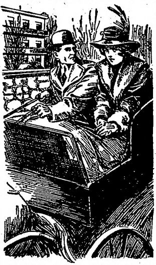
"Oh, yes. Thank you for the ride."

They exchanged a conventional hand clasp. She moved toward the steps leading to the hospital door. He began to climb back into the trap.

But the restive horses started too soon, while he was balanced on the little mounting step. His foot was dislodged. He would have fallen, perhaps been dragged, had Kazia not sprung forward, and catching the reins, brought the horses sharply to a stop.

"You are hurt?"

"No," he lied through set teeth, as he pulled himself up to the seat. His hip, in fact, had received an excruciating wrench. "I'm a little awkward. This is one of the things I can't get quite used to."



"Ah!" He Turned Quickly to Her Again. "Then I Did You No Harm."

"I supposed it was only temporary."

He shook his head briefly, as though the topic were distasteful.

"Another—you probably won't believe this—is an existence that continually requires little cruelties of one. Big ones, too, sometimes."

"You say—requires?"

"At least, encourages. But I," he smiled unpleasantly, "am subject to regrets. And equally unprofitable impulses. Of course," with obvious irony, "this is very interesting to you."

She was standing between two balustrade lamps. In their bright glow he saw her cool impersonal regard change, become questioning. And the dark shadow again—as though she had seen and known to the full the cruelties whereof he spoke. Her lips parted. But no words fell. With an odd little gesture of repression she turned and slowly mounted the stairs. At the top she paused for an instant.

"Good night," she repeated. "And thank you again."

He dined alone at his club that night. The events of the day had left him depressed and strangely restless and with a strong distaste for companionship.

CHAPTER XVII.

Fanned into Flame.

"I'd better quit thinking of her," Mark told himself.

A virtuous and a wise resolution, forsooth! And one strangely hard to keep. The thought—of a woman of the people, dwelling in a fine strong body whose splendid perfection the toil of the people could not diminish, whose flame it could not quench—never withdrew entirely, at most retired into ambush whence to spring out upon him at unguarded moments, with ever increasing potency to stir his jaded imagination.

Attainment of the partnership had indeed proved to be the climax of his career with the Quinby company. Followed quickly the long imminent collapse. There was no specific ailment, save a heavy stubborn cough and the constant ache in his injured hip, which were really symptoms. It was rather a general failure of his powers. He was no longer able to whip flagging energies to the day's tasks. The cool, clear, incisive brain that could grasp a multitude of details and yet not lose sight of result and purpose had become cloudy, vacillating and wandering, a poor tool for the direction of a huge, intricately organized plant operating under tremendous pressure. He was subject to attacks of profound melancholy. He could not sleep without the aid of drugs. Worst of all, the will to endure, to mock pain and weakness, had broken.

"What's the matter with me?" he demanded of his physician.

"Burnt out," was the succinct reply.

"What can I do?"

"Nothing. And quit taking drugs."

"But," habit protested, "I can't do nothing."

"It's your life," interrupted the doctor. "But you've consulted me and I propose to earn the stiff fee I'll charge you. Drop everything, go to the country or to the end of the earth—personally, I'd advise the end of the earth, because it's farthest away and newest to you. Forget work, play a while."

Mark asked and received from the directors a six months' vacation. But, although he formulated no reason, he did not at once leave the city. When the weather permitted he filled in the hours by driving through the parks. They were long tedious hours, as drearily empty as he had forecasted. The nights, when he lay sleepless, fighting an incipient craving, were longer and drearier. Thus it was that he had leisure to think of Kazia Whiting, though at some loss to explain why the reappearance of one whom in his receded youth he had treated badly should command so much of his interest.

Nor did he admit a design when his drives took him almost daily past the Todd hospital. Nevertheless the sight of that institution was enough to evoke a faint thrill of excitement not to be laid to its barrack-like architecture, followed by a more emphatic disappointment as the neighborhood was left behind. One afternoon Kazia, in company with another young woman, emerged from the grounds as he was passing and gave him a cool impersonal nod. He guessed that it was her recreation hour and marked the time. The quick leaping interest should have been a warning to him. Perhaps it was, for:

"I'm making a fool of myself," he growled. "What do I know of this woman?"

On the third day thereafter, at the same hour, he passed the hospital. This time Kazia appeared alone. She gave him again the cool impersonal nod and would have passed on. But he drew the horses up sharply and called: "Kazia!"

She paused, hesitated a moment, then went over to the curb.

"Will you drive with me for a while?"

"I ought to walk," she answered.

"Please, Kazia." It did not seem absurd to him that he pleaded.

She hesitated again, then—

"Yes," she said.

He would have alighted to help her to the seat, but she forestalled him.

"Don't get out." And she was beside him.

He touched the horses with his whip and they sprang forward.

"You aren't well," she said abruptly.

And he, ascribing to that fact her unexpected compliance, was at the moment almost glad of his disability.

"Is it obvious? I believe I'm not. In fact, my doctor has ordered me to get out and play—I find it very hard work. That's why—that's one reason why—I asked you. I needed company. The circumstance," he smiled, "ought to appeal to you professionally."

"Nurses are notoriously hard-hearted."

"Yes? Then I can't work on your sympathies. On the whole, I'd rather have it so. You'll have to admit it took courage to ask you to play with me, because—you'll admit again—you weren't exactly cordial the last time."

"What did you expect?"

"But I expected nothing," he retorted. "I didn't know you would be at Roman's. Why, I hadn't even heard of you for—I've been counting it up—14 years. That isn't gross flattery, is it? But, of course, you aren't the sort of woman that likes flattery. Are you?"

"Then you're not so sure, after all? But I do like it."

"I must remember that." He chuckled. "Playing becomes distinctly easier. Isn't it lucky I happened along by the hospital just when I did?"

"But I thought—" She almost smiled. "I thought it was a habit."

"So you've seen me? Now you mention it, I may as well confess that this isn't luck, but the result of a very clever plot. I've been driving past the hospital almost every day in the sneaking hope that just this would occur."

"You say, a sneaking hope—?"

"You see," he confided, "I'm easily frightened. How could I know that I'd find you so—so beautifully human?—Are you preparing to snub me for that?"

"I am considering it." The smile was unmistakable now. "But I won't, because today is one of the days when I can't help being beautifully human. I'm so healthy that sometimes I just have to take a vacation from myself."

"And I'm so unhealthy that, though I'd like to, I can't give Truitt the slip for even an hour. He's a persistent beggar—as you may have noticed the last few weeks."

They laughed.

It was a clear afternoon, beautiful with the mellow radiance of autumn sunshine. But the wind that swept sky and air clean was crisp and penetrating. To her, superbly healthy, it gave only a rare tinge of color that enhanced her charm, gave the last needed softening touch. His wasted body, despite the heavy overcoat he wore, could not resist the chill breath. But, though he knew he would probably pay later for the exposure, he would not by so much as a minute curtail the hour.

"I haven't had so pleasant—it's a puny word, but let that go—so pleasant a time in years," he declared.

"I see," she laughed, "you have taken me at my word."

"But I mean it," he protested. "I'd like you to believe that I mean it."

He became grave.

"Since that day at Roman's I've been thinking a good deal of what we said—about my having harmed you. If regrets—but there's nothing so useless. That sort of thing isn't easily forgiven, is it?"

"Oh, very easily."

"You are thinking that I give too much significance to our little affair. I do not—"

"No, I mean I have never blamed you. Of course, we were too young for it to have any lasting significance. And, if I remember aright, I invited it—and so put you in what must have seemed a very tragic quandary at the time." The most critical ear could have discerned nothing ungenuine in her rippling laugh.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3,1879

The American people should stand by President Wilson in his efforts to keep this nation out of war, and they will uphold him. and former President Taft, nor any of his political friends are not gaining any political prestage by giving out interviews at this time in opposition to the safe and sane man, who is at the head of this great nation. The American people are fortunate in having Wilson, and he has their indorsement on his war policies.

THANKS!

I take this opportunity to tender the voters of Sunbeam and vicinity, my sincere and grateful thanks for the splendid support accorded me at the General Election, I hope to merit your confidence by conducting the affairs of my office, in the future, as I have done in the past.

Sincerely yours,
W. J. LaBree.

Corn And Potato Contest

A grand Corn and Potato contest for Pennington and eastern Marshall counties will take place in the Auditorium building in Thief River Falls on Saturday November 28th. This contest is given under the auspices of the Thief River Falls Commercial Club, assisted by the various parties offering the cash required for the prizes. All the contests are open to the territory indicated except the 100 ear contest in corn, which is open only to bona fide residents of Pennington county.

Never in the history of this section of the state have such generous cash prizes been offered to potato and corn raisers. Last spring, the Soo railway and the Thief River Falls Commercial Club made arrangements for part of this contest, and the First State Bank of this city generously made it possible to offer the rich prizes hung up in the 100 ear corn contest.

In the latter contest, the corn must be standard dent variety and the winning corn becomes the property of the donor of the prizes, the First State Bank.

Competent judges from abroad will do the scoring and will also give their reasons for their judgements. Other speakers, including Mr. Hovorstad of the Soo, will be present.

All entries must be in the hands of the Commercial Club secretary, Mr. C. A. Pitkin, by 12 noon on Saturday November 28th.

The following list comprises the premiums offered;

CORN: (10earsclasses A to D inclusive).

Class A—Minnesota 23--1st, $3; 2nd, $2; 3rd, $1.

Class B—Northwestern--1st, $2; 2nd, $1.50; 3rd, $1.

Class C—Minnesota 13--1st, $2; 2nd, $1.50; 3rd, $1.

Class D—Champion ear, any variety of above three--$1.

Class E—100 ears standard dent variety-- 1st, $50; 2nd, $30; 3rd, $20.

POTATOES: Peck in each entry

Class F-Any early variety except Early Ohio--1st, $3: 2nd, $2; 3rd, $1.

Class G-Any late variety--1st, $3: 2nd, $2: 3rd, $1.

Class H-Early Ohio--1st, $5; 2nd, 2 prizes of $4 each; 3rd, 2 prizes of $3 each.

MONEY TO LOAN ON FARM LAND

CONTRACTS, FIRST AND SECOND MORTGAGES BOUGHT

U. S. CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATION

A COMPETIVE EXAMINATION UNDER THE RULES OF THE U. S. CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION

WILL BE HELD AT

Thief River Falls, Minnesota. On Saturday, Decemeber 12, 1914 for the position of RURAL LETTER CARRIER In Pennington County.

An eligible register for the position of rural letter carrier for each county will be maintained. A rural letter carrier after one year's satisfactory service may be transferred to the position of clerk or carrier in a first or a second class post office, railway mail clerk, or other position in the classified service, subject to such examination as may be required by the Civil Service rules.

As a result of this examination it is expected that certification will be made for filling the position of carrier on a rural route from Thief River Falls, Minnesota, AND OTHER VACANCIES ON RURAL ROUTES AT POST OFFICES IN THE ABOVE-NAMED COUNTY as they may occur in the future, unless it is found to be in the interest of the service to fill the vacancy by reinstatement, transfer, or promotion.

Only male citizens of the United States who have their actual domicile in the territory supplied by an office in the county for which the examination is held will be admitted to the examination.

Eligibles on registers established prior to March 1, 1912, can be considered for appointment only at the office for which they were examined. Such eligibles may be examined within one year from the date of their former examinations upon filing applications showing that they meet the requirements of the new examination, their old eligibility for their home offices not being canceled.

Application for this examination must be made on application Form No. 1341, which together with information in regard to the examination, may be secured from the secretary of the local examining board of the postmaster at the post office or post offices named above. The application should be executed and immediately forwarded to the United States Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C.

U. S. CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.

IT REALLY DOES RELIEVE RHEUMATISM.

Everybody who is afflicted with Rheumatism in any form should by all means keep a bottle of Sloan's Liniment on hand. The minute you feel pain or soreness in a joint or muscle, bathe it with Sloan's Liniment. Do not rub it. Sloan's penetrates almost immediately right to the seat of pain, relieving the hot, tender, swollen feeling and making the part easy and comfortable. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25 cents of any druggist and have it in the house—against colds, sore and swollen joints, rheumatism, neuralgia, sciatica and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief.—adv.

DON'T DELAY TREATING YOUR COUGH.

A slight cough often becomes serious, Lungs get congested, Bronchial Tubes fill with mucous. Your vitality is reduced. You need Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey. It soothes your irritated air passages, loosens mucous and makes your system resist Colds. Give the Baby and Children Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey. It's guaranteed to help them. Only 25c. at your Druggist.—adv.

WE HAVE

$150,000.00

TO LOAN ON FARMS IN

PENNINGTON COUNTY

Write Or Call on Us At FIRST NATIONAL BANK

THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN.

FARMERS & MERCHANTS STATE BANK

Okiee Minn.

The rapid growth of this bank is the best evidence that its policy and methods meet with the approval of the people in our community.

You will find this bank as liberal in its dealings as is consistent with sound banking.

We are at all times prepared to discuss your requirements with you and invite consultation.

Pay your bills with checks on this bank.

Farm Loans At Lowest Rates And On Easy Terms.

Six per cent interest paid on time deposits.

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS— — — — — — — — —$14,500.00

J. A. C Torgerson, V. P. W. B. Torgerson, Cashier.

THANKS!

To the Voters of the 65th Legistive District:

I desire to thank you most heartily for the magnificent support and vote given me on election day.

Resectfully yours,
Oscar T. Stenvick.

State of Ohio, City of Toledo, Lucas County, ss.

Frank J. Cheney makes oath that he is senior partner of the firm of F. J. Cheney & Co., doing business in the City of Toledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for each and every case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by the use of HALL'S CATARRH CURE.
FRANK J. CHENEY.

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D. 1886.
(Seal) A. W. GLEASON, Notary Public.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for testimonials, free.
F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by all Druggists, 75c.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

First Thanksgiving Proclamation.

The Thanksgiving proclamation was originated by Francis Bernard, "captain general and governor in chief over his majesty's province of the Massachusetts bay." It was issued Nov. 4, 1767, and the form was that which has been in substance adhered to ever since.

Formosa's Ancient Tree.

In Formosa there is a tree between 2,500 and 3,000 years old, with a circumference of sixty-five feet and the lowest branches forty-five feet from the ground. The tree is a species of cypress, the Japanese beniki.

Jealousy.

"May's new hat is perfectly hideous."

"It isn't a bit more hideous than mine. You're always saying nice things about May."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Missed It.

The prodigal son wrote the old man as follows: "I got religion the other day. Send me $10." But the old man replied: "Religion is free. You got the wrong kind."

The impure, the deceiving and the uncharitable extrude themselves from eternal bliss by their unfitness for enjoying.—Burns.

U. S. Mail.

The U. S. Mail leaves Sunbeam, at 1:05 p. m. on Tuesday, Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.55 p.m

Wm. G. Hunt, p.m.

Subscribe for THE SUNBEAM.

We have for sale one of the best quarter sections of land in the town of Highlanding, located one mile south of Highlanding Creamery. This farm will be sold cheap as the owner is a non resident and desires to use the money invested in other business. For terms and full particulars call on W. G. Hunt, Sunbeam Minn.

FOR SALE: 120 acres in Section 14, Hickory Township, Pennington County, Minn. Price $1,800.

Nels Fore, Roland, Minn.

HIGHLANDING BLACKSMITH SHOP

A Tharaldson, blacksmith at Highlanding will have a full line of buggy and wagon repairs on hand, and will be glad to oblige.

A. Tharaldson

Notice For Publication.

First, Pub. in The Sunbeam Sept. 25th 1914
Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston September 23rd, 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Hans T. Hanson of Homme, Minn. who on Jan. 27th, 1913 made Homestead Application Serial No 072 for N.½ N.W.¼, Section 27, Township 15 N. Range 39 W. 5th. Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 10th. day of November 1914.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Halvor G. Homme, Gjermund H. Homme of Homme, Minn. Carl J. Lee, Jade I. Tuff, of Rudell, Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

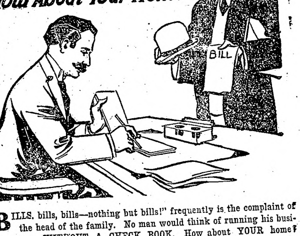
Peter M. Ringdal,
Register.

Feasted on Candles.

Russian soldiers, according to the author of "Eat, Drink and Be Merry," esteem tallow candles a great luxury. He facetiously describes how they came across a huge store of them among the French baggage on the retreat from Moscow and summarily snuffed them out of existence. "Never were they consumed in such a style before. The enraptured warriors drew them across their mouths—like a bow across a fiddle—and left only the bare wicks as a proof of how easily their coverings, so necessary for lights, can be readily utilized for livers."

FIRST STATE BANK,

Of Plummer Minnesota.



You Run Your Business With a Check Book - How About Your Home?
BILL

"BILLS, bills, bills—nothing but bills!" frequently is the complaint of the head of the family. No man would think of running his business WITHOUT A CHECK BOOK. How about YOUR home? The running of the home today is a BUSINESS PROPOSITION.

Open a CHECKING ACCOUNT With Us at Once

J.A.DUFFY President, Henry Enderlie, Cashier

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Oct. 30th 1914
Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Oct. 23rd. 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Henry Bost of Highlanding, Minn. who on Nov. 28th 1911 made Homestead Application Serial No. 0953, for Lot 3, Section 31, Township 153, N. Range 40 W. 5th. Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before John Petterson, U. S. Commissioner at Oklee, Minnesota, on the 20th day of November 1914.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Frank LaCounte, Louis LaCounte, Joseph LaCounte and W. G. Hunt, all of Sunbeam, Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register.

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Nov. 27th 1914.
Department of the Interior. U.S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Nov. 23rd 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Thomas G. Rome of Rhoda, Minn., who on February 8th, 1913 made Homestead Application Serial No. 07282 for Lots 5 and 6, Section 6 Township 152 N. Range 40 W. 5th Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Commutation Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for District of Minn. at Thief River Falls, Minn. on the 5th day of January 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Sam B. Swanson, Ole G. Skreland, of Rhoda, Minn. Andrew Feland, and Warren G. Hunt, of Sunbeam, Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register

10 Great Serials

full of life and action, filled with the fire of fine inspiration and followed by 250 short stories of adventure, will make

The YOUTH'S COMPANION

Better Than Ever in 1915

Then the Family Page, a rare Editorial Page, Boys' Page, Girls' Page, Doctor's Advice, and "a ton of fun," Articles of Travel, Science, Education. From the best minds to the best minds, the best the world can produce for you and everyone in the home. There is no age limit to enthusiasm for The Youth's Companion.

CUT THIS OUT

and send it (or name of this paper) with $2.00 for The COMPANION for 1915, and we will send

FREE All the issues of THE COMPANION for the remaining weeks of 1914.

FREE THE COMPANION HOME CALENDAR for 1915.

THEN The 52 Weekly Issues of THE COMPANION for 1915.

52 Times a Year — not 12.

Send to-day to The Youth's Companion, Boston, Mass., for

THREE CURRENT ISSUES—FREE

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED AT THIS OFFICE

Its Drawback.

"Don't go into the well digging business."

"Why not?"

"Because it's sure to get you in a hole."—Baltimore American.

Love of the brother we see will help us to the love of the Father we do not see.—William Watson.

[illegible] immortality.

The Sneeze.

People say "God bless me" after sneezing, from the fact that in the days of the plague this terrible malady began with violent sneezing and other indications of cold. The exclamation was thus originally a prayer to be delivered from the plague.

Boys!

Do you want this dandy BICYCLE ?

No Money Needed

This is not a Prize Contest. Every boy who fills out and mails the corner coupon can earn this high-grade Bicycle for very little effort during spare time. ASK "The Bicycle Man." Mail this coupon TO-DAY.

FILL OUT AND MAIL THIS COUPON TO-DAY

"The Bicycle Man"
℅ The McCall Co.
236 W. 37th Street
New York City

Dear "Bicycle Man":
Please tell me how to get one of your high-grade Bicycles, without money, and for very little effort.

Name.........
Address.........

THE LOCAL NEWS

As this is tne time of year for the payment of bills, don't forget that $1.00 to your local paper.

The weather has been very fair the past week, and our snow has entirely disappeared.

The new town of Goodridge is devoting considerable attention to entertaining the young people with balls.

Miss Sadie Arndt left her Normal School duties at Thief River Falls, and spent the Thanksgiving holidays at home.

Lewis Bullington of Hickory township will sell off all of his stock and farm machinery at public auction on December 5th.

We extend thanks to a number of our subscribers for subscription paid the past week, and would be thankful to a large number more if they would please remit.

Miss Ella and Marie Causin came home on Wednesday evening for the Thanksgiving holidays. They will return to Thief River Falls Monday, where they are attending High School.

It is just as reasonable to say, that because some farmers are selling off their stock, that farming don't pay, as it would be to say that the mercantile business, or the banking business does not because some men make a failure at it.

On our visit to Thief River Falls last Saturday we met a number of candidates for office. Of course the winners smiled and said we were sure it would come out that way while the loosers could briefly tell you just how it happened.

The Ladies Aid of Mayfield had a large attendance at their auction sale in the Malone school house yesterday. A little over $63.00 was realized by the ladies for the sale of their handy work which was for the benefit of the Mayfield church.

The Ogahmah Hotel at Thief River Falls is doing a fine business, and they are crowded with guests at all times. Mr. Leimers as proprietor of this hotel has made it a model of neatness and order, where the traveling public can receive first class accomodations at reasonable prices.

Any pioneer who has watched the development of northern Minnesota is aware that the large number of auction sales are not caused by any crop failure but it is the result of a change of crops of settlers. There are always three crops of settlers in every newly opened homestead country, before the country is well developed.

Wm. Causin received notice from the U. S. Land Office, this week, that he could now make Homestead Entry on the S.W.¼, Section 26, town Kratka. He has thirty days in which to file, and he will undoubtedly have his filing papers completed before that date. This will ring down the curtain on one of the most long drawn out and bitterly fought contest cases in the Eleven Towns.

The last issue of the Scientific American discloses some facts that have been suppressed in press dispatches regarding the naval engagement between the British and German fleets on the Chile cost, with size and make of guns on each ship engaged. The press dispatches had it that the German vessels had superior guns; while the facts as given by the Scientific American are that at least one of the English ships had the best and longest ranged guns; but maybe there was some Duke or lord's son behind them, for it appears that they could not make hits when they were needed, but fired their long ranged gun shells into the ocean.

Stephen Singer the Kratka post master received two votes for Attorney-General. They had ought to have also given him two or three votes for Post-Master-General, as he seems to run the post-office and mail route business of eastern Pennington County.

I'll Show 'im Darn 'im

I've stopped the paper, yes, I have—I didn't like to do it—But the editor he got too smart, and I allow he'll rue it. I am a man who pays his debts, and will not be insulted. I've took that paper near a year, and helped him all I could, sir, but when it comes to dunning me, I didn't think he would, sir. But that he did, and you can bet it made me hot as thunder; I sez "I'll stop the gol-durned sheet, if the dog-gone thing goes." I hunted up the editor, an' for his cunning caper, I paid him fur the hull darn year, and stopped the bloomin' paper.—The Deerwood Times.

6 Per Cent MONEY 6 Per Cent
MONEY 6 Per Cent

Loans may be obtained for any purpose on acceptable Real Estate security: liberal privileges; correspondence solicited.

A. C. Agency Company.
758 Gas & Electric Bldg.,
Denver Colorado.
and 446 Pierce Bldg.
St. Louis.

AN ACTIVE LIVER MEANS HEALTH.

If you want good health, a clear complexion and freedom from Dizziness, Constipation, Biliousness, Headaches and Indigestion, take Dr. King's New Life Pills. They drive out fermenting and undigested foods, cler the Blood and cure Constipation. Only 25c. at your druggist.—adv.

TRY THIS FOR YOUR COUGH

Thousands of people keep coughing because unable to get the right remedy. Coughs are caused by Inflammation of Throat and Bronchial Tubes. What you need is to soothe this Inflammation. Take Dr. King's New Discovery, it penetrates the delicate mucous lining, raises the Phlegm and quickly relieves the congested membranes. Get a 50c. bottle from your druggist. "Dr. King's New Discovery quickly and completely stopped my cough" writes J. R. Watts, Floydale, Texas. Money back if not satisfied, but it nearly always helps.—adv.

Stammered to Himself.

To those who stutter or stammer let me suggest my personal cure. At about fourteen I was attacked by a bad habit of stammering and couldn't start a remark without it. The other boys laughed at me, and elders proffered complicated cures. But the absurdity of the situation appealed to me. Why couldn't I say "I" at once without the preliminary stammer?

It was obviously necessary to stutter, often before saying "No." Well, why shouldn't I stutter to myself? The method was adopted. When a sentence had to be started the stammer was carried out in silence—if a dozen "n's" had to start a "No." And after a few days of deliberate speech, with the stammer done in silence, I was delivered entirely from the habit.—London Standard.

Japanese Child Jugglers.

Among the itinerant street entertainers in London are a number of tiny Japanese children, usually boys. They make their way into hotel and public house bars, saloons and restaurants and, producing a sheaf of knives from their pockets, suddenly begin juggling with them in the most expert manner, accompanying the performance with a monotonous singsong which seems to be inseparable from the exhibition. Being very small, they seldom depart without receiving a shower of coppers, to which they respond at the doorway with a little chant of thanksgiving. It is difficult to guess the age of Japanese children, but none of the tiny tots engaged in this business appear to be more than seven years old.

Her Revenge.

Girl Shopper—Why did you make that poor salesman pull down all that stuff and then not buy anything? Second Ditto—Why, the mean fellow was in a car yesterday and never offered me his seat, though I looked right at him, so I just decided I would get even.—Boston Transcript.

LUMBER AND BUILDING MATERIALS.

When you get ready to build, come in and let us figure your bill and show you our stock of lumber and building materials.

Complete stocks at Thief River Falls, Mavie and Goodridge, Minn.

WINTON-NICHOLS LUMBER COMPANY.

THE RURAL CHURCH

THE FARMERS THE CUSTODIANS OF THE NATION'S MORALITY.

Co-operation of Church, School and Press Essential to Community Building.

By Peter Radford
Lecturer National Farmers' Union.

The church, the press and the school form a triple alliance of progress that guides the destiny of every community, state and nation. Without them civilization would wither and die and through them life may attain its greatest blessing, power and knowledge. The farmers of this nation are greatly indebted to this social triumvirate for their uplifting influence, and on behalf of the American plowmen I want to thank those engaged in these high callings for their able and efficient service, and I shall offer to the press a series of articles on co-operation between these important influences and the farmers in the hope of increasing the efficiency of all by mutual understanding and organized effort. We will take up, first, the rural church.

The Farmers Are Great Church Builders.

The American farmer is the greatest church builder the world has ever known. He is the custodian of the nation's morality; upon his shoulders rests the "ark of the covenant" and he is more responsive to religious influences than any other class of citizenship.

The farmers of this nation have built 120,000 churches at a cost of $750,000,000, and the annual contribution of the nation toward all church institutions approximates $200,000,000 per annum. The farmers of the United States build 22 churches per day. There are 20,000,000 rural church communicants on the farm, and 54 per cent of the total membership of all churches reside in the country.

The farm is the power-house of all progress and the birthplace of all that is noble. The Garden of Eden was in the country and the man who would get close to God must first get close to nature.

The Functions of a Rural Church.

If the rural churches today are going to render a service which this age demands, there must be co-operation between the religious, social and economic life of the community.

The church to attain its fullest measure of success must enrich the lives of the people in the community it serves; it must build character; develop thought and increase the efficiency of human life. It must serve the social, business and intellectual, as well as the spiritual and moral side of life. If religion does not make a man more capable, more useful and more just, what good is it? We want a practical religion, one we can live by and farm by, as well as die by.

Fewer and Better Churches.

Blessed is that rural community which has but one place of worship. While competition is the life of trade, it is death to the rural church and moral starvation to the community. Petty sectarianism is a scourge that blights the life, and the church prejudice saps the vitality, of many communities. An over-churched community is a crime against religion, a serious handicap to society and a useless tax upon agriculture.

While denominations are essential and church pride commendable, the high teaching of universal Christianity must prevail if the rural church is to fulfill its mission to agriculture.

We frequently have three or four churches in a community which is not able to adequately support one. Small congregations attend services once a month and all fail to perform the religious functions of the community. The division of religious forces and the breaking into fragments of moral efforts is ofttimes little less than a calamity and defeats the very purpose they seek to promote.

The evils of too many churches can be minimized by co-operation. The social and economic life of a rural community are respective units and cannot be successfully divided by denominational lines, and the churches can only occupy this important field by co-operation and co-ordination.

The efficient country church will definitely serve its community by leading in all worthy efforts at community building, in uniting the people in all co-operative endeavors for the general welfare of the community and in arousing a real love for country life and loyalty to the country home and these results can only be successfully accomplished by the united effort of the press, the school, the church and organized farmers.

RAILROADS APPEAL TO PRESIDENT

The Common Carriers Ask for Relief—President Wilson Directs Attention of Public to Their Needs.

The committee of railroad executives, headed by Mr. Frank Trumbull, representing thirty-five of the leading railroad systems of the nation, recently presented to President Wilson a memorandum briefly reviewing the difficulties now confronting the railroads of the country and asking for the co-operation of the governmental authorities and the public in supporting railroad credits and recognizing an emergency which requires that the railroads be given additional revenues.

The memorandum recites that the European war has resulted in general depression of business on the American continent and in the dislocation of credits at home and abroad. With revenues decreasing and interest rates increasing the transportation systems of the country face a most serious crisis and the memorandum is a strong presentation of the candle burning at both ends and the perils that must ultimately attend such a conflagration when the flames meet is apparent to all. In their general discussion the railroad representatives say in part: "By reason of legislation and regulation by the federal government and the forty-eight states acting independently of each other, as well as through the action of a strong public opinion, railroad expenses in recent years have vastly increased. No criticism is here made of the general theory of governmental regulation, but on the other hand, no ingenuity can relieve the carriers of expenses created thereby."

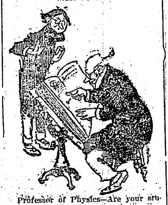
President Wilson, in transmitting the memorandum of the railroad presidents to the public, characterizes it as "a lucid statement of plain truth." The president recognizing the emergency as extraordinary, continuing, said in part:

"You ask me to call the attention of the country to the imperative need that railway credits be sustained and the railroads helped in every possible way, whether by private co-operative effort or by the action, wherever feasible of governmental agencies, and I am glad to do so because I think the need very real."

The conference was certainly a fortunate one for the nation and the president is to be congratulated for opening the gate to a new world of effort in which everyone may co-operate.

There are many important problems in our complex civilization that will yield to co-operation which will not lend themselves to arbitrary rulings of commissions and financing railroads is one of them. The man with the money is a factor that cannot be eliminated from any business transaction and the public is an interested party that should always be consulted and happily the president has invited all to participate in the solution of our railroad problems.

Must Be So.



Professor of Physics—Are your students thoroughly familiar with your views on the subject?

Professor of Psychology—They must be familiar with them, considering the contempt they show for them.—Chicago News.

FIRST STATE BANK,

not merely name:--But a fixed policy.

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS $11000,00

The men who founded and organized the First State had a definate policy in mind, namely: To organize and conduct a bank that would give to all its patrons the best possible service and the most liberal returns on money deposited that can safely be given by a strong, conservative institution.

FIRST STATE BANK,
OKLEE minn.

A. P. Tourin, President. John Petterson, Cashier.
Ole [illegible], Asst. Cashier.

THE PRICHARD Co.
Thief River Falls Minn.

DEALERS IN LUMBER AND FARM MACHINERY.

Located west of the new Soo Depot. Give us a call, and look over our stock of Lumber and Farm Machinery.

H. O. KJOMME
Attorney and Counselor at Law
McGinn Block
Thief River Falls, - - Minn.

Wilhelm Michelet
U. S. COMMISSIONER
COURT HOUSE
THIEF RIVER FALLS,
MINN.

r. Humphreys

Specifics cure by acting directly upon the disease, without exciting disorder in any other part of the system.

No.	CURES.	PRICES.
1	Fevers, Congestions, Inflammations	.25
2	Worms, Worm Fever, Worm Colic	.25
3	Teething, Colic, Crying, Wakefulness	.25
4	Diarrhea, of Children or Adults	.25
7	Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis	.25
8	Neuralgia, Toothache, Faceache	.25
9	Headache, Sick Headache, Vertigo	.25
10	Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Weak Stomach	.25
11	Suppressed or Painful Periods	.25
12	Whites, Too Profuse Periods	.25
13	Croup, Laryngitis, Hoarseness	.25
14	Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Eruptions	.25
15	Rheumatism, Rheumatic Pains	.25
16	Malaria, Chills, Fever and Ague	.25
19	Catarrh, Influenza, Cold in the Head	.25
20	Whooping Cough	.25
27	Kidney Diseases	.25
28	Nervous Debility	1.00
[illegible]0	Urinary Weakness, Wetting Bed	.25
[illegible]	Grip, Hay Fever	.25

[illegible] Manual of all Diseases at your [illegible] Free.
[illegible] sent on receipt of price [illegible]

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Nov. 27th, 1914.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minnesota November 23rd 1914

Notice is hereby given that Karl A. Korstad, of Erie, Minn. who on October 3rd 1911, made Homestead Application serial No, 06631 for N. E. ¼ Section 21, Township 153 N. Range 40 W. Fifth, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make Commutation proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for Dist. of Minn., at Thief River Falls Minn on the 30th day of December 1914.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Perley P. Palmer, Peder H. Thoreson, Peter P. Korstad, Charles Palmer all of Erie, Minn.

PETER M. RINGDAL,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Nov, 27th 1914.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office, at Crookston Minn. Nov. 21st 1914.

Notice is hereby given, that Clarence E. Peterson, of Kratka, Minn., who on June 3rd, 1911, made Homestead Entry No. 06259, for Lots 1&2, E.½ N.W.¼, Section 18 Township 153 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before N. W. Tarrant, Municipal Judge for the City of Thief River Falls, Minn. at Thief River Falls Minnesota, on the 30th day of December 1914

Claimant names as witnesses

Stephen Singer, Ole Nelson, Carl Klemmetson, Peter C. Wold, Jack Dunn, all of Kratka, Minn Roy Hoffman, of Erie, Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal.
Register.

Cuts, Burns,

Bruises, Sores, Wounds and Piles quickly healed with Arnica Salve. It prevents infection, is antiseptic, soothing, healing. Try it once. Money Back If It Fails. The Original and Genuine.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve

Heals the Hurt
All Druggists and Dealers, 25c.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH - - That's $50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day

Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 200-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were piloting them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing talking points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Why don't YOU be the first to apply from your vicinity before someone else gets the territory? We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.

Our New Home. Capacity 20,000 Safes Annually.

The 25th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide-awake men who received our special selling inducement, rendered it necessary to double our output. We are spending many thousands of dollars enlarging our sales organization, but to learn all particulars it will cost you only the price of a postal card.

Ask for Catalogue 16 T.

THE VICTOR SAFE & LOCK CO.
CINCINNATI, OHIO

THE WHEAT LANDS OF WESTERN CANADA AN ATTRACTION

THE EUROPEAN WAR MAKES THE GROWING OF WHEAT EXCEPTIONALLY REMUNERATIVE.

One result of the European War has been to reduce the volume of business done by many of the manufacturing institutions of the United States, commercial enterprises have been affected, business of many kinds have been hampered, and a financial stringency has been forced on almost every community. It is not only because it has brought these things about, and created a lot of hardship, but there is the outstanding fact of the terrible loss of life, the great destruction of property, and the disruption of everything near and dear to those whose countries are involved in the war that makes the whole affair highly regrettable. The heart of the entire world goes out in sympathy to those within the area of the trouble. Arrangements have been made to relieve the distress by money and other means. But there is one great thing —wheat and flour—that the European countries will need. The wheat-producing countries are no longer producing, and there is the gravest reason to fear that they will not be for some years. In this case, it would be fully as beneficial and charitable to make provision to meet the loss of Europe's grain crop by encouraging a greatly increased growth on this continent.

The wheat-growing sections of the United States have about reached their limit of production, and this source cannot be depended upon to meet a great deal of the demand that there will be for some years. The only country that is in a position to meet it is—Canada—that portion known as Western Canada. Here there are millions of acres of land, capable of producing from 20 to 40 bushels per acre. All this land is excellent for wheat, and very much is still in the hands of the Dominion Government, and 160 acres of it can be had by the payment of a ten dollar entry fee.

Another vast area is that held by railway and reliable land companies, held at from $10 to $25 per acre. Improved farms are slightly higher in price. Information regarding these lands may be had of any Canadian Government Agent.

The fact that Canada offers such a splendid opportunity should be accepted with a wide-spread appreciation, and not met with attempts on the part of some to spread misleading statements. The Dominion Government has not taken steps to deny many of the false statements circulated by those who evidently are more interested in injuring Canada than benefiting those who would be benefited by taking up farms in Canada, but in order to correct a highly erroneous impression that conscription is carried on in Canada, that compulsory military service is employed, and that there is restraint as to the movement of those not Canadians, the necessity is felt of giving as much publicity as possible to a denial of these statements.

An item to which special exception is taken is one which says:

"They are sending them away as rapidly as possible; but the young men are not permitted to leave Canada. All the citizens and those who have taken up homesteads are subject to military duty."

In direct refutation of this, we beg to quote from a recent editorial in the Rochester, N. Y., Herald:

"There is no legal process by which Great Britain can command a single Canadian soldier to enter the field in her aid or even in her most needful defense. Great Britain cannot legally take a dollar of Canada's money for this or any other war without Canada's consent. All must be given voluntarily, if it be given at all. Yet men and dollars are given to the limit of Canada's power to give, just as if Great Britain had both physical and legal power to exact them. Indeed, it is possible that they are given more freely in this way, for what a man gives because he wants to give is likely to be greater than what he gives under force.

"All in all it is a noble picture of devotion to her motherland which Canada offers to the gaze of her admiring and unenvious neighbors."

Canada's invitation for immigration extends to all who are willing to go on to the farms.

Superintendent of Immigration,
Ottawa, Canada.
Advertisement.

If all the world's a stage, a lot of us need more rehearsals.

Your Liver Is Clogged Up

That's Why You're Tired—Out of Sorts —Have No Appetite.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS will put you right in a few days.

They do their duty.

Cure Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion and Sick Headache

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER
PILLS.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

SPEAKERSHIP FIGHT NARROWS TO TWO

G. B. BJORNSON WITHDRAWS FROM RACE AND ISSUES A STATEMENT TELLING WHY.

SEEKS TO PRESERVE UNITY

Principal Reason for Withdrawal, However, Is Because He Is Chairman of Republican State Central Committee.

St. Paul.—G. B. Bjornson, of Minneota, chairman of the Republican state central committee, declines to be a candidate for the speakership of the next house. As a result the fight will likely be narrowed down to a contest between H. H. Flowers and Sam Y. Gordon.

Statement of Mr. Bjornson.

In refusing to permit his name to be considered, Mr. Bjornson explained his position as follows:

"My name has been mentioned in connection with the speakership of the next house and I have been urged to become a candidate for the position.

"I appreciate the honor and the confidence implied in this, but after giving the matter careful consideration have concluded not to become a candidate.

"The principal reason for this conclusion on my part is that I am chairman of the Republican State Central Committee and feel that I owe it to the party and the organization I represent not to become entangled in what may become a factional fight for the speakership.

"There are many men among the members-elect to the next house whose experience and ability qualifies them for the position of speaker. I am confident that the members will choose well and wisely and that the speaker selected will do justice to the body he is chosen to preside over and to the best interests of the people of the state.

Amplification of Position.

"In amplification of the position I take, as far as I am concerned personally, I will say that I feel under obligations to the Republicans of the state to do my utmost during the coming two years to reunite the party and to help, and as far as I may be able, guide all honorable efforts to unite the various factions of the party.

"When I accepted the chairmanship of the Republican State Central Committee last June I also accepted the implied obligation of putting forth my best efforts in behalf of the party and its success. The fact that we have met with defeat, in so far as we were not able to elect the Republican nominee for governor at the last election does not change the obligation I feel I am under to the party to render service in its behalf. On the contrary, it makes me feel that that obligation rests as a still weightier duty.

"My candidacy for the speakership might result in defeating the very ends for which I desire to work.

Seeks Party Cohesion.

"With a presidential campaign coming on, I feel that every effort should be made to secure unity of action that there may be restored to the party the standing and success that is its rightful heritage in Republican Minnesota.

"Believing this to be my political mission and a duty that I owe to my party, I have concluded not to become a candidate for the speakership or to enlist in any factional strife within the party ranks.

"G. B. BJORNSON."

"GET OUT," YELLS DEAD MAN

Negro "Corpse" Sits Up and Takes Notice When Morgue Keeper Gets Body.

Minneapolis.—Morgue Keeper Peter Morton, accustomed as he is to things that startle, rushed for a mirror to see if his hair had turned white when a supposed corpse that he was about to put in his basket yelled lustily and ordered him to "get out." Morton "got out," and that hurriedly, leaving the situation to Deputy Coroner C. A. Hobbs, who accompanied him.

"I certainly have a great pain," said the erstwhile corpse, placing his hands to his side. "Don't bother me."

Dr. Hobbs made a critical examination. A talking corpse would be quite a contribution to science.

The subject had been reported dead an hour before. What the deputy coroner found was a case of acute pleurisy.

W. E. Matthews, colored, the "near corpse," went to the home of George Smith to visit. He stayed all night. Early Friday he groaned, and when Smith entered the room Matthews was rigid, apparently dead, with eyes closed and jaws set.

Lund Gets Federal Job.

St. Paul.—Fred B. Lynch, Democratic national committeeman, in Washington, announced that Harry A. Lund of Minneapolis will succeed Marcus Johnson as collector of customs for Minnesota, the appointment to be made early in December, after congress convenes. Mr. Johnson's term expired in August. The matter of United States marshal will not be taken up now, Mr. Lynch said, as W. H. Grimshaw's term does not expire until December, 1915.

Alleged Heroin Agent Held.

Minneapolis.—Evidence that may reveal an international heroin traffic with the Twin Cities as the distributing point was obtained from Charles T. Clark, a news agent on the Soo line, who said, following his arrest on a petty larceny charge, that a man had given him a package of heroin to be delivered to a stranger in Emerson, Minn., on the Canadian border. A package of heroin was found in Clark's possession and he was sent to the workhouse for 90 days.

COUPLE MARRIED 75 YEARS

Balaton Man and Wife at 106 and 96 Eat Turkey and Mince Pie and Gaily Dance Quadrilles.

Balaton.—Heads of a family of five generations, but as young in spirit and as happy as the smallest member, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Shequin, 106 and 96 years old respectively, Lyon county pioneers, celebrated their diamond wedding here.

They celebrated it much as they did their marriage back in New England. They ate turkey, mince and pumpkin pie, danced the "Old Dan Tucker," and then romped with those of the 47 great-grandchildren who were present and with the two great-great-grandchildren.

Mr. Shequin helped feed the horses on the morning of the celebration, and Mrs. Sequin was close to the kitchen stove, giving an occasional fine-art hint to the others who were basting the turkey and browning the crust of the mince pie. The hints were followed, too, according to the husband, for only by doing so could they have produced such a delicious crust on the pie and such a flavor to the turkey.

Able to remember the war of 1812, too old to be accepted as a volunteer in the civil war and still willing to shoulder arms in the Spanish-American struggle, John Shequin considers that his life has been successful.

"I haven't done much, but then there are some things I could have done and didn't that makes me a little bit proud today," he said. "No, siree, I'm no goody-goody," he said to a friend who called to find out how a man could live so long. "You know what they say about those who die young. Well, I have just been sort of ordinary."

"I really didn't think I was so old that anyone would ask me how it happened," he said.

His advice is:

Marry young.
Stay young.
Stay away from the cities.
Work and enjoy working.
Never think of things going to the dogs.
Take mince pie or doughnuts if one must have a stimulant.

The man who had eaten the same woman's cooking for 75 years and said he had never traveled much for fear he wouldn't be so well fed, looked at her while a photographer was preparing to take the wedding picture and said:

"You look about the same as you did in the first picture, let's not bother him by taking another one."

"So do you, John, but hush up and look pleasant, so as not to spoil this one."

STATE CENSUS NEXT YEAR

Minnesota Count Probably Will Come in June by Order of Secretary of State.

St. Paul.—Minnesota will count noses next June. Early in the coming session of the legislature a bill will be introduced providing for taking a state census, according to the custom of counting the state's population midway between the federal censuses. Every 10 years since 1865 the state census has been taken and it is practically certain that an act authorizing the 1915 census will be passed. According to custom it probably will be placed in the hands of the secretary of state, Julius A. Schmahl.

The 1905 state census cost $65,000. It was handled by Peter E. Hanson, secretary of state; George F. Wright of Princeton having direct charge of the bureau. The enumeration started June 1, 1905, and was finished in one month, but the compilation took some three months longer. No account was taken of anything but population, sex, age, color, nativity, occupation, parentage and period of residence in the state and district. The census showed a population of 1,979,912, which was an increase of 228,518 in the five years following the federal census of 1900, or 13 per cent. The federal census of 1910 showed a population of 2,075,708, an increase of 95,796 in the five years following the state census.

Damage of $2,500 Awarded.

Faribault.—District court is in session and civil cases are being tried. The jury in the case of Edward Grimes versus the Dan Patch Railway company returned a verdict for damages to the amount of $2,500. Suit was brought against the company for failure to erect a station on the plaintiff's land which the company agreed to do if given a right of way. Another suit brought against the same company by C. H. Carpenter of Northfield for $2,000 damages, for being put off a train, was also tried. The jury returned a verdict for 1 cent in favor of the plaintiff.

Serves Time With Customer.

Minneapolis. — Emil Peterson, the court house barber, was held prisoner in the city jail for nearly two hours even though there was no charge placed against him and his name was not on the jail register. He went to the jail at 4 p. m. to shave a prisoner. Jailor Gerrish locked him in the cell with his customer. Prisoners at that time were yelling and banging their cells in their efforts to be amused and in the confusion Peterson was forgotten. As a result it was nearly 6 o'clock before he was remembered.

URGE CONVICTS BUILD ROADS

STATE FEDERATION INDORSES THIS FOR IMPROVING ROADS.

Calls on Congress to Create National Body to Determine Means for Federal Co-operation.

St. Paul.—Employment of prison highways will be urged before the next session of the legislature by representatives of the Minnesota Good Roads federation, Minnesota division of the National Highway association, which, at the close of its first annual convention here adopted resolutions to this effect.

Resolutions adopted by the federation also favor the creation by congress of a commission to investigate and report back on some safe and sane plan of federal co-operation and participation in the improvement of public highways.

The association indorsed the so-called Dunn law and the Elwell law, one fitting the needs of portions of the state where the other may not be entirely adequate. It was the sentiment of the convention, however, that experience has demonstrated the need of amendments.

It was recommended that the state contribute special aid to the counties which are weak financially and sparsely settled in building main highways connecting the centers of population through such counties.

The association also recommended that the legislature enact a law providing county boards with authority to conduct short courses of instruction in road building and maintenance for the benefit of town overseers and others directly responsible for the building and maintenance of roads, and providing compensation for those attending these meetings; the courses to be conducted before the beginning of spring work.

ROCHESTER GIRL WAR NURSE

Goes East to Join Red Cross Corps of Allied Armies in Europe.

Rochester.—Miss Jean Spiers, for three years a trained nurse at St. Mary's hospital, this city, has departed for the east to join the Red Cross corps of the allied armies in Europe. Miss Spiers will sail with a party of nurses from Boston.

The young lady is a native of Scotland, and when the invitation came to her to give her services she quickly accepted the opportunity, and made hasty preparations for her departure. Plans for the work of this group of Red Cross nurses have not been completed, she said, but they will be rushed to the field hospitals, where the present force is entirely inadequate to care for the wounded.

Glenwood Gets $50,000 School.

Glenwood.—By a vote of 196 to 12, citizens of Glenwood decided to build a $50,000 school to be devoted to the high school and its special branches. The board of education will purchase a site immeditely and begin the erection of the building early in the spring. To interest citizens in the project the board called a mass meeting. P. C. Tonning, assistant superintendent of public instruction, made an excellent address on "Minnesota's School Ideals." The almost unanimous vote for issuing bonds was the sequel of this enthusiastic mass meeting. Glenwood's school system will be very complete with the new building. The two present buildings will be devoted to the grades.

Autoist Killed; 1 Fatally Hurt.

Redwood Falls.—William Meyer of Westbrook was instantly killed when the car in which he was riding leaped over an embankment near Revere and turned over, pinning its occupants beneath it. Four men who were with Mr. Meyer were seriously injured. W. Mulligan of Westbrook, the owner and driver of the car, being so badly hurt there is no hope of his recovery. H. Evans of Walnut Grove is suffering from a bad scalp wound. T. Hebberson and Arthur Boyle of Walnut Grove received slighter injuries.

Three Thin Ice Victims.

Crookston.—Three children of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Soderberg, who live three miles southwest of Climax on the Red river, were drowned. A girl, 9 years, and two boys, 5 and 7 years old, were the victims. They were traced to the river bank. The ice there was strong enough to have supported them along the edge, but they evidently had ventured too far out.

Counties Unite for Sanatorium.

Glenwood.—By a vote of over two to one, Pope county decided to unite with the counties of Stevens, Douglas and Grant in building and maintaining a tuberculosis hospital. The other counties have indorsed the project and the erection of the building will be started next spring. The management will be in the hands of a hospital commission of eight members, two chosen from each county. The representatives of Pope county on the commission are Dr. E. A. Eberlin and Dana Hoyt.

AID IS ASKED FOR NEEDY BELGIANS

MINNESOTA BELGIAN RELIEF FUND ORGANIZED TO FURTHER RELIEF WORK.

AFTER 90,000 BARRELS FLOUR

Wheat or Money May Be Contributed to Any Bank, Elevator Agent or Flour Mill Manager in State —Everyone Urged to Aid.

Minneapolis.—The Minnesota Belgian relief fund has been organized with the advice of and in co-operation with the central committee of the Belgian relief fund of Washington and the American ambassador in London.

It purposes collecting 90,000 barrels of flour of the approximate value of $500,000, one-half to be contributed by the general public and one-half by the millers.

The railroads have agreed to transport this flour to Philadelphia without any charge, while the cost of the ocean transportation, $41,000, has been contributed by a few individuals.

The British and German governments have consented to the arrangement, thus insuring its safe carriage and delivery.

The American ambassador in London cables: "Food cannot be bought on this side of the world. Money sent will be of no use. Food sent, except through this commission, may never reach Belgium or may be confiscated."

Those who contribute to this cargo are not thereby showing partisanship. Relief of the starving women, children and old men of Belgium is the common duty of humanity. It helps the Germans as much as the allies to assist in alleviating the frightful distress which has befallen innocent noncombatants on account of war.

How People May Contribute.

Every bank, elevator agent and flour mill manager in the state is authorized to receive donations of wheat, flour or money.

The wheat and money contributed will be converted into flour at the nearest mill and the flour will be shipped, free of all freight charges, direct to the chartered ship, "Northwestern Miller," at Philadelphia, from which point the personal representatives of the publication, the Northwestern Miller, will accompany the shipment and personally assure its delivery by permission of the American ambassador in London and our minister in Belgium.

For each $1.50 handed to your local bank, elevator agent or miller, at least one 49-pound sack of flour will reach Belgium without further cost.

For each six bushels of wheat delivered to the elevator agent or mill approximately one barrel of Minnesota patent flour will have like delivery.

Why All Should Respond.

The 1914 wheat, rye, oats and corn crop of Minnesota will realize at least $30,000,000 more money because of the European war.

The farmers and business men of Minnesota are richer by just this amount by reason of the war.

Hence the farmer and business man should be the first to respond to this urgent call.

What Can Be Accomplished.

If every farmer in the state will today deliver to his elevator one bushel, five, ten or twenty-five bushels of merchantable wheat, according to his ability (or if he has already sold his wheat, then the proceeds in money), it will save the lives of thousands of suffering Belgian women and children and furnish evidence to the world that the hearts of the men of Minnesota are as expansive as the prairies of their noble state.

If every man and woman, not a farmer, will today hand his or her cash contribution to the nearest mill, elevator agent or bank, other thousands of lives may be saved.

It is believed that $7,000,000 worth of food for each of the next several months will be required to sustain the helpless victims of the present war.

All contributions will be acknowledged by the undersigned committee and through the local newspapers.

Minnesota Belgian Relief Committee.

Hon. W. S. Hammond, governor-elect, president; Joseph Chapman, vice president; Northwestern National bank, treasurer; Donald R. Cotton, secretary, Pioneer building, St. Paul.

General Committee—St. Paul: Miss Clara Hill, Mrs. C. A. Severance, Mr. Louis W. Hill, Mr. C. A. Severance, Mr. Donald S. Culver, Mr. Charles W. Gordon. Minneapolis: Mrs. George H. Partridge, Mrs. William C. Edgar, Mr. George H. Partridge, Mr. Albert C. Cobb, Mr. P. L. Howe, Mr. E. P. Wells, Mr. John Washburn, Mr. Arthur R. Rogers. Duluth: Mr. W. A. McGonagle, Mr. W. J. McCabe, Mr. A. L. Ordean, Mr. A. M. Chisholm, M. C. A. Congdon, Mr. G. G. Hartley. Faribault: Mr. H. C. Theopold.

Ex-Officio—Mr. James J. Hill, St. Paul; Mr. William C. Edgar, Minneapolis; members Central Committee, Washington, D. C.

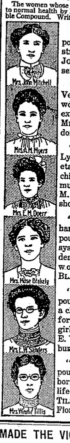
Campaign Against Impure Eggs.

Washington, Nov. 19. — Federal, state and local officials have begun a campaign in Illinois, the Department of Agriculture announces, to stop what is declared was illegal traffic in impure eggs. "From evidence gathered," the department stated, "there seems to be a definite market in Chicago for 'rots and spots' at $2 a case. Although there is a certain demand for inedible eggs for technical purposes, most of the rots and spots broken and frozen and sold to bakers for use in cakes."

HAVE YOU A CHILD?

Many women long for children, but because of some curable physical derangement are deprived of this greatest of all happiness.

The women whose names follow were restored to normal health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Write and ask them about it.



"I took your Compound and have a fine, strong baby." — Mrs. JOHN MITCHELL, Massena, N. Y.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a wonderful medicine for expectant mothers." — Mrs. A. M. MYERS, Gordonville, Mo.

"I highly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before child-birth, it has done so much for me." — Mrs. E. M. DOERR, R. R. 1, Conshohocken, Pa.

"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to build up my system and have the dearest baby girl in the world." — Mrs. MOSE BLAKELEY, Imperial, Pa.

"I praise the Compound whenever I have a chance. It did so much for me before my little girl was born." — Mrs. E. W. SANDERS, Rowlesburg, W. Va.

"I took your Compound before baby was born and feel I owe my life to it." — Mrs. WINNIE TILLIS, Winter Haven, Florida.

MADE THE VICTORY CERTAIN

Gunner's Announcement Naturally Brought Joy to the Heart of Artillery Captain.

With a ringing cheer the enemy advanced to attack the intrenchments.

"Fire!" hoarsely shouted the artillery captain, and the roar of the guns responded, but without checking the steady advance of the enemy.

One piece remained undischarged.

"Why don't you fire?" demanded the captain.

"I—I don't know if it's loaded," responded the gunner.

A gleam of joy lit up the stern features of the commander.

"Then victory is ours!" he shouted. "Fire it and let's find out!"

The discharge mowed down the advancing column and the assault was repelled.

'Twas ever thus.

"—By Wire."

Louise Randolph smilingly confirms this tale told of her the other day:

She was in her dressing room preparing to go "on" when the call boy announced that she was wanted at the telephone.

The boy returned shortly, slightly embarrassed.

"You had better come, Miss Randolph," he said. "It's your daughter, and she wants to give you a kiss over the phone."—Green Book.

Antagonizes Them.

"Has Bella many friends?"

"Oh, yes, but she is the sort of girl who is bound to make a few enemies among the members of her own sex."

"Why so?"

"She has such a good natural complexion."

Let Them Speak For Themselves

You needn't take anybody's word for the superiority of Post Toasties—

Get a package from your Grocer, pour some of the crisp, sweet flakes into a dish, add cream or milk, and a sprinkle of sugar if you wish. Then be the judge of

Post Toasties

The Superior Corn Flakes

—made from the hearts of the finest Indian Corn, skilfully cooked, seasoned, rolled and toasted.

Toasties are not ordinary "corn flakes," so remember when you want Superior Corn Flakes to ask your grocer for

Post Toasties

WINCHESTER

Smokeless Powder Shells

"LEADER" and "REPEATER"

The superiority of Winchester Smokeless Powder Shells is undisputed. Among intelligent shooters they stand first in popularity, records and shooting qualities. Always use them

For Field or Trap Shooting.

Ask Your Dealer For Them.

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Canada is Calling You to her Rich Wheat Lands

She extends to Americans a hearty invitation to settle on her FREE Homestead lands of 160 acres each or secure some of the low priced lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

This year wheat is higher but Canadian land just as cheap, so the opportunity is more attractive than ever. Canada wants you to help to feed the world by tilling some of her soil—land similar to that which during many years has averaged 20 to 45 bushels of wheat to the acre. Think what you can make with wheat around $1 a bushel and land so easy to get. Wonderful yields also of Oats, Barley and Flax. Mixed farming is fully as profitable an industry as grain growing.

The Government this year is asking farmers to put increased acreage into grain. Military service is not compulsory in Canada but there is a great demand for farm labor to replace the many young men who have volunteered for service. The climate is healthful and agreeable, railway facilities excellent, good schools and churches convenient. Write for literature and particulars as to reduced railway rates to Superintendent Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or to

R. A. GARRETT
311 Jackson Street, St. Paul, Minn.
Canadian Government Agent

A good cigarette must be made of pure tobacco and the most choice leaf. Such is Fatima—the most popular, mild Turkish-blend cigarette, now smoked almost universally in this country! "Distinctively Individual."

If you cannot secure Fatima Cigarettes from your dealer, we will be pleased to send you three packages postpaid on receipt of 50c. Address Fatima Dept., 212 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y.

Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

20 for 15¢

FATIMA
TURKISH BLEND CIGARETTES
Cameron & Cameron Co. RICHMOND, VA.
NO GOLD TIPS BUT FINEST QUALITY

SOMETHING USEFUL FOR XMAS

Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pen

Sold at the best stores most everywhere. If your dealer cannot supply, we will gladly assist you. Illustrated folder on request.

L. E. WATERMAN COMPANY
173 Broadway New York

Highest Cash Prices

Paid For CHICKENS, VEAL, CREAM

WRITE FOR SPECIAL PRICE LIST.

THE R. E. COBB CO., 14. 3rd Street, St. Paul, Minn.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Patent Lawyer, Washington, D.C. Advice and books free. Rates reasonable. Highest references. Best services.

Here Is a Real Bargain Send 25c for silk tie very suitable for Xmas gift. Discounts on larger orders. MAX NECKWEAR CO., Max, North Dakota.

His "Name."

A young spark, notorious for his conceit, was boasting in the presence of several gentlemen about the conquests which he had gained over the female heart.

"Look," said he," here's a handsome present I had from my last inamorata," at the same time handing round a beautiful cigar-case.

All admired the article, which had an indorsement of its quality stamped upon it.

"Very nice gift," remarked one of the company. "I perceive your ladylove even had your name put on the case."

"Well, that's queer," answered the boaster. "I never noticed it."

"Look again," rejoined the candid one. "The case is distinctly marked 'Real calf.'"

Dared.

"Mr. Wilgus tried to kiss me last evening."

"How dared he?"

"He didn't—I dared him."

Austrian Army.

Adjutant—Our equipment is no good.

General—So much the better! When the Russians get it they can't use it.

The Kind.

"I thought you told me you had financial backing for this enterprise?"

"Yes, but it was a backing out."

BALANCE KEPT BY NATURE

Increase of the Human Race Seems to Be Regulated by Wars and Other Devastations.

Every year, according to scientists who attempt to keep the general records, at least 80,000,000 human beings are born on this earth nad 60,000,000 or 70,000,000 die. This indicates a dail birth rate of about 220,000 and a death rate of 180,000. The daily increase in population therefore is about 40,000. The total population of the globe is estimated at 1,800,000,000.

The ravages of war do little to impede the increase. Far more effective have been the upheavals of nature. The Franco-Prussian war killed about 130,000 in seven months. The death roll of the Russo-Japanese reached about 200,000. A single earthquake (1737, in India) has been estimated to have caused 300,000 deaths. The fatalities of the Messina earthquake in 1908 cannot have been far short of 100,000. A tidal wave in 1896 drowned 27,000 persons in Japan, causing a greater loss of life than the whole war with China in 1894. The earthquake in Japan in 1703 is said to have killed 200,000 people. The Lisbon earthquake in 1755 destroyed 50,000 human lives, while 40,000 were lost in the same year in earthquakes in Persia.

Not to Be Thought of.

"Now let us put our heads together and see if we can't arrange matters."

"Put our heads together? That would hardly do, Maude. Your green wig and my purple hair won't harmonize."

Ought to Have Been.

"I wonder if there was a hot time last night."

"Where?"

"At Smith's house-warming."

Quick Accurate Thinking

—does much to make the difference between success and failure.

And the food a person eats goes a long way toward deciding the difference.

Grape-Nuts FOOD

—with its delicious flavour and rich in the concentrated, nourishing elements of whole wheat and malted barley, is the favorite breakfast cereal of thousands of successful men and women—

"There's a Reason" for Grape-Nuts

—sold by Grocers.

WORD OF AN INDIAN

By HAROLD CARTER.

(Copyright, 1914, by W. G. Chapman.)

Baffin of the police told me this story. Of course he may have been lying, but my principle is never to say anything of a man behind his back that one wouldn't say to him to his face, and no man that I know would call Baffin a liar face to face.

Corporal Shannon of the Northwest police set out north from Edmonton on a March morning to cover an 800-mile trail and bring back Laughing Cloud to be hanged in Edmonton jail. He cursed himself as a fool when he set out, because he had trusted the Indian and the Indian had betrayed his trust, thereby necessitating this second journey.

Laughing Cloud had killed his brother, and Shannon had gone to get him the preceding October. He found the Indian's wife, but not the Indian.

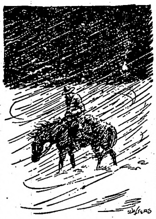
He learned from her that Laughing Cloud, aware of the inexorable pursuit, had gone north into the Arctic circle to say good-by to his father and mother, who were hunting caribou over the barren grounds.

Laughing Cloud's squaw advanced a singular proposition on behalf of her husband. If Shannon would leave Laughing Cloud in peace to say good-by to the old folks she pledged that he would appear in Edmonton to be hanged in February.

As it was too late in the year to continue the pursuit at that time, Shannon accepted the proposal. He had heard that the Indians were faithful to their bargains, but he was skeptical when it was a matter of life or death.

And his skepticism proved justified, for February came and went, and there was no Laughing Cloud. Whereupon Shannon, disgusted with the world, and Indians in particular, saddled up and rode out north.

He had covered some 500 miles by the end of March, housing himself in snow huts that he built, and living off the proceeds of his rifle, with what food he could obtain from the isolated police posts. By the end of the month he was in a desolate stretch of country, remote from any habitation. And then occurred the worst blizzard of that year.



He Lost All Sense of Direction.

They say an April blizzard is apt to be a bad one, but this was one of the worst ever known in that region. Within five minutes of its start Shannon had lost all sense of direction, the pony refusing to face the wind and standing with lowered head. There was nothing to do but to offsaddle and make a snow hut.

Some such shelter Shannon made, and, coiled up in his blanket, he shivered himself to sleep. He awoke numb, and found the blizzard raging with worse ferocity.

Twelve hours later, having eaten all his provisions, and being unable to light a fire, he resigned himself to death. His legs were numb to the knees; his pony had fallen in the snow and was stiffer than stone.

Shannon knew what the result would be. He prepared to face death bravely. He sat, huddled in his blanket, thinking only of Laughing Cloud and his unfulfilled mission.

He must have dozed, for he awakened suddenly to see an Indian at his side. The man threw back his blanket and revealed the features of Laughing Cloud. Shannon's heart leaped to think that the Indian had been true to his trust.

Without a word the Indian stepped out into the snow, motioning to Shannon to accompany him. Shannon's legs had been numb, but he felt a tingle of blood in them now, and he was able to limp haltingly after Laughing Cloud. As they advanced, too, the fierceness of the storm seemed to decrease, and Shannon said afterward that he hardly felt the sting of the snow in his face.

They must have proceeded about a mile through the storm when they suddenly came upon an old ice house. It had evidently been constructed during the early months of the winter. The March thaws had reduced it to solid ice, now coated thickly with the falling snow. Inside it was warm and comfortable.

More than that, inside was charred wood, suitable for rekindling, with a little tea and some frozen caribou meat.

In a few moments Shannon had kindled a fire and was brewing a hot draft in the tin can which he had taken automatically from the saddle of his dead horse. He offered Laughing Cloud some, and also some of the meat, but Laughing Cloud only shook his head quietly and watched Shannon eating.

After he had eaten and drunk Shannon managed to restore the circulation in his legs with snow. He had no doubt now that the Indian had come to surrender himself, and it did not occur to him to have any fear. He turned over in his blanket and went to sleep beside the fire, while Laughing Cloud stood in the doorway, watching him with a quiet smile.

Shannon knew that the Indian had wanted to show his gratitude for Shannon's trust in him. He knew he would be there when he awoke. But when he awoke Laughing Cloud was gone.

And there was another man in the tent—Helmsley, in charge of the last police post that Shannon had passed. Helmsley was shaking him by the shoulder and peering anxiously into his face.

"Well, you seem pretty snug," he said, when Shannon awoke. "When I saw your horse lying dead in the snow I felt sure that you were gone. I have been riding hard after you for the past five days, but you always kept a little ahead of me. How in the world did you manage to find this cave? I suppose that Indian made it when he went south. Got anything to eat?"

Shannon produced the rest of the caribou meat, and Helmsley devoured it ravenously. Then he stretched himself out in his blanket at Shannon's side.

"I'm glad I caught you," he said. "I felt sure you were gone. Well, there's no need to look for Laughing Cloud any longer."

"But I've got him," answered Shannon. "At least—"

He paused suddenly, and for the first time the suspicion entered his mind that the Indian might have changed his mind and fled again. Or perhaps he had never meant to surrender, but had only saved Shannon out of an impulse of humanity, when he had found him, half conscious, in the snow.

"You've got him?" inquired Helmsley, looking at Shannon curiously.

"Yes. He found me lying in the snow, and took me to this cache of his," answered Shannon. "He ought to be around here somewhere. Why are you looking so strangely, Helmsley?"

"Because," answered the other slowly, "Laughing Cloud surrendered himself in Edmonton last week, and the news was telegraphed up, so that we could bring you back."

"Must be a mistake," said Shannon, confidently. "When I see your man I'll show he isn't Laughing Cloud."

"I think you're wrong," answered Helmsley. "Laughing Cloud confessed, and—he was hanged in Edmonton yesterday morning."

TAKE DELIGHT IN SMUGGLING

Women Are the Worst Offenders Against the Government in This Respect.

Are women less honest than men? The customs officials are perhaps better qualified to answer that question than anyone else. They deal with hundreds of women in a matter that tests the honesty of everyone. And they say not infrequently, "women are liars!"

"Why, you ought to hear some of the things that men declare," said one of them. "A college professor declared that he got his shoes half-soled in Paris for 75 cents, and another man declared gold tooth! I told him that no one would know the difference if he'd keep his mouth shut.

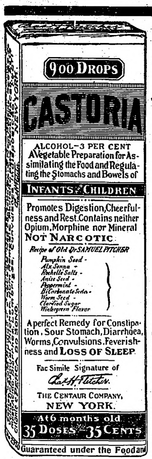
"But women! One of them looked me right in the eye and swore that she didn't bring thing and then I found a bunch of aigrettes in her trunk. Another had 20 yards of real lace hidden —do you know where? in a hot water bottle! And when I told her to come across she said, sassylike, 'Well, you've got me this time, but d— you, I've fooled you many times before!'"

Nine times out of ten feminine friends of the woman who smuggles listen to the tale of "bluffing the government" with admiration, yet if anyone should openly accuse such a woman of being a thief she would grow furious with indignation. She would insist that she did not steal. She was only bringing back with her what she had paid good money for, she would say, and she didn't intend to pay twice. She has no deep respect for, no unshakable faith in the law, as men have, who accept it without questioning. That is why men seldom smuggle, while women do it continually.

Then, too, women do it because they see in it an element of sport. Men will take chances where a great risk is involved. They will stake their all on a business venture. But a thing like cheating the government out of a few dollars is too small, too petty, for them to consider worth while.

Quail Is Farmers' Friend.

The quail, between his cheery calls of "Bob-White," is busy consuming 135 varieties of insects. He will eat on an average 75,000 insects and 6,000,000,000 weed seeds a year. He is the natural enemy of the boll-weevil and the potato-bug and the best friend of man, who is trying to destroy him in nearly every state. If we do not protect the quail, it will not be long until his cheerful whistle will be heard no more, and in its place we will have the unwelcome buzz of destructive insects as they settle on the farmer's crop to devour it.



900 DROPS
CASTORIA
ALCOHOL—3 PER CENT
A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of
INFANTS & CHILDREN
Promotes Digestion, Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral
NOT NARCOTIC
Recipe of Old Dr SAMUEL PITCHER
Pumpkin Seed
Alx. Senna
Rochelle Salts
Anise Seed
Peppermint
Bi Carbonate Soda
Worm Seed
Clarified Sugar
Wintergreen Flavor
A perfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP.
Fac Simile Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK.
At 6 months old
35 DOSES—35 CENTS
Guaranteed under the Food and

Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of

Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over Thirty Years

CASTORIA

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

SPOHN'S DISTEMPER CURE

Shipping Fever

Influenza, pink eye, epizootic, distemper, and all nose and throat diseases cured, and all others, no matter how "exposed," kept from having any of these diseases with SPOHN'S LIQUID DISTEMPER CURE. Three to six doses often cure a case. One 50-cent bottle guaranteed to do so. Best thing for brood mares. Acts on the blood. 50c and $1 a bottle. $5 and $10 a dozen bottles. Druggists and harness shops. Distributors—ALL WHOLESALE DRUGGISTS.

SPOHN MEDICAL CO.,
Chemists and Bacteriologists, Goshen, Ind., U. S. A.

FOUND TIME FOR AMENITIES

How British and Boers Exchanged Compliments During the Long Siege of Kimberley.

During the Boer war Mr. Rhodes was shut up in Kimberley, and the Boers constantly shelled the town with long-range artillery. They were not very successful, for with 300 big shells they only killed 12 people.

Meantime, Mr. Rhodes accomplished the extraordinary feat of getting a cannon built at his works inside the town. It was a regular modern rifled gun, and fired shells—also homemade —on each of which was stamped, "With compliments of C. J. Rhodes."

The Boers themselves were not without a sense of humor. During Christmas, 1899, they were besieging Ladysmith, and on Christmas eve they fired ten plugged shells into the town each with a piece of plum pudding inside, and each bearing the words, "With the season's compliments."

Two of the shells were found by the garrison, and it was discovered that, like Mr. Rhodes', they were homemade, having been cast in a foundry at Johannesburg.

YOU NEVER TIRE OF CUTICURA.

The Soap to cleanse and purify, the Ointment to soothe and heal. These fragrant super-creamy emollients and prophylactics preserve, purify and beautify the skin. The daily use of the Soap for all toilet purposes and occasional use of the Ointment tend to prevent pimples, redness and roughness, dandruff and red, rough hands. Sample each free if you wish. Address postcard, Cuticura, Dept. X, Boston. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

The Tip.

"Study a child's character," said Henry Ford in Washington. "Note his proclivities. Then choose a trade or a profession for him accordingly.

"I sent a little boy out the other day with a quarter to make a small purchase for me. On his return he told me the article I desired was out of stock, and handed back my quarter—in the form of two dimes and a nickel.

YOUR OWN DRUGGIST WILL TELL YOU Try Murine Eye Remedy for Red, Weak, Watery Eyes and Granulated Eyelids; No Smarting—just Eye comfort. Write for Book of the Eye by mail Free. Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago.

Time isn't always money to the chap who does a credit business.

It takes a woman to point out the faults of other women.

No Need.

He—Do you believe in auto suggestion?

She—No real gentleman forces a lady to make one.

Sprains, Bruises Stiff Muscles

Sloan's Liniment will save hours of suffering. For bruise or sprain it gives instant relief. It arrests inflammation and thus prevents more serious troubles developing. No need to rub it in—it acts at once, instantly relieving the pain, however severe it may be.

Here's Proof

Charles Johnson, P. O. Box 105, Lawton's Station, N. Y., writes: "I sprained my ankle and dislocated my left hip by falling out of a third story window six months ago. I went on crutches for four months, then I started to use some of your Liniment, according to your directions, and I must say that it is helping me wonderfully. I threw my crutches away. Only used two bottles of your Liniment and now I am walking quite well with one cane. I never will be without Sloan's Liniment."

All Dealers, 25c.

Send four cents in stamps for a TRIAL BOTTLE

Dr. Earl S. Sloan, Inc.
Dept. B. Philadelphia, Pa.

SLOAN'S LINIMENT Kills Pain

BLACK LEG LOSSES SURELY PREVENTED by Cutter's Blackleg Pills. Low-priced, fresh, reliable; preferred by Western stockmen, because they protect where other vaccines fail. Write for booklet and testimonials.

10-dose pkge. Blackleg Pills $1.00
50-dose pkge. Blackleg Pills 4.00

Use any injector, but Cutter's best. The superiority of Cutter products is due to over 15 years of specializing in vaccines and serums only. Insist on Cutter's. If unobtainable, order direct. The Cutter Laboratory, Berkeley, Cal., or Chicago, Ill.

Men Fight On Their Stomachs Napoleon so said. A man with a weak stomach is pretty sure to be a poor fighter. It is difficult—almost impossible—for anyone, man or woman, if digestion is poor, to succeed in business or socially—or to enjoy life. In tablet or liquid form helps weak stomachs to strong, healthy action—helps them to digest the food that makes the good, rich, red blood which nourishes the entire body.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

This vegetable remedy, to a great extent, puts the liver into activity—oils the machinery of the human system so that those who spend their working hours at the desk, behind the counter, or in the home are rejuvenated into vigorous health.

Has brought relief to many thousands every year for over forty years. It can relieve you and doubtless restore to you your former health and strength. At least you owe it to yourself to give it a trial. Sold by Medicine Dealers or send 50c for trial box of Tablets—Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel & Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N.Y.

You can have Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser of 1008 Pages for 31c.

Revelations of the Kaiser's Personal Spy

By Dr. Armgaard Karl Graves

Who, for a Number of Years Prior to His Arrest and Betrayal in England in 1912, was Emperor William's Most Trusted Personal Spy.

(Copyright, 1914, by the Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.)

My Mission and Betrayal in England.

November 18, 1911, I received the usual summons to report at the Wilhelmstrasse. Instead of being brought before Count von Wedel, I was taken over to Koeniggratzerstrasse 70, to the German admiralty intelligence department. Here I met my old chief, Captain Tappken, head of the naval branch of the intelligence department. The captain briefly informed me that it had been deemed advisable to send me to England—unwelcome news, this, as you will see.

In the usual curt yet polite manner of German officers, the captain introduced me to three naval experts. One was a construction officer, another in the signaling department, the third an expert on explosives and mines. One at a time they took me in hand, grooming me in the intricacies of their respective fields. It was like a rehearsal in the grooming I had received years ago when taken into the service and trained for months. I sat for hours over diagrams with a naval officer on each side. They brought me before charts that were as big as the wall of the room. These charts gave the exact dimensions and type of every vessel in the British navy. Not only that, I was made to study the silhouette of all the new and different types of English warships—why, you will see.

Obviously this special training was significant. Part of my mission to England was to watch the preparations and maneuvers of British warships at the naval bases on the Scottish coast.

A Strained Situation.

The situation between England and Germany was ticklish. Politicians had worked up a war scare to such a pitch that the people of the two nations were ready to rush into conflict. Only a spark was needed to fire the situation. Hence my mission.

It was included in my instructions to watch the movements of British warships off the Scottish coast and promptly cable the German admiralty intelligence department concerning them.

Moreover, I had to brush myself up in topography and trigonometry. In England—so I learned from my instructions—it would be necessary to calculate distances, to take observations on the exact nature of the newly reconstructed Rossyth base near Edinburgh on the Firth of Forth; besides keeping in touch with things in Cromarty.

I was to watch especially the new Rossyth base and to report progress on armaments, new equipment, anything of use to the German admiralty. I was to keep tab on all the British fleet maneuvers then in progress on the Scottish coast.

When I left Berlin I was thoroughly equipped to carry out instructions. Every war vessel of the British navy, every fortification, naval base and depot of supplies was coded in secret service ciphers.

I arrived in Edinburgh and put up at the old Bedford hotel on Princess street, a quiet select Scottish hostelry. I registered under my quasi-correct name of A. K. Graves, M. D., Turo, Australia. My "stunt" was to convey the impression of being an Australian physician taking additional post-graduate courses at the famous Scottish seat of medical learning. After a few days' residence at the Bedford, I installed myself in private quarters at a Mrs. Macleod's, 23 Craiglea drive, Edinburgh.

For the first fortnight I quietly took my bearings, creating a suggestion that I was a semi-invalid. Having by this time familiarized myself with Edinburgh and surroundings, I made frequent trips to the Firth of Forth upon which was located the Rossyth base. Now, across the Firth there is a long bridge. It is between the Rossyth base and the North sea. Warships going to and from the naval station pass under it.

Gradually I worked myself into the confidence of one of the bridge keepers. I shall not give the man's name, for to do so would injure him, and quite unwittingly he gave me facilities for studying the naval base and furnished me with scraps of information that I wanted to know

The schooling I had received in the silhouettes presently came in handy. One night my friend, the bridge tender, learned that the fleet was getting up steam. Accordingly, I stood on the bridge that night and waited. At five o'clock in the morning a gray, rainy, foggy morning, through which the ships moved almost ghost-like, I made out 16 war vessels. From their silhouettes, I knew them to be dreadnaughts, cruisers, and torpedo boat destroyers. At once I filed a cable by way of Brussels, informing the intelligence department of the German navy that an English fleet 16 strong had put to sea. Subsequently, I learned that in describing the 16 ships I had made only one mistake.

After about three weeks I began to be suspicious of being followed. Arriving home one night I noticed that my dress suit was arranged in a different way to what I had left it. I called my landlady and casually inquired if my tailor had been there. She said, "No, Doctor."

"Well," I replied, "what reason have you then to rearrange my clothes?"

Her face reddened and she seemed flustered.

"I wasn't in your room," she faltered. "I remember now. I believe the tailor was here. One of the servants let him in."

I made it my business to go around to my tailor's within an hour's time and he contradicted her story. He had not been at the house.

I recognized it as an occasion where I had to make a right royal bluff. I went at once to police headquarters in Edinburgh. I asked for Chief Constable Ross, and sent in my card bearing Dr. A. K. Graves, Turo, S. Australia. Presently I was shown into the chief's room and was received by a typical Scottish gentleman. I opened fire in this way:

"Have you any reason to believe that I am a German spy?"

I saw that it had knocked him off his pins.

"Why, no," he said, startled. "I don't know anything at all about it."

"It's not by your orders, then, that I am followed?"

"Certainly not," he replied.

He bowed me out. Of course, I knew I still would be shadowed, which I did not mind in the least

A Wrongly Addressed Letter.

About a week after my experience with Constable Ross, I received information that William Beardmore & Co., of Glasgow, were constructing some new 14-inch guns for the British government. That meant a change of base.

I at once made it my business to go to Glasgow and get particulars. I installed myself in the Central station hotel, and in a few weeks gained all the information I wanted. While in Glasgow I received letters addressed to me as James Stafford. I received two such letters, and upon calling at the General Post Office for a third, I was informed that there was a letter for A. Stafford.

"Oh, yes, that is my letter," I said.

The clerk demurred and replied:

"You asked for James Stafford. Under those circumstances I cannot hand you this letter. It is against the postal law."

Not being in a position to raise a question, I let it go at that, never for a moment thinking that my employers would be so culpably careless as to put any incriminating evidence in the mail. Events proved that that is just what they did. Moreover, I later came to know why that particular letter was addressed not to James but to A. Stafford. All my previous letters were addressed to me as Dr. A. K. Graves and were enclosed in the business envelope of a well-known chemical firm of Snow Hill, London, E. C.—which paper had been fabricated for the purpose. Of course, the letters were sent from the continent to London and there reposted.

When I left Edinburgh to find out about the 14-inch guns, I gave our people in London instructions to use plain envelopes and to address them to James Stafford, G. P. O., Glasgow. The first two letters were addressed correctly and plain envelopes were used. The third was not only misaddressed, but was enclosed in one of the Chemical company's envelopes—this, as I later learned, for a reason.

No one having called for it, the letter was returned to the chemical company. At their office it was opened and found to contain a typewritten letter in German language and five ten-pound notes on the Bank of England. The contents of the letter was such as to lead the firm to call in the police.

"There's a Gentleman Down Stairs to See You."

On the evening of April 14, I had just put on my evening clothes and gone to the upstairs writing-room. I was awaiting a party of gentlemen who were coming to dine with me in the hotel. There came a "buttons" who announced:

"There's a gentleman downstairs to se you, Doctor."

A premonition stole over me. I knew that my guests would not have sent for me to come down but would have been announced. I realized that if I was going to be caught there was no avoiding it. Secret service makes a man a fatalist.

I had hardly reached the last step of the grand stairway when four big plain-clothes men pounced upon me. More for the fun of it than anything else, I guess, I got on my horse and demanded to know what was the matter.

"You'll soon know," Inspector French declared.

The Search—and Prison.

He then ordered his men to search me and seemed amazed when they couldn't find any six shooters, daggers or bombs. I was taken back to my room and there he began going through my effects and bundling them up.

I spent the night in the Glasgow city prison, and was taken the next day before a magistrate and formally committed to a sheriff's court. On July 12 my case came up before the sheriff's court. Waiving preliminary examination, I was committed for trial to the Edinburgh high court. It is significant, that the extreme length of a committal without trial under British law is 105 calendar days, which 105 days up to the last minute I certainly waited. They were trying to find out my antecedents, but they did not succeed.

A letter from the Lord Provost informed me that all material for my defense should be in his hands a day before the trial. I had no defense. I neither denied nor admitted anything. I replied to his Lordship that as I was unaware of any offense there was no need of any defense. My attitude was a profound puzzle—which was as I wanted.

Scotland's "Most Sensational Court Procedure."

If you care to look over the back files of the English and Scottish newspapers of the time, you will read that my trial was "the most sensational court procedure ever held in a Scottish court of justice."

Now I shall reveal every circumstance of it. For the first time I shall explain how, why and by whom I was secretly released. Until I revealed myself in the United States, even the German foreign office thought me in jail.

Against me the crown had summoned 45 witnesses. They included admirals, colonels, captains, military and naval experts, post office officials—I cannot recall all. The press from all parts of Europe—for all Europe was vitally concerned in this trial—was represented.

Presiding was the Lord Justice of Scotland, himself no mean expert in military matters. The Solicitor General of Scotland, A. M. Anderson, who prosecuted for the crown, was supported by G. Morton, Advocate Deputy. The government had indeed an imposing array of bewigged, black gowned, legal notables marshaled against me.

A Word to an Admiral.

On the first day I waived examination on all witnesses except the naval and military experts. I directed my fire against Rear Admiral T. B. Stratton Adair, who superintended the ordnance factories of the Beardmore Gun works in Glasgow.

The admiral was called in on testimony concerning the new 14-inch gun. The point they were trying to establish was that it was impossible for a man to have my knowledge of these guns unless he had obtained it first hand from the works in Glasgow. Of course, that brought the testimony into technicalities. I managed to involve the admiral in a heated altercation on the trajectory and penetrating power of the so-much disputed 14-inch gun.

I maintained that my knowledge of guns was such that I did not need to spy at Beardmore to obtain the things I knew.

The second day of the trial brought the Chemical company letter into the testimony—the letter that had been refused me and had in turn gone back to the Chemical company. Very gravely Sir A. M. Anderson, Crown Prosecutor, read the contents of this letter aloud. As I recall the exact wording it was:

"We are pleased to learn your successful negotiations of the business at hand. Be pleased to send us an early sample. As regards the other matter in hand I do not know how useful it will be to us. In any case my firm is not willing to pay you more than 100 in this case."

It was unsigned.

What the Letter Really Meant.

While reading, the prosecutor held the five ten-pound notes in his hand. Upon finishing he began a vigorous indictment which in substance he declaimed in this way:

"On the face of it, the letter does not seem suspicious. But if you gentlemen will recall the times of Prince Charles' insurrections, periods whenever intrigues were going on, you will remember that in communications of this sort a government was always referred to as a 'firm.' If this was an honest-business letter why was it enclosed in the envelope stationery of a company that knew nothing about it? Why was this letter unsigned? Why was cash inclosed with it? What was his firm willing to pay 100 pounds for? Gentlemen, the reasons for all these things are obvious."

But the letter puzzled not only the court, the jury, the newspapers, but all England. For the first time I shall now explain it:

It was from the German government. By the "business at hand" they meant a new explosive and slow-burning powder that was to be used in the new type of 14-inch turret guns being made in Glasgow. Some of that explosive was in my possession. The fact that it was not discovered in my effects, nor was anything else incriminating found on me, is because the secret agent who knows his business leaves nothing about; but he "plants" things, that is to say, leaves them in a safe deposit vault with the key in the hands of a person with power of attorney.

By the "sample" in the letter was meant a sample of the explosive. The "other business at hand" spoken of was of tremendous importance, more vital to the safeguards of Britain than the other points mentioned in the letter.

There were sub-agents working at Cromarty. I did not know who they were; they simply made their reports to me, signing their German secret service number. I took up their points with Berlin. Well, the "other business in hand" was to put certain British army officers under a monthly retaining fee of £100 for which in the event of war he was to commit an act of unspeakable treason and treachery on a certain harbor defense.

Caught!

I had judged my jurymen right, for they were very little impressed by this letter. It was all too vague and even the fluent language of a Crown Prosecutor does not impress a hard-headed Scotchman. I was feeling in high spirits indeed, when I saw one of the attendants approach Sir A. M. Anderson and deliver a document that had been handed into court. I at once recognized it and my heart dropped into my shoes. The Solicitor General read the document and smiled. I knew they had me.

In addressing the court the Solicitor General produced two pieces of thin paper—the same that had been brought in on the previous afternoon.

"I have got to show the court," he said impressively, "the most deadly code ever prepared against the safeguards of Great Britain."

And it certainly was. It contained the name of every vessel in the British navy, every naval base, fortification and strategic point, in Great Britain. There were over ten thousand names and opposite each was written a number. For example, the dreadnaught Queen Mary was number 813.

Using a magnifying glass I had written in tiny characters my code. There were so many names it was impossible to memorize them all. Two opposite sheets of the little memorandum book were used, then the edges of the pages were pasted together. Whenever I learned the British warships were going to put to sea, I slipped the book in my pocket, went to a position of vantage where I could make out the silhouettes of the warships, classified them in my mind, and then writing out a cable put down the code numbers, say in this way:

214, 69, 700, 910, 21—(Necessary words were filled in by the A. B. C. code.)

This message was sent by way of Brussels or Paris to the intelligence department of the German Admiralty in Berlin and told them what warships were putting to sea or arriving at Rossyth.

The Puzzle of the Sentence.

The accidental finding of the code of course settled all further argument. I called no witness for the defense except two or three personal acquaintances, to each of whom I put this question:

"What is your knowledge of my attitude as regards England?"

They all declared that even if I was a spy in the pay of any foreign government, I certainly had never shown any personal feeling or animosity toward Great Britain.

All of which I figured might aid the cause of clemency. The jury was not out more than half an hour. I was found guilty of endangering the safeguards of the British empire and under the new law that had been aimed against German spies I was liable to seven years' penal servitude. Even then my spirits were not down. I had what Americans call "a hunch."

Just before his Lordship, the Chief Justice, summed up, an aristocratic, gray-clad Englishman, who never had been in the court room before, appeared and was courteously, almost impressively, conducted to the bench. I noticed that the Chief Justice bowed to him with unction and they had about two minutes' whispered conversation. His Lordship was nodding repeatedly. This worried me. I felt I was going to get it good.

But, in substance, his Lordship's verdict was:

"Taking all the circumstances into consideration, the court pronounces a sentence of 18 months' imprisonment."

I smiled and said:

"Exit Armgaard Karl Graves."

A Caller.

I was taken first to Carlton Hill jail, Edinburgh, and transferred after two weeks to Barlinney prison near Glasgow. Considering the circumstances, I was treated with surprising consideration. The conditions that had characterized my trial prevailed in the prison. I soon perceived that the Barlinney prison officials were trying to sound me in a canny Scotch way—with no result.

"You're foolish to stay in here—You must have something worth while—Why don't you get out?"

That was the gist of their talks with me from the warders up. I kept my mouth shut.

Now I shall present information that was denied the house of commons upon the occasion of an inquiry into my case.

On the fifth week of my imprisonment I was taken to the office of the governor of the prison. As I entered I saw a slight, soldierly looking English gentleman of the cavalry type—(a cavalry officer has certain mannerisms that invariably give him away to one who knows). The governor spoke first.

"Graves, here is a gentleman who wishes to see you."

The stranger nodded to the governor and said:

"I may be quite a while. You have your instructions."

"That's all right, sir," replied the governor.

The governor left and we were alone. The stranger rose.

Of course, being a prisoner, I had remained standing.

Robinson began some casual conversation.

"How are they treating you?"

"I have no complaints to make."

"Is the confinement irksome to you?"

"Naturally."

Then suddenly he changed front. Point blank he asked me:

"Why Not Work for Us?"

"Now, old chap, we know that you worked for Germany against us. We also know that you are not a German. Is there any reason why you should not work for us? Any private reason?"

"Captain," I said, "you of all men ought to know that the betrayal of your employers for a monetary or a liberty reason alone is never entertained by a man who has been in my work. We go into it with our eyes open, well knowing the consequences if we are caught. We do not squeal if we are hurt."

For a time he looked at me very earnestly.

"H-m," he said. "That just bears out what we have been able to ascertain about you. It puzzled us how a man of your ability acted the way you did. From the moment you landed in England, all the time you were doing your work, even after your arrest, in prison and in court you showed a sort of listless, almost an indifferent attitude. If I may put it this way, you seemed in no ways keen to go to extremes in any possible missions you might have had." He paused. "We think you could have done more than you did . . . The mildness of your sentence, has it surprised you?"

I grinned.

"Nothing surprises me, Captain."

His manner became very earnest.

"Supposing," he said, "we show you that it was a quasi-deliberate intention on the part of your employers to have you caught—what then?"

This did not startle me either. I had had an idea of that all along.

"Under these circumstances," I said, "I am open to negotiations. But I am rather deaf and my vision is very much obscured as long as I see bars in front of my window."

The captain smiled.

"Well, Doctor, I may see you again soon."

The Proof I Asked for.

I was taken back to my cell. I am frank to admit that I didn't sleep much for the next two or three nights.

But as I expected, another week brought Captain Robinson again. This time it was late in the evening after all the prisoners were shut up tight. The lieutenant-governor himself took me into the governor's office. No other warder or prison official observed us.

"Well, Doctor," was the way Robinson greeted me, "I have something definite to propose to you. You can be of use to us. You have still sixteen months of your sentence to serve. Are you willing to give these sixteen months of your time to us—terms to be agreed upon later? I am prepared to supply you with proofs that you were deliberately put away, betrayed by your employers, the German government."

He did so to my complete satisfaction. As I guessed, I had come to learn so much of Germany's affairs that I was dangerous. To betray me in such a way that I would not suspect and squeal was a clever way to close my mouth for seven years in jail or until vital plans had matured.

"How would you suggest that we go about it?" he asked.

"To be of the slightest degree of use to you, nobody must know of my release," I added. "Here is my suggestion. I must leave the execution of it to you. The impression I conveyed around Edinburgh was that my health is rather indifferent. So it is also believed here in prison. On these grounds it should be an easy matter for you to have me ostensibly transferred to another prison; instead of which, have me taken wherever you wish to. I see no necessity that, outside the lieutenant-governor, the governor and yourself, any one need know of it."

"Yes, yes," said Robinson. "That coincides with my own ideas and plans." Presently he departed and I went back again to my cell.

Alone and Free.

At half-past five the next morning, I was aroused by the lieutenant-governor. He was alone. There were no warders in sight. In the governor's office I found all my clothes and effects ready and laid out for me. These I addressed and left with the lieutenant-governor. We took a taxicab for the Caledonian station in Glasgow.

The trip to London was uneventful. At Euston station we were met by Captain Robinson. We went into a private waiting-room where Captain Robinson signed a paper for the lieutenant-governor. It was what amounted to a receipt for the prison's delivery of me into his hands. Then the lieutenant-governor left us; then Robinson left, after handing over an envelope containing cash and instructions.

My first move was to register at the Russel Square hotel. Opening the envelope in my rooms, I found it contained ten pounds and the following instructions:

"Telephone at 10:30 tomorrow morning, this number Mayfair—"

I telephoned the Mayfair number and was told to hold the wire. Then Captain Robinson got on the 'phone and told me to meet him at luncheon at one o'clock at the Imperial hotel on Trafalgar Square. There another gentleman joined us—a Mr. Morgan, whom I easily judged and afterwards knew to be of the English secret service. Presently Morgan told me that I was to drive with Captain Robinson to Downing street that afternoon.

"One of our ministers wishes to see you," he explained.

We drove to Downing street, Captain Robinson and I, and stopped before the historic governmental building. After we had signed the book that all visitors to "Downing street" must sign, I was shown into an anteroom and Robinson took his leave. My name appears on this book as Trenton Snell, and if the English government challenges a statement that I shall subsequently make, let them produce the "Downing street" book for the date I shall mention, let them have a handwriting expert compare the name "Trenton Snell" with my handwriting.

I make this statement, for what followed is of tremendous importance.

Sir Edward Grey.

After a twenty-minute wait, which impressed me as being different from the slam-in-and-slam-out methods of the Wilhelmstrasse, I was shown up a flight of stairs. The attendant knocked on the door, opened it and announced, "the gentleman."

I was facing Sir Edward Grey.

"I presume you are familiar with Germany's naval activity."

"Up to a certain point, sir."

"What point?" he asked quickly.

"I am familiar only with the intelligence department of the admiralty," I replied.

"Their system?" he asked. "Is it so extensive and efficient as we have been led to believe?"

"That canont be exaggerated."

A Startled Foreign Minister.

At this Sir Edward began to throw out innuendoes to which I replied in like vein. The interview was not progressing. Finally he came out with what was in his mind.

"Do you know if any officials or naval officers are selling or negotiating to sell information to foreign intelligence departments?"

Although he had not said English officers or officials, I knew what he meant, but I made up my mind not to tell everything I knew.

"There are such," I replied.

It had the effect of making him look at me in a most startled manner.

"How do you know that? On what grounds do you make that assertion?" His agitation was ill-concealed.

"I have no specific proof," I replied—(which I had)—"but from information that has been gained from plans that have been secured—plans like those of your dreadnaughts Queen Mary and Ajax—it is obvious that these things have been done with the co-operation of high officials of your country."

He pressed me for further details, but I withheld them.

"Were you ever present at conferences attended by high officials? Were you, for instance, at the Schlangenbad meeting? Have you any data? Any documentary evidence of having been there?"

I was not a bit startled. I had guessed it would be that. His very question showed that it was useless for me to deny that I had been at the Black Forest conference where Germany had tried her best to isolate France by winning over England. Possibly Churchill, recalling my meeting him during the Boer war, had dropped a word about this coincidence to his Lordship.

Naturally I told him I possessed no such data. Still, I did not like the trend of his talk. I began to suspect that this British minister was doing one of two things. Either he did not know everything about the Black Forest meeting—(not at all improbable with the conditions existing in England's cabinet at that time)—or else he wanted to learn if I knew the tenor of that conference. In either case, it was one of those occasions where I deemed it wise to keep my own counsel.

After many searching questions upon the French system and her army and navy, he began to try to lead me to make comparisons between their strength and England's, these being based upon my personal observations. This, and the whole trend of his thought, led me to suspect that Sir Edward Grey was in noways sure in his own mind of, or favorable to, the proposed German-English alliance. With men like his Lordship personal antipathy plays a powerful part in such matters.

Unsatisfactory Fishing.

He then began to try to make me divulge the contents of any personal dispatches I had carried for the German emperor.

"Do you know," he asked abruptly, "if the German emperor ever communicated with Viscount Haldane?"

"Yes, sir."

He leaned forward eagerly.

"How, and under what circumstances?"

"Why, I thought it common knowledge that they often corresponded. They are good friends."

"Not that. I mean direct secret communications between them, concerning affairs of the state."

I denied any knowledge of this, although I knew it to be so.

He began fishing around again, and his hints found me very stupid.

My unsatisfactory answers seemed to displease Sir Edward Grey, for with true British discourtesy he abruptly began working at something on his desk and without even saying good day, let a commissaire bow me out.

A few days later I received definite instructions from Captain Robinson. I was to go on my first mission in the interests of the British secret service and subsequently another mission brought me to New York, where I resigned from service permanently.

THE SUNBEAM.

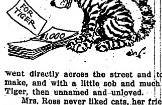
MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

VOL. XIV. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, DECEMBER 4, 1914. NO. 38.

Tales of GOTHAM and other CITIES

Tiger Can Afford Kidneys and Cream Every Day

PASADENA, CAL.—A cat inherited $1,000 the other day and is to have kidneys and cream three times a day for the rest of his life. He can have his favorite delicacy oftener if he desires, but his late mistress, Mrs. Nellie L. S. Ross, thought three full meals a day would be enough, especially as the cat is getting old. His name is Tiger.



GUESS I'LL BE ABLE TO EAT
FOR TIGER
$1,000

It was twelve years ago that Tiger rubbed his eyes open in an ash barrel in the rear of the home where little Mary Peters lived, across the street from Mrs. Ross. Mary went out and looked at the barrel one morning and reported to her mother that the stork had certainly been kind to Tiger's mamma. There were six or ten kittens to the stork's credit. She went directly across the street and told Mrs. Ross that she had a gift to make, and with a little sob and much clutching at her skirt, she presented Tiger, then unnamed and unloved.

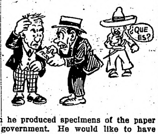
Mrs. Ross never liked cats, her friends say. But Mrs. Ross' mother, Mrs. Mary Scripture, and her aunt, Mrs. Emma Gowey, were living with her, and the two elderly women took a fancy to the undesired infant. The two old women petted and cared for him, and things were luxurious in the Ross household, for Mrs. Ross had sold her home in Chicago long ago to Potter Palmer, and the site where it once stood is now the ladies' entrance of the Palmer house.

Mrs. Scripture died nine years ago, and five years later Mrs. Gowey died, leaving Mrs. Ross alone. And as Tiger had been dear to both of the dead, Mrs. Ross cared for him, liked him, then grew so attached to the prospering Tiger that she was more loyal even than her relatives.

Recently Mrs. Ross died suddenly. When her will was read the Union National and Savings bank of Pasadena learned that it is executor, and that by the provisions of the will the first $1,000 of the estate was set aside for the care of Tiger, and Mrs. Louise M. Adams, 1492 Walnut street, Berkeley, is to be the caretaker.

Turned Down Chance to Make a Million and a Half

KANSAS CITY, MO.—A bank note company of this city recently turned down a chance to make a million and a half pesos, which in American money is half a million dollars. Lest doubts arise as to the sanity of the company's officials, it should be understood that by "made" is meant manufactured.



The representative of the inventors of this "money-making" scheme came from Mexico and he wanted revenge. Also, he wanted a lot of made-to-order money. He represented a number of American investors in the state of Chihuahua, he told the bank note people. The property of these Americans had been confiscated by Villa. But they had a scheme to get part of their money back. Whereupon he produced specimens of the paper money issued by Villa's provisional government. He would like to have some printed just like it. To show that he meant business, he would put up the cash for printing 1,500,000 pesos in denominations of five, ten and twenty pesos.

As soon as the money was ready he would take it back to Mexico. There his friends would buy live stock, bullion or anything else that was portable with it, take their purchases across the border and convert them into sure enough money. It would be a good joke on Villa, an excellent joke. The bank note company consulted the government and was informed the proposition was not illegal, but turned it down to avoid any possible complications.

Cleveland Boy Makes Fierce Looking War Kites

CLEVELAND, O.—In a little attick workshop out on Clifton boulevard a twelve-year-old boy spends his spare hours these days turning out big, ferocious-looking "war" kites, which he sells to his playmates. The boy is Stuart Jenney, a seventh grade pupil.

ARE YOU SURE THAT KITE IS A GOOD FIGHTER ?

Stuart caught the war spirit almost from the day he read that the European powers had declared hostilities. For several years he has been the most skillful kitemaker of his district and had sold many kites to his playmates, but he has abandoned the conventional types for the fighting kind.

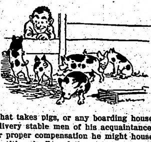
Stuart's "fliers" soar skyward in flocks after school hours, pirates of the air, their long tails armed with jagged bits of glass designed to cut the cords of rival kites that are not maneuvered cleverly enough to dodge their foes.

For over-particular strategists Stuart designs and makes special warriors, collecting, of course, special prices for these models. He carefully selects the wood, linen and paper that go into their construction, and will not let a kite leave the "factory" until he has personally tested it.

Kite battles mean more orders, for once a cord is severed while the kite is sailing high that particular pirate reaches the earth a mass of broken sticks and torn paper totally beyond repair.

Wanted His Pigs Boarded in a New York Hotel

NEW YORK.—A taxicab drove up to the Wolcott the other day and a man jumped out. From the vehicle came a succession of short squeaks, which caused George Dunn, the head porter, to hurry out and regard the occupants with amazement. They were six small pigs.



The man who had accompanied them was Ramon Arias, one of the leading bankers of Panama, who has been spending several months in the United States.

"I want you to take care of them for me," said Senor Arias.

"But we draw the line at pigs," protested Dunn.

"Then take them somewhere else, only have them well taken care of."

Dunn did not know of any hotel that takes pigs, or any boarding house for porkers, so he decided to try the livery stable men of his acquaintance. Finally he found one who said that for proper compensation he might house the unusual visitors, so a stall was partitioned off, and there the pigs have been boarding. They are to be shipped to Panama.

Senor Arias bought them in West Washington market, and they will go to his big farm near the city of Panama, where he hopes to astonish his fellow citizens with the results he will achieve. These pigs will have cost some money by the time they reach Panama, for the board has been about two dollars a day at the livery stable, and the hotel carpenter has constructed an artistic crate for their journey to Panama.

BERTHA KRUPP, GUNMAKER

It is a strange thing that in the great European war one side personifies its destroying force as a charming young woman and the other as a venerable old gentleman.

It is "Bertha Krupp" who fights for the Germans and "Papa Creusot" who fights for the French. The German soldiers often say "Bertha is talking again" when they hear the shriek of the terrible Krupp guns and the French soldiers say "Papa Creusot is giving the Germans a lesson."

Of course, everybody knows that Bertha Krupp is the principal heiress of the great Krupp gun works at Essen, probably the greatest establishment of its kind in the world. The name "Papa Creusot" is really taken from the place—Le Creusot—where the French guns are made.

The Baroness Bertha Krupp von Bohlen, or, as she will always be known, Bertha Krupp, is unassuming, charitable and beloved by all those who have the fortune to know her. Bertha is one of two sisters, the only children of the late Alfred Krupp, the gunmaker of Essen. Because of the fact that the kaiser, recognizing the gunmaker was an important factor in the empire, acted as godfather to Bertha, she has received more attention and is better known than her sister. The young matron is noted for the charities

MAN OF THE HOUR IN TURKEY

Underwood & Underwood

Enver Pasha, minister of war, leader of the Young Turk party and son-in-law of the sultan, stands forth just now as the most prominent figure in the Ottoman empire. He is one of the four actual directors of the destinies of Turkey, and the most forceful of the three. He is said to be consumed by ambition and to believe himself to be a man of destiny. He affects the genius of Napoleon, and dreams in secret of converting the actual Ottoman directory into a consulate. In the role of first consul he would then change the consulate into an empire, following the example of Bonaparte.

Enver, who was born in Roumelia only thirty-five years ago, is the hero of the Tripolitan war. Also he was the assassin of Nazim Pasha, the generalissimo of the Turkish army. Nazim belonged to the Old Turk party. Honest, patriotic and brave, he represented the very best in the Turk. His atrocious assassination doubtless was designed to open the way of empire to the members of the directory. They have spilled the blood of their adversaries ruthlessly and many shocking murders are laid at their doors. The people hate them bitterly and the sultan fears them intensely, so the news that they have been slain would cause no surprise at any time. The friends and relatives of Nazim are many.

WHEN KEY PITTMAN WAS IN NOME

In the early and rough days of Nome, Alaska, Key Pittman, who now is the junior senator from Nevada, served a term as prosecuting attorney. Naturally he acquired a large acquaintance among the lawless element and its members, in turn, gained a high respect for the legal abilities of the man who sent so many of them to jail. The quite natural result was that after his term as prosecuting attorney closed he found himself in command of a large criminal practice. Among his clients were a number of the leaders of the rough and morally irresponsible crowd who turned to him to extricate them from the troubles in which they frequently found themselves. Too often, however, they failed to pay the lawyer for his services, and finally Mr. Pittman grew tired of working for them for nothing.

In those days in Nome coal was sold largely by the sack and was very valuable. Shortly after the arrest of a notoriously shady character for the theft of 180 of these precious sacks, one of the accused man's pals came to Pittman to retain his services.

"Look here, Jack," replied Pittman. "I'm tired of working for you crooks for nothing. I'm neither a millionaire nor a philanthropist. You get some one else to defend Chick."

"We'll pay you for this," replied Jack. "We've got the stuff to do it."

"Is Chick innocent?" queried Pittman.

"Sure, he's as innocent as a babe," came the encouraging reply.

"Well, how much do I get for defending him?"

"Mr. Pittman, if you get Chick off we'll give you half the coal."

PLANS EXPLORING EXPEDITION

Capt. J. Foster Stackhouse, F. R. G. S., F. R. Z. S., F. R. S. G. S., etc., is now organizing an expedition that stirs the blood of every real adventurer. For six years he and his companions will forget civilization and its luxuries and sail away into virtually unknown parts of the world. Their reward will be a trip to all the seven seas, visits to islands and territories still untrod by the feet of white men, discovery and adventure in every latitude from the equatorial Pacific to the Sea of Okhotsk and then back again to the Antarctic—and glory. They will have a chance to study the oceans as they were never observed before, and they will be participants in the principal object of the voyage, the discovery and mapping of 2,500 unknown islands, rocks and reefs in the Pacific, reported from time to time by skippers and never officially charted.

The expedition is known as the British-American Oceanographic expedition, and it will make its voyage in the Discovery, the ship in which Captain Scott made his last and fatal trip to the Antarctic regions. The vessel is now fitting in London. Next May it will sail from New York.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

Washington Society Looking Around for a Leader

WASHINGTON.—Wanted—For the coming winter season, a society leader. Must be of best American stock, with wealth and attainments. Apply to Washington society, immediately, ready for work.

WANTED SOCIAL LEADER

That is the "help wanted" ad thrown out by Washington society, which finds itself without a leader for the approaching season. "Such a terrible state of affairs!" say the society people of the nation's capital. "Who will lead us during the coming season?"

It seems like a paradox. With a wonderful wealth of material from which to select, this city must be deprived of some woman to lead it in its social whirl. This comes from many reasons. First, the society women of Washington are on such good terms they do not care to generate a spirit of rivalry for the position. Second, most of them have homes elsewhere and are content to let women who are permanent residents of Washington have the honor.

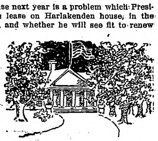
Then, again, there are so many different sets to be led in the Capital City that the social leader who would undertake the entire job would necessarily have to work overtime.

For the first time since President Harrison's administration the national capital is without a first lady of the land. The death of Mrs. Wilson has cast gloom over the social situation. Usually the mistress of the White House plays an important role in bringing the various "sets" together.

While New York has its four hundred, Washington has these: The diplomatic set, the congressional circle, southern society, the army and navy contingent, the native inhabitants, and others too numerous to mention.

President May Select a New Summer White House

WHAT to do for a summer White House next year is a problem which President Wilson must soon face. His lease on Harlakenden house, in the Cornish, N. H., pines expires this year, and whether he will see fit to renew it is a secret which he alone shares.



His closest friends believe he will select some other place. Moreover, in various sections of the country there are movements afoot to erect or select a permanent summer White House.

As far as President Wilson is concerned the problem of getting such a place causes him little concern. But next year, with only a short session of congress in sight, he may have more opportunity than heretofore for vacationing. This season he has been able to take only a piecemeal vacation. On these occasions he has elected to go to Harlakenden house, where his family has sojourned for several months. And the trips have done him good, brief though they were.

But it is possible that he will prefer a change of scene for his next year's vacationing. If he does, he will have plenty of room for selection. The latest proposal for a summer White House is "Monticello," Thomas Jefferson's old home in Virginia. Representative Levy's willingness to sell this place to the government for a half million dollars has suggested the idea that it would make an excellent place for presidents to sojourn in their off moments.

Uncle Sam Now Conducts a Great Reading Circle

THE first literary society organized under Uncle Sam's auspices is ready to start work. Dr. P. P. Claxton, commissioner of the United States bureau of education, has sent letters to all high school principals and officials of the smaller colleges throughout the United States telling them of a plan to interest all young men and women who want to know the best there is in the literature of the world and who wish to gain the inspiration given by reading the best books.

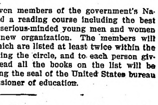
NATIONAL READING CIRCLE UNDER THE AUSPICES OF UNCLE SAM

Uncle Sam's new literary society will be known as the National Reading Circle, and for admission to this circle Doctor Claxton says that it is only necessary to write to the home education division of the United States bureau of education, Washington, D. C., and ask to be furnished information about the reading courses which have been planned under the direction of a group of the best known educators of the United States. Persons desiring to benefit by joining the reading circle are merely asked to give their names, post office addresses, ages and a very brief statement of their education and occupation.

When this brief information is given members of the government's National Reading Circle will be furnished a reading course including the best works in the world's literature. Only serious-minded young men and women are invited to join the government's new organization. The members will undertake to read each of the books which are listed at least twice within the next three years from the time of joining the circle, and to each person giving satisfactory evidence of having read all the books on the list will be awarded a government certificate bearing the seal of the United States bureau of education and signed by the commissioner of education.

Historic Warship Constellation Attracts Thousands

THOUSANDS of residents of the national capital and visitors go every day to inspect the historic old naval frigate Constellation, now on exhibition at the navy yard, and are intensely interested in the old-time manner of life aboard her, in her guns, made in facsimile of those used a century ago, and in her towering masts and yards, like those that years ago spread many hundred yards of white canvas to the ocean breezes as she sailed from port to port all over the world, proudly showing the flag of the young American republic.



Standing on her quarterdeck, the visitor could mentally picture the day in 1799, when the ship, one of the fleetest vessels of the navy, was in the West Indies, and her crew of several hundred officers and men were moving about the ship performing their daily duties.

From aloft comes the cry, "Sail, ho," and the course of the ship is changed to meet the stranger, which proves to be L'Insurgent, a Frenchman, and at that time an enemy.

The call to quarters is sounded and the guns of the ship are loaded and fired as the gunners on American warships have always known how to do. For an hour and forty minutes the fight is kept up. Then down comes the flag of the French ship and she is a prize to the Constellation, which lost but two killed and three wounded in the fight, while the L'Insurgent had 29 killed and 41 wounded.

Russians Still Hold Advantage in Poland

BATTLE IN EAST EXPECTED TO BE VERY DECISIVE

EMPEROR WILLIAM JOINS GENERAL VON HINDENBURG TO OFFER ADVICE AND TO ENCOURAGE TROOPS.

RUSSIANS CLAIM GREAT VICTORY BEFORE CRACOW

Success Against Turks in Caucasus Is Also Claimed—In Western Arena Germans Seem Content to Bombard Allies' Positions —Teutons Cautious.

London, Dec. 1.—While deprecating the exaggerated reports of Russian successes in the battle in Northern Poland, where the German Emperor has joined Field Marshal von Hindenburg to offer his advice and to encourage his troops, the latest available reports from Russian headquarters state that the advantage in the fighting still lies with the Russian army.

Losses Are Enormous.

It is also said enormous losses have been inflicted on the Germans, but no mention is made of the way certain German divisions have been separated from the main army as claimed by the Petrograd correspondents of London and Paris papers. To offset this is the German official report which says the Russian attacks have been repulsed and the German counter attacks have been successful.

Trying to Break Through.

Some days must elapse before this battle, which promises to prove the most decisive of the war, is concluded. All that is definitely known is that the German advance has been brought to a standstill. Some of the German troops have been partly or wholly surrounded, but they are still fighting stubbornly to break their way through the Russian lines, apparently to the northward, where they hope to join re-enforcements sent from Thorn.

Russians Take 30,000 Prisoners.

In the battle before Cracow the Russians claim decisive success. During the last week they took 30,000 Austrian and German prisoners in this region. This victory is taken in Petrograd to mean Cracow will not bar the Russian advance in Silesia from the south, but that with the Austrian army beaten, it will be necessary only to mask the fortress.

Announce Success in Austria.

The Russians likewise announce success on the Austrian side of the Carpathians and against the Turks in the Caucasus, although in both regions the worst of weather has prevailed.

In the western arena the Germans, although making an occasional infantry attack, seem at present content to bombard the Allied positions, but with somewhat lighter guns than they have been using. This may mean either that they are sending troops and artillery to the east to use against the Russians, or that they are preparing a new attack against the Allies.

That the enterprise that failed in Flanders will not be repeated for the present seems probable, as the Allies have been allowed to capture some points of vantage around Ypres, which were previously considered necessary to the German plans. There has been a minor attack near Arras, but not in strong enough force to suggest the Germans have decided to try to get to the coast by direct route from the east.

Try to Outflank Germans.

An interesting report from Field Marshal Sir John French, covering the period of the battle in Flanders and the days immediately preceding it, shows this battle was brought about first by the Allies' attempts to outflank the Germans, who countered; and then by their plans to move to the northeast to Ghent and Bruges, which also failed. After this, the German offensive began with the French coast ports as the objective, but this movement, like those of the Allies, met with failure.

Field Marshal French, doubtless in response to the demands of the British public, tells what the various units of the expeditionary force have been doing—those that failed and were cut off, and those who, against superior numbers, held the trenches for a month. He gives it as his opinion that the German losses have been thrice as great as those of the Allies, and speaks optimistically of the future.

More Boats Destroyed.

London, Nov. 30.—Two small British steamers, the Malachite and Primo, sunk off Havre, France, by German submarines; the British collier Khartoum, blown up by a mine off Grimsby, and the destruction of an Italian fishing boat by a floating Austrian mine near Bari, Italy, constitute the very latest disasters at sea.

Tribute to Belgians.

London, Nov. 28.—"The Russians have defeated the Germans with the heaviest losses yet suffered; the Germans have made no advance since I last addressed the house," and "The British are in touch with Turkish forces thirty miles east of the Suez canal," were salient points of a speech made by Field Marshal Earl Kitchener in the House of Lords, summarizing the military operations.

Earl Kitchener paid a tribute to the gallantry of the Belgian army and to the King of the Belgians who, he declared, had no intention of quitting Belgian territory. He said the losses of the allies were great, but at the same time were slight compared with those of the enemy, and the allied troops were in excellent spirits and confident of success.

Regarding recruiting, Earl Kitchener said he still had room for men and he was confident that the men would answer the country's call and see that the war was brought to a successful conclusion. He said that about 30,000 recruits were enlisting weekly.

"The time will come when we shall require many more and I will then make it thoroughly well known," the field marshal said, and added that in the meantime all the gaps in the British forces on the Continent had been filled.

Allied Fleet Leaves Zeebrugge.

London, Nov. 27.—The destruction of Germany's rudimentary naval base at Zeebrugge by shell fire from British and French warships, together with Germany's grim preparation for her renewed attempts to cross a way through the allied line to the French coast, were the most significant features in the news coming to hand from the western arena of the war.

To Send 10,000 Men to Front.

London, Nov. 26.—Portugal has taken the final plunge into the European war. The Portuguese Congress has decided that the country should co-operate with the allies when it considers the stenp necessary. The minister of war will issue a decree for partial mobilization.

A dispatch has been received from Lisbon to that effect. It did not state when the Portuguese troops would be available for field duty at the front, but it was believed in official circles here that it would be but a short time when 10,000 men would be sent forward to the allies' battle line in France and Belgium.

PICK UP WIRELESS REPORTS

London, Nov. 30.—The spread of official news by wireless broadcast over the globe for whoever can pick it up is a new method of political propaganda which has been introduced through the present European war. When the German-owned Atlantic cables were cut and Germany's intercourse with the outer world and some of her colonies was stopped, the German high power wireless began sending news forth which was destined primarily for the United States and for German colonies. It was picked up, however, by various wireless stations operated by different systems in countries everywhere within its radius, which is a wide one, extending from Germany to the American shores of the Atlantic.

In England the daily German bulletins have been intercepted by the Marconi stations and distributed to the British press after passing through the hands of the press censor. Both the British and French governments concluded it would be good policy to combat this wireless news campaign by spreading reports of their own through the same agency. Accordingly the French are now sending military and political bulletins on the progress of events from the French point of view from their station on the Eiffel tower. The Marconi company is disseminating British bulletins composed by the foreign office.

This news rivalry has become a sort of joint political disturbance. Berlin fires a volley on the Turkey question. London replies with a Turkish bulletin from the British point of view.

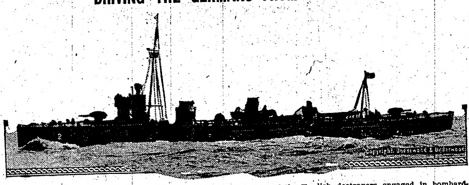
The informal use of wireless is not limited to press agents' work. The Marconi stations have been able to catch large numbers of messages exchanged between German vessels in the North Sea, in the Baltic, and even farther afield. All of these are promptly communicated to the British admiralty. They are in code, but there is ground to suspect that most of the navies of the world have the codes of their rivals.

Moreover, there are experts at deciphering codes, who claim to be able to match their brains at decoding against any.

Claim German Line Weakening.

London, Nov. 30.—The Daily Mail's Rotterdam correspondent reports the Allies are taking the offensive south of Ypres, having discovered the German line is weakening.

DRIVING THE GERMANS FROM THE COAST



This photograph, taken from a passing steamer, shows one of the English destroyers engaged in bombarding the Germans in the Belgian ports which they occupied until driven back from the sea by the British shells.

LATE WAR DEVELOPMENTS

The great battle now raging in Poland is likely to develop into the most decisive struggle of the war it is declared. Some days will be necessary, however, before the decision is reached.

The Russians claim a complete victory in the fighting before Cracow, against Austro-German forces.

The Allies are taking the offensive south of Ypres, having discovered, it is reported from London, that the German line is weakening.

Mystery surrounds the movements and destination of two British colliers held up at Colon for lack of health certificates.

Germany has paid the Duchy of presumably to recompense the country for Germany's invasion on Aug. 2.

Sir John French, commander of the British forces in France, speaks in an optimistic vein regarding the position of the Allies. In his official report he sees the end of the battle from Ypres to Armentieres.

The proposal of several South American countries that the United States join in a move for the withdrawal of belligerent warships from their waters is meeting with the support of neutral countries.

Two small British steamers are reported by Lloyds to have been sunk by German torpedoes in a daring submarine raid off the coast of Havre, France, 150 miles from the Germans' nearest base.

The British admiralty announces that the British collier Khartoum has been destroyed off Grimsby, 15 miles from Hull, by a mine.

An Italian fishing boat has been blown up and four men killed by a floating Austrian mine off Bari. Italy protested to Austria and received the assurance that such accidents would be guarded against in future.

Both Germany and Russia are now claiming success in the Poland operation, where unofficial reports declare that the Teutons have suffered a great defeat. The Western war zone experienced comparative calmness.

News of a Russian victory over The Germans' Baltic fleet is sent by a London correspondent at Petrograd. He says one German cruiser was sunk and another damaged when Russian cruisers disguised themselves as German boats, joined the German fleet in a fog, then opened fire on the unsuspecting Teutons.

The American steamship St. Helens was fired upon in the Pacific by a British warship apparently because of the vessels' failure to reave to promptly when signalled.

The American commissioner who was sent on a tour of investigation through Bigium reports that thousands of Belgians who were not reckoned on in original estimate, and who are returning from Holland to face starvation, must be cared for this winter.

Prominent Bohemians living in America have started a movement to free Bohemia from the dual monarchy.

The British battleship Bulwark was blown up at Sheerness, 30 miles from London, by an internal explosion causing the loss of over 700 lives. The vessel sank almost instantly, giving those aboard not even a fighting chance for their lives. Only twelve were saved. Ammunition was being taken aboard at the time of the disaster. An investigation has been ordered.

The British fleet attacks Zeebrugge, setting fire to several buildings in the Belgian city. One shell strikes hotel occupied by the German staff.

CALLS SWEDEN TO ACCOUNT

GERMANY DEMANDS UNFRIENDLY UTTERANCES MUST CEASE.

Scandinavians Aroused by Teutons' Threat to Make Wood Contraband—Loss of $15,000,000.

London, Nov. 30.—The Daily Mail's Copenhagen correspondent says Germany has demanded that the Swedish Government suppress unfriendly utterances against Germany in Swedish newspapers and has threatened reprisals in the event of non-compliance.

Germany's declaration making wood contraband of war has caused a tremendous revulsion of feeling in Sweden and Norway against Germany and agitation for an understanding with Russia. Sweden's loss by reason of this declaration, as estimated by the correspondent, will amount to $15,000,000 a year.

"The temper of the Swedes," says the correspondent, "is such that they are discussing whether or not it would be advisable to send cargoes of wood to the United Kingdom through the Kattegat and Skager-Rak under escort of Swedish warships and defy the Germans to attack them. It is contended Sweden, Norway and Russia could form a profitable commercial agreement which would be greatly to the advantage of themselves and the Allies and to the disadvantage of the Germans."

GERMAN WARSHIPS DESTROYED; RUMOR NOT CONFIRMED

KAISER WILHELM DER GROSSE AND CRUISER HERTHA DECLARED SUNK IN BALTIC SEA.

TEUTONS DESTROY 4 MORE SHIPS; ONE ITALIAN CRAFT

Two Small British Vessels Sunk Off Havre and Collier Destroyed By Submarines—Fishing Boat Hits Mine and Goes Down.

London, Nov. 30.—Reports from Petrograd that the German battleship Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse and the cruiser Hertha have been sunk in the Baltic sea near Libau by Russian torpedoes have not yet been confirmed or denied. Dispatches from Berlin make no mention of either ship.

News Received in Paris.

The message reporting destruction of the vessels was received by the Paris Matin from its Petrograd correspondent. It is supposed that they were in the squadron which has twice bombarded Libau, inflicting severe damage.

Description of Vessels.

The Hertha is a protected cruiser with a displacement of 5,569 tons. It was used as a training ship, having been reconstructed in 1907. The Hertha carries two eight-inch guns, six five-inch, eight three-inch, 10 one-pounders and four machine guns. It has three torpedo tubes.

The battleship Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse also is an old vessel. It was built in 1901 and reconstructed in 1907. The armament of the Kaiser Wilhelm consisted of four nine-inch guns and four five-inch.

Germans Destroy Four Craft.

London, Nov. 30.—Two small British steamers, the Malachite and Primo, sunk off Havre, France, by German submarines; the British collier Khartoum, blown up by a mine off Grimsby, and the destruction of an Italian fishing boat by a floating Austrian mine near Bari, Italy, constitute the very latest disasters at sea.

Loss of Life Small.

In all four accidents, however, the loss of life total four men, these being killed when the Italian boat blew up. The crews of the three Britsh vessels were all safely landed without serious mishap; that of the Malachite at Southampton, the Primo's at Fecamp, in France, and the Khartoum's at Grimsby.

Another Daring Raid.

The destruction of the two British steamers off Havre, which is announced by Lloyds, indicates Germany's submarines have performed another raid of remarkable daring. It is their first appearance in these waters and apparently they made their way through the Straits of Dover to a point more than 150 miles from their nearest base.

Description of Craft.

The Malachite was a small steamer of 718 tons gross. She was built in Glosgow in 1902.

The Primo was built in Stockholm in 1898 and her gross tonnage was 1,366. She was owned by a Newcastle, Eng., firm.

The announcement of the destruction of the collier Khartoum was made by the admiralty. Grimsby, near where the mine was encountered, is on the south bank of the Humber, 15 miles southeast of Hull.

French President Visits Army.

Verdun, (via Paris,) Nov. 30.—President Poincare with Premier Viviani and the speakers of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies, made a visit to the troops along the firing line in the Argonne. Later the party inspected the military works near Verdun and the ruins of Clermont, where only the hospital of Sainte Marie remains standing. Among the seriously wounded in this hospital is Deputy Andre Maginot.

PLAN TO EXCLUDE BATTLESHIPS FROM AMERICAN WATERS

SOUTH AMERICAN COUNTRIES START MOVEMENT TO BAR BELLIGERENT NATIONS.

SEEK CO-OPERATION OF U. S.; POWERS ARE BEING SOUNDED

Safeguarding of Pan-American Trade Is Aim and Diplomatic Conferences Have Already Commenced—Great Britain Is Reported Agreeable.

Washington, Nov. 28.—The United States government has been asked by the principal nations of South America to co-operate with them in negotiations with the belligerent powers of Europe to bringing about the exclusion of all belligerent warships from the waters of the two Americas and safeguard the the trade of Pan-American countries with each other.

Several Already Have Acted.

Argentina, Chile, Peru and Uruguay have laid their suggestions before the Washington government, while the Brazilian government is considering the advisability of taking a similar step. Practically all the Central and South American countries have been circularized by some of the principal nations, resulting in a series of diplomatic conferences in Washington and the capitals of South America, which now are in progress.

While the proposals are different in character and scope, they all seek the same end—the restoration of trade between North and South America, paralyzed by the European war. The movement also has for its object the removal of possible causes of serious friction between the countries of this hemisphere and the European belligerents on questions of neutrality.

Trouble Appears Already.

Already Chile, Ecuador and Colombia have had serious difficulties with the belligerents over the use of the wireless and the coaling of foreign warships, whose presence in the Atlantic and Pacific is growing obnoxious to South American countries.

None of the nations which have made suggestions is committed to any particular plan, but all seek the cooperation of the United States. The impetus that will make any plan effective, it is recognized by the diplomats of South America, rests with President Wilson.

Various Plans Outlined.

The various plans thus far formally communicated to the United States are as follows:

(1) The establishment of neutral zones on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts of North and South America, within which the belligerents shall be asked to agree not to engage in hostilities or interference with commercial vessels. A meridian would be designated as the limit in each case.

(2) The convocation of a general conference of diplomatic representatives and commercial delegates of all the countries of this hemisphere with powers to vote on steps which can be taken to protect and restore Pan-American trade.

(3) The appointment by the Pan-American Union of a commission to recommend steps that would remove dangers to Pan-American trade.

(4) Prohibition by all nations of the two Americas of the privilege heretofore exercised by belligerents of coaling in neutral ports or the issuance of only a sufficient quantity of coal to enable a belligerent vessel to reach the nearest port of another country.

Powers Are Sounded.

Already some of the powers of Europe have been sounded on these propositions and it is understood that Great Britain is ready to deny her warships entry into Central and South American ports to coal if the United States approves the proposal and other belligerents agree.

While many diplomats who have carefully investigated the effects of restriction of coaling privileges, believe such a prohibition alone would not be effective in keeping belligerent warships from American waters, the fact that Great Britain, with her sea power, looked with favor on measures that would assist the South American countries in preserving their neutrality and restoring their trade has been a source of much encouragement to the diplomatists here.

The entire movement is in a formative state and depends for its progress very largely on the attitude of the United States.

30 Hurt in Missouri Wreck.

Mexico, Mo., Nov. 30.—Thirty persons were injured, one of them probably fatally, when Burlington-Alton passenger train No. 22, east-bound from Kansas City to St. Louis, left the rails three miles east of Clarks. Steve Preston, negro porter, injured internally, probably will die. The others, several of them seriously hurt, suffered bruises and internal injuries. Some of the injured men were rushed to near-by towns in motor cars, but the majority were brought to this city on a special.

CONVENTION FORCES CONTROL

PART OF VILLA'S ARMY ENTERS MEXICO CITY.

Another Mexican Governor Declares Allegiance to Gutierrez—Rail and Wire Connections Resumed.

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 30.—A part of General Villa's forces have entered Mexico City, but Villa remains at Tula. A train, the first in many weeks, left Mexico City for Juarez. This was learned when rail and wire communications were opened between the national capital and the border.

An official Villa report said that General Caballero, the Carranza leader, whose troops hold Tampico, had recognized the Convention party.

Villa Joins Zapata.

Washington.—While no definite advices have been received as to the situation in Mexico City, administration officials credit reports that General Villa's troops had joined the Zapata forces there.

The last dispatch to the state department reported the Zapata men and agents of General Villa as in control of the city. All official dispatches say order is being maintained in the capital, the only looting mentioned being that of a ranch owned by an American named Hill in the outskirts of the city.

In the same section, the Spanish ambassador told Mr. Bryan, several Spaniards have been reported killed. The Spanish envoy's advices were from Madrid, and while Mr. Bryan immediately telegraphed an inquiry to the Brazilian minister in Mexico City and American Consul Silliman, he thought the facts would have been reported by the department's representatives if the report were true.

In view of the arrival of General Carranza at Vera Cruz, Secretary Bryan wired Mr. Silliman to remain in Mexico City. He said he had originally ordered Mr. Silliman to join Carranza when the latter was at Orizaba, where the department had no representative.

American Consul Canada, at Vera Cruz, will handle negotiations of the American government with Carranza.

Vera Cruz.—General Lucio Blanco, the last of the Constitutionalist leaders to evacuate the capital, is reported to have been arrested by his own officers and to be on the way to Vera Cruz.

TRANSPORTS CARRYING FUNSTON'S ARMY DOCK.

Galveston, Tex., Nov. 28.—Five army transports bringing Major General Frederick Funston and more than 4,000 soldiers of the United States expeditionary force from Vera Cruz have docked, greeted by saluting guns and cheering. The chartered steamer Antilla brought 330 American and Mexican refugees.

With the flagship Cristobel, flying the two-starred banner of the major general, were the transports Kilpatrick, McClellan, Kansas and Sumner.

Among the refugees were many customs house employes from Vera Cruz. A clerical party was headed by Bishop Vincent Castellanes of the Roman Catholic diocese of Campache, with eighteen priests and twenty-one nuns. Owing to the flooded condition at the army camp site, nearly 4,000 soldiers will remain on the transports for several days. On the flagship Cristobel, guarded by a detail of men, is $1,000,000 gold, representing customs money collected at the port of Vera Cruz by the army.

STARVING POPULATION GROWS

American Commissioner Finds Thousands More Than Expected Must Be Fed.

London, Nov. 30.—"The population of Belgium which must be fed during the winter, probably will be many thousands more than seemed likely a very short time ago."

This is the conclusion reached by a special commissioner delegated by the American commission for the relief of Belgium to make an investigation. The commissioner sent a telegraphic report from Rotterdam to Herbert C. Hoover, chairman of the American commission.

Speaking of the Belgian refugees in the south of Holland the commissioner said large numbers, most of whom belonged to the agricultural element, had returned to Belgium or were going to return, with the result that there would be an enormous addition to the starving populace, as it was impossible to get work.

At Bergen-On-Soom there are 3,000 refugees living in tents. Most of the tents shelter two families. With the ground like a quagmire and the cold almost unbearable, the refugees sit huddled around a small fire by day and sleep on straw at night.

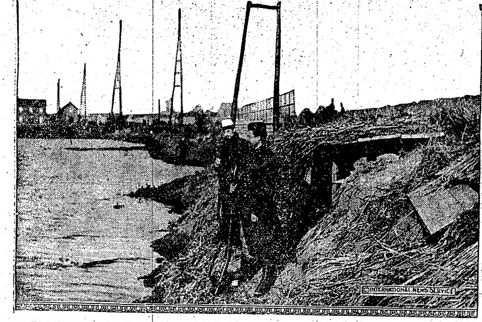
Kaiser Goes to Poland.

Berlin, Nov. 30, (Via Amsterdam and London.)—It was announced at military headquarters that Emperor William was with the German army in the east.

Argentina Dreadnaught Sets Sail.

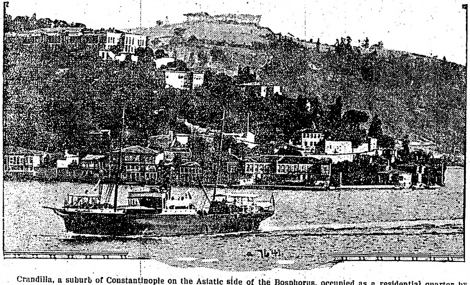
Boston, Nov. 28.—The Argentina dreadnaught, Rivadai, has taken leave of Massachusetts bay, on the shores of which she was built, and sailed for New York on her way to the South American republic. She was manned by Argentina sailors, in command of Captain Joseph Moneta. At the Brooklyn navy yard arrangements have been made for her to go into dry dock, where her hull will be cleaned before she leaves for Buenos Aires, the middle of next month.

ALONG THE FLOODED YPRES CANAL



First photograph of the flooded Ypres canal where many Germans met death when the allies cut the dikes. From the shelters along the banks the Belgians, French and British poured out a devastating fire.

HOMES OF BRITISH AT CONSTANTINOPLE



Crandilla, a suburb of Constantinople on the Asiatic side of the Bosphorus, occupied as a residential quarter by the British and open to attack by the Turkish warships.

MRS. WINSTON CHURCHILL

New photograph of Mrs. Winston Churchill, wife of the first lord of the British admiralty, who is herself actively engaged in aiding the British soldiers at the front.

TWO ROMANCES OF THE WAR

Woman Adopts Nephew and Niece, and Long-Separated Brothers Meet in England.

London.—Here are two romances of the war:

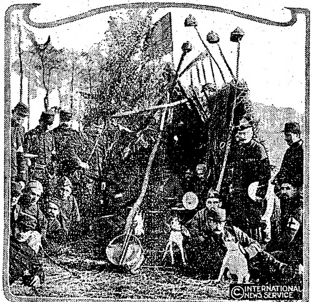
A boy and girl, Belgian refugees, at Swansea, were adopted by a man and wife of Abercynon. The children now prove to be those of the wife's dead sister, who went to Belgium as a governess years ago. A locket which was found on the little girl led to the discovery.

There has been at a hospital in Cardiff a remarkable reunion of two brothers who had not seen each other in 16 years. One is Martin Gaffey, of the Second Leinster regiment, the other John Gaffey, of the First Connaught rangers. One of the nurses noticed the coincidence in names, and this led to their meeting. When John joined the regiment Martin was still a child. One brother was wounded in the right arm, the other in the left arm.

Canadian Indians Suffer.

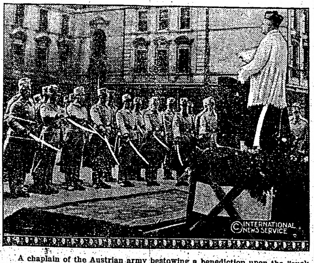
Ottawa, Ont.—Indians in the northern wilds of Canada have been hit hard by the war situation in Europe. It was announced that the dominion government has decided to go to the relief of the Indians to prevent many of them from starving as a consequence of the collapse of their fur industry.

FIELD KITCHEN OF THE RED CROSS



One of the Red Cross kitchens in the field, between Dixmude and Nieuport German trophies decorate the poles of the shelter.

BLESSING THE AUSTRIAN RECRUITS



A chaplain of the Austrian army bestowing a benediction upon the "sucklings," as the recruits are called, at the military academy in Vienna.

Captures a Vampire.

Ottawa.—Edward Wickham, living north of here, has captured a queer, bat-like creature, of vampire type. It bit Mr. Wickham's dog, causing its death in a few moments. It is about four inches long, covered with thick, gray fur, mottled with yellow, brown and white. The membranous wings measure twelve inches from tip to tip. It has five toes, a small mouth and teeth.

PRETTY CHRISTMAS GIFTS

Acceptable Presents for Young and Old and How They Are Made

EASILY MADE CHRISTMAS NOVELTIES IN NECKWEAR

NECKWEAR and muff sets were never more fashionable than they are just now, and they are among the easiest to make of home-made gifts. They confer both style and comfort upon their wearers to the joy of those who receive them.

Neckpieces are simply straight lengths of velvet, plush or fur cloth, cut a quarter of a yard wide and a yard or more in length. They are lined with satin and gathered in at the ends, where a tasseled ornament makes the finish. They fasten about the neck with a hook and eye or slide. Crocheted, passamenterie or bead buckles and ornaments are used on them.

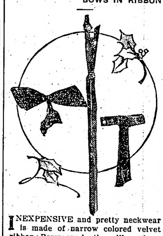
Muffs are barrel-shaped and made over beds of down or wool batting. These beds are bought ready made and are very cheap. Velvet coverings are usually gathered over them with ruffles at each end as shown in the picture. The muff and ruffles are lined with satin. Silk cords or strands of large black beads are fashionable this season for decorating these sets.

HOLIDAY TIES AND BOWS IN RIBBON



INEXPENSIVE and pretty neckwear is made of narrow colored velvet ribbon. Bows and ties like those shown in the picture are often finished with small flowers of ribbon or chiffon.

HOMEMADE GIFTS ACCEPTABLE TO MEN

SELECTING gifts for one's menfolks is perplexing to the Christmas shopper; their needs are few, compared to those of women and children. Men like gifts that add something to their comfort and they like convenient things. They especially appreciate gifts made by the donor, and this year, there are some novelties for them which are not difficult to make at home.

A basket, which will do either for a den or a bedroom, is made very easily. The materials selected for it depend upon the purposes for which it is to be used. If it is intended for a convenient receptacle for ties, collar buttons, pins, needles, thread and various odds and ends, it is to be made of cretonne, brown linen or figured silk and finished with ribbon. But if for a den to hold pipes, matches, cigars, tobacco, etc., it is to be made of thin leather or heavy silk and finished with silver or gold braid and cord.

A collar box covered with cretonne and suspended by ribbon hangers is a reliable gift sure of a welcome. A round pasteboard box of suitable size is needed over which the covering is stretched and either pasted or sewed.

For small remembrance tokens flat sachets of crepe paper carrying lavender or spicy perfumes in an oblong bit of cotton batting, are tied with narrow strips of ribbons.

DESK SETS FOR THE OFFICE OR HOME

AMONG the most attractive of novel presents for men are office or library sets consisting of portfolio. letter box, waste basket, candle shades, etc. They are made of handsome wall paper designs pasted over foundations of heavy cardboard or wood. A paper having a broad black and white stripe with dark red flowers, vaguely outlined on it, was used to cover the letter box and portfolio shown in the illustration. The candle shade is of dark red paper decorated with a fancy gold braid pasted on. The ability to choose an attractive paper and paste it on neatly is about all that is required for making these sets. Leather effects, the tiffany papers, besides many artistic flowered patterns are suited to the purpose and make useful and tasteful gifts that men appreciate.

TOBACCO POUCH AND DRESSING CASE BAG

A TOBACCO pouch is made of four long, narrow triangles of leather or of a silky plush, sewed together. A silk lining is made in the same way and placed in the outer bag. The edges along the top are blind-stitched together. The bag is 7½ inches long, each triangle 3½ inches wide. A casing is stitched in the bag 1½ inches from the top to accommodate narrow elastic bands for drawing strings. If the bag is to be hung up ribbon or cord suspenders are sewed at each side.

INEXPENSIVE GIFTS IN COLLARS AND VESTEES

A COLLAR and vestee in sheer organdie, to wear with tailored suits will be welcomed by every woman and costs almost nothing but the time for making. The flaring collar is finished with hand-embroidered scallops or a band of fine narrow swiss embroidery, or lace, which extends down each side.

The collar and vestee must be cut separately and joined at the neck line. The collar is wired to make it stand and flare correctly.

A brilliant vestee, with collar and revers of filmy lace, is pictured made of brocaded velvet and shadow lace. The vestee is a band about the neck gradually widening to the waist line where it is trimmed into points. It fastens just above the points with hooks and eyes, and here three small, fancy buttons are set on for ornament.

A short ruffle of lace forms a flaring collar which is supported with fine wires. The revers are made of straight pieces of lace draped in at each side and at the top in the neck line. Made of bright colored brocades this is one of the prettiest of novelties to be worn to embellish the blouse.

Is Quite Capable.

Cager—Can you spare a pore bloke a trifle, mister?

Minister—What! A big ..ble-bodied man like you begging?

Cager—Well, yer got to be big an' strong ter beg these days wivout gettin' 'urt.—Sydney Bulletin.

A GRATEFUL ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

Mr. F. C. Case of Welcome Lake, Pa., writes: "I suffered with Backache and Kidney Trouble. My head ached, my sleep was broken and unrefreshing. I felt heavy and sleepy after meals, was always nervous and tired, had a bitter taste in my mouth, was dizzy, had floating specks before my eyes, was always thirsty, had a dragging sensation across my loins, difficulty in collecting my thoughts and was troubled with shortness of breath. Dodds Kidney Pills have cured me of these complaints. Dodds Kidney Pills have done their work and done it well. You are at liberty to publish this letter for the benefit of any sufferer who doubts the merit of Dodds Kidney Pills."

Mr. F. C. Case.

Dodds Kidney Pills, 50c. per box at your dealer or Dodds Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Write for Household Hints, Dainty Recipes; also music of National Anthem. All 3 sent free. Adv.

Brought It Upon Himself.

"Sir, your daughter has promised to become my wife."

"Well, don't come to me for sympathy. You might know something would happen to you, hanging around here five nights a week."

Never bet on a sure thing unless you can afford to lose.

For interior finishing of your house use

Rock Board

An improved wall board, in the place of lath and plaster.

If your dealer does not have it write to us and we will have our agent nearest to your home call on or write you.

Rockford Paper Box Board Co.
ROCKFORD, ILL.

Minnesota Directory

Highest Cash Prices
Paid For CHICKENS, VEAL, CREAM
WRITE FOR SPECIAL PRICE LIST.
THE R. E. COBB CO., 14 3rd Street, St. Paul, Minn.

SHIP YOUR LIVE STOCK TO
Rogers & Rogers
S.St.Paul Minn 27 yrs. experience in commission business. Ref. any mercantile agency or business house in St. Paul. Orders filled for stock cattle. Satisfaction guaranteed.

BANGS & WALSH
LIVE STOCK DEALERS
CATTLE BOUGHT ON ORDERS. 331 New Exchange Building, South St. Paul, Minn.

EYES EXAMINED FREE
ARTIFICIAL EYES
JAMES E. LEE, Optician
528 Nicollet Ave., Minneapolis

LEARN THE BARBER TRADE
Barbers always in demand; big wages; easy work; few weeks will save months by our methods; tools given, diplomas granted. Illustrated catalogue free. MOLER BARBER COLLEGE, 27½ Nicollet Avenue, Minneapolis, Minn. Established 18[illegible].

J. N. JOHNSON & CO.,
915 Nicollet Ave., Minneapolis
Jobbers - Dealers
Rubber Tires
Accessories, Fire Department Equipment. Write for catalog and Special Discounts.

STOVE REPAIRS
Send us the name and number of your stove and we can furnish you the parts at small cost. Great Western Stove & Repair Co., 312 Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis

SHIP YOUR LIVE STOCK TO
The Western Commission Co.
South St. Paul and Chicago, Ill.
Six salesmen at your service. Order buying a specialty. Money loaned to responsible parties.

LADIES' AND GENTS' FURS
Made to order and in stock. Remodelling, Latest Styles and reasonable prices. Any information cheerfully given. Bischoff, Johnson & Lundgren, 99 E. 5th St., St. Paul, Minn., Dept. D.

SHIP YOUR WOOL
Hides, Pelts, Furs, etc.
to McMillan Fur & Wool Co.
Minneapolis, Minn. Write for Circular.

SHIP TO THUET BROS.
ESTABLISHED 1887
Live Stock Commission Firm, South St. Paul
We guarantee best results and we also make a specialty of filling country orders. Write us for market reports. Our service deserves your patronage.

HUDSON & THURBER CO.
MODOC DRY CELLS
HERMIL HARD OIL
STANDARD LITTER CARRIERS
CARTON THRESHER BELTS
Only Complete Stock of Implement Supplies
MINNEAPOLIS and OMAHA

SOMETHING USEFUL FOR XMAS
Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pen
Sold at the best stores most everywhere. If your dealer cannot supply, we will gladly assist you. Illustrated folder on request.
L. E. WATERMAN COMPANY
173 Broadway New York

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3,1879

Minnesota is to-day rated one of the most prosperous states in the Union, and while a large number of other states are suffering from forest fires and stock disease, the Minnesota people are enjoying a wave of prosperity.

If Sam Iverson had stayed out of that elimination convention, so shrewdly planned by Lee, he would to-day have been preparing to take a seat in that governor's chair on January 1st. But Sam came out of the fight clean handed, and will undoubtedly be heard from again, while Lee and Eberhart will both sleep the political sleep that knows no awakening.

The Fire Waste And Some Of The Causes Of It.

Setting fires to insured property in order to collect the insurance money, which in insurance parlence is termed the moral hazard, is no doubt one of the largest factors in our country's fire waste. Mr. Dean, the father of the rate schedules now used by the fire insurance rating bureau said in an address before the Iowa Factory Association, "If we should open the doors of our penitentiaries and turn loose all our convicted thieves, thugs, forgers and murderers, the depredations of these undesirable citizens would probably not cost any more life and property than would be saved by the elimination of the moral hazard in fire insurance." Another writer on fire insurance subjects, has said, "There are more men guilty of arson that are walking the free soil of Minnesota unmolested than have ever been behind the bars at Stillwater for all other crimes combined."

This criminal waste is covered by our fire tax and as fires are the insurance companies stock in trade, for without fires there would be no fire insurance business, they are not concerned about the fire waste, so long as they have a free hand in fire tax assessments.

A rigid public sentiment is fast crystalizing against the crime of arson, and is an effective force that is causing the decreasing fire loss ratio in the smaller municipalities where every person's act is an "open book." When the State Fire Marshal is backed up by a right public sentiment, convictions are more readily secured.

Since our State Fire Marshal law went into effect in 1911, there have been fifty to sixty incendiaries arrested and about half of them have been convicted. This is having a healthy influence as shown by the Insurance Commissioner's latest report. From the State's average of 70 per cent of fire loss to premiums in 1910, the loss ratio was reduced for the smaller cities and towns, (excluding the Twin Cities and Duluth,) to less than 40 per cent of the premiums paid during 1912 and 1913.

HE SPEAKS FOR AMERICA

President Wilson has communicated unofficially to the diplomatic representatives of this country the fact that he disapproves of attacks by bombs from aircraft, dropped on unfortified cities occupied by non-combatants.

The president, in doing this, has exercised the greatest care to make it plain that this is not an official act, but merely an informal expression of his own personal opinion.

Yet, unofficial though it may be, this opinion of the president's is unquestionably the opinion also of the people of the United States, The government of the United States is not called upon for an opinion, and has none—officially. But the people of the United States, and the citizen of of the United States who is its president, believe that the dropping of bombs on unfortified cities full of non-combatants is barbarous.—The Duluth Herald.

PROMPT ACTION WILL STOP YOUR COUGH.

When you first catch a Cold (often indicated by a sneeze or cough), break it up at once. The idea that "It does not matter" often leads to serious complications. The remedy which immediately and easily penetrates the lining of the throat is the kind demanded. Dr. King's New Discovery soothes the irritation, loosens the phlegm. You feel better at once. "It seemed to reach the very spot of my Cough" is one of many honest testimonials. 50c. at your Druggist.—adv.

A TEST FOR LIVER COMPLAINT
MENTALLY UNHAPPY—
PHYSICALLY DULL.

The Liver, sluggish and inactive, first shows itself in a mental state—unhappy and critical. Never is there joy in living, as when the Stomach and Liver are doing their work. Keep your Liver active and healthy by using Dr. King's New Life Pills; they empty the Bowels freely, tone up your Stomach, cure your constipation and purify the Blood. 25c. at Druggist.
Bucklen's Arnica Salve excellent for Piles.—adv.

KEEP IT HANDY FOR RHEMATISM.

No use to squirm and wince and try to wear out your Rheumatism. It will wear you out Instead. Apply some Sloan's Liniment. Need not rub it in—just let it penetrate all through the affected parts, relieve the soreness and draw the pain. You get ease at once and feel so much better you want to go right out and tell other sufferers about Sloan's. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25 cents of any druggist and have it in the house—against Colds, Sore and Swollen Joints, Lumbago, Sciatica and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief. Buy a bottle to-day.—adv.

YOUR COLD IS DANGEROUS
BREAK IT UP—NOW

A Cold is readily catching. A run-down system is susceptible to Germs. You owe it to yourself and to others of your household to fight the Germs at once. Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey is fine for Colds and Coughs. It loosens the Mucous, stops the Cough and soothes the Lungs. It's guaranteed, Only 25c. at your Druggist.—adv.

The Perfect Life.

"Their home life is ideal."

"Is that so?"

"Yes: she goes abroad in the summer, and he goes south in the winter. Perfect, isn't it?"—Buffalo Express.

A Perfect Man.

"She married him to try to make a man of him."

"Succeed?"

"Perfectly. Now he washes dishes, sweeps floors and makes up beds just like a maid of all work." — Boston Globe.

WE HAVE
$150,000.00
TO LOAN ON FARMS IN
PENNINGTON COUNTY
Write Or Call on Us At FIRST NATIONAL BANK
THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN.

FARMERS & MERCHANTS STATE BANK
Oklee Minn.

The rapid growth of this bank is the best evidence that its policy and methods meet with the approval of the people in our community.
You will find this bank as liberal in its dealings as is consistent with sound banking.
We are at all times prepared to discuss your requirements with you and invite consultation.
Pay your bills with checks on this bank.
Farm Loans At Lowest Rates And On Easy Terms.
Six per cent interest paid on time deposits.
CAPITAL AND SURPLUS— — — — — — — —$14,500.00
J. A. C. Torgerson, V. P. W. B. Torgerson, Cashier.

State of Ohio, City of Toledo, } ss.
Lucas County,
Frank J. Cheney makes oath that he is senior partner of the firm of F. J. Cheney & Co., doing business in the City of Toledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for each and every case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by the use of HALL'S CATARRH CURE.
FRANK J. CHENEY.
Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D. 1886.
(Seal) A. W. GLEASON, Notary Public.
Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for testimonials, free.
F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by all Druggists, 75c.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Bravery of a Boy.

"One of the bravest acts I witnesed during the whole war," said an officer of the Army of Northern Virginia, "was that of a young soldier who was probably not over sixteen. We had thought of him as only a boy, although he went with the regiment on all of its marches and lived with it in all its encampments.

"One day there was a fierce engagement. In the midst of it a bullet struck this boy in the breast, and he fell. Our colonel ordered his men to dismount, and as he himself sprang from his horse, the boy called out in a weak voice, 'I will hold your horse, colonel!'

"Stopping in the midst of the storm of bullets to gaze in pity on the white, boyish face, the colonel said, 'But you can't do that, lad—you are dying.'

"'I know I am, colonel,' the gallant boy replied. 'But I can hold the reins when I am dead.'

"The colonel placed the bridle in the trembling hands and went forward. When the fight was over he hurried back and found the boy lying dead, the bridle reins still wrapped tightly round his limp right hand." Youth's Companion

The B ute Again!

Wife (reading)—Woman recovers her ace through a railroad accident.

Husband—How much is her husband suing the company for?—Chicago News.

Simple Enough.

Here is a simple catch that may bother you some:

"All 0."

Not much in it perhaps, but enough to make it troublesome.

Too hard?

And yet it's "nothing, after all."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"Pan."

"Pan" was the name of one of the Greek gods. The word means "all," or "universal." Hence "Pantheism"—the doctrine that all is God. Hence, too, "Pan-American"—that is, all that is American; all the countries of North and South America.

U. S. Mail.

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 1.05 p. m., on Tuesday Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.55 p.m

Wm.G. Hunt, p.m.

Subscribe for THE SUNBEAM.

We have for sale one of the best quarter sections of land in the town of Highlanding, located one mile south of Highlanding Creamery. This farm will be sold cheap as the owner is a non resident and desires to use the money invested in other business. For terms and full particulars call on W. G. Hunt, Sunbeam, Minn.

FOR SALE: 120 acres in Section 14, Hickory Township, Pennington County, Minn. Price $1,800.

Nels Fore, Rolard, Minn.

HIGHLANDING BLACKSMITH SHOP

A. Tharaldson, blacksmith Highlanding will have a full line of [illegible] and wagon repairs on hand, and will be [illegible]
A. Tharaldson

Notice For Publication
First Pub. in The Sunbeam Sept. [illegible]
Department of the Interior. U. S. Land office at Crookston September 23rd, 1914.
Notice is hereby given that Hans T. Hanson of Homme, Minn. who on Jan. 27th, 1912 made Homestead Application Serial No 072[illegible] for N.½ N.W.¼, Section 27. Township 15[illegible] N. Range 39 W. 5th. Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 10th, day of November 1914.
Claimant names as witnesses:
Halvor G. Homme, Gjermund H. Homme of Homme, Minn. Carl J. Lee, Jane R. Toff, of Rodell, Minn.
Proof made according to law under which entry was made.
Peter M. Ringdal,
Register.

50 YEARS EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.
Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

FIRST STATE BANK,
Of Plummer Minnesota.
GIVE THE BURGLAR THE "HA, HA!"
BANK YOUR CASH WITH US

SOME people extend invitations to the THIEF AND HOLDUP MAN. They carry on their persons or in their homes large sums of money. A CHECK BOOK is of no use to the professional thief. Still, a check is AS GOOD AS CASH to the tradesman or for the immediate household wants. If you haven't a bank account
OPEN ONE TODAY.
J.A.DUFFY President, Henry Enderlie, Cashier

Sure.

Tommy—Why do ducks dive?

Joe—Guess they must want to liquidate their bills.—Philadelphia Press.

Notice for Publication.
First Pub. in The Sunbeam Nov. 27th 1914.
Department of the Interior, U.S. Land Office at Crookston Minn: Nov. 23rd 1914.
Notice is hereby given that Thomas G. Rome of Rhoda, Minn., who on February 8th, 1912 made Homestead Application Serial No. 07282 for Lots 5 and 6, Section 6 Township 152 N. Range 40 W. 5th. Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Commutatition Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for District of Minn. at Thief River Falls, Minn. on the 5th day of January, 1915.
Claimant names as witnesses:
Sam B. Swanson, Ole G. Skreland, of Rhoda, Minn. Andrew Feiand, and William G. Hunt, of Sunbeam, Minn.
Proof made according to law under which entry was made.
Peter M. Ringdal,
Registe

MONEY TO LOAN ON FARM LAND
MACKEY J. THOMPSON
FARM MORTGAGES
ST. PAUL, MINNESOTA
CONTRACTS, FIRST AND SECOND MORTGAGES BOUGHT

10 Great Serials
full of life and action, filled with the fire of fine inspiration and followed by 250 short stories of adventure, will make
The YOUTH'S COMPANION
Better Than Ever in 1915
Then the Family Page, a rare Editorial Page, Boys' Page, Girls' Page, Doctor's Advice, and "a ton of fun," Articles of Travel, Science, Education. From the best minds to the best minds, the best the world can produce for you and everyone in the home. There is no age limit to enthusiasm for The Youth's Companion.
CUT THIS OUT
and send it (or name of this paper) with $2.00 for The COMPANION for 1915, and we will send
FREE All the issues of THE COMPANION for the remaining weeks of 1914.
FREE THE COMPANION HOME CALENDAR for 1915.
THEN The 52 Weekly Issues of THE COMPANION for 1915.
52 Times a Year —not 12.
Send to-day to The Youth's Companion, Boston, Mass., for
THREE CURRENT ISSUES—FREE
SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED AT THIS OFFICE

THIS YEAR, THE SAME AS LAST YEAR
THE DULUTH HERALD
IS THE
BEST NEWSPAPER IN THE NORTHWEST
Send for sample copies—after you've read them you'll surely want to join The Herald's happy family of satisfied readers.
DAILY BY MAIL—THREE MONTHS FOR $1.00
ADDRESS—HERALD, DULUTH, MINN.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE LOCAL NEWS

Stanley Depty made a business trip to Goodridge Wednesday.

The sleet of Tuesday has made the roads very bad for unshod horses.

Owing to the absence of the editor at Oklee, local news are rather scarce this week.

This is the time of year that the small boy begins to be real good, so as not to offend Santa Claus.

There is to be a grand masquerade ball at Laurenz Wojnarowski hall to-morrow night. All are invited.

Miss Sadie Arndt, Marie and Ella Causin returned to their school duties at Thief River Falls Monday.

T. G. Rome bought an additional horse at the Mayfield auction sale last week. This makes four good work horses.

The past two or three years have proved that oats, barley and flax were more profitable crops for this locality than wheat.

There was a pleasant social dance at the residence of James O'Brien on Saturday evening. All who attended report a fine time.

The sudden break up the first of the week left some horses on the wrong side of Red Lake River, as the ice was not safe to cross.

Henry Bost is making final proof on his homestead at Oklee to-day. Louis LaCount and W. G. are his witnesses as to cultivation and residence.

The place of holding the township election of the town of Kratka will be moved from the Singer store to the school house one mile north of there.

The Young Peoples' Society of the town of Mayfield held their meeting at the residence of Gunder Asbjornson last Sunday, which was largely attended.

There will only be three new officers qualify for Pennington County January 1st, viz: T. P. Anderson, County Auditor, Hans O. Kjomme, County Attorney, and Theodore H. Liden for County Treasurer.

Although the Legislature is not to meet until January the log rolling is in full progress now, particularly on the Speaker fight for the House of Representatives. Here is hoping that Sam Y. Gordon lands the plum.

A conspicuous wise man (?) from the town of Kratka, wrote down to the Minnesota Tax Commission that the town of Mayfield was not paying taxes enough. There is nothing like having wise people (?) in the country to keep track of things.

ADVERTISED LETTERS.

The following have mail in the Sunbeam post office uncalled for: Mrs. M. Brandle, 2 letters. M. Brandle 1 letter. When calling for above letters please say advertised.

William G. Hunt,
Post-master.

Election got so hot over in the town of Kratka, that they had to telephone to the County Attorney for advice, and he gave them advice that compelled the candidate for Attorney General and Post Master General from that town to see the error of his opinion and set up the cigars.

Clifford Shosten is becoming quite famous for getting up new patents out of old machinery. He rigged up the trucks of an old steam traction engine to go by gasoline, and it went alright until he started to go down the small hill east of Highlanding Wednesday afternoon, when he discovered that he had neglected to put on proper brakes, and the machine ran away and took a header into the creek.

We understand that the would be post master general of Kratka did not receive a single vote recognizing his ability on November 3rd. Too bad.

Read the article entitled "Fire Waste" published in another column, then keep your eyes open to assist in landing "fire bugs" where they belong, and where they have fire proof buildings, viz; at Stillwater,

---

CROOKSTON TO THE FRONT

The citizens of Crookston have contributed liberally to the Belgium relief fund, and they had two hundred and twenty-five dollars collected Nov. 28th. They are going to raise enough more to buy a carload of flour by December 8th, when the flour will be shipped in 49 pound sacks to New York city, where it will be placed on board of a ship, and sent to that stricken country for the starving women and children. Crookston never waits for others to move when they hear the cry of distress, but always place themselves in the front ranks to send relief.

6 Per Cent MONEY 6 Per Cent
MONEY 6 Per Cent

Loans may be obtained for any purpose on acceptable Real Estate security; liberal privileges; correspondence solicited.

A. C. Agency Company,
758 Gas & Electric Bldg.,
Denver Colorado.
and 446 Pierce Bldg.
St. Louis.

Fined For Not Voting.

The outstanding feature of most British elections is the large number of electors who fail to record their vote. In some countries voting is compulsory and electors are fined if they do not do their duty as citizens and avail themselves of the franchise.

According to the universal suffrage law of Australia, all those on the register must record their votes, and at the last general election in that country 50,000 electors were fined sums from 8s. 4d. downward because they neglected to go to the polls.

Spain is another country that looks on voting as a national duty, at least in a municipal election. Should a citizen omit to cast his vote his name is published as a defaulter, his taxes are increased by 2 per cent, while if he be in the public service his salary is reduced by 1 per cent. Should he commit the fault a second time he is debarred forever from holding an elective position or an appointment under government.—London Spare Moments.

Wiles of the Waiter.

"I know I am looking like a fright tonight," the woman said.

The man studied her dress, her hair and her complexion closely.

"I don't see anything the matter with you," he said. "So far as I can see, you are looking as well as usual."

"But I am not," she insisted. "There is something wrong, and that head waiter saw at a glance what it was. If I had been up to the mark he wouldn't have put us away over here in this out of the way corner. He would have given us a table right under the chandelier in the middle of the room.

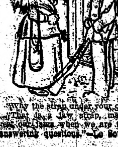
"All the best dressed people are always seated in the most conspicuous places, so as to make the restaurant look more attractive. I am glad to say that that is where I usually sit. The plain people are ranged along the sides of the room, just as we are tonight.

"That is why I know I am not looking well."—New York Times.

A Perilous Experience.

While hunting in the Big Horn mountains two men found a narrow path, little more than a deer trail, leading up to the summit. They dismounted and led their horses, moving very cautiously, for on one side the mountain rose up like a wall, and on the other sloped down a thousand feet to the canyon below. Suddenly both horses pricked up their ears as if scenting a wild beast. Then there came a

Explained at Last.



"Why the strap under your chin?"

"That is a jaw strap, madam, to rest our jaws when we are tired out answering questions."—Le Sourire.

LUMBER AND BUILDING MATERIALS.

When you get ready to build, come in and let us figure your bill and show you our stock of lumber and building materials.

Complete stocks at Thief River Falls, Mavie and Goodridge, Minn.

WINTON-NICHOLS LUMBER COMPANY.

NATION'S LABOR PROBLEM

OVER A MILLION AND A HALF WOMEN WORK AS FARM HANDS IN THE UNITED STATES.

By Peter Radford
Lecturer National Farmers' Union.

Our government never faced so tremendous a problem as that now lying dormant at the doors of congress and the legislatures, and which, when aroused, will shake this nation from center to circumference, and make civilization hide its face in shame. That problem is—women in the field.

The last federal census reports show we now have 1,514,000 women working in the field, most of them south of the Mason and Dixon line. There were approximately a million negro slaves working in the fields when liberated by the emancipation proclamation. We have freed our slaves and our women have taken their places in bondage. We have broken the shackles off the negroes and welded them upon our daughters.

The Chain-Gang of Civilization.

A million women in bondage in the southern fields form the chain-gang of civilization—the industrial tragedy of the age. There is no overseer quite so cruel as that of unrestrained greed, no whip that stings like the lash of suborned destiny, and no auctioneer's block quite so revolting as that of organized avarice.

The president of the United States was recently lauded by the press, and very properly so, for suggesting mediation between the engineers and railroad managers in adjusting their schedule of time and pay. The engineers threatened to strike if their wages were not increased from approximately ten to eleven dollars per day and service reduced from ten to eight hours and a similar readjustment of the overtime schedule. Our women are working in the field, many of them barefooted, for less than 50 cents per day, and their schedule is the rising sun and the evening star, and after the day's work is over they milk the cows, slop the hogs and rock the baby to sleep. Is anyone mediating over their problems, and to whom shall they threaten a strike?

Congress has listened approvingly to those who toil at the forge and behind the counter, and many of our statesmen have smiled at the threats and have fanned the flame of unrest among industrial laborers. But women are as surely the final victims of industrial warfare as they are the burden-bearers in the war between nations, and those who arbitrate and mediate the differences between capital and labor should not forget that when the expenses of any industry are unnecessarily increased, society foots the bill by drafting a new consignment of women from the home to the field.

Pinch no Crumb From Woman's Crust of Bread.

No financial award can be made without someone footing the bill, and we commend to those who accept the responsibility of the distribution of industrial justice, the still small voice of the woman in the field as she pleads for mercy, and we beg that they pinch no crumb from her crust of bread or put another patch upon her ragged garments.

We beg that they listen to the scream of horror from the eagle on every American dollar that is wrung from the brow of toiling women and hear the Goddess of Justice hiss at a verdict that increases the want of woman to satisfy the greed of man.

The women behind the counter and in the factory cry aloud for sympathy and the press thunders out in their defense and the pulpit pleads for mercy, but how about the woman in the field? Will not these powerful exponents of human rights turn their talent, energies and influence to her relief? Will the Goddess of Liberty enthroned at Washington hold the calloused hand and soothe the feverish brow of her sex who sows and reaps the nation's harvest or will she permit the male of the species to shove women—weak and weary—from the bread-line of industry to the back alleys of poverty?

Women and Children First.

The census enumerators tell us that of the 1,514,000 women who work in the fields as farm hands 409,000 are sixteen years of age and under. What is the final destiny of a nation whose future mothers spend their girlhood days behind the plow, pitching hay and hauling manure, and what is to become of womanly culture and refinement that grace the home, charm society and enthuse man to leap to glory in noble achievements if our daughters are raised in the society of the ox and the companionship of the plow?

In that strata between the ages of sixteen and forty-five are 950,000 women working as farm hands and many of them with suckling babes tugging at their breasts, as drenched in perspiration, they wield the scythe and guide the plow. What is to become of that nation where poverty breaks the crowns of the queens of the home; despair hurls a mother's love from its throne and hunger drives innocent children from the schoolroom to the hoe?

The census bureau shows that 155,000 of these women are forty-five years of age and over. There is no more pitiful sight in civilization than these saintly mothers of Israel stooped with age, drudging in the field from sun until sun and at night drenching their dingy pillows with the tears of despair as their aching hearts take it all to God in prayer. Civilization strikes them a blow when it should give them a crown, and their only friend is he who broke bread with beggars and said: "Come unto me all ye that are weary and heavy laden and I will give you rest."

Oh, America! The land of the free and the home of the brave, the world's custodian of chivalry, the champion of human rights and the defender of the oppressed—shall we permit our maidens fair to be torn from the hearthstone by the ruthless hand of destiny and chained to the plow? Shall we permit our faithful wives, whom we covenanted with God to cherish and protect, to be hurled from the home to the harvest field, and our mothers dear to be driven from the old arm chair to the cotton patch?

In rescuing our citizens from the forces of civilization, can we not apply to our fair Dixieland the rule of the sea—"women and children first?"

There must be a readjustment of the wage scale of industry so that the women can be taken from the field or given a reasonable wage for her services. Perhaps the issue has never been fairly raised, but the Farmers' Union, with a membership of ten million, puts its organized forces squarely behind the issue and we now enter upon the docket of civilization the case of "The Woman in the Field" and demand an immediate trial.

In every field of human activity the demand for more competent men and women is growing every day. Especially so in agriculture.

Home pride is a mighty valuable asset, and the farmer who has none is carrying a heavy handicap on the road to success.

Work is the salve that heals the wounded heart.

Nothing Heroic About Him.

She was very romantic, and when she saw the scars on his face she jumped at conclusions.

"I think I have discovered your secret," she softly said. "You are a Heidelberg duelist and likewise a German baron."

"I am not a baron," he said, "and I never heard of Heidelberg. I'm only the fellow the students practice on at the barbers' college."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

In a Dilemma.

One of London's charming young suffragettes said: "I want to get married just to prove that I can, and I don't want to get married just to prove that I don't have to. If I don't they'll say I can't; if I do they'll say I have no more independence than any other woman."—T. P.'s London Weekly.

All In the Game.

Stern Parent—William, how did you tear your trousers so? Future Star (tearfully)—I—I—I—was practicing the fallaway slide. S. P.—Is that so? Well, you come out in the woodshed and I'll give you a demonstration of the hit and run.—Buffalo Express.

Improved.

"How do you like your alarm clock?" asked the jeweler.

"First rate."

"You didn't seem pleased with it at first."

"No, but it's broken now."—London Tit-Bits.

Truthful.

"I hadn't been talking with him three minutes before he called me an ass. What sort of a person is he?"

"Well, I never knew him to tell a lie."

FIRST STATE BANK,

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS $11000,00

not merely name:--But a fixed policy.

The men who founded and organized the First State had a definate policy in mind, namely: To organize and conduct a bank that would give to all its patrons the best possible service and the most liberal returns on money deposited that can safely be given by a strong conservative institution.

FIRST STATE BANK,
OKLEE minn.

A. P. Tervin, President Joh[illegible] Petterson, Cashier.
Ole Sarres, Asst. Cashier.

THE PRICHARD Co.
Thief River Falls Minn.

DEALERS IN LUMBER AND FARM MACHINERY

Located west of the new Soo Depot. Give us a call, and look over our stock of Lumber and Farm Machinery.

H. O. KJOMME
Attorney and Counselor at Law
McGinn Block
Thief River Falls, - - Minn.

Wilhelm Michelet
U. S. COMMISSIONER
COURT HOUSE
THIEF RIVER FALLS,
MINN.

Dr. Humphreys'

Specifics cure by acting directly upon the disease, without exciting disorder in any other part of the system.

No.	CURES.	PRICES.
1	Fevers, Congestions, Inflammations.	.25
2	Worms, Worm Fever, Worm Colic...	.25
3	Teething, Colic, Crying, Wakefulness	.25
4	Diarrhea, of Children or Adults......	.25
7	Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis...........	.25
8	Neuralgia, Toothache, Faceache.. ..	.25
9	Headache, Sick Headache, Vertigo..	.25
10	Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Weak Stomach.	.25
11	Suppressed or Painful Periods....	.25
12	Whites, Too Profuse Periods.........	.25
13	Croup, Laryngitis, Hoarseness......	.25
14	Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Eruptions..	.25
15	Rheumatism, Rheumatic Pains......	.25
16	Malaria, Chills, Fever and Ague.....	.25
19	Catarrh, Influenza, Cold in the Head	.25
20	Whooping-Cough	.25
27	Kidney Diseases....................	.25
28	Nervous Debility..................	1.00
30	Urinary Weakness, Wetting Bed.......	.25
77	Grip, Hay Fever	.25

Dr. Humphreys' [illegible] Diseases at your [illegible]

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam Nov. 27th, 1914.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minnesota November 23rd 1914

Notice is hereby given that Karl A. Korstad, of Erie, Minn. who on October 3rd 1911, made Homestead Application serial No. 06531 for N. E. ¼ Section 21, Township 153 N. Range 40 W. Fifth, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make Commutation proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for Dist. of Minn., at Thief River Falls Minn on the 30th day of December 1914.

Claimant names as witnesses: Perley P. Palmer, Peder H. Thoreson, Peder P. Korstad, Charles Palmer all of Erie, Minn.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam Nov. 27th 1914.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office, at Crookston Minn. Nov. 21st 1914.

Notice is hereby given, that Clarence E. Peterson, of Kratka, Minn., who on June 3rd, 1911, made Homestead Entry No. 09259, for Lots 1 & 2, E. ½ N. W. ¼, Section 18 Township 153 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before N. W. Tarrant, Municipal Judge for the City of Thief River Falls, Minn. at Thief River Falls Minnesota, on the 30th day of December 1914

Claimant names as witnesses

Stephen Singer, Ole Nelson, Carl Klemmetson, Peter C. Wold, Jack Dunn, all of Kratka, Minn. Roy Hoffman, of Erie. Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal.
Register.

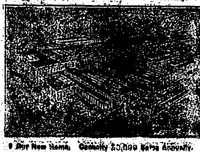
Cuts, Burns,
Bruises, Sores, Wounds and Piles quickly healed with Arnica Salve. It prevents infection, is antiseptic, soothing, healing. Try it once. Money Back If It Fails. The Original and Genuine.
Bucklen's Arnica Salve
Heals the Hurt
All Druggists and Dealers, 25c.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH - - That's $50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day

Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 200-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were piloting them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing selling points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Don't YOU be the last to apply, from your vicinity before someone else gets the territory. We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.

The 25th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide-awake men who received our special selling inducement rendered it necessary to double our output. We are sending many thousands of dollars enlarging our sales organization, but to learn all particulars it will cost you only the price of a postal card.

Ask for Catalog 16 T.
THE VICTOR SAFE & LOCK CO.
CINCINNATI, OHIO



Our New Home. Capacity 50,000 Safes Annually.

THE LOCAL NEWS

Stanley Depty made a business trip to Goodridge Wednesday.

The sleet of Tuesday has made the roads very bad for unshod horses.

Owing to the absence of the editor at Oklee, local news are rather scarce this week.

This is the time of year that the small boy begins to be real good, so as not to offend Santa Claus.

There is to be a grand masquerade ball at Laurenz Wojnarowski hall to-morrow night. All are invited.

Miss Sadie Arndt, Marie and Ella Causin returned to their school duties at Thief River Falls Monday.

T. G. Rome bought an additional horse at the Mayfield auction sale last week. This makes four good work horses.

The past two or three years have proved that oats, barley and flax were more profitable crops for this locality than wheat.

There was a pleasant social dance at the residence of James O'Brien on Saturday evening. All who attended report a fine time.

The sudden break up the first of the week left some horses on the wrong side of Red Lake River, as the ice was not safe to cross.

Henry Bost is making final proof on his homestead at Oklee to-day. Louis LaCount and W. G. are his witnesses as to cultivation and residence.

The place of holding the township election of the town of Kratka will be moved from the Singer store to the school house one mile north of there.

The Young Peoples' Society of the town of Mayfield held their meeting at the residence of Gunder Asbjornson last Sunday, which was largely attended.

There will only be three new officers qualify for Pennington County January 1st, viz: T. P. Anderson, County Auditor, Hans O. Kjomme, County Attorney, and Theodore H. Liden for County Treasurer.

Although the Legislature is not to meet until January the log rolling is in full progress now, particularly on the Speaker fight for the House of Representatives. Here is hoping that Sam Y. Gordon lands the plum.

A conspicuous wise man (?) from the town of Kratka, wrote down to the Minnesota Tax Commission that the town of Mayfield was not paying taxes enough. There is nothing like having wise people (?) in the country to keep track of things.

ADVERTISED LETTERS.

The following have mail in the Sunbeam post office uncalled for: Mrs. M. Brandle, 2 letters. M. Brandle 1 letter. When calling for above letters please say advertised.

William G. Hunt,
Post-master.

Election got so hot over in the town of Kratka, that they had to telephone to the County Attorney for advice, and he gave them advice that compelled the candidate for Attorney General and Post Master General from that town to see the error of his opinion and set up the cigars.

Clifford Shosten is becoming quite famous for getting up new patents out of old machinery. He rigged up the trucks of an old steam traction engine to go by gasoline, and it went alright until he started to go down the small hill east of Highlanding Wednesday afternoon, when he discovered that he had neglected to put on proper brakes, and the machine ran away and took a header into the creek.

We understand that the would be post master general of Kratka did not receive a single vote recognizing his ability on November 3rd. Too bad.

Read the article entitled "Fire Waste" published in another column, then keep your eyes open to assist in landing "fire bugs" where they belong, and where they have fire proof buildings, viz; at Stillwater.

CROOKSTON TO THE FRONT

The citizens of Crookston have contributed liberally to the Belgium relief fund, and they had two hundred and twenty-five dollars collected Nov. 28th. They are going to raise enough more to buy a carload of flour by December 8th, when the flour will be shipped in 49 pound sacks to New York city, where it will be placed on board of a ship, and sent to that stricken country for the starving women and children. Crookston never waits for others to move when they hear the cry of distress, but always place themselves in the front ranks to send relief.

6 Per Cent MONEY 6 Per Cent
MONEY 6 Per Cent

Loans may be obtained for any purpose on acceptable Real Estate security; liberal privileges; correspondence solicited.

A. C. Agency Company,
758 Gas & Electric Bldg.,
Denver Colorado.
and 446 Pierce Bldg.
St. Louis.

Fined For Not Voting.

The outstanding feature of most British elections is the large number of electors who fail to record their vote. In some countries voting is compulsory and electors are fined if they do not do their duty as citizens and avail themselves of the franchise.

According to the universal suffrage law of Australia, all those on the register must record their votes, and at the last general election in that country 50,000 electors were fined sums from 8s. 4d. downward because they neglected to go to the polls.

Spain is another country that looks on voting as a national duty, at least in a municipal election. Should a citizen omit to cast his vote his name is published as a defaulter, his taxes are increased by 2 per cent, while if he be in the public service his salary is reduced by 1 per cent. Should he commit the fault a second time he is debarred forever from holding an elective position or an appointment under government.—London Spare Moments.

Wiles of the Waiter.

"I know I am looking like a fright tonight," the woman said.

The man studied her dress, her hair and her complexion closely.

"I don't see anything the matter with you," he said. "So far as I can see, you are looking as well as usual."

"But I am not," she insisted. "There is something wrong, and that head waiter saw at a glance what it was. If I had been up to the mark he wouldn't have put us away over here in this out of the way corner. He would have given us a table right under the chandelier in the middle of the room.

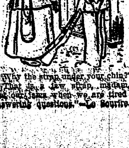
"All the best dressed people are always seated in the most conspicuous places, so as to make the restaurant look more attractive. I am glad to say that that is where I usually sit. The plain people are ranged along the sides of the room, just as we are tonight.

"That is why I know I am not looking well."—New York Times.

A Perilous Experience.

While hunting in the Big Horn mountains two men found a narrow path, little more than a deer trail, leading up to the summit. They dismounted and led their horses, moving very cautiously, for on one side the mountain rose up like a wall, and on the other sloped down a thousand feet to the canyon below. Suddenly both horses pricked up their ears as if scenting a wild beast. Then there came a

Explained at Last.



"Why the strap under your chin?"

"That is a jaw strap, madam, to rest our jaws when we are tired out answering questions."—Le Sourire.

LUMBER AND BUILDING MATERIALS.

When you get ready to build, come in and let us figure your bill and show you our stock of lumber and building materials.

Complete stocks at Thief River Falls, Mavie and Goodridge, Minn.

WINTON-NICHOLS LUMBER COMPANY.

NATION'S LABOR PROBLEM

OVER A MILLION AND A HALF WOMEN WORK AS FARM HANDS IN THE UNITED STATES.

By Peter Radford
Lecturer National Farmers' Union.

Our government never faced so tremendous a problem as that now lying dormant at the doors of congress and the legislatures, and which, when aroused, will shake this nation from center to circumference, and make civilization hide its face in shame. That problem is—women in the field.

The last federal census reports show we now have 1,514,000 women working in the field, most of them south of the Mason and Dixon line. There were approximately a million negro slaves working in the fields when liberated by the emancipation proclamation. We have freed our slaves and our women have taken their places in bondage. We have broken the shackles off the negroes and welded them upon our daughters.

The Chain-Gang of Civilization.

A million women in bondage in the southern fields form the chain-gang of civilization—the industrial tragedy of the age. There is no overseer quite so cruel as that of unrestrained greed, no whip that stings like the lash of suborned destiny, and no auctioneer's block quite so revolting as that of organized avarice.

The president of the United States was recently lauded by the press, and very properly so, for suggesting mediation between the engineers and railroad managers in adjusting their schedule of time and pay. The engineers threatened to strike if their wages were not increased from approximately ten to eleven dollars per day and service reduced from ten to eight hours and a similar readjustment of the overtime schedule. Our women are working in the field, many of them barefooted, for less than 50 cents per day, and their schedule is the rising sun and the evening star, and after the day's work is over they milk the cows, slop the hogs and rock the baby to sleep. Is anyone mediating over their problems, and to whom shall they threaten a strike?

Congress has listened approvingly to those who toil at the forge and behind the counter, and many of our statesmen have smiled at the threats and have fanned the flame of unrest among industrial laborers. But women are as surely the final victims of industrial warfare as they are the burden-bearers in the war between nations, and those who arbitrate and mediate the differences between capital and labor should not forget that when the expenses of any industry are unnecessarily increased, society foots the bill by drafting a new consignment of women from the home to the field.

Pinch no Crumb From Women's Crust of Bread.

No financial award can be made without someone footing the bill, and we commend to those who accept the responsibility of the distribution of industrial justice, the still small voice of the woman in the field as she pleads for mercy, and we beg that they pinch no crumb from her crust of bread or put another patch upon her ragged garments.

We beg that they listen to the scream of horror from the eagle on every American dollar that is wrung from the brow of toiling women and hear the Goddess of Justice hiss at a verdict that increases the want of woman to satisfy the greed of man.

The women behind the counter and in the factory cry aloud for sympathy and the press thunders out in their defense and the pulpit pleads for mercy, but how about the woman in the field? Will not these powerful exponents of human rights turn their talent, energies and influence to her relief? Will the Goddess of Liberty enthroned at Washington hold the calloused hand and soothe the feverish brow of her sex who sows and reaps the nation's harvest or will she permit the male of the species to shove women—weak and weary—from the bread-line of industry to the back alleys of poverty?

Women and Children First.

The census enumerators tell us that of the 1,514,000 women who work in the fields as farm hands 409,000 are sixteen years of age and under. What is the final destiny of a nation whose future mothers spend their girlhood days behind the plow, pitching hay and hauling manure, and what is to become of womanly culture and refinement that grace the home, charm society and enthuse man to leap to glory in noble achievements if our daughters are raised in the society of the ox and the companionship of the plow?

In that strata between the ages of sixteen and forty-five are 950,600 women working as farm hands and many of them with suckling babes tugging at their breasts, as drenched in perspiration, they wield the scythe and guide the plow. What is to become of that nation where poverty breaks the crowns of the queens of the home; despair hurls a mother's love from its throne and hunger drives innocent children from the schoolroom to the hoe?

The census bureau shows that 155,000 of these women are forty-five years of age and over. There is no more pitiful sight in civilization than these saintly mothers of Israel stooped with age, drudging in the field from sun until sun and at night drenching their dingy pillows with the tears of despair as their aching hearts take it all to God in prayer. Civilization strikes them a blow when it should give them a crown, and their only friend is he who broke bread with beggars and said: "Come unto me all ye that are weary and heavy laden and I will give you rest."

Oh, America! The land of the free and the home of the brave, the world's custodian of chivalry, the champion of human rights and the defender of the oppressed—shall we permit our maidens fair to be torn from the hearthstone by the ruthless hand of destiny and chained to the plow? Shall we permit our faithful wives, whom we covenanted with God to cherish and protect, to be hurled from the home to the harvest field, and our mothers dear to be driven from the old arm chair to the cotton patch?

In rescuing our citizens from the forces of civilization, can we not apply to our fair Dixieland the rule of the sea—"women and children first?"

There must be a readjustment of the wage scale of industry so that the women can be taken from the field or given a reasonable wage for her services. Perhaps the issue has never been fairly raised, but the Farmers' Union, with a membership of ten million, puts its organized forces squarely behind the issue and we now enter upon the docket of civilization the case of "The Woman in the Field" and demand an immediate trial.

In every field of human activity the demand for more competent men and women is growing every day. Especially so in agriculture.

Home pride is a mighty valuable asset, and the farmer who has none is carrying a heavy handicap on the road to success.

Work is the salve that heals the wounded heart.

Nothing Heroic About Him.

She was very romantic, and when she saw the scars on his face she jumped at conclusions.

"I think I have discovered your secret," she softly said. "You are a Heidelberg duelist and likewise a German baron."

"I am not a baron," he said, "and I never heard of Heidelberg. I'm only the fellow the students practice on at the barbers' college."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

In a Dilemma.

One of London's charming young suffragettes said: "I want to get married just to prove that I can, and I don't want to get married just to prove that I don't have to. If I don't they'll say I can't; if I do they'll say I have no more independence than any other woman."—T. P.'s London Weekly.

All in the Game.

Stern Parent—William, how did you tear your trousers so? Future Star (tearfully)—I—I—I—was practicing the fallaway slide. S. P.—Is that so? Well, you come out in the woodshed and I'll give you a demonstration of the hit and run.—Buffalo Express.

Improved.

"How do you like your alarm clock?" asked the jeweler.

"First rate."

"You didn't seem pleased with it at first."

"No, but it's broken now."—London Tit-Bits.

Truthful.

"I hadn't been talking with him three minutes before he called me an ass. What sort of a person is he?"

"Well, I never knew him to tell a lie."

FIRST STATE BANK,

not merely name:--But a fixed policy.

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS $11000,00

The men who founded and organized the First State had a definite policy in mind, namely: To organize and conduct a bank that would give to all its patrons the best possible service and the most liberal returns on money deposited that can safely be given by a strong conservative institution.

FIRST STATE BANK,
OKLEE minn.

A. P. Turin, President John Pettersen, Cashier.
Ole Sattes, Asst. Cashier.

THE PRICHARD Co,
Thief River Falls Minn.

DEALERS IN LUMBER AND FARM MACHINERY

Located west of the new Soo Depot. Give us a call, and look over our stock of Lumber and Farm Machinery.

H. O. KJOMME
Attorney and Counselor at Law
McGinn Block
Thief River Falls, - - Minn.

Wilhelm Michelet
U. S. COMMISSIONER
COURT HOUSE
THIEF RIVER FALLS,
MINN.

Dr. Humphreys'

Specifics cure by acting directly upon the disease, without exciting disorder in any other part of the system.

No.	CURES.	PRICES.
1	Fevers, Congestions, Inflammations.	.25
2	Worms, Worm Fever, Worm Colic...	.25
3	Teething, Colic, Crying, Wakefulness	.25
4	Diarrhea, of Children or Adults......	.25
7	Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis..............	.25
8	Neuralgia, Toothache, Faceache.. ..	.25
9	Headache, Sick Headache, Vertigo..	.25
10	Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Weak Stomach.	.25
11	Suppressed or Painful Periods....	.25
12	Whites, Too Profuse Periods..........	.25
13	Croup, Laryngitis, Hoarseness......	.25
14	Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Eruptions..	.25
15	Rheumatism, Rheumatic Pains......	.25
16	Malaria, Chills, Fever and Ague....	.25
19	Catarrh, Influenza, Cold in the Head	.25
20	Whooping-Cough	.25
27	Kidney Diseases........................	.25
28	Nervous Debility........................	1.00
30	Urinary Weakness, Wetting Bed....	.25
[illegible]	Grip, Hay Fever	.25

[illegible] Humphreys' [illegible] all Diseases at your [illegible]

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Nov. 27th, 1914.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minnesota November 23rd 1914

Notice is hereby given that Karl A. Korstad, of Erie, Minn. who on October 3rd 1911, made Homestead Application serial No. 08531 for N. E. ¼ Section 21, Township 153 N. Range 40 W. Fifth, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make Commutation proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for Dist. of Minn., at Thief River Falls Minn on the 30th day of December 1914.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Perley P. Palmer, Peder H. Thoreson, Peder P. Korstad, Charles Palmer all of Erie, Minn.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Nov. 27th 1914.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office, at Crookston Minn. Nov. 21st 1914.

Notice is hereby given, that Clarence E. Peterson, of Kratka, Minn., who on June 3rd, 1911, made Homestead Entry No. 09259, for Lots 1.&2. E.½ N.W.¼, Section 18 Township 153 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before N. W. Tarrant, Municipal Judge for the City of Thief River Falls, Minn. at Thief River Falls Minnesota, on the 30th day of December 1914

Claimant names as witnesses

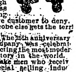
Stephen Singer, Ole Nelson, Carl Klemmetson, Peter C. Wold, Jack Dunn, all of Kratka, Minn. Roy Hoffman, of Erie. Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

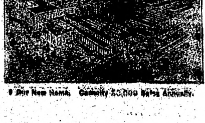
Peter M. Ringdal.
Register.

Cuts, Burns,
Bruises, Sores, Wounds and Piles quickly healed with Arnica Salve. It prevents infection, is antiseptic, soothing, healing. Try it once. Money Back If It Fails. The Original and Genuine.
Bucklen's Arnica Salve
Heals the Hurt
All Druggists and Dealers, 25c.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH - - That's
$50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day



Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 200-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were showing them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing selling points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Don't YOU be the first to apply, from your vicinity before someone else gets the terr[illegible] We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.



Our New Home. Capacity 50,000 Safes Annually.

The 25th anniversary company was celebrat erecting the most moder factory in the world. awake men who receiv special selling indu rendered it necessary t our output. We are many thousands of do larging our sales orga but to learn all parti will cost you only th a postal card.

Ask for Catalogu
THE VIC
SAFE & L
CINCINNA

INTENTIONAL DUPLICATE EXPOSURE

DEFECTIVE PAGE

The Ambition of Mark Truitt

By
HENRY RUSSELL MILLER

Author of
"THE MAN HIGHER UP," "HIS RISE TO POWER," Etc.

(Copyright, 1913, by The Bobbs-Merrill Company)

SYNOPSIS.

Mark Truitt, encouraged by his sweetheart, Unity Martin, leaves Bethel, his native town, to seek his fortune. Simon Truitt tells Mark that it long has been his dream to see a steel plant at Bethel and asks the son to return and build one if he ever gets rich. Mark applies to Thomas Henley, head of the Quinby Iron works, for a job and is sent to the construction gang. His success in that work wins him a place as helper to Roman Andrzejzski, open-hearth furnaceman. He becomes a boarder in Roman's home and assists Piotr, Roman's son, in his studies. Kazia, an adopted daughter, shows her gratitude in such a manner as to arouse Mark's interest in her. Heavy work in the intense heat of the furnace causes Mark to collapse and Kazia cares for him. Later Roman also succumbs and Mark gets his job. Roman resents this and tells Mark to find another boarding place. Five years elapse during which Mark has advanced to the foremanship, while his labor-saving devices have made him invaluable to the company. In the meantime Kazia has married one Jim Whiting. Mark meets with an accident which dooms him to be a cripple for life. He returns to Bethel intending to stay there. He finds Unity about to marry another man and wins her back. Unity urges him to return to his work in the city. Mark rises rapidly to wealth and power in the steel business, but the social ambitions of his wife make their married life unhappy. The big steel interests are secretly anxious to get hold of stock in the Iroquois Iron company, supposed to be worthless. Timothy Woodhouse seeks financial assistance from Mark and the latter buys Woodhouse's Iroquois stock at a small figure. Henley forces Quinby to let Mark have stock in the Quinby company. Mark finds Piotr making a socialistic speech on the street and the boy shows that he is still bitter against Mark. Mark finds Kazia, who is divorced and is now a hospital nurse, caring for Roman who is near death. Mark is advised by his physician to stop taking drugs and take a long rest.

CHAPTER XVII—Continued.

"It did," he answered. "But you didn't invite it. You weren't the sort of girl that needed to invite it—you aren't that sort of woman now!" Eyes, no less than tongue, were eloquent of his admiration; but she was looking away. "But most women wouldn't be so ready to forgive. They would remember only hurt vanity. I'm at your feet for your charity. I've seen little of it in my life."

"Have you looked for it?"

"No. Nor had it. Nor valued it—until now."

"And now?"

"Why now I—need it."

Somehow the confession, an unconsidered remark that, however, had the ring of sincerity impulsive sayings are apt to have, seemed to establish even more firmly their intimacy. It nerved him to his next remark.

"Kazia, don't you think you could tell me what has happened to you during all these years?"

"You'll be disappointed," she began abruptly, "because there isn't much and it's commonplace enough. I married Jim and lived with him a year. Then I left him. Not because he wasn't kind—he was, in his rough way. But he was shiftless and he drank too much. He had no ambition and—I wasn't happy with him, so I left him, though I knew it hurt him."

"A woman can do that," he interrupted quickly.

"Some women do it, you mean. I've always been ashamed, though I never went back to him. Later, I got a divorce. I went to live with Uncle Roman, but Piotr, who had hated Jim, made it so unpleasant I had to leave. He hated me, too, I think."

"Or loved you, in Piotr's peculiar fashion. But go on."

"After a while I found work in a tobacco factory, rolling cigars. Not the kind you smoke, but cheap vile things. It—it wasn't nice."

"I've heard of those holes," he muttered. "You there—why—"

"I was one of many," she went on. "In two years I was sick and in the hospital, a heavenly place where there was ventilation and nothing to do and good things to eat. I used to pray I'd never get well.

"There isn't much more. I didn't have to leave the hospital. One of the internes took an interest. He had influence and helped me to register as a nurse. I've a knack for surgical work, and since I passed my examination I've always had cases. For the rest, I'm not educated. I've merely read a little, here and there, as I've had time.

"That's all and not what you seemed expect. Just cruel selfishness in e beginning and a little luck afterard. Which is not the success you orship."

"But I see more than that. I read ween the lines." Long afterward, alling this scene, he remembered quick questioning glance, but then gave it no thought. "I see the cour- to make a fight, the will to rise being equal to the opportunity it came. And I've heard that eally charitable are never so to selves."

, if you will—" She broke off shrug. "Let us talk of some- lse."

at length he broke the silence, e was a caress. "I wouldn't n different. What you've lost g compared with what you've ned her heard slowly toward a long minute their eyes with one accord they y. Not the heart of a boy could have beaten more rove on, the silence became awkward, self-conscious. Neither seemed able to break it.

Rounding a curve in the tortuous driveway, they met a landau, a beautifully enameled affair drawn by high-stepping horses in elaborate silver-mounted harness. In it sat two women. They bowed to him, the younger with a pointed smile.

Kazia heard him mutter: 'I had forgotten!"

"Who was she?"

"The older? That was Mrs. Thomas Henley, of whom you may have heard."

"Yes? But I meant the other."

"That," he answered in a dry constrained voice, "was Mrs. Mark Truitt."

After a while: "Ah!" she breathed. "She is lovely."

"That makes it unanimous," he said shortly.

It had ceased to be the pleasantest time he had had in years. A heavy cold cloud had settled upon their intimacy. Why dream of the possibility of a mighty primitive passion! It was not possible. . . . But it was a characteristic of the man to want most the things farthest away, the things forbidden.

"We've gone far enough," she said. True words, however she meant them! "And it is getting too cold for you. Let us turn back."

He made no protest.

He swung the team around and drove toward the hospital; at a reckless pace, that he might not have to talk. He had no wish for commonplace speech with her. From other speech the habit of self-repression saved him.

But not wholly. For as they were nearing the hospital, he drew the horses down to a soberer gait.

"When," he asked, "will you drive with me again?"

"Not again."

He had known, even before she spoke, what her answer would be. And he knew—so had she given it—that it was irrevocable.

"I wonder why you came today."

"I'd been thinking of you. And I was—curious. To see what sort of man you had become."

They swung into the hospital grounds and up to the entrance. Over her protest he descended to help her to the ground. He took a queer pleasure in the pain the needless little service gave him.

He sought her eyes. "Was it only curiosity, Kazia?"

Her answer was not in words. Slowly she mounted the stairs to the doorway, and turning, looked steadily down upon him. Her face was white, but her eyes were lustrous—and unspeakably sad.

"Kazia—"

"Good-by."

He had had the answer he wanted. But he received it with a heart as heavy as lead. He wanted her as he had desired nothing since life began. And he could only stand and, helpless, see her leave him.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Sundered Bonds.

Dinner, on the rare occasions when the Truitts dined together and alone, was marked by a careful formality that was but a thin disguise for their mutual dislike. At no other time, save by hastily cured accident, were they apt to confront each other. The quarrel of the night of their first invitation to Henley's house had never been healed. Each had gone a separate way, ignoring as far as possible the other's existence.

With Unity the dislike had been genuine. She believed that when her easy husband had so suddenly and definitely put an end to her supremacy, she had been robbed of a right that she, a woman and therefore a superior finer being, should enjoy. Fear, of him and of what the man she now perceived him to be might do if unduly provoked, kept dislike alive and hot.

With him it had been rather contempt for her airs and vanities, for the uselessness to which, even in a woman, he could not become reconciled. But on this night it was both contempt and a rising bitter resentment that heightened the emotional tumult.

She chose this hour to lay aside the cold, somewhat theatric hauteur it was her wont to assume before him. In its stead she donned an air of triumph, of smiling aggressiveness that he was quick to connect with their meeting in the park. She criticized the knot of his necktie. Several times she contradicted him wantonly.

Finally he rose abruptly and left the room.

Unity, too, rose and, following, overtook him in the firelit drawing room.

"You are rude. I wish to speak with you."

"I'm going up to my study."

"You're supposed to have given up work, I believe."

"I wish to be alone."

"Now, perhaps. You weren't alone this afternoon in the park."

"I didn't want to be then. What is that to you?"

"A wife has some right to consideration, I think."

"A wife—yes. You'll hardly claim the title."

"Do you deny it to me?"

"A wife has something to give her husband. But you— What is it you have to say? By your manner I judge you think it important."

"It is. You're too ill to work, but it seems not too ill to go driving in the park with striking looking women."

With an effort he kept his voice cold. "And you object, is that it?"

"I do."

"Very well. You've registered your protest. Is that all?"

"No, it is not." She leaned sharply forward, forgetting to pose and to smile, the delicate prettiness of face eclipsed by a cloud of vixenish temper. "It is not. I have some self-respect and regard for our position, if you haven't. Do you suppose a husband means nothing to me but a name?"

He glanced hesitatingly toward the door, meditating retreat. Then, with a grim tightening of his lips, he returned his gaze to her.

"You really want an answer? Then, I had supposed a husband means to you a name—and a check book. With inexhaustible leaves."

"So you begrudge me the money I spend! You grow—"

"Your expense account, fully met, is the best answer to that, I think."

"But I want more than money. Do you think a little money—a little paltry money—can repay me for your neglect and selfishness?"

"So you scorn money? It's news to me. But I think you've nothing to complain of."

"Nothing!" she cried. "Is it nothing that I have to go everywhere alone, always having to listen to whispers behind my back of my husband's foolish attempts to play the man about town? You see, you couldn't keep your escapade of last year from me. Or that you've turned the old set against me by cheating poor Timothy Woodhouse out of his last property?"

He winced and flushed painfully at that. She saw and believed she had pierced his armor. She rose again, that she might deliver her final thrust most effectively.

"Do you call it nothing that you, who have no time or thought to spare your wife, brazenly flaunt your women in public, on the streets and in the parks, for all the city to see and gossip about?"

He was standing rigid, both hands gripping his cane, his gaze fixed unwaveringly on her. The tightened lips had become the merest line.

"If you refer to Mrs. Whiting," he began at last steadily, "you will please use more respectful terms."

"You reprove me on her account! This," she cried tragically, "this is too much. I suppose this Mrs. Whiting—if that's her name—is your mistress—perhaps I should say, your latest mistress."

"Why, you—"

The storm burst, choking back speech, but finding an outlet through his eyes. He reached out swiftly and caught her hand in a cruel clutch, crushing the soft useless member until her rings bit into the flesh and she cried out in pain.

"Let me go," she gasped. "You're hurting me."

He released her and sank back into a chair.

"I think we've come to the end of our chapter, Unity. But I'll give you—us—one more chance."

"You'd think I were a criminal!"

"We both are—but let that go. Heretofore you've made our life. And you've failed. Since our first month we've never been really happy, at least in each other. Now let me choose. Let's go away somewhere—"

"To New York or abroad?"

"Not to New York or abroad. To Bethel or some place where we can live a quiet, decent, natural life. Let us begin over again and try to recover what we've lost—or rather what we never had."

"Even You Couldn't Be So Brutal—"

"You are absurd!"

"Is it absurd for a man to ask his wife—you've claimed the title—to share the life he wants and needs?"

"You forget to consider what I would have from such an arrangement."

"You would have me."

She answered with a contemptuous shrug. "I will do nothing so silly. You ask too much."

"Ah! You're franker than I thought you could be. I'm glad you're frank." He rose, looking curiously down at her. "If you look back, you'll find I've never asked you anything until now. I've been content to take—at least, I've taken—only what it suited your whims to give me. And you've given exactly nothing."

"And what," she flung back, "have you given me?"

"From another woman that might be a crushing retort. I've given you very little. But, as it happens, it's been all you wanted. You wouldn't take, you never wanted, the only worth while thing I had to give." He paused again, his manner hardening. "However, all that is ended. I go away tomorrow morning. I don't think I shall ever see you again."

Even then he might have relented, if she had given him excuse. But she gave him no excuse.

"You're asking for a divorce?"

"Yes."

"I suppose," she sneered, "you want to marry that woman, your mistress."

He held himself under rigid self-control. "She isn't my mistress, though I love her. She was the girl I gave up years ago out of loyalty to you."

There was nothing lovely about Unity Truitt just then.

"And now you want to renew the broken romance. Very pretty! But," she laughed in vindictive pleasure in her fancied ability to thwart his desire, "you shan't have her. I don't choose to be a divorced woman. And I know you can't get a divorce without my consent."

"I think you will consent," he said quietly.

"I will not. I don't choose—"

"The choice is with you, of course. But you must understand it. You're through with me in any case. But if you consent to the divorce, I'll make a settlement that will satisfy you. If not, I will make only the allowance I think you've earned."

She went pale at that, the one threat which could reach her. "Why," she gasped, "you couldn't do that. Even you couldn't be so brutal—"

"Choose."

"But you couldn't. You—I must have time to think—"

"You must choose now." He was inflexible.

She sat transfixed, beginning to comprehend the reality of his purpose. Her confidence suddenly melted. Fear shone in her eyes. She rose, and with a piteous pleading gesture, too frightened to be conscious of her hypocrisy, she went to him.

"Why, Mark—Mark, dear! You can't mean that. You couldn't cast me off like this. Why, we're husband and wife and—I know I haven't been fair to you, but I can't let you go. Let me make up this last year to you. Let us go away, as you say, and begin over. We can be happy—"

The stammering incoherent cry halted, silenced by the unrelenting quality of his steady eyes. The outstretched hands fell limply to her sides. She shrank back a step from him.

"I believe—you do—mean it."

"I'm waiting for your choice."

After a little it came, gaspingly.

"I have no choice. I—I must consent."

He turned away and without another word or glance for her, limped heavily out of the room.

CHAPTER XIX.

Bond Though Free.

The Truitt divorce sensation had reached and passed its height.

One day, when the decree was scarcely two weeks old, a man alighted from an incoming express train. He did not look like a roue or the villain of a famous scandal; he himself did not know that he had been heralded in such a role. His doctor would hardly have recognized him. He was still thin and the cane had not been discarded, but he was clear-eyed and healthily bronzed and the limp was far less noticeable than at any time since the accident.

Six months he had spent in the northern wilderness, living in the open, sleeping under the stars, with no company but his own thoughts and a taciturn half-breed Indian. But they had not been lonely months, nor did he think them wasted. For they had brought him to what he was pleased to call a new birth.

The first news of the Truitts' separation had evoked scant interest from the gossips. But as the time set for the trial approached it began to be whispered about that more than the usual stale story of domestic disagreement lay behind the affair. The whisper became an audible chorus. It was a dull season in a year when no important election impended, there was a dearth of spicy news; the newspapers avidly seized this chance to give flavor to their columns. From some source, which might have been identified as Unity's lawyer, reporters were furnished material for innumerable suggestive rumors. Vague but deftly worded innuendoes of Truitt's cruel treatment of his wife appeared, of his sly profligacy, of the one strikingly handsome woman who had captivated his fancy and whom it was supposed he would marry after the divorce. From Truitt, who had completely disappeared, came no denial. His flight and silence were taken as an admission of guilt.

At the trial, to be sure, the testimony was a distinct disappointment. It proved merely commonplace desertion and touched but lightly on only one short-lived period of dissipation during which Truitt, at certain midnight suppers, had shared with other men the more or less interesting company of sundry nameless women. The public, deprived of the scandal for which its mouth had been watering, decided that Mrs. Truitt had been overly magnanimous in thus sparing her husband and let its heated imagination supply the lacking details. Truitt entered no defense and a decree was quickly handed down. Mrs. Truitt at once sailed for Europe.

He hailed a cab and gave the name of a club that to cabby brought visions of a liberal tip. In a few minutes the destination was reached and the passenger descended to the pavement. At that moment a woman, whom he recognized as one of Unity's familiars, approached. He lifted his hat and bowed. She looked squarely at him and passed on without greeting. Red surged into his cheeks.

"Cut!" he muttered. "I suppose Unity's given her version of our smash-up. Unity would."

He paid his fare and entered the portals from which no rich man had ever been excluded. At the desk a well dressed and usually very polite young clerk so far forgot himself as to look his amazement.

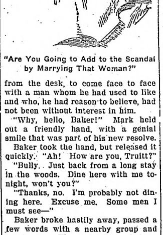
"Mr. Truitt! I supposed you were out of town. I thought—" He stopped in confusion, remembering that it was no part of his business to think.

Mark looked hard at him. "You thought?"

"I thought you were out of town," stammered the clerk.

"I was. And now I'm back," Mark answered dryly. "So I think I'll arrange for rooms here indefinitely."

Nor was this all of the city's greeting to the returned wanderer. The rooms arranged for, he turned away from the desk, to come face to face with a man whom he had used to like and who, he had reason to believe, had not been without interest in him.



"Are You Going to Add to the Scandal by Marrying That Woman?"

"Why, hello, Baker!" Mark held out a friendly hand, with a genial smile that was part of his new resolve.

Baker took the hand, but released it quickly. "Ah! How are you, Truitt?"

"Bully. Just back from a long stay in the woods. Dine here with me tonight, won't you?"

"Thanks, no. I'm probably not dining here. Excuse me. Some men I must see—"

Baker broke hastily away, passed a few words with a nearby group and went out. The ruse was obvious. Mark, feeling as though he had received a blow in the face, stared after the retreating figure. The genial smile faded. Then he went to the rooms he had engaged. Passing the group that had helped out Baker's ruse, he was conscious of their furtive curious glances.

Arrived in his rooms, his first act was to have back newspaper files sent up to him. For two hours he read how, while he was winning back health in the wilderness and planning a life of amity with his fellows, his name had been bandied about on the tongues of slander and gossip. As he read in the light of what had just happened the amazing accumulation of suggested filth, only here and there brushing the outer edges of fact, utter bewilderment filled him. Shirley's brief communication, making mention of "some talk," received at the edge of the wilderness, had not prepared him for this.

"It's all a pack of dirty lies," he cried. "How could these men, who've seen me go in and out every day, believe it? What rotters they must be themselves to be able to believe it! By God! I'll—" He stopped, with a sudden feeling of dismay. "Why—why, I can do nothing."

He was helpless.

"Then I am not free! She has put a mark on me that a lifetime can't rub out. Must we pay forever for our mistakes? . . ."

One evening, when his residence at the club had continued about three weeks, the affair came to a climax. He was entering the grill for dinner. At the sound of his name from a nearby group of diners, he halted involuntarily.

"That's all well enough," one of the diners was saying. "A club's a club and, of course, we have to allow a certain latitude. Still, when it becomes the refuge for a man so notorious we couldn't have him in our homes—" The speaker was checked by a warning kick.

Mark, sweeping the group with eyes from which the mask had momentarily fallen, met Baker's embarrassed gaze. With a contemptuous smile, he passed on to his own table and ordered a dinner which he made such show of eating as inward rage and pain allowed.

His coffee and cigar had just been brought when Baker crossed the room and stood by his table.

"Truitt—" he began uncertainly.

"Well?" Mark's upward glance was not welcoming.

"May I sit down for a minute?"

"Aren't you afraid of catching the plague?"

"I'm more afraid of being kicked for my impertinence."

"I understand," said Mark grimly. "I'm a pretty tough customer, but I don't commit assaults in public. Sit down."

Baker sat down, looking earnestly across the table at Mark. "Look here, Truitt. There are things on both sides of your fence I don't approve. But I particularly disapprove this Pharisee business. I felt like a cad when you caught us over there. I want to apologize for my part in it, though it wasn't a speaking part."

"All right." Mark lighted his cigar. "You've done your duty."

"But this is a little more than duty. I—" Baker hesitated. "Oh, hang it all! Some things become so painful only plain speech serves. You don't need to be told of the stories going around. Lately it's occurred to me that you've been letting us take them at face, without trying to contradict them. That's the thing I'd do myself—if I were in the right. But it can be carried to extremes. Have I your permission to say that the stories are—let us say, overdrawn?"

"You have not. Life's too short to enter into a contest with rumor."

"But your silence—"

"Is my affair," Mark answered gruffly, rising. "You may say to your meticulous friend that I'm about to resign from this club."

Baker, too, rose, looking at Mark keenly.

"Oh, come, Truitt," he began, "that's—"

But Mark cut him short. "At least it will save him and his sort the necessity of setting a precedent that would decimate the club. Good evening."

Henley, who had been out of the city when Mark returned, came back soon after the latter took up his residence in the hotel. Mark approached him with the inward shrinking that preceded every new meeting just then.

"You've picked up physically," Henley remarked after a cool handshake.

"Six months in the woods accounts for that."

"I'd think, if it was doing you so much good, you'd have stayed."

"In other words?"

"In other words," said Henley, "why did you come back now?"

Mark laughed hollowly. "I didn't know I'd become a notorious character."

"How, in heaven's name," Henley exclaimed, "did you let yourself get caught in a divorce court scandal? I'd have thought that you, of all men, if you had to play the fool, would at least have used finesse."

So even Henley believed the rumors!

"At any rate, no one but myself is hurt."

"That's not true. Every one who had anything to do with you is more or less hurt. The company is reflected on. I," Henley concluded with an air that declared the indictment to be complete and unanswerable, "I am besmirched, because we're known to be in so many things together."

"That," Mark returned coldly, "can be easily cured. We can wind up our affairs. And I'm ready to resign from the company."

"You can't cure the fact that we have been together. And you can't resign. Are you going to add to the scandal by marrying that woman?"

"What woman?" Mark's voice was cool and steady.

"The one that turned your head and your wife was smart enough to discover."

"You've heard names, then?"

"No," growled Henley. "She's as mysterious as the rest of your didoes."

"As mythical, you mean," Mark answered in a voice that did not betray his relief. "There was no woman."

"What! You mean these stories aren't true?"

"You'd seen me almost every day for years. You might have guessed that."

"But last year—those women—"

"An experiment in idiocy—nothing worse. There were no women, except at arm's length."

Henley surveyed him keenly. "Then how did these stories get out? But you needn't answer. I can guess. A woman is never clever except when she's up to mischief.

"However," he went on, "this puts a different face on the matter. As you say, I might have guessed the truth." This, for Henley, was abject apology.

Mark shook his head. "My resignation holds just the same."

"Are you going to let a little talk drive you out?" Henley demanded.

"It isn't that. I had decided before I knew of it. I'm tired of the scramble. I want—peace." Mark laughed discordantly. "And I'm getting it with a vengeance."

"As much as you'll ever get it," Henley returned promptly. "I know what you want. Who doesn't? Some time or other every man wants, or thinks he wants, peace. And if we had it, we'd want to die. I told you once before—things are. Accept them, fit yourself to them, forget theories that lead nowhere. Pick out the thing you want most and fight until you get it. Then fight to keep it. Besides, you aren't a misfit. The trouble with you is, your strength is your greatest weakness—you've too much imagination. And you're not a well man yet. Go back to your woods until you're cured. Then you'll feel the itch to get into the scramble again and break a few heads."

But Henley the philosopher had done. He resumed his usual crisp manner.

"Moreover, you can't resign. The new agreement with the men comes up next year and the Quinby company faces the fight of its existence. We'll need every good head we've got. And if that isn't enough, your withdrawal would leave me to fight Quinby alone. And—I made you, don't forget that. You've got what you wanted out of the company and me. You can't drop out easily now and shirk the responsibilities."

"You say, can't?"

"I say, can't. You've got a sense of obligation, haven't you?"

"If I have," said Mark grimly, "it's the last proof that I am a misfit."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

DEFECTIVE PAGE

WESTERN CANADA'S OFFER IS AMERICA'S OPPORTUNITY

GROW GRAINS IN WESTERN CANADA, ENJOY AN EXCELLENT CLIMATE AND MAKE MONEY.

With the European wheat fields desolated, and the farming population more than decimated, there will be for a number of years a demand for food products that has not been experienced in the memory of the present generation. Everyone regrets the horrible war that has brought this about. Its effects are felt not only in Europe, but in every part of the American continent. Many lines of business have been hurt, but only temporarily it is hoped. Financial stringency is being talked of. There is a way of overcoming these things; and Western Canada offers the solution in its immense agricultural area, when the possibility of retrieving losses, making assured gains, and at the same time becoming a factor in providing the world with the one great requisite—wheat—is so pronounced that it cannot be overlooked.

There are several ways in which excellent farming lands can be secured in the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, and also British Columbia.

In the first place the offer of the Dominion Government of 160 acres of land free to the settler is something not given by any other country. Conditions of settlement are easy. Live upon the land six months in each year, for a period of three years, cultivate about thirty acres, and erect a habitable house. Instead of cultivation, the keeping of a certain number of head of cattle will carry with it the same value. Many of these homesteads may be had in the open prairie area, where every acre can be put under cultivation, but to the man with limited means, in the park area, lying north of the central portion of three of the provinces named, there is afforded the best chance. In this park country are beautiful groves of poplar and willow, small lakes and streams, and sufficient open area to enable one to go into immediate cultivation for crops of wheat, oats, barley and flax, any one of which does wonderfully well, giving prolific yields. In due time when more land is required for cultivation, these groves may be cut down at small cost. In the meantime, however, they have been valuable in providing fuel and shelter for cattle, which thrive wonderfully on the wild grasses that grow in abundance.

Another plan is to purchase from some of the railway companies who hold large tracts, or from some responsible land company. The prices asked are exceedingly low and the terms easy. Whether one may decide to locate in the open prairie area or in the park country the land will be found to be of the same general texture, a rich black or chocolate colored loam on a clay subsoil.

Again attention is drawn to the fact of the great opportunities for farming that are offered in Western Canada. Already a number of holders of tracts of land there, who are residents of the United States—business men, merchants, lawyers, bankers—men of foresight and keen knowledge of business, have decided to cultivate the lands they have been holding for speculation and wait no longer for a buyer to turn up. They are acting wisely.

Canadian laws are as fair and just as can be found in the civilized world. Military service is not compulsory, nor is there one ounce of coercion used. Anything that is given to Great Britain whether in money or men is entirely voluntary. There is no drafting nor conscription of any kind. Already over sixty thousand of the young men of Canada have volunteered for service, and thirty-five thousand have gone forward, many of these having left their farms in their love for Great Britain and a desire to fight for their country. As a consequence, many farms may be left untilled. Therefore Canada invites others to come in and take their places. This then is the opportunity for the American who wishes to better his own condition.—Advertisement.

Before Congress of Vienna.

One hundred years ago Alexander I of Russia, the king of Prussia and other sovereigns, accompanied by a large retinue of diplomatists and soldiers, made their solemn entry into Vienna to take part in the congress which was to readjust the map of Europe. The thrones which Napoleon had overturned were to be righted and the old despots, whom he had dismissed were to be given back their scepters. The first weeks of the congress, however, were not devoted to the serious business at hand, but were spent in a succession of magnificent festivities. Notwithstanding the financial ruin of the country, Austria appropriated sums amounting to thousands of dollars daily to provide balls, banquets, concerts and other entertainments for the visiting monarchs and their advisers.

Not Being Neutral.

"Are you denying yourself anything in order to help war-torn Europe?"

"Sure; I'm going without limburger so there will be more for the Germans."

A man with money is welcome anywhere—if he will let his companion do the talking.

Drivers of Moscow are not allowed to carry whips.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

$281,203,482 CROP RAISED IN STATE

REPORT OF IMMIGRATION COMMISSIONER COVERS STAPLES FOR 1914.

THINKS CORN WILL WIN OUT

Official Declares Wheat Acreage Will Be Cut in Two Within a Few Years Because Crop Is Not so Sure Here as Corn.

St. Paul.—The estimated value of Minnesota's 1914 staple crop is $281,203,482.60, according to figures made public by Fred D. Sherman, immigration commissioner.

Estimate Covers Staples.

Estimates were made on corn, potatoes, oats, wheat, barley, rye, flax and hay.

The fact that the acreage planted in corn is increasing each year is good news to the farmers, said Mr. Sherman. He predicted that in a few years the wheat acreage in Minnesota will be cut in two and the corn acreage doubled.

The yields and values follow:

Product.	Yield.	Value.
Corn	120,613,673	$78,398,887.45
Potatoes	37,699,065	15,079,626.00
Oats	101,908,760	18,725,328.80
Wheat	37,013,319	40,714,650.90
Barley	41,659,493	27,078,670.45
Rye	6,289,360	6,289,360.00
Flax	3,428,740	5,143,110.00
Hay	*8,161,259	89,773,849.00

*Tons.

Oats Gain; Wheat Drops.

According to the figures, there was a slight increase in the oats acreage. In 1913 there were 3,053,266 acres of oats, and in 1914, 3,106,337 acres. The yield this year was 33½ bushels to the acre, and last year's report was 44.6 bushels to the acre.

The 1913 wheat acreage reported was 3,136,907 acres, and in 1914, 2,907,156 acres. Last year's yield reported by this department was 17.9 bushels, and this year 13.26 bushels per acre.

There also was a decrease in the barley acreage this year of 23,607 acres. The yield reported for 1913 was 29.9 bushels to the acre, and in 1914, 26.4.

The 1913 rye acreage was given as 320,130 acres, and the 1914 acreage is 323,038 acres. Last year's yield was 23.6 bushels to the acre, against 21.07 this year.

Flax Also Declines.

There was a slight decrease in the flax acreage this year. The 1913 acreage of flax was 364,003, and the 1914 was 354,220. The 1913 yield was given as 11.9 bushels, and the 1914 at 9.3. The total production for 1913 was 4,106,794 bushels against 3,428,740 bushels for 1914, a decrease of 678,054 bushels.

The 1913 hay acreage was 3,949,040, and the 1914 figures give 4,097,021 acres; an increase of 147,981 acres. The yield shows a slight increase; 1913 was given as 1.91 tons to the acre, while 1914 gives an even 2 tons to the acre.

"I look for Minnesota crop yields to gradually increase in the future as they have in the past," said Mr. Sherman. "Our farmers are becoming scientific every year. More attention is being paid to the selection of seed and the preparation of the seed bed, so that with favorable climatic conditions, with which Minnesota is usually blessed, I believe that our yields will continue to climb.

"Corn always is a sure crop in Minnesota, and is much more profitable than wheat, while wheat is uncertain as to yield as well as to price. I believe in a few years Minnesota's wheat acreage will be cut in two and her corn acreage doubled."

Cuyuna Ore Shipping Ends.

Brainerd.—Shipping has ceased on the Cuyuna range. The underground mines stockpiling are the Armour No. 2 at Crosby and the Kennedy at Cuyuna. The Armour No. 2 is hoisting about 20,000 tons a month and the Kennedy about 16,000 tons a month. The Adams, an underground mine at Oreland, has closed for the winter. The Cuyuna-Mille Lac and the Cuyuna-Duluth mines of the American Manganese Manufacturing company have closed down temporarily. The Pennington pit mine has closed for the winter. The Rowe pit mine has a shovel stripping and it is said a $1,000,000 concentrator plant is contemplated if the Little Rabbit lake can be dammed for the purpose. The Thompson pit mine at Crosby is stripping.

Girl Burned to Death.

Manchester, Minn.—Miss Irene Coleman, station agent of the Minneapolis and St. Louis Railway at Manchester, Minn., was burned to death in a fire which destroyed the depot. She formerly lived in Minneapolis. When the body was taken from the ruins an hour after the fire it was found that her charred hand was still clutching a red signal lantern. At the office of the chief dispatcher of the M. & St. L., it was said that Miss Coleman's home is in Minneapolis.

HAMMOND PLEDGES SUPPORT

NEW GOVERNOR TO URGE REFORM MEASURE.

Confers With Members of the Efficiency and Economy Commission.

St. Paul.—Members of the efficiency and economy commission have told Winfield Scott Hammond, governor elect, that they would stand back of the bill as they had prepared it and urge the legislature to pass it without change. It was argued that the bill must either be passed or go down to defeat in its present form, and if it did go down to defeat it would be easy to place the responsibility.

On Efficiency Basis.

The governor elect pledged his support to the reorganization of state departments and said that he would urge in his message such a reform.

"If the incoming legislature does nothing more than pass the necessary appropriation bill and reorganizes the state departments on a basis of efficiency and economy it will go down in history as one of the most useful legislatures that has served the state of Minnesota," said Mr. Hammond.

The commission, represented by half its membership, presented the bill and explained it to the governor elect at a conference held at the West Hotel. C. P. Craig, chairman of the commission, led the discussion for it.

It was decided that the commission's bill will be introduced in the House by L. C. Spooner and Thomas Kneeland. The names of eight or nine other House members will be added as sponsors. In the Senate, Senators F. E. Putman and J. D. Sullivan, with a number of others, will introduce the bill.

The legislature will be asked to appoint a joint committee of House and Senate to consider the bill, to hold public hearings and to ask for suggestions from the general public.

Mr. Hammond indicated to the members of the commission that he believed the reorganization of state departments the most important issue to come before the Legislature. He asked for detailed information on many of the changes suggested.

The commission's bill does away with the multiplicity of boards, places the administration in the hands of a few heads of departments to be appointed by the Governor and places all minor state offices on a Civil Service basis.

Members pointed out that the cost of operating the State Government under the proposed plan may not represent a smaller money expenditure than at the present time, but that it would be much more efficient and as such would be money saving.

SANATORIUM FOR CHILDREN

Protestant Women Buy Oakwood Inn for Treating Tuberculous Young.

St. Paul.—Oakwood Inn, at Bass lake, soon will be turned into a modern sanatorium for the prevention of tuberculosis in children. All arrangements for the transfer of the property to the League of Protestant Women have been made and plans for remodeling the structure are under consideration.

E. P. Davis and J. A. Lagerman conducted the negotiations for the property for the league.

The league recently raised $8,000 in St. Paul and $7,000 from outside sources and purchased the Oakwood Inn with this money.

Physicians agree that Oakwood Inn furnishes one of the best locations in this section of the country for a sanatorium of the character planned. It is on the lake shore and eleven acres of land are included in the deal.

Dr. Longstreet Taylor will be in charge of the sanatorium.

New 500,000 Bushel Elevator.

Winona.—The initial announcement for 1915 additions to the industries of Winona is the 500,000-bushel capacity elevator to be erected by the Bay State Milling company. The structure will be so located as to permit of railroad tracks from three roads. The architecture and general plan will be the latest design and in many respects different than any grain elevator ever built. It is to be of reinforced concrete and steel, absolutely fireproof. There are to be eight round tanks over 100 feet in height, and in addition a working house of greater height to contain machinery for the handling and cleaning of wheat. The contract has been let to the Barnett & Record company of Minneapolis.

Hurt in Auto Accident.

Minneapolis, Nov. 25.—Two men and a woman were injured, two automobiles were damaged, and an express office was wrecked when Mrs. Selma Ebert forgot that her automobile was thrown into reverse gear as she cranked it at Marquette avenue and Sixth street. The machine backed in a wide circle and crashed through the plate glass window of the Wells-Fargo Express company branch at 519 Marquette avenue. With the engine still running the machine forged backward into the office.

PARDON AWAITING BARRETT

GOVERNOR DROPS PROCEEDINGS AGAINST DETROIT MAN.

Will Be Granted His Freedom If He Returns in January—Friends Busy.

Minneapolis, Nov. 27.—Alfred Dawson Barrett, who escaped from St. Cloud reformatory Sept. 24, 1912, and who is now a man of family and standing in Detroit, Mich, can rest easy until Jan. 11 at least.

Members of the state board of pardons have decided to drop further proceedings to secure the extradition of Barrett. Assistant Attorney General Weeks was telegraphed to drop the case and Mr. Barrett was notified that if he makes formal application for pardon and appears before the board at the regular meeting in January he would undoubtedly be given clemency.

MINIMUM WAGE LAW INVALID

Ramsey County District Judge Gives Two Grounds for So Holding—Question to Be Appealed.

St. Paul.—Court orders have been issued by Judge Frederick M. Catlin of the Ramsey county district court to restrain State Auditor Samuel G. Iverson and members of the minimum wage commission from expending further money of the state in the work of the commission. Judge Catlin's order suspends the commission's order fixing a minimum wage for women.

Attorney General Lyndon A. Smith announced that the decision will be appealed to the supreme court.

Judge Catlin in his decision said there is no necessity for the minimum wage law to protect the safety, health or morals of women and children workers. "The actual working of the law would be apt to increase immorality if morals are dependent upon wages," he says.

The law was held to be unconstitutional by Judge Catlin on the ground that it delegated legislative power to an appointive commission and placed in that commission a discretion as to whether there should be a minimum wage.

The second constitutional ground on which Judge Catlin based his decision is the abridgement of the right of individuals to contract. The law interferes with both the employee and the employer, according to the court.

KASSON BEAUTIFIES STREETS

Free Entertainment Provided by Commercial Club to "Show Off" New Lights.

Kasson.—Kasson has just celebrated the completion of its new "white way" lighting system. There are eight posts to the block and each has five lights except on side streets where the posts are of the three-light type.

The celebration was the result of a general invitation by the Kasson Commercial club extended to surrounding towns and country. Everything was free; the Commercial club footed the bill.

Motion picture shows were conducted in the opera house and a free supper was served in the club rooms. When the lights flashed on the enthusiasm ran high. Church bells, fire alarms, automobile horns and whistles united to increase the noise.

Miss Francis Brown, daughter of the mayor, pressed the button in the lighting plant which gave Kasson its new system.

The town has completed a sewer system at a cost of about $25,000.

GIRL IS BURNED TO DEATH

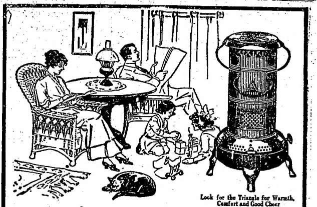
Charred Body Found in Bathtub, Near Which Was Empty Gasoline Bottle.

Minneapolis, Nov. 27.—Mr. and Mrs. Frank Maechtlen broke down the locked door of the bathroom in their home at 3140 Bloomington avenue and found the charred body of their daughter, Lillian, in the bathtub. Near it was an empty gasoline bottle and on a stand near by was a bottle with a few drops of carbolic acid. The girl's clothing was almost completely burned. The parents had been absent from the house all day.

The girl had been suffering from poor health for a year and this fact is ascribed as a reason for possible suicide. Coroner Seashore has reserved verdict for further investigation, but stated his belief that the girl had taken her own life. From the condition of the body he was unable to ascertain whether she had taken any of the acid. She was 28 years old.

Hill City Dines on Moose.

Hill City.—The second annual moose banquet of the Hill City Commercial club fully demonstrated the progressiveness of the Hill lake country. Fred D. Sherman, immigration commissioner, and D. C. Willard, of the Northern Pacific railway, were the principal speakers. They complimented the club on its publicity campaign, urging that it be kept up the coming year. Both promised to assist in developing this country in every way they could.



Look for the Triangle for Warmth, Comfort and Good Cheer

Contentment

If you have ever shivered in chilly rooms because it was too early to start the regular fire, or frozen through some severe cold spell that was too much for furnace or stoves, go today to your nearest dealer and look at the NEW PERFECTION HEATER—the insurance against cold weather discomfort.

Strike a match and you have a clean, convenient, economical fire that you can carry around with you. Fire to dress by in the morning, in the bath room and in rooms that are hard to heat all the season through.

Makes the family happy the first chilly evenings. Watch them smile when they gather 'round the NEW PERFECTION.

Burns 10 hours on one gallon of oil—can't smoke. No trouble to re-wick. In the New Perfection wick and carrier are combined. Fresh wicks are ready to put in, trimmed, smooth and ready to light. For best results use Perfection Oil.

PERFECTION SMOKELESS OIL HEATER

Your dealer has the NEW PERFECTION Oil Heater on exhibition. He will be glad to show you the different models. Send us your name on a postal and we will foward you the NEW PERFECTION Book.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY (AN INDIANA CORPORATION) Chicago, Ill.

Felt Safe in That.

"How many hotels here?" asked the man who had just left the train.

"Two," answered the man who was standing on the platform.

"Which would you recommend?"

"Well, I'm stopping at the Hotel Hornswoggle. I'd recommend the other one."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

FOR SKIN-TORTURED BABIES.

A hot bath with Cuticura Soap followed by a light application of Cuticura Ointment, gently rubbed on the surface, afford immediate relief and point to speedy healment of sleep-destroying eczemas rashes, itchings, burnings, scalings and crustings of the skin and scalp of infants and children, bringing rest to worn-out, anxious mothers and peace to distracted households. For free sample each with 32 p. Skin Book, address postcard Cuticura, Dept. X, Boston. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

They Live on—Us.

John Sloan, the well-known painter, pointed out at a tea in a pale stone palace in Fifth avenue the doubtful authenticity of a Correggio.

At the end of his demonstration Mr Sloan adjusted his pince-nez, looked about him in his grave, whimsical way and said:

"Ladies, the old masters are indeed immortal. Most of them are still producing chefs d'oeuvres at the rate of nine or ten a week for the galleries of our multimillionaires."

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it

Bears the Signature of Chas H. Fletcher

In Use For Over 30 Years.

Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

Serious Charge.

"What's the trouble at Wombat's house?"

"Wombat accuses his wife of using dumdum biscuit."

Father Knew.

Her father's voice floated from the head of the stairway.

"Geraldine?"

"Yes, papa."

"Has that young man gone?"

"No, papa; it's only ten o'clock."

"Send him home right away, and before he goes tell him it's midnight so he can start his watch and the hall clock again."

YOUR OWN DRUGGIST WILL TELL YOU

Try Murine Eye Remedy for Red, Weak, Watery Eyes and Granulated Eyelids; No Smarting—just Eye comfort. Write for Book of the Eye by mail Free. Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago.

As Beans in Boston.

"Strange things happen in this life."

"For instance?"

"I recently met a man who lived for two years in Philadelphia and never heard of scrapple."

Backache Spells Danger

Do you know that your bad back may be merely a hint of some hidden, deep-seated kidney disorder? Census records show that deaths from kidney disorders have increased 72% in 20 years. People can't seem to realize that the first pain in the back, the first disorder of the urine, demands instant attention—that it may be a signal of coming rheumatism, gravel, dropsy or fatal Bright's disease. The best prevention of serious kidney disorders is prompt treatment—the best medicine is Doan's Kidney Pills.

A Minnesota Case

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

Mrs. J. Kakuschke, 206 Logan St., Waseca, Minn., says: "Off and on for years I had kidney trouble and rheumatic pains. My arms and limbs swelled and I had cold chills. My whole system was filled with uric acid. Before I had used Doan's Kidney Pills long, the swelling went down, the pain and weakness was relieved and I felt better in every way. When I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills since they have never failed to benefit me right away."

Get Doan's at Any Store, 50c a Box

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

FOSTER-MILBURN CO., BUFFALO, N. Y.

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 49-1914.

From Girlhood

THE change may be critical and cause untold suffering in after-life. The modern young woman is often a "bundle of nerves"—"high strung"—fainting spells—emotional—frequently blue and dissatisfied with life. Such girls should be helped over this distressing stage in life—by a woman's tonic and nervine—that has proven successful for over 40 years.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a keen enemy to the physical weaknesses of woman. A medicine prepared by regular graduated physician of unusual experience in treating woman's diseases—carefully adapted to work in harmony with the most delicate feminine constitution.

It is now obtainable in liquid or sugar-coated tablet form at the drug store—or send 50 one-cent stamps for a trial box, to Buffalo.

Every woman may write fully and confidentially to Dr. Pierce and his staff of physicians and Specialists at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and may be sure that her case will receive careful, conscientious, confidential consideration, and that experienced medical advice will be given to her free.

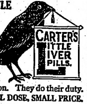
to Womanhood

DR. PIERCE'S PLEASANT PELLETS regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar coated, tiny granules easy to take as candy.

The Wretchedness of Constipation

Can quickly be overcome by CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Purely vegetable—act surely and gently on the liver. Cure Biliousness, Headache, Dizziness, and Indigestion. They do their duty.



CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM

A toilet preparation of merit. Helps to eradicate dandruff. For Restoring Color and Beauty to Gray or Faded Hair. 50c. and $1.00 at Druggists.

SPECIAL TO WOMEN

The most economical, cleansing and germicidal of all antiseptics is

Paxtine

A soluble Antiseptic Powder to be dissolved in water as needed.

As a medicinal antiseptic for douches in treating catarrh, inflammation or ulceration of nose, throat, and that caused by feminine ills it has no equal. For ten years the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. has recommended Paxtine in their private correspondence with women, which proves its superiority. Women who have been cured say it is "worth its weight in gold." At druggists. 50c. large box, or by mail. The Paxton Toilet Co., Boston, Mass.

MEN ONLY Great fun. Get the laugh on your friends harmless. Vestpocket. Mechanical Joker. Ten cents silver. BROOK, A 3218 Pillsbury Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

INTENTIONAL DUPLICATE EXPOSURE

DEFECTIVE PAGE

SIMPLY SKIRTS

A Business Adventure of Emma McChesney

By EDNA FERBER

Author of "Dawn O'Hara," "Battered Side Down," etc.

Copyright by Frederick A. Stokes Company

They may differ on the subjects of cigars, samples, hotels, ball teams and pinochle hands, but two things there are upon which they stand united. Every member of that fraternity which is condemned to a hotel bedroom, or a sleeper berth by night, and chained to a sample case by day agrees in this, first: That it isn't what it used to be. Second: If only they could find an opening for a nice, paying gents' furnishing business in a live little town that wasn't swamped with that kind of thing already they'd buy it and settle down like a white man, by George! and quit this peddling. The missus hates it anyhow; and the kids know the iceman better than they do their own dad.

On the morning that Mrs. Emma McChesney (representing T. A. Buck, Featherloom Petticoats) finished her talk with Miss Hattie Stitch, head of Kiser & Bloch's skirt and suit department, she found herself in a rare mood. She hated her job; she loathed her yellow sample cases; she longed to call Miss Stich a green-eyed cat; and she wished that she had chosen some easy and pleasant way of earning a living, like doing plain and fancy washing an ironing. Emma McChesney had been selling Featherloom Petticoats on the road for almost ten years, and she was famed throughout her territory for her sane sunniness, and her love of her work. Which speaks badly for Miss Hattie Stitch.

Miss Hattie Stitch hated Emma McChesney with all the hate that a flat-chested, thin-haired woman has for one who can wear a large 36 without one inch of alteration, and a hat that turns sharply away from the face. For 46 weeks in the year Miss Stitch existed in Kiser & Bloch's store at River Falls. For six weeks, two in spring, two in fall, and two in mid-winter, Hattie lived in New York, with a capital L. She went there to select the season's newest models (slightly modified for River Falls), but incidentally she took a regular trousseau with her.

All day long Hattie picked skirt and suit models with unerring good taste and business judgment. At At night she was a creature transformed. Every house of which Hattie bought did its duty like a soldier and a gentleman. Nightly Hattie powdered her neck and arms, performed sacred rites over her hair and nails, donned a gown so complicated that a hotel maid had to hook her up the back, and was ready for her evening's escort at eight. There wasn't a hat in a grill room from one end of the Crooked Cow-path to the other that was more wildly barbaric than Hattie's, even in these sane and simple days when the bird of paradise has become the national bird. The buyer of suits for a thriving department store in a bustling little middle-Western town isn't to be neglected. Whenever a show came to River Falls Hattie would look bored, pass a weary hand over her glossy coiffure and say: "Oh, yes. Clever little show. Saw it two winters ago in New York. This won't be the original company, of course." The year that Hattie came back wearing a set of skunk everyone thought it was lynx until Hattie drew attention to what she called the "brown tone" in it. After that Old Lady Heinz got her old skunk furs out of the moth balls and tobacco and newspapers that had preserved them, and her daughter cut them up into bands for the bottom of her skirt, and the cuffs of her coat. When Kiser & Bloch had their fall and spring openings the town came ostensibly to see the new styles, but really to gaze at Hattie in a new confection, undulating up and down the department, talking with a heavy Eastern accent about this or that being "smart" or "good this year," or having "a world of style," and sort of trailing her toes after her to give a clinging, Grecian line, like pictures of Ethel Barrymore when she was thin. The year that Hattie confided to some one that she was wearing only scant bloomers beneath her flaky silk the floor was mobbed, and they had to call in reserves from the basement ladies-and-misses-ready-to-wear.

Miss Stitch came to New York in March. On the evening of her arrival she dined with Fat Ed Meyers of the Strauss Sans-Silk Skirt company. He informed her that she looked like a kid, and that that was some classy little gown, and it wasn't every woman she could wear that kind of thing and get away with it. It took a certain style. Hattie smiled, and hummed off-key to the tune the orchestra was playing, and Ed told her it was a shame she didn't do something with that voice.

"I have something to tell you," said Hattie. "Just before I left I had a talk with old Kiser. Or rather, he had a talk with me. You know I have pretty much my own way in my department. Pity if I couldn't have, I made it. Well, Kiser wanted to know why I didn't buy Featherlooms. I said we had no call for 'em, and he came back with figures to prove we're losing a good many hundreds a year by not carrying them. He said the Strass Sans-Silk skirt isn't what it used to be. And he's right."

"Oh, say—" objected Ed Meyers.

"It's true," insisted Hattie. "But I couldn't tell him that I didn't buy Featherlooms because McChesney made me tired. Besides, she never entertains me when I'm in New York. Not that I'd go to the theater in the evening with a woman, because I wouldn't, but— Say, listen. Why don't you make a play for her job? As long as I've got to put in a heavy line of Featherlooms you may as well get the benefit of it. You could double your commissions. I'll bet that woman makes her I-don't-know-how-many thousands a year."

Ed Meyers' naturally ruddy complexion took on a richer tone, and he dropped his fork hastily. As he gazed at Miss Stitch his glance was not more than half flattering. "How you women do love each other, don't you! You don't. I don't mind telling you my firm's cutting down its road force, and none of us knows who's going to be beheaded next. But—well—a guy wouldn't want to take a job away from a woman—especially a square little trick like McChesney. Of course she's played me a couple of low-down deals and I promised to get back at her, but that's business. But—"

"So's this," interrupted Miss Hattie Stitch. "And I don't know that she is so square. Let me tell you that I heard she's no better than she might be. I have it on good authority that three weeks ago, at the River house, in our town—"

Their heads came close together over the little, rose-shaded restaurant table.

At 11 o'clock next morning Fat Ed Meyers walked into the office of the T. A. Buck Featherloom Petticoat company and asked to see old T. A.

"He's in Europe," a stenographer informed him, "spaing, and sprudeling, and badening. Want to see T. A. Junior?"

"T. A. Junior!" almost shouted Ed Meyers. "You don't mean to tell me that fellow's taken hol—"

"Believe me. That's why Featherlooms are soaring and Sans-Silks are sinking. Nobody would have believed it. T. A. Junior's got a live wire looking like a stick of licorice. When they thought old T. A. was going to die, young T. A. seemed to straighten out all of a sudden and take hold. It's about time. He must be almost forty, but he don't show it. I don't know, he ain't so good-looking, but he's got swell eyes."

Ed Meyers turned the knob of the door marked "Private," and entered, smiling. Ed Meyers had a smile so cherubic that involuntarily you armed yourself against it.

"Hel-lo Buck!" he called jovially. "I hear that at last you're taking an interest in skirts—other than on the hoof." And he offered young T. A. a large, dark cigar with a fussy-looking band encircling its middle. Young T. A. looked at it disinterestedly, and spake, saying:

"What are you after?"

"Why, I just dropped in—" began Ed Meyers lamely.

"The dropping," observed T. A. Junior, "is bad around here this morning. I have one little formula for all visitors today, regardless of whether they're book agents or skirt salesmen. That is, what can I do for you?"

Ed Meyers tucked his cigar neatly into the extreme right corner of his mouth, pushed his brown derby far back on his head, rested his strangely lean hands on his plump knees, and fixed T. A. Junior with a shrewd blue eye.

"That suits me fine," he agreed. "I never was one to beat around the bush. Look here. I know skirts from the draw-string to the ruffle. It's a woman's garment, but a man's line. There's 50 reasons why a woman can't handle it like a man. For one thing the packing cases weigh 25 pounds each, and she's as dependent on a packer and a porter as a baby is on its mother. Another is that if a man has to get up to make a train at 4 a. m. he don't require 25 minutes to fasten down three sets of garters, and braid his hair, and hook his waist up the back, and miss his train. And he don't have neuralgic headaches. Then, the head of a skirt department in a store is a woman, ten times out of ten. And lemme tell you," he leaned forward earnestly, "a woman don't like to buy of a woman. Don't ask me why. I'm too modest. But it's the truth."

"Well?" said young T. A., with the rising inflection.

"Well," finished Ed Meyers, "I like your stuff. I think it's great. It's a seller, with the right man to push it. I'd like to handle it. And I'll guarantee I could double the returns from your middle-western territory."

T. A. Junior had strangely translucent eyes. Their luminous quality had an odd effect upon any one on whom he happened to turn them. He had been scrawling meaningless curlycues on a piece of paper as Ed Meyers talked. Now he put down the pencil, turned, and looked Ed Meyers fairly in the eye.

"You mean you want Mrs. McChesney's territory?" he asked quietly.

"Well, yes, I do," confessed Ed Meyers, without a blush.

Young T. A. swung back to his desk, tore from the pad before him the piece of paper on which he had been scrawling, crushed it, and tossed it into the wastebasket with an air of finality.

"Take the second elevator down," he said. "The nearest one's out of order."

For a moment Ed Meyers stared, his fat face purpling. "Oh, very well," he said, rising. "I just made you a business proposition, that's all. I thought I was talking to a business man. Now, old T. A.—"

"That'll be about all," observed T. A. Junior, from his desk.

Ed Meyers started toward the door. Then he paused, turned, and came back to his chair. His heavy jaw jutted out threateningly.

"No, it ain't all, either. I didn't want to mention it, and if you'd treated me like a gentleman, I wouldn't have. But I want to say to you that McChesney's giving this firm a black eye. Morals don't figure with a man on the road, but when a woman breaks into this game, she's got to be on the level."

T. A. Junior rose. The blonde stenographer who had made the admiring remark anent his eyes would have appreciated those features now. They glowed luminously into Ed Meyers' pale blue ones until that gentleman drooped his eyelids in confusion. He seemed at a disadvantage in every way, as T. A. Junior's lean, graceful height towered over the fat man's bulk.

"I don't know Mrs. McChesney," said T. A. Junior. "I haven't even seen her in six years. My interest in the business is very recent. I do know that my father swears she's the best salesman he has on the road. Before you go any further I want to tell you that you'll have to prove what you just implied, so definitely, and conclusively, and convincingly that when you finish you'll have an ordinary engineering blue-print looking like a Turner landscape. Begin."

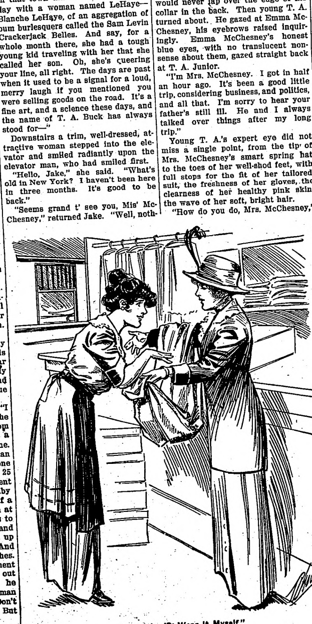
Ed Meyers, still standing, clutched his derby tightly and began.

"She's a looker, Emma is. And smooth! As the top of your desk. But she's getting careless. Now a decent, hard-working, straight girl like Hattie Stitch, of Kiser & Bloch's, River Falls, won't buy of her. You'll find you don't sell that firm. And they buy big, too. Why, last summer I had it from the clerk of the hotel in that town that she ran around all day with a woman named LeHaye—Blanche LeHaye, of an aggregation of bum burlesquers called the Sam Levin Crackerjack Belles. And say, for a whole month there, she had a tough young kid traveling with her that she called her son. Oh, she's queering your line, all right. The days are past when it used to be a signal for a loud, merry laugh if you mentioned you were selling goods on the road. It's a fine art, and a science these days, and the name of T. A. Buck has always stood for—"

Downstairs a trim, well-dressed, attractive woman stepped into the elevator and smiled radiantly upon the elevator man, who had smiled first.

"Hello, Jake," she said. "What's old in New York? I haven't been here in three months. It's good to be back."

"Seems grand t' see you, Mis' McChesney," returned Jake. "Well, nothin' much stirrin'. Whatcha think of the Grand Central? I understand they're going to have a contrivance so you can stand on a mat in the waiting-room and wish yourself down to the track an' train that you're leavin' on. The G'ints have picked a bunch of shines this season. T. A. Junior's got a new 60-power auto. Genevieve—that yella-headed steno—was married last month to Henry, the shipping clerk. My wife presented me with twin girls Monday. Well, thank you, Mrs. McChesney. I guess that'll help some."



"Honestly, I'd Wear It Myself."

Emma McChesney swung down the hall and into the big, bright office. She paused at the head bookkeeper's desk. The head bookkeeper was a woman. Old Man Buck had learned something about the faithfulness of women employes. The head bookkeeper looked up and said some convincing things.

"Thanks," said Emma, in return. "It's mighty good to be here. Is it true that skirts are going to be full in the back? How's business? T. A. in?"

"Young T. A. is. But I think he's busy just now. You know T. A. Senior isn't back yet. He had a tight squeeze, I guess. Everybody's talking about the way young T. A. took hold. You know he spent years running around Europe, and he made a specialty of first nights, and first editions, and French cars when he did show up here. But now! He's changed the advertising, and designing, and cutting departments around here until there's as much difference between this place now and the place it was three months ago as there is between a hoop-skirt and a hobble. He designed one skirt— Here, Miss Kelly! Just go in and get one of those embroidery flounce models for Mrs. McChesney. How's that? Honestly, I'd wear it myself."

Emma McChesney held the garment in her two hands and looked it over critically. Her eyes narrowed thoughtfully. She looked up to reply when the door of T. A. Buck's private office opened, and Ed Meyers walked briskly out. Emma McChesney put down the skirt and crossed the office so that she and he met just in front of the little gate that formed an entrance along the railing.

Ed Meyers' mouth twisted itself into a smile. He put out a welcoming hand.

Why, hello, stranger! When did you drive in? How's every little thing? I'm darned if you don't grow prettier and younger every day of your sweet life."

"Quit Sans-Silks?" inquired Mrs. McChesney briefly.

"Why—no. But I was just telling young T. A. in there that if I could only find a nice, paying little gents' furnishing business in a live little town that wasn't swamped with that kind of thing already I'd buy it, by George! I'm tired of this peddling."

"Sing that," said Emma McChesney. "It might sound better," and marched into the office marked "Private."

T. A. Junior's good-looking back and semi-bald head were toward her as she entered. She noted, approvingly, woman-fashion, that his neck would never lap over the edge of his collar in the back. Then young T. A. turned about. He gazed at Emma McChesney, his eyebrows raised inquiringly. Emma McChesney's honest blue eyes, with no translucent nonsense about them, gazed straight back at T. A. Junior.

"I'm Mrs. McChesney. I got in half an hour ago. It's been a good little trip, considering business, and politics, and all that. I'm sorry to hear your father's still ill. He and I always talked over things after my long trip."

Young T. A.'s expert eye did not miss a single point, from the tip of Mrs. McChesney's smart spring hat to the toes of her well-shod feet, with full stops for the fit of her tailored suit, the freshness of her gloves, the clearness of her healthy pink skin, the wave of her soft, bright hair.

"How do you do, Mrs. McChesney," said Young T. A. emphatically. "Please sit down. It's a good idea—this talking over your trip. There are several little things—now Kiser & Bloch, of River Falls, for instance. We ought to be selling them. The head of their skirt and suit department is named Stitch, isn't she? Now, what would you say of Miss Stitch?"

"Say?" repeated Emma McChesney quickly. "As a woman, or a buyer?"

T. A. Junior thought a minute. "As a woman."

Mrs. McChesney thoughtfully regarded the tips of her neatly gloved hands. Then she looked up. "The kindest and gentlest thing I can say about her is that if she'd let her hair grow out gray maybe her face wouldn't look so hard."

T. A. Junior flung himself back in his chair and threw back his head and laughed at the ceiling.

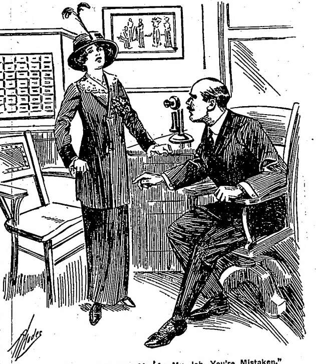
"Then, "How old is your son?" with disconcerting suddenness.

"Jock's scandalously near eighteen." In her quick mind Emma McChesney was piecing odds and ends together, and shaping the whole to fit Fat Ed Meyers. A little righteous anger was rising within her.

T. A. Junior searched her face with his glowing eyes.

"Does my father know that you have a young man son? Queer you never mentioned it."

"Queer? Maybe. Also, I don't remember ever having mentioned what church my folks belonged to, or where I was born, or whether I like my steak rare or medium, or what my maiden name was, or the size of my shoes, or whether I take my coffee with or without. That's because I don't believe in dragging private and family affairs into the business relation. I think I ought to tell you that on the way in I met Ed Meyers of the Strauss Sans-Silk Skirt company, coming out. So anything you say won't surprise me."



"If You Expect Me to Beg You for My Job, You're Mistaken."

"You wouldn't be surprised?" asked T. A. Junior smoothly, "If I were to say that I'm considering giving a man your territory?"

Emma McChesney's eyes—those eyes that had seen so much of the world and its ways, and that still could return your gaze so clearly and honestly—widened until they looked so much like those of a hurt child, or a dumb animal that has received a death wound, that young T. A. dropped his gaze in confusion.

Emma McChesney stood up. Her breath came a little quickly. But when she spoke, her voice was low and almost steady.

"If you expect me to beg you for my job, you're mistaken. T. A. Buck's Featherloom petticoats have been my existence for almost ten years. I've sold Featherlooms six days in the week, and seven when I had a Sunday customer. They've not only been my business and my means of earning a livelihood, they've been my religion, my diversion, my life, my pet pastime. I've lived petticoats, I've talked petticoats, I've sold petticoats, I've dreamed petticoats—why, I've even worn the darned things! And that's more than any man will ever do for you."

Young T. A. rose. He laughed a little laugh of sheer admiration. Admiration shone, too, in those eyes of his which so many women found irresistible. He took a step forward and laid one well-shaped hand on Emma McChesney's arm. She did not shrink, so he let his hand slip down the neat blue serge sleeve until it reached her snugly-gloved hand.

"You're all right!" he said. His voice was very low, and there was a new note in it. "Listen, girlie. I've just bought a new sixty-power machine. Have dinner with me tonight, will you? And we'll take a run out in the country somewhere. It's warm, even for March. I'll bring along a fur coat for you. H'm?"

Mrs. McChesney stood thoughtfully regarding the hand that covered her own. The blue of her eyes and the pink of her cheeks were a marvel to behold.

"It's a shame," she began slowly, "that you're not twenty-five years younger, so that your father could give you the licking you deserve when he comes home. I shouldn't be surprised if he'd do it anyway. The Lord preserve me from these quiet, deep devils with temperamental hands and luminous eyes. Give me one of the bull-necked, red-faced, hoarse-voiced, fresh kind every time. You know what they're going to say, at least, and you're prepared for them. If I were to tell you how the hand you're holding is tingling to box your ears you'd marvel that any human being could have that much repression and live. I've heard of this kind of thing, but I didn't know it happened often off the stage and outside of novels. Let's get down to cases. If I let you make love to me, I keep my job. Is that it?"

"Why—no—I—to tell the truth I was only—"

"Don't embarrass yourself. I just want to tell you that before I'd accept your auto ride I'd open a little fancy art goods and needlework store in Menominee, Michigan, and get out the newest things in Hardanger work and Egyptian embroidery. And that's my notion of zero in occupation. Besides, no plain, everyday working woman could enjoy herself in your car, because her conscience wouldn't let her. She'd be thinking all the time how she was depriving some poor, hard-working chorus girl of her legitimate pastime, and that would spoil everything. The elevator man told me that you had a new motor car, but the news didn't interest me half as much as that of his having new twin girls. Anything with five thousand dollars can have a sixty-power machine, but only an elevator man on eight dollars a week can afford the luxury of twins.'

"My dear Mrs. McChesney—"

"Don't," said Emma McChesney sharply. "I couldn't stand much more. I joke, you know, when other women cry. It isn't so wearing."

She turned abruptly and walked toward the door. T. A. Junior overtook her in three long strides, and placed himself directly before her.

"My cue," said Emma McChesney, with a weary brightness, "to say, 'Let me pass, sir!'"

"Please don't," pleaded T. A. Junior. "I'll remember this the rest of my life. I thought I was a statue of modern business methods, but after today I'm going to ask the office boy to help me run this thing. If I could only think of some special way to apologize to you—"

"Oh, it's all right," said Emma McChesney indifferently.

"But it isn't! It isn't! You don't understand. That human jellyfish of a Meyers said some things, and I thought I'd be clever and prove them. I can't ask your pardon. There aren't words enough in the language. Why, you're the finest little woman—you're—you'd restore the faith of a cynic who had chronic indigestion. I wish I— Say, let me relieve you of a couple of those small towns that you hate to make, and give you Cleveland and Cincinnati. And let me— Why say, Mrs. McChesney! Please! Don't! This isn't the time to—"

"I can't help it," sobbed Emma McChesney, her two hands before her face. "I'll stop in a minute. There; I'm stopping now. For heaven's sake, stop patting me on the head!"

"Please don't be so decent to me," entreated T. A. Junior, his fine eyes more luminous than ever. "If only you'd try to get back at me I wouldn't feel so cut up about it."

Emma McChesney looked up at him, a smile shining radiantly through the tears.

"Very well. I'll do it. Just before I came in they showed me that new embroidery-flounced model you just designed. Maybe you don't know it, but women wear only one limp petticoat nowadays. And buttoned shoes. The eyelets in that embroidery are just big enough to catch on the top button of a woman's shoe, and tear, and trip her. I ought to have let you make up a couple of million of them, and then watch them come back on your hands. I was going to tell you, anyway, for T. A. Senior's sake. Now I'm doing it for your own."

"For—" began T. A. Junior excitedly. And found himself addressing the backs of the letters on the door marked "Private," as it slammed after the trim, erect figure in blue.

Heroine Fights in Trenches.

Paris, France.—Among the wounded brought to Noisy-le-Sec, a town in the department of the Seine and near the Ourcq canal, was a young laundress in a soldier's uniform. She had followed a company of zouaves and had fought alongside of them in the trenches. He identity was not discovered until she was wounded. Before sending her to the rear the commanding officer complimented her on her bravery.

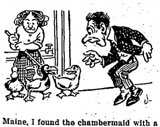
THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. XIV. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, DECEMBER 11, 1914. NO. 39.

INTERESTING ITEMS FROM THE CITIES

Made Their Hotel Bathroom Into a Duck Pond

NEW YORK.—When Miss Jennie Libby and her sister of Masardis, Me., arrived at the Hotel Laurelton with several bags and a large box, they demanded a room with a large bathroom and a proportionately large tub. In the morning when the two ladies went out shopping they forgot to turn the key of the bathroom.



"I was making my usual morning inspection," said Manager Nobles, "when I heard a familiar sound. Having been accustomed to shooting on the shores of the Maine lakes, I thought at first it was the call of the wild, but a second sound convinced me it was the quacking of tame ducks. As I reached the open door of the room occupied by the ladies from Maine, I found the chambermaid with a broomstick marshaling four wet ducks that had just waddled out of the bathroom.

"When the Misses Libby came home, I explained our rules and those of the health department, and asked, as tactfully as I could, how it was they had traveled with so much aquatic poultry.

"Miss Jennie said it was because her elder sister was not in good health, and that the doctor had said she must have every day eggs that were only a few hours old.

"She said they had read in the papers of people bringing hens to New York hotels, and that the hens had given the show away by cackling whenever an egg was laid. After they had talked the matter over the elder Miss Libby had remarked, 'Well, ducks don't cackle over an egg.' "

Chicago Hotel Bellhops Give a "Biere Dansante"

CHICAGO.—The 1914-15 social season of the Chicago Hotel Bell Responders' association was formally inaugurated with a reception and "biere dansante" in the Coliseum annex. Never in the history of this splendid professional organization has the season been entered upon more auspiciously. Practically every hotel and club of importance, as well as some of the foremost cafeterias, was represented. And although the gayety did not reach its height until well along toward morning, equipages on the Cottage Grove and Indiana lines began discharging their loads of merrymakers several hours earlier.

In the first dances of the evening such well-known steps as the Castle walk, the hesitation and the fox-trot were frequently seen. But later, as the dancers began to catch the rhythm and swing of the Bellhop hop, arranged especially for the occasion, the old steps were forgotten.

The Bellhop hop—the invention of Mr. Peter Bullen—seems destined to become the official dance of the association. With his right hand the gentleman grasps the left arm of his partner between elbow and shoulder. Then, holding her at arm's length, after the manner of a pitcher of ice water, he advances with a slight bend to the right from the hips. The lady executes what Mr. Bullen calls the "tinkle glide."

Misfits of Austrian Army Guests of Pittsburgh

PITTSBURGH, PA.—Two Austrians, Steve Breskovitch, aged thirty-seven, six feet six inches tall, and Andy Mudder, aged sixty-eight, five feet two inches in height, who said they have been "buddies" for the past five years, lodged at Allegheny police station the other night. They applied to Sergeant Kennedy together and the contrast in their height dazed the genial sergeant for a minute.

WE NO WANT TO FIGHT

"Stand up," ordered Kennedy of Mudder while taking his pedigree. "You needn't get on your knees here in order to get a night's lodging. You're welcome to the best we've got even if you are a foreigner."

"Me is up," insisted Mudder, trying to increase his height.

"Well, you get down off the rail, then," Kennedy told Breskovitch. "I like to see things more even than you two appear. I don't want to strain my voice making both of you hear me at the same time."

"Me stand on the floor," said Breskovitch, trying to crouch down as low as possible. "He little man; me big, tall fellow."

"Oh, I see," said Kennedy. "You are the long and the short of the Austrian army and have come here to escape the bullets of the allies."

"We no want to fight," said Breskovitch. "Me never in army. Been in this country sixteen year. Mudder he fight for Austria long time ago. But lose his arm in Ohio sawmill."

The two were a strange looking pair. Breskovitch wore a sort of carpenter's apron, no coat and a pair of corduroy trousers. Mudder had on an old blouse with the empty sleeve tied in knots. They said they are making their way south for the winter and are anxious to get as far as possible from the hostilities of Europe.

They Can't Get Rid of Ahmed Ali, Arabian Sailor

BALTIMORE, MD.—What is to be done with Ahmed Ali? He is an Arabian sailor, who for several months has been confined at Bay View asylum. He has been declared a public charge and ordered deported, and he is causing much concern to the local immigration authorities, who are experiencing trouble in finding a ship to take the man out of the country.

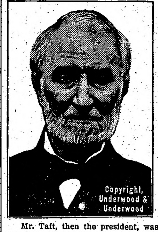
NOPE -CAN'T TAKE 'IM

Like a man without a country, Ahmed is without a ship. He is anxious to leave and says he will ship on any vessel sailing from here to a foreign port. Various attempts have been made by the local immigration authorities to find a berth on some vessel leaving the port, but all efforts have proved unavailing, for the reason that the masters decline to add Ahmed to their crew list.

What will be done with the man the immigration officials are unable to say. He is here at an expense to the government and the order from the Washington department is to deport him. Ahmed only has $1 and is unable to speak English. All communication with the man requires the services of an interpreter.

Ahmed Ali arrived in New York last March on the Austrian steamship Siam from Trieste. He was a fireman on the vessel and was paid $20 a month for his services. When the Siam arrived at New York Ahmed and several other Arabians, it is said, deserted the ship without the formality of being inspected by the immigration authorities, which brought him under the ban of being unlawfully in this country.

"UNCLE JOE" COMES BACK



"Uncle Joe" Cannon, easily the most picturesque and probably the most powerful individual who has sat in the house of representatives in recent years, by being re-elected to congress stands forth as a lively contradiction of the Osler theory of the uselessness of a man when he has passed his sixtieth year. He is now seventy-nine years old, but is as chipper as of yore and as ready to get into a legislative scrap. Congress and Washington generally welcome the veteran back, for he is always interesting.

"Uncle Joe" has been compelled to back-track on an assertion which he made just before he left the officialdom of Washington. At a banquet given in his honor, he said:

"My friends, I am an old man. Measured by years I am an old man. I am about to retire from public life. My face is turned toward the setting sun."

Mr. Taft, then the president, was a guest at this banquet, and made a speech in appreciation of "Uncle Joe."

"He says he is going away and not coming back," said Mr. Taft. "I hope that is not true and I do not believe it is true. I think that when he goes out to that district and walks up and down Vermilion county, and finds how many people are sorry they did not vote for him at the last election, the old warhorse will again scent the battle from afar."

MOSLEM LEADER LOYAL TO BRITAIN

Great Britain was pleased and immensely relieved by the action of that famous Indian dignitary, the Aga Khan, in directing the community of which he is the spiritual head to place their personal services and resources unreservedly at the disposal of the British government, and in addition to this volunteering to serve as a private in any infantry regiment of the Indian expeditionary force. For this prodigiously wealthy and largely Europeanized native chieftain, as the spiritual leader of vast numbers of Mahometans in Western India, Central Asia and East Africa, is perhaps the greatest power of the Moslem world.

Directly descended as he is from Ali, the nephew of Mahomet himself, he is regarded by his followers almost as a god and is believed by many to hold the keys of heaven. Many of the curious privileges of his position are not, however, exercised by the present prince. The territory over which the Aga Khan rules, as head of the Ismaelian sects, is not large, but the number of his followers is counted by the hundred thousand and to every one of them his word is law. So great is his influence, in fact, that his friendliness to British rule in India always has been of the greatest value to the government, and will be more so than ever in the present emergency.

ONLY SOCIALIST CONGRESSMAN

Copyright, Underwood & Underwood

Meyer London, elected to represent the Twelfth district of New York, is the first Socialist to be sent to congress by any eastern state, and is the sole representative of his party in the national government. For 12 years he has been legal adviser of the Jewish Trades union, and he won fame by his able conduct of the strikes of the cloakmakers in 1910 and of the furriers in 1912. The big East side of the metropolis is devoted to him. Of him it has been said: "He pursues radical ends through constitutional means."

One part of London's duty in congress, as he sees it, will be to induce congress to stop the European war. This, he thinks, can be done by declaring war on war and keeping all war supplies at home. "Nations that are starving can't fight," declares Mr. London. "Every shipload of supplies we send the warring nations will enable them to fight just that much longer. Every shipload we keep at home will enable us to live just that much cheaper.

"This war has given the food speculator the opportunity of opportunities. His chance to sell abroad is his chance to boost prices at home. I would make it a crime to export food or any other war necessity to any of the warring countries."

London was born in Russia and came to the United States at the age of eighteen.

WOMAN DOCTOR IN THE WAR ZONE

© INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE

Dr. Mary Crawford of Brooklyn is one of the few woman doctors to go to the war zone in Europe. Mary Crawford wanted to be something more than a trained nurse, so she spent seven years at Cornell, being graduated with the medical class of "oughty-seven."

One day Miss Crawford read something in the newspapers about vacancies at the Williamsburg hospital. She sent for application blanks. They read:

"Any one desiring the Williamsburg hospital, etc.—"

She filled out the blank and, in some way, the "Mary" of her name passed unnoticed. But when she presented herself the hospital authorities were dumfounded. They had a woman on their hands for nearly two years. But out of 35 applicants she had passed highest of all and the hospital was game. It is said that its reception of Doctor Crawford was splendid. She was the first woman ever to act on the staff of the hospital and, despite the unwritten ban against woman practitioners at large in the medical world she was never made to feel it there.

NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

Uncle Sam Is Planning the Biggest Rose Garden

WASHINGTON.—Uncle Sam is planning the biggest and prettiest rose garden in the world at his flower gardens near Arlington. "The American Rose society last spring completed arrangements to co-operate with the department of agriculture in establishing a rose garden," it is stated at the office of information of the department of agriculture. "It is to contain as complete a collection of roses as will grow out of doors in this section of America. The society is furnishing the roses, the department two acres of ground. The garden will be under the direction of federal horticultural specialists. The farm is in Virginia, just across the Potomac from the capital, and convenient to the Washington-Virginia trolley line. The garden already contains about three hundred and twenty varieties, but there are many hundreds not yet included, and eventually the site can accommodate as many as 2,000 varieties, if they can be secured.

THIS IS REAL PLEASURE

"The garden makes an interesting show place for visitors to Washington. The roses are arranged, as far as possible, according to parentage. Teas and hybrid-teas, for instance, have a bed to themselves, as have hybrid-perpetuals. As far as practicable the roses are arranged also according to color. A fence six feet high, in which climbing roses will grow, is to surround the garden. The walks are of turf, and the plan has been to use a different kind of grass in each walk. There will be rose canopies on the corners and at the entrances. A summer house will stand at the most commanding point, where a view of the whole collection may be obtained.

"Any grower of roses who thinks he has roses not already in the collection has been invited by the society to contribute a plant."

Congressional Club Occupies Its Fine New Home

THE new home of the Congressional club, at New Hampshire avenue and U street northwest, is completed and has been occupied by the club. The new structure cost about $30,000, exclusive of the property, which was donated to the club by Mrs. John B. Henderson, one of its founders, as a site for the building.

Three stories and a basement high, the new clubhouse is 100 by 60 feet, and is a handsome addition to the structures in that vicinity. It is built of buff-colored press brick, terra cotta and Indiana limestone, with marble panels. Ground was broken for the building early last spring.

On the first floor are located the executive offices of the club, the library, retirement rooms, and cloakrooms. The major portion of the second floor is devoted to a large clubroom, which is about one and a half stories high, taking in the mezzanine floor. The dining room is also located on this floor. On the third floor are the kitchens, servants' quarters and storerooms. One of the features of the clubhouse will be the circular stairway, which is to be very handsome.

The women of the Congressional club are exceedingly proud of their new home, and it will be the scene of many a social function during the season. The club is a nonpolitical organization, the members being the wives or other female relatives of present or past members of congress.

Perfect Babies Wanted for Exhibit in Washington

ANNOUNCEMENT of a perfect baby contest is made by officials of the Washington Diet Kitchen association. With this announcement the association made an appeal for more funds for the conduct of its six infant welfare stations. Hitherto the stations have been supported entirely by a list of patrons, and because of other demands upon many of these contributors, the stations find themselves facing the winter with treasury exhausted.

PERFECT BABIES WANTED FOR EXHIBIT PRIZES TO BE GIVEN

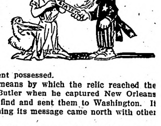
Six of these stations now are open, and though five of them have been in operation less than six months, more than five hundred babies now are being cared for by them. During August this number reached a maximum of 590.

Though the stations were formed primarily to supply milk, they gradually assumed a much wider scope until the name "milk station" was superseded by that of "infant welfare station." Even this term does not express the varied nature of the services performed. For not only infant diet, but cooking conferences for grown-ups, classes for "little mothers," lessons in household economics, and many phases of household management, hygiene and sanitation are imparted to mothers.

At present the interest of the mothers and workers alike is centered on the second annual baby contest in January. Only babies registered two months in advance will be considered. This year a general prize, a medal, will be given to the best baby of all those entered. Another prize, of $25 in gold, will be awarded to the most nearly perfect baby among those from the milk stations.

Ordinance of Secession Is Restored to Louisiana

IN EXECUTION of the provisions of an act of the recent session of congress, Adjutant General McCain has restored to the state of Louisiana the ordinance of secession passed by the legislature of that state January 26, 1861, which was seized by the Union forces when New Orleans was captured.



No one remembers exactly how the old zinc tube containing the record of the convention which voted to leave the Union ever reached the war department. The case bears the simple legend painted on its cover:

STATE OF LOUISIANA.
Ordinance of Secession,
January 26, 1861.

It is the only one of eleven secession ordinances that the government possessed.

Different stories exist as to the means by which the relic reached the capital. It is believed that General Butler when he captured New Orleans seized all the official papers he could find and sent them to Washington. It is probable the old brown tube containing its message came north with other trophies of the war.

As far as the record shows, the ordinance first came to light after the war in a drawer of Lieutenant Colonel Corbin's desk, in the adjutant general's office. It was delivered to Major General Davis, now retired, in 1895, and from him it went to the secretary of war.

The parchment is yellow with age but in excellent condition and perfectly legible, though some of the signatures are a bit faded.

KAISERS TROOPS VICTORIOUS IN GREAT POLAND BATTLE

GERMANS OCCUPY LODZ, ACCORDING TO BERLIN REPORT

SECOND CITY OF POLAND FALLS INTO HANDS OF TEUTONS AFTER A BLOODY CONFLICT.

THOUSANDS PERISH IN HAND TO HAND BATTLE

Evident From the Occupation of City That the Heaviest Kind of Fighting Has Been Going on—Vicious Attacks on Outskirts.

London, Dec. 8.—Lodz, the second city of Poland and lying seventy-five miles to the southwest of Warsaw, has fallen to the German arms. It was occupied, according to the official announcement from Berlin. Around this important town a desperate battle has raged for days. Here countless thousands have fallen in desperate hand-to-hand conflicts and from the shells of hundreds of guns.

Heaviest Kind of Fighting.

It was evident from the occupation of Lodz by the Germans that the heaviest kind of fighting has been going on, for late advices told of a vicious attack and bombardment of Lodz and fighting in the outskirts of the city, and previous to that, of operations twenty miles west of Piotrkow, which lies considerably south of Lodz, and along a line from Glowno, sixteen miles northeast of Lodz, to the Vistula river.

German Army's Objective.

Lodz has long been an objective point of the German army. It has grown in recent years from an insignificant place to be one of the most populous cities in the Russian empire. In 1910 its population numbered 415,604 and with this important place as a base it is expected that the Germans will make a strong effort to reach the Polish captial of Warsaw.

Lodz is the chief manufacturing center of Russian Poland. It has numerous textile mills, the majority of them for the manufacture of cotton goods. In addition it has flour mills, brick yards, machinery plants and breweries. The population is made up of Poles, Germans and Jews.

Roumania to Join Allies.

Geneva, via London, Dec. 8.—The Journal de Geneve publishes a dispatch from Bucharest, which says that Roumania has decided definitely to enter the war on the side of the allies.

This decision, according to the dispatch, is in accordance with the wish of the entire country, including King Ferdinand and all the Roumanian statesmen with the exception of the minister of finance, M. Marghiloman.

The question of when Roumania will make her entry into the conflict is being discussed, one side desiring to avoid a winter campaign; but the military authorities express the fear that Servia may be defeated before the spring.

The attitude of Bulgaria still remains doubtful. Greece, Servia and Roumania have offered certain concessions which, however, Sofia seems not to consider a sufficient inducement.

Russians Take Two Towns.

Paris, Dec. 7.—A dispatch to the Havas Agency from Petrograd says it is announced officially that the Russian army of the Caucasus occupied the towns of Sarai-Koi and Baschkal, in the eastern part of Turkey in Asia near the Persian border, "As the result of battles occuring on the Dilman and Khoi routes." Dilman and Kohi are both towns of northwestern Persia in that section of Persia lying between Turkey in Asia and Russian territory. "Although making desperate resistance before these points," the statement says, "tho Turks were forced to retire in the direction of Van (a lake in the eastern part of Turkey in Asia) abandoning many wounded and prisoners. We have taken possession of depots of provisions and war munitions at Baschkal."

Third of Montenegrins Lost.

Petrograd, via London, Dec. 7.—King Nicholas of Montenegro has telegraphed the Bourse Gazette that a third of his army has fallen on the battlefield. "Nevertheless," King Nicholas adds in his message, "Montenegrins will continue to defend their country and deliver attacks on the enemy's territory. Their means are exhausted and they will be most grateful for assistance either in money or supplies." The war strength of the Montenegrin army is estimated at approximately 50,000 men. A dispatch from Berlin on Dec. 4 stated that according to an official announcement made there, a number of transports escorted by British and French warships had reached Antivari, the sole seaport of Montenegro. The assumption was that these transports carried troops which would assist the Montenegrins in their campaign.

Servians Claim Success.

Nish, via London, Dec. 7.—The Servian war office has just issued the following official statement: "On the whole front the success of the Servian army is reported. Everywhere the Austrians have been repulsed. We have captured two general officers, sixteen officers, 2,400 men, and a large quantity of booty. On one of our fronts we captured from the enemy four complete batteries."

Belgrade Voluntarily Evacuated.

Nish, Servia, via London, Dec. 7.—An official Servian communication just issued asserts that Belgrade was evacuated voluntarily by the Servians and not captured by the Austrians after a battle. The communication says: "The Servian authorities and troops left the capital on the evening of Nov. 20, 36 hours before the entry of the Austrians. If there was any fighting it was only between rear guards and patrols."

Vienna Is Being Fortified.

Venice, via London, Dec. 7.—Advices received here from Vienna say that the work of fortifying the capital is proceeding rapidly. Several thousand men are reported to be employed in digging trenches. Eighty-eight railway cars filled with wounded men are said to have arrived in Vienna one day last week. Among the wounded was an Austrian general.

Troops Reach Egypt.

The arrival of Australian and New Zealand contingents in Egypt on forty transports is quoted as another triumph for the British navy. The German cruiser Emden was not far from this fleet of transports when she was overtaken and destroyed by the Australian cruiser Sydney. It is taken for granted, however, that the convoy of the transports was so strong that even the Emden would not have dared attack them.

The statement made in the Italian parliament by Premier Salandra that Italy should maintain her attitude of watchful and armed neutrality, has created much interest here and sympathy is expressed for the aspirations of the Italian people.

Early Bombardment of City.

London, Dec. 4.—Belgrade, which until the outbreak of the war was the capital of Servia, has been occupied by Austrian troops, the Servians having previously evacuated the city. Thus on the 66th anniversary of the reign of Emperor Francis Joseph, who again is reported seriously ill, and four months after the outbreak of the war, his generals report one of the most important successes they have obtained.

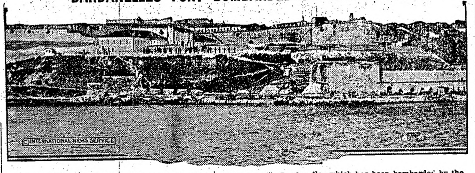
Belgrade was under bombardment frequently early in the war and but for the general European conflict which compelled Austria to send her troops against Russia, must have fallen an easy prey to Servia's big neighbor. Apparently Austria miscalculated the nature of the Servian opposition and only after Bosnia was invaded did she send a sufficient force against the Servians to drive them back.

Servians Now Withdrawing.

The Servians are now being forced backward and are eagerly looking for the advance of the Russians into Hungary to afford them relief.

Russia has been sending Cossack raiding parties through the Carpathians with the object of diverting Austria's attention, but the dual monarchy seemingly is determined to finish with Servia first.

DARDANELLES FORT BOMBARDED BY THE ALLIES



This is the so-called Hill fort, one of the fortifications on the Dardanelles which has been bombarded by the Mediterranean fleet of the allies. It is defended by heavy German guns.

Claims Russian Losses 1,100,000.

Berlin, Dec. 4.—A German miliatary critic estimates that the Russian losses in killed, wounded, prisoners and death from sickness amount to fully 1,100,000, or one-third of the nation's best troops. Discussing the campaign as a whole, a well-known Berlin military critic maintains that the long resistance and the unexpected recuperative powers of the Austrians, coupled with its losses in Poland, have deprived Russia of such a large portion of its first line troops and that its offensive power has been irretrievably impaired.

Belgians to Go to England.

The Hague, via London, Dec. 5.—A dispatch to the Nieuwe Courant from Oldenzaal, Holland, states that Belgian refugees who are not liable to service in the Belgian army will be sent to England free of charge, the British government having undertaken to care for them in order to alleviate the burden imposed on several Dutch provinces, where an excessive number of refugees have collected.

Ostend Reported on Fire.

London, Dec. 7.—"Ostend is reported to be on fire," says the Daily Chronicle in a dispatch from Dunkirk. "It is believed the conflagration was caused either by a British bombardment or German incendiaries."

★ LATE WAR DEVELOPMENTS ★

Lodz, the second city in Poland, has fallen into the hands of the Germans, according to an announcement from Berlin. Lodz, with over 400,000 population and an important industrial center, has long been the objective point of the Teutons. Countless thousands have fallen in the desperate hand-to-hand conflicts here during the past few days.

A report from Geneva declares that Roumania has decided to join the war on the side of the Allies. While a winter campaign is objected to by many, it is declared immediate entrance is favored by the military because of the fear that Servia will be unable to withstand defeat until spring.

* * *

Roumania, Greece and Servia are reported to have offered certain inducements to Bulgaria to join them in the war.

The Allies continue to push forward in Flanders and also in northern France, although, as has been the case all along in the western arena, the gains are measured in yards.

* * *

remier Salandra of Italy, in an address before the Chamber of Deputies at Rome, urges the strictest neutrality for his country in the present European war. His speech was made in reply to attack by some of the deputies on the cabinet, who claimed that the government was not prepared to either defend its neutrality or engage in the war if called upon to do so.

* * *

Areport from Venice says that the work of fortifying Vienna is proceeding rapidly.

Strong ant i -Austro - German speeches were delivered in the Italian parliament, one speaker being thunderously applauded when he said he hoped soon to see the Italian flag flying over Trieste.

Gen. Christian De Wet, the rebel leader in South Africa, has been placed under guard in the fortress at Johannesburg.

* * *

The Swiss federal council, in an official communication says there has been renewed activity by the French and German forces in Upper Alsace.

* * *

The few attacks of Germans and allies in the west are reported all repulsed.

* * *

The Russians are reported within firing distance of Cracow and placing batteries preparatory for a siege. Their advance from Przemysl is said to have been without any real check.

* * *

Nineteen thousand Servian prisoners are said to have been taken by the Austrians since they began the present offensive movement and Servia's casualties since the beginning of the war are estimated at 100,000.

* * *

King George is under fire for a short time while he visits with the men in the trenches.

* * *

British officer in official report says the war will be one of exhaustion, the final success being determined by the raw material of the countries concerned. He describes the fighting in France and Belgium for six weeks up to Nov. 26.

* * *

War loan of $1,250,000,000 is voted in the German Reichstag, only one member, a Socialist, voting against it.

* * *

Belgrade, until the outbreak of war the capital of Servia, has been occupied by the Austrians on the sixty-sixth anniversary of the reign of Emperor Francis Joseph. The stuation n the south is reported serious for the Serbs, who are retreating with the hope that the Russians may soon be at the gates of Budapest to relieve pressure from them.

* * *

Bands of Cossacks have been sent through the Carpathian mountains to raid the country in an effort to detract Austria's attention from Servia, but for all that the dual monarchy appears determined to finish the little Slavonic country first.

* * *

Five rulers are now on the battle lines in Europe, the German and Russian Emperors personally drecting the titanic struggle in Poland and the King of England, King of Belgium and President of France being with their respective armies in the West.

In Galicia the Czar's forces continue their victorious advance, being now in command of the passes over the Carpathian mountains and practically around Cracow.

* * *

In the West the Allies have pushed forward their lines in the region around Ypres.

Germany is reported to be rushing the construction of more submarines and aircraft.

Orders Arrest of Belgians.

London, Dec. 4.—It is reported by the Amsterdam correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph company that Major General Keim, German military governor of the Belgian province of Limburg, has ordered the arrest of all young Belgians in that district who are liable for military service in the army class of 1915. This action, it is said, is to be extended throughout Belgium.

British Read of Warship Disaster.

London, Dec. 5.—The first story of the loss of a British superdreadnought, copied from American newspapers, is published here today with the omission of the name of the ship and the locality where the mishap occurred.

CHRISTIANS FLEE TO TURKISH COAST; HOLY WAR FEARED

MORE THAN 100 FRENCH CITIZENS EXPELLED WITHOUT MEANS—AMERICANS WILL LEND AID.

EXPRESSES NO ANXIETY FOR AMERICANS' SAFETY

Ambassador Morgenthau Asks Turkish Government to Release British Subject Imprisoned in Constantinople—Holy War Is Proclaimed.

Washington, Dec. 5.—Christian refugees are fleeing in large numbers from the interior of Turkey to coast cities since the proclamation of a holy war by the Shiekul-Islem, head of the Moslem church, Ambassador Henry Morgenthau has cabled the state department from Constantinople.

Mr. Morgenthau stated that more than 100 French citizens had been expelled from various places in the interior of Turkey. State department officials believe a general expulsion of the French has been undertaken.

Americans Aid Refugees.

The refugees now are assembled at Beirut, Thebizond and Smyrna, without means, but will be aided by the American diplomatic and consular offices. Mr. Morgenthau says dispatches did not mention like action against nationals of other belligerents, nor say what measures will be adopted to get the French out of the Ottoman empire.

Ambassador Morgenthau also reported that he had asked the Turkish government to release Sir Edwin Pears, a British subject who has been imprisoned in Constantinople. He did not state the charges against Pears. Dr. Louis Bizzi, a Maltese, and a Colonel Churchill, formerly a police officer, are being held under arrest and have been taken to Cesares. Mr. Morgenthau did not express any alarm for the safety of Americans in Turkey.

Holy War Against Servia.

Official advices of the proclamation by Turkey of a holy war against Servia and its allies were received at the state department from Minister Charles J. Vopicka at Buckarest, Rumania, who received his information from the Servian minister in the Rumanian capital. The Servian government has announced that all treaties between Turkey and Servia are inoperative.

130,000 Irish in British Army.

London, Dec. 7.—Speaking at a great demonstration at Tuam, Ireland, John E. Redmond, leader of the Irish Nationalist party, replied to statements that Ireland was not doing her duty in the present crisis. He quoted official statistics showing that despite the fact that emigration had drawn from Ireland the flower of her population, there were serving with the military forces of the crown on Nov. 30, 89,000 Irishmen who had been in the army before the war began or who joined as reservists or recruits. If to that were added tens of thousands of Irish recruits who were joining the colors in Great Britain or were now in the ranks of the Canadian or New Zealand contingents, he said it was safe to say that from 130,000 to 140,000 Irishmen were with the colors.

Canada Sets Day of Prayer.

Ottawa, Ont., Dec. 7.—The government has set aside Sunday, Jan. 3, as a day of special intercession and prayer on behalf of the British and allied cause in the war as a tribute to the memory of those who have fallen in battle. This Sunday will be observed in Great Britain in a similar manner.

Turkish Cruiser Strikes Mine.

Petrograd, Dec. 7.—The Turkish cruiser Hamidieh has struck a mine and returned to Constantinople considerably damaged, according to the Russian official news agency's Constantinople advices. These advices say also that Russian warships have sunk six Turkish sailing vessels which were carrying war supplies.

CONGRESS AGAIN TAKES UP TASKS; CALENDAR IS FULL

SHORT SESSION MUST BE DEVOTED LARGELY TO ANNUAL APPROPRIATION BILLS—BIG PROGRAM.

MEMBERS OF HOUSE AND SENATE ARE VERY BUSY

Fifteen Bills Appropriating More Than a Billion Dollars Must Be Passed Without Delay—Many Other Important Measures Are Now Pending.

Washington, Dec. 7.—Calling into action the final session of the Sixty-third congress, the gavels fell in the senate and house at noon today, and the legislators took up the tasks they abandoned late in October. Crowded calendars confronted both houses, although it is apparent that the short session, expiring March 4 by constitutional limitation, must be devoted largely to the annual appropriation bills.

Little time was lost in preliminaries in either house today. Except for the hand shaking and the jibes of both Republicans and Democrats concerning the results of the last election, the business of legislating began without special ceremony or incident. There was not the excitement attendant upon the convening of a new congress, when members are sworn in for their terms.

Crowded galleries were present in senate and house, chief interest attaching, however, to the lower body, where the membership is larger and where there was promised a renewal of the cotton-relief filibuster which tied up congress just before adjournment in October.

Heavy Program Prepared.

A survey of the calendars shows almost a record-breaking legislative program, the features being as follows:

Fifteen appropriation bills must be passed. This means that congress must apportion more than one billion dollars between December 7 and March 4. There will be approximately sixty-five working days, making the average appropriation per day about seventeen million dollars, estimating that the total appropriations will be at least $1,100,000,000, as compared with $1,116,000,000 for the long session.

If the fight for a public buildings bill succeeds there will be 16 supply measures and as extended fights are imminent over rivers and harbors, the naval increase and the army appropriation bill, night sessions probably will be the rule during the short session.

A filibuster against any of the appropriation bills will result in the report of a special "gag" rule in the house. A cloture rule is impossible in the senate.

Two Unfinished Currency Bills.

When the house adjourned late in October there were pending as unfinished business two bills to amend the currency law and the Henry cotton-relief amendment to these bills.

The passage of these bills was prevented by the Henry cotton loan amendment directing the placing of $250,000,000 in southern banks to be loaned on the cotton and tobacco crops.

As soon as these bills are disposed of, the District of Columbia appropriation bill, the first of the annual budgets, will be ready for report from the appropriations committee. It will be followed by the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill.

If the house shoud have a breathing spell on appropriation bills it has on the calendar bills of major importance which it can consider. They are:

The administration bill for a government-owned steamship line, with a capital of $30,000,000. A rule is ready to bring this bill up.

The coast guard bill, to combine the revenue cutter and the life-saving services.

The Foster bill to conserve the radium supply, already made in order under a special rule which was temporarily withdrawn.

Senate Also to Be Busy.

One of the principal bills sent over to the senate by the lower body is the Burnett Immigration bill, which contains the literacy test that brought about a veto by President Taft nearly two years ago. This bill will bring on a protracted senate debate.

Prince of Siam in America.

New York, Dec. 7.—Prince and Princess Kampengpetch of Siam, who are making a tour of the world in the interest of education, have arrived in New York on the steamer Minnetonka from London and will spend several days here.

Adds Mystery to Case.

Chicago, Dec. 7.—Chief of Police Horace Keller of Delaware Water Gap, Pa., has added a touch of mystery to the case of Miss Jessie Elizabeth Cope who is under government surveillance at Coulter House, pending her trial on a charge of attempting to bribe Federal officials. Keller wired the police asking that they send a detailed physical description of Miss Cope and to learn if her right name was Ula Stroud Cope. Miss Cope said that she had never used the name "Ula Stroud Cope."

MRS. CHARLOTTE SHARPLESS

Mrs. Sharpless is charged with stabbing her husband to death with a ritual sword.

WOMEN IN SHARPLESS TRIAL

TWO GIRLS WHO WERE NEAR SCENE TO TESTIFY.

Outcast Girl, Claimed by Defense to Be Daughter of Murdered Man, May Be Subpoenaed.

Minneapolis, Dec. 8.—It will be a woman's word against a woman's word in district court this week before Judge Leary and the stake will be a woman's liberty for life.

Perhaps this is the reason why women by the hundreds flocked last week to hear the sordid details of the Leaming Sharpless murder revealed in court and stood for hours hoping to catch a glimpse of the face of Mrs. Charlotte Sharpless, charged with her husband's slaying.

Leaming Sharpless, a railroad engineer, was found dead on the floor of a room in his flat at 1329 Yale place on the night of Nov. 14. He had been stabbed to death with a lodge sword which had been a legacy from his father. Mrs. Sharpless, who gave the alarm, was found by the police in bed in the next room, six feet away from her husband's body. She declared she had been sleeping, had heard her husband groan and found him dying.

The sword was found back of a couch. Bloody underclothing was found under the window of the Sharpless flat and a bloody nightgown in a closet. The state asserts that Mrs. Sharpless hated her husband and that his opposition to her conduct led to the murder.

Some time early this week, after he has laid the foundation of his case by the testimony of police officials and detectives, Assistant County Attorney Baldwin will throw down the gauntlet that will start the battle of women's words by calling two girls who, it is said, may testify that they saw Mrs. Sharpless on the night of her husband's murder, throw from the window of her apartment at 1329 Yale place the blood-stained undergarments worn by her husband.

Two other women may be subpoenaed by the state. One is the outcast girl who the defense claims is the daughter of the murdered man by a woman who never bore his name. It is the theory of the defense that Sharpless was murdered by a man who loved this girl but could not marry her because of the stain of her birth. The other woman is the mother of the girl, the woman whom the state claims haunted the life of Leaming Sharpless for years and the price of whose silence kept him a poor man. Both of these women, it is the claim of the defense, live in Minneapolis and have lived here for years.

After these women, subpoenaed by the state, have told their stories, Mrs. Sharpless herself will take the stand in her own behalf. She will tell her theory of her husband's murder. She will tell, it is said, of the secret preserved in their home of his early wrongdoing and the harvest of unrest it reaped for them both for years. She will tell of that other woman of whom she had heard but never had seen and of her child. Then she will advance the theory of the defense that Mr. Sharpless was murdered on the night of Nov. 14 by a man who believed that Sharpless had wronged the woman he loved; a man who slew and then, with the cunning of an assassin, left traces of the crime that would point to another's guilt.

Instantly Killed By Fall.

Ashland, Wis., Dec. 7.—John Stosek fell from a building at Butternut and was instantly killed.

Former U. S. Ambassador Ill.

Honolulu, Dec. 7.—William R. Rockhill, former United States ambassador to Turkey, was taken from the liner Chiyo Maru upon her arrival here from San Francisco too ill to continue on his way to China. He was enroute to Pekin to become advisor to President Yuan Shi Kai of the Chinese republic. Mr. Rockhill was taken from the steamer to the hospital. His illness was said to be nothing more than a severe cold contracted after the Chiyo Maru left San Francisco.

The Ambition of Mark Truitt

By
HENRY RUSSELL MILLER

Author of
"THE MAN HIGHER UP," "HIS RISE TO POWER," Etc.

(Copyright, 1913, by The Bobbs-Merrill Company)

18

SYNOPSIS.

Mark Truitt, encouraged by his sweetheart, Unity Martin, leaves Bethel, his native town, to seek his fortune. Simon Truitt tells Mark that it long has been his dream to see a steel plant at Bethel and asks his son to return and build one if he ever gets rich. Mark applies to Thomas Henly, head of the Quinby Iron works, for a job and is sent to the construction gang. His success in that work wins him a place as helper to Roman Andrzejzski, open-hearth furnaceman. He becomes a boarder in Roman's home and assists Piotr, Roman's son, in his studies. Kazia, an adopted daughter, shows her gratitude in such a manner as to arouse Mark's interest in her. Heavy work in the intense heat of the furnace causes Mark to collapse and Kazia cares for him. Later Roman also succumbs and Mark gets his job. Roman resents this and tells Mark to get another boarding place. Five years elapse during which Mark has advanced to the foremanship, while his labor-saving devices have made him invaluable to the company. In the meantime Kazia has married one Jim Whiting. Mark meets with an accident which dooms him to be a cripple for life. He returns to Bethel intending to stay there. He finds Unity about to marry another man and wins her back. Unity urges him to return to his work in the city. Mark rises rapidly to wealth and power in the steel business, but the social ambitions of his wife make their married life unhappy. The big steel interests are secretly anxious to get hold of stock in the Iroquois Iron company, supposed to be worthless. Timothy Woodhouse seeks financial assistance from Mark and the latter buys Woodhouse's Iroquois stock at a small figure. Henly forces Quinby to let Mark have stock in the Quinby company. Mark finds Piotr making a socialistic speech on the street and the boy shows that he is still bitter against Mark. Mark finds Kazia, who is divorced and is now a hospital nurse, caring for Roman who is near death. Mark is advised by his physician to stop taking drugs and take a long rest. He gets six months' leave of absence. One day he takes Kazia out driving, and they meet Mrs. Truitt. A bitter quarrel ensues and Mark demands a divorce. He absents himself from the city during the divorce proceedings and makes no answer to the sensational charges brought by Mrs. Truitt. On his return he is treated coldly by many former friends.

CHAPTER XX.

The Red Glow.

Henley did not know what an impetus he had given with his "Pick out the thing you want most and fight until you get it."

Mark had not sought out Kazia. More than he would admit to himself, he had suffered during the weeks of injustice. Suffering had for the time dulled the longing for her. And behind that had been a proud reluctance to offer a love tainted by the tongues of scandal-mongers. But now the hunger for a great love—born on an autumn evening of his youth when he had come upon a frail slip of a girl raptly gazing into the twilight, too much a part of him to be stifled even during the years of fierce blind struggle and disappointment—made itself felt again, downing pride. . . .

He called up the Todd hospital, was told that Mrs. Whiting was not there, but could be reached at a certain number. He called up that number.

The response came in a low voice that even the telephone could not rob of its music for him. His heart leaped. Kazia!"

There was a pause, then the low voice came again: "Who is that?"

"This is Mark Truitt."

Another wait, so long that he thought the connection had been broken.

"Yes?"

"Is there any place I could meet you—by accident?"

"Is there any reason for an accident?"

"If you think not, there is none. . . . Are you still there?"

"Yes. . . . You can come here." She gave an address.

"This evening?"

"If you wish. . . . Good-by."

He alighted from a car that evening before a big but unpretentious apartment house in one of the city's quieter neighborhoods. Three stories above the street he came to a door on which was her card. He knocked.

She opened the door. For many seconds they stood looking at each other, motionless, speechless. . . . He broke the silence, in a strange greeting that spoke of itself.

"How often I remember you so—on the threshold!"

"I thought it was your step." The rich color surged before the invitation, lent meaning by his greeting. "Will you come in?"

The quiet little sitting room was a caress. He thought he had never found, even in the wilderness, so restful a place.

"I suppose," he said aloud, when they were seated, "it's part of the mystery of personality."

"What is?"

"This room. It's the homliest I've ever been in."

"I'm glad you like it. I've had it for years. I suppose I oughtn't to keep it, because I don't get much good of it except in vacation. But I like to think of it as a place to come back to."

"You're on your vacation now?"

"Yes. I have a long one this year. I take only Doctor Wolf's cases now, and he is abroad for the summer."

He leaned back in the chair to which she had assigned him and watched her under cover of their inconsequential chat.

"Why did you ask me to come here?"

"Because I didn't want you to think—" She paused uncertainly.

"That you believe all you may have heard of me lately. Thank you, Kazia. But I'd have expected you to say that."

Her eyes fell again to the sewing.

"Kazia," he asked directly, after a moment, "has any one ever connected you with my scandal?"

She looked up quickly again. "Why, no. How could they?"

"A mysterious woman has been mentioned. I've been afraid that every one I've had to do with might be smirched with me. I didn't want you—of all women—to be touched."

"Do you care so much about it all?"

"I wouldn't admit it to any one else. But I do care, Kazia."

She was silent, but the dark eyes were very gentle.

He leaned forward and drew her to him. He kissed her again and again. For a long minute he held her so, in silence. . . . Insidious moment, throwing open the gate that he might peer into a golden realm such as even this Joseph had never dreamed!

"You haven't said it," he broke the silence.

"That I love you? Do I need—"

"No." He kissed her again. "Only I can't quite believe it yet. It's worth going through all the trials and disappointments and ugliness—to have this hour."

Much later—it did not seem long—he asked: "Kazia, when will you marry me?"

She did not answer for a long while. Then she gently pushed him away and spoke, slowly, as though all her strength were needed to force out each word.

"I can not marry you."

"You can not—" He stared at her, stunned.

She shook her head, mute.

"But why? You are free."

"I am free—under the law. But I can not."

"You love me, and yet—"

"I can not."

"But why?" he persisted. "You must have some reason." Then he aroused himself. "Though you may just as well forget it. Do you think," he cried, "I've found a real enduring love only to let it go?"

"I have a reason. I—" She broke off, looking away. Her hands clasped tightly in her lap, unclasped, then went out in a little appealing gesture as her eyes came back to him. "It isn't that I don't want to. I—I love you. But—oh, can't you understand? How could the love endure the little trials and frictions, the nearness, the commonplaceness of every-day life together?"

"Ah! I wish you hadn't said that." He was staggered for the moment; to him her reason was not an empty one. But he went on firmly: "That wouldn't be true with us. It's never true where there is a real love to smooth the way. And you and I—we mustn't judge by our past, because we've never found the real love—until now."

"Yes, it is real. I think it is real."

From her wistful voice he thought he had shaken her. He pressed her hard. "Of course, it is. Then, don't you see—"

"No, if it is real, then I can't—I daren't—risk losing it. I haven't had much, ever, except this love—I mustn't lose it. And you don't know—I'm not fine and clever and cultured, like—like the women you've known. You'd see the lacks—" She was becoming incoherent. "Oh, don't try to persuade me. You only make it hard. I've been thinking of this—and of when you'd come—so long! And I know."

But he did try to persuade her. And longing lent him eloquence, as he pictured for her their love, triumphant over the starving years of separation, triumphing again over the vexatious problem of daily intimacy.

Slowly it came to him that she meant her refusal. He released her and drew back, so suddenly that she swayed and almost fell.

"Then it only means that you don't love me. If you did, you wouldn't count the risk."

"If you must believe that," she answered sadly, "you must. But it isn't true. If I could forget the risk, I shouldn't love you as I do."

He laughed harshly, and reaching for his hat, turned toward the door. The dreamed love had gone the way of his beautiful philosophy.

But at the door he looked back. She was standing as he had left her, pale, in her eyes both fear and the glow of the flame he had lighted. The hand, held out to him in involuntary gesture, was trembling visibly.

"Why—do you go?"

"But you said—"

"I didn't say—I wouldn't love you."

He laughed again. "What is love—by itself?"

"We could," pitifully she put forth the suggestion, "we could be friends."

"Friends! I'm no bloodless poet. I want a whole love."

Her hungering look was calling him, drawing him across the room to her. It bade him take her. He took her, wonderingly, dazed by the seeming surrender. In his clasp she seemed to find a new courage.

"Then—then—I will give you a whole love—if you will take me as I am."

"No, no!" he muttered. "Not that, Kazia! I've hurt you enough. And it wouldn't be a whole love. It couldn't be a lasting love. Love can't live except in the light of day."

"Love, if it is love, is its own light."

"But the risk you fear! It would be greater your way."

"This is my risk, not yours." Her arms encircled his neck, drawing his hot cheek down to hers. "And there is no one else. I am alone. No one would be hurt. It wouldn't—it couldn't—be a bigger love if given in the world's way. And it is all I can have, all I can give. Let me have it until—" She ended in a gasp that was almost a sob.

CHAPTER XXI.

Arcady.

He went to sleep that night, fearing the awakening. But as he woke to the summons of the early summer sunshine filling his hotel room, the dreaded reaction did not come. He could think only with tenderness of the woman who had yielded to him, the love that did not haggle, with a sort of awe—and the query, Could he match it?

He arose, and going to the telephone, called her number.

"Is it you?" He heard the eager catch in the low voice.

"Who else could it be?" He laughed. "Kazia, if you should happen to invite me to breakfast—"

"Oh, will you? Come soon. I—I am always waiting for you."

But as he turned away from the telephone, something caught in his throat. "Poor Kazia!" he muttered. "We've cut out a big job for ourselves."

He did not have to knock at her door. While he was still mounting the last flight of stairs, it was thrown open and she stood awaiting him in the little entrance hall. When he took her in his close clasp, she put her hand to his forehead and looked searchingly into his eyes. He was glad that what she saw there contented her.

"Oh, I'm glad," she murmured from his shoulder, "I'm glad you called me up."

"Of course I did. How long did you think I could wait to hear your voice again?"

"I was afraid you wouldn't. If you hadn't—"

"But I did." He kissed her.

Afterward, when the table had been cleared and the dishes washed—he helping with an awkwardness they found very comic—he broached his plan.

"Kazia, have you ever been in the woods?"

"No. But I remember you used to tell me of the hills you came from. I've always wanted to see them."

"Oh, yes, they're beautiful. But men live there. I meant clear out beyond the edge of things as you know them."

So he told her of the wilderness he had visited—of calm pellucid rivers that became noble lakes and then rushed madly down narrow rocky chutes; of vast stretches of untouched forest, pathless to all but the wild things and the lonely, hardly less wild trapper; of its silences and ragings. She listened eagerly.

"Let's go there, Kazia."

The suggestion left her almost breathless for a moment. "Dare we?"

"Why not?"

"Why not?" she repeated slowly. "There would be nothing to fear up there, nothing to conceal. We could stay until I have to go back to work."

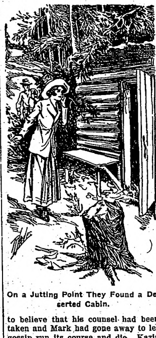
"Longer, if you like it. You needn't think of work."

"But I must," she smiled. "I must live—and I'm not a very rich woman."

"But I—"

"Hush!" She laid a silencing hand over his lips.

It was easily arranged. He dropped a note to Henley which led the latter to believe that his counsel had been taken and Mark had gone away to let gossip run its course and die. Kazia had no explanations to make.



On a Jutting Point They Found a Deserted Cabin.

They met in Toronto and there took a train together. They alighted far to the north at a rude little lumber town where the smell of fresh-sawn lumber, mingled with the fragrance of balsam, swept down a long narrow lake. After one night in the home of a lumberjack to whose simple mind it never occurred to question the status of his Yankee guests, they started up the lake by canoe with a guide who was to leave them when they had made a permanent camp.

From beginning to end their stay in the woods was without cloud or flaw. The narrow lake narrowed still further into a smooth clear river that wound in and out among ever wooded hills. They passed the region where the cruel ax had swung and scarred; the trees became bigger, the forest denser. Here and there they came to a rapids where the canoes had to be lifted and carried.

Her almost awed perception of each unfolding beauty touched him. On a jutting point they found a deserted little cabin, some trapper's winter abode. There the journey ended. When the hut had been cleaned out, they dismissed the guide with orders to return every three weeks with fresh supplies. . . .

Mindful of his resolve, he planned their days carefully, thinking only that they might be perfect for her.

The man was swept out of himself, out of his groove of thought, as never before. His struggles and victories and disappointments receded; they seemed part of another existence. If he thought of them briefly at all, it was but as a price well paid for his freedom. He did not guess that the habit of thinking minutely for her happiness was slowly prying loose other and firmly fixed habits.

Two moons waxed and waned. The guide came with supplies, and again a second time. On his third appearance, the time set for their departure, Mark without consulting Kazia, sent him back. She did not seem to notice the change in plan.

On the day when the guide should have returned again, he did not come. That evening a storm arose, such as rarely visits even those northern woods. Mark and Kazia were out on the lake for a lazy after-supper paddle, watching the masses of black clouds gather over the hills at the head of the lake. There was a rumble of distant thunder.

Suddenly, overtaking the mountainous vapor, appeared a lower plane of clouds, flying before a wind that struck the water and sent a line of white churning down the lake. They were not far out, but though they paddled swiftly, their light craft was tossing like a cork before they reached shore. They made their landing, dragged the canoe to safety and fled to the cabin just as a wall of green and darkness swept down upon them.

The fury was soon spent. The storm passed beyond the lake. Still they watched, in one of their long silences.

She sighed and stirred, looking up at him. "I wonder—" She paused.

"Yes?"

"Have I hurt you?"

"Hurt me?"

"By loving you. By coming here."

"No," he cried. "How could any one be harmed by a perfect love? And it has been perfect. I can never forget."

His heart ached with a deep poignant tenderness for her. They were silent again. . . . But after a time drowsiness overcame him and he slept.

She did not sleep. Until morning she kept her vigil beside him. Sometimes she would lean over and touch his outflung hand. . . .

When he awoke the sun was well up over the hills. Kazia was standing in the doorway, looking down the lake. She heard him stir and turned. He saw her eyes.

"I believe you haven't slept at all!"

She did not answer that, but smiled, pointing.

"The guide is coming. Let us hurry. It is time for us to go."

"No!" He sprang to his feet.

"Please," she put out an appealing hand, "let us not talk of it, but hurry. We must go, I've thought it out, and it is best."

They breakfasted hurriedly and began the brief preparations to leave, putting the cabin in order and stowing into the canoes the little they would need on the trip down the river. They were soon ready.

They were about to embark when Kazia, without explanation, turned and went back to the cabin. Many minutes passed and she did not reappear. Then Mark followed her. He found her lying prone on the pile of pine boughs that had been their couch, face buried in her arms. Harsh dry sobs shook her.

With a cry he dropped to his knees beside her, gently stroking her hair, trying to soothe her grief. He pleaded with her to stay.

Soon she had regained control. She sat up, facing him.

"How can you think of going? Back there we won't find it as it has been here."

"We must," she answered. "And now, while it's still perfect. It has been that—not a thing to regret. I've crowded into two months happiness enough for a lifetime. If I must pay for it, I am willing. . . . And you have given it to me. Do you think I haven't seen how you've watched over me, thought only of me, to make it perfect for me? I can never forget that. And maybe, some day, I shall have the chance to repay you. I pray that I may have the chance."

"It is I who will have to repay you. But why leave such happiness? Let us stay here, where love is free and clean and strong."

"If we only could! But we must go. Because it wouldn't stay perfect. There are storms even in the wilderness. A time would come—you are a man—when love wouldn't be enough. You would begin to want other men. You would chafe against the loneliness and inaction. We would go gladly then and we could look back on this only as a dream that failed. But now—oh, I shall have something to remember! And you will have something to remember. . . . See! You know I'm right. . . . Come."

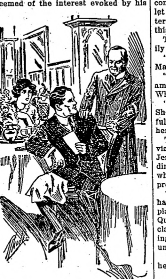
CHAPTER XXII.

The Cleft Stick.

In Canada's capital, thinking themselves still safe, Mark had persuaded Kazia to stay over two days, that they might have one last uninterrupted period together. It was a mistake, an anticlimax.

They were at breakfast when, glancing up, Mark espied a familiar figure at the doorway of the hotel dining room—a figure of courtly and noble mien; moving with slow thoughtful stride and head slightly bent, as though, even amid the commonplace functions of life, his mind never ceased to dwell on momentous philanthropic projects; and withal modestly unaware of the whisper that ran over the room or of the many necks craned in his direction. An obsequious captain of waiters led him down the room, and by fateful chance, toward the table where sat Mark and Kazia. Mark regarded him in that fascination which a dangerous object often has for its victim.

Now it may be that the philanthropist was not quite so unaware as he seemed of the interest evoked by his entrance, for a pair of furtively roving eyes alighted upon Mark. He stopped.



"Can It Be—Of Course, Is Is Truitt."

"Can it be—of course, it is Truitt. This is an unexpected pleasure." He extended a genial hand.

Mark took it mechanically. "How are you, Mr. Quinby?" he muttered out of his daze.

"I suppose I am well." Jeremiah Quinby smiled benignantly. "A busy life leaves little time to consider the state of one's health. You are looking better than I have ever seen you."

"I'm better than I've ever been."

There was a pause during which Quinby glanced tentatively at Kazia.

"Ah! Perhaps I am intruding?" Quinby smiled humorously, as one who knows his welcome anywhere is assured.

Mark brought his whirling thoughts to a stop. "No, certainly not. Mrs. Whiting—" He performed an introduction. Quinby's bow was impressive.

"I see you have just begun. Perhaps—" He paused again, suggestively.

"You will join us? Mrs. Whiting, I'm sure—"

Kazia nodded and smiled composedly.

"This is kind, indeed. Though I should not," Quinby bowed again to Kazia, "blame Truitt for being selfish." He took the chair held out for him by the waiter, glancing from Mark's sunbrowned face to Kazia's. "I see you have both been out under the sun. Your party—"

"Has just separated. Mrs. Whiting is to let me—rather informally, to be sure—convoy her home."

"And what of it, since no one is the wiser? The conventions," Quinby wittily accepted the explanation, "are only for public consumption, though I—being in the public eye, so to speak—may rarely ignore them. So you, too, are from our city, Mrs. Whiting?"

Kazia admitted it.

"Ah! I wish I had known last night that you were here. The governor-general—" The phrase rolled lingeringly on his lips. "The governor-general gave a reception. You would have been pleased, I am sure, to see how our city, in my person, was honored."

"I'm very sure of it. Please tell us about it."

Quinby told them about it, with a wealth of detail.

But under cover of his monologue Quinby was shrewdly taking stock of his hearers and their situation; he had not missed that first moment of betraying confusion. Suspicion, guided by instinct, settled into conviction.

And the event matched Quinby's need. For in the very midday of his triumph, when the brilliancy and daring of his achievements promised to eclipse his better fortified but less original rival in beneficence, a cloud no bigger than a man's hand had crept above the horizon. And if that cloud grew bigger, not MacGregor but Quinby himself might be eclipsed—and, alas! forever. A crisis, then, when "harmony" more than ever was needed in his forces. There are, Quinby gratefully thought, more ways than one of insuring harmony. He felt of his whip and got ready to crack it.

During a temporary lull Kazia, pleading some unfinished packing, made her escape. Quinby's eye followed her admiringly to the door, then bent upon Mark a look in which reproof and a certain ponderous waggishness struggled for the upper hand.

"Ah! Truitt! A sad dog, I fear."

"Not at all," said Mark coldly.

Quinby was blandly skeptical. "I find you, brown as an Indian, at breakfast alone at a hotel with a woman dusky as an Indian maiden. The party—was it a party of two, Truitt?"

"Mr. Quinby," said Mark not so coldly, "your tone—! My word—"

"Ah!" Quinby waved a pacific hand. "If your word is passed, that is enough. I am happy to believe it. Mrs. Whiting seems a charming woman. A well poised woman! An unusual woman!"

"Very."

"You leave today?"

"Yes."

"Then, since I have your word in the matter, I feel safe in inviting you and Mrs. Whiting to share my car as far as Buffalo."

"Mrs. Whiting may have a preference."

Quinby received this with the surprise of one whose invitations partake of the peremptory quality of royalty's. "I hope she will not prefer a stuffy Pullman to my car, which has been praised. I should be deeply hurt by a refusal. In fact," Mark looked up quickly, as though he had heard a warning crack! overhead, "I should construe a refusal as evidence— But let that go. There are company matters I wish to discuss with you, and this seems an opportune occasion."

The men regarded each other steadily for a moment.

"I shall present your invitation," Mark concluded.

"With my compliments," Quinby amended. "Er—Truitt, who is Mrs. Whiting? The name is not familiar."

"I'm sure you never heard of her. She's a trained nurse—a very successful one, I believe. I'll let you know her answer."

They rose and Mark had the enviable distinction of marching with Jeremiah Quinby through the long dining room, where by this time the whisper of the great philanthropist's presence had been happily confirmed.

"Well," said Mark grimly, when he had found Kazia in their rooms, "you played audience to good purpose. Quinby has just informed me, with exclamation points, that you are a charming woman, a well poised woman, an unusual woman."

She breathed a sigh of relief. "Then he doesn't suspect?"

"He's so sure of the truth that he wouldn't believe his own testimony to the contrary."

"What can we do?"

"Exactly nothing but accept his invitation to travel in his car to Buffalo—and trust to luck. Flattery and submissiveness—he would call them harmony—are the way into Quinby's good graces."

But Quinby, when the journey had begun, made no reference to that party in the woods. His engaging manners—never, said the envious, so pronounced as in the presence of a pretty woman—were displayed in their perfection. Even Mark's fears were lulled.

At first the philanthropist gave himself almost wholly to Kazia. He showed her the splendors of his car, from the little kitchen, where her expert admiration brought a grin even to the pudgy face of the Japanese cook, unto the plaster cast of the ichthyosaurus Quinbyi conspicuously placed at one side of the library section.

"Truitt tells me, Mrs. Whiting, that you are a nurse. A beautiful calling! A fitting sphere for woman—woman, tender minister to suffering!"

"And it pays," Kazia smiled, "better than most woman's work."

"But not enough. Have you ever noticed that the most important services are always the poorest paid. I have often wished," Quinby sighed, "that it lay in my power to give every deserving man and woman the just reward earned by their service."

"Ah!" breathed Kazia, "that would be something to do."

Quinby bent a benignant smile on Kazia. "Mrs. Whiting, you must leave me an address. As it happens, I am a trustee, and it may be, an influence in the Todd hospital. Surely the profession of healing offers a woman a larger—and a better paid—field than mere individual nursing?"

"To those who are fitted."

"You are modest, of course. But I am sure I have not judged you too generously."

He led Kazia to a big cushioned chair at the observation end of the car, had the Jap bring magazines and the latest novel.

She lay back in the chair, smiling her thanks up to him, as frankly as if she had not a suspected secret to brazen out. The philanthropist smiled back—and the light in his eyes, as they swept the figure beneath them, was not philanthropy.

His smile became quizzical. He leaned over and patted her hand. "You are a plucky woman, my dear. I have a short memory—sometimes."

He went back to Mark.

"Truitt," he began, "does your recovered health mean that you are going back into harness?"

"I don't know," Mark answered shortly. He had witnessed the tableau just described.

"You must get back. You are needed. Have you kept track of our labor situation?"

"No."

Quinby sketched that situation, with a terseness of which Mark had not believed him capable.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Pipe Worth Half Million Dollars.

Among the royal treasures of Persia is a pipe set with diamonds, rubies and emeralds, to the value, it is estimated, of no less than $500,000. This pipe was made for the late shah, and it is said to be even more valuable than his famous sword. In the matter of swords, it is said that the gaekwar of Baroda who, on the occasion of the coronation of George V in India, added to his fame by snubbing that monarch, possesses the most precious blade in existence. Its hilt and belt are incrusted with diamonds, rubies, sapphires and emeralds, and its value has been put at $1,000,000.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3.1879

It is fortunate that we have Wilson for president, instead of Roosevelt, unless you would like to see this country in a useless war.

Speaker Champ Clark, of the house of representatives and ex candidate for president was led off from the platform at Detroit Michigan on Dec.5th, in an unfit condition to make an address. Of course if he had been only a common everyday individual it may have been said that he was slightly under the weather, for a leading member of the grape juice party.

One of the first and most just bills that should be promptly introduced in the next legislature is one to put all county officers on a salary. Of course the county officers throughout the state would put in a strong lobby in opposition to it, and could of course afford to, as some of them are now pocketing about $7000 a year instead of what they should have which would be a salary of about $1500 a year. This would be a good law to test representatives on, to see whether they were representing the people and tax payers or trying to enrich a few individuals.

No insurance company should be licensed to do business now days, that does not make a thorough investigation of the cause and origin of fires, before paying insurance. The committers of arson; by setting buildings on fire to obtain insurance usually get bolder the longer they practice it, until they finally land where they properly belong, behind the bars of the penitentiary at Stillwater. Dr. Dumass, the noted Cass Lake fire setter was caught and landed in the penitentiary, but not before he had fired thousands of dollars worth of property to obtain the insurance. Of course he did not set the fires himself, but he put up the jobs and had cheap hirelings to commit the actual crime, but he got caught at last, and is now paying the penalty at Stillwater.

The older the country gets the more the need of bridges across Red Lake River in eastern Pennington county becomes a necessity. If we can get this river taken out from under the control of the government, bridges would be as plentiful across it as they are on the Clearwater river. It is surprising to us why a movement is not made to do this by some of the old professional bridge builders. If a movement is started to get the river declared unnavigable, which it is, and it succeeds, bridges will be located afterwards the same as they are on the Clearwater. We are engaged at the present time in looking the matter up and sounding public sentiment, and, if we find that the farmers of eastern Pennington county favor it we will do all we possibly can to help them.

We are pleased to note that a large majority of our farmers are not discouraged over their light crops this year, notwithstanding some of them were not able to meet all their obligations this fall. The banks have shown a spirit of fairness in extending credit where credit is due and our cross roads are not burdened with any notices of "Chattle Mortgage Foreclosure Sales" with a good crop next year, and the present prospects of a good price northern Minnesota will retain its record, as being the paradise for the man of moderate means.

PROMPT ACTION WILL STOP YOUR COUGH.

When you first catch a Cold (often indicated by a sneeze or cough), break it up at once. The idea that "It does not matter" often leads to serious complications. The remedy which immediately and easily penetrates the lining of the throat is the kind demanded. Dr. King's New Discovery soothes the irritation, loosens the phlegm. You feel better at once. "It seemed to reach the very spot of my Cough" is one of many honest testimonials. 50c. at your Druggist.—adv.

DON'T BE LIKE HIM.

We once knew a man who used to sit on his counter and with doeful face and voice, and with pencil and paper in hand write down how little money he had taken in during the day and week. That man never advertised which fact accounted his poor luck. The man who bought him out made a big success of the business, partly because he had more of the business instinct, and partly, and probably chiefly, because he advertised in the local paper and had the goods to back up his statements.—Ex.

A TEST FOR LIVER COMPLAINT

MENTALLY UNHAPPY—PHYSICALLY DULL.

The Liver, sluggish and inactive, first shows itself in a mental state—unhappy and critical. Never is there joy in living, as when the Stomach and Liver are doing their work. Keep your Liver active and healthy by using Dr. King's New Life Pills; they empty the Bowels freely, tone up your Stomach, cure your constipation and purify the Blood. 25c. at Druggist.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve excellent for Piles.—adv.

KEEP IT HANDY FOR RHEMATISM.

No use to squirm and wince and try to wear out your Rheumatism. It will wear you out instead. Apply some Sloan's Liniment. Need not rub it in—just let it penetrate all through the affected parts, relieve the soreness and draw the pain. You get ease at once and feel so much better you want to go right out and tell other sufferers about Sloan's. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25 cents of any druggist and have it in the house—against Colds, Sore and Swollen Joints, Lumbago, Sciatica and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief. Buy a bottle to-day.—adv.

YOUR COLD IS DANGEROUS BREAK IT UP—NOW

A Cold is readily catching. A run-down system is susceptible to Germs. You owe it to yourself and to others of your household to fight the Germs at once. Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey is fine for Colds and Coughs. It loosens the Mucous, stops the Cough and soothes the Lungs. It's guaranteed, Only 25c. at your Druggist.—adv.

Subscribe for THE SUNBEAM.

Cynical.

Miss Yellowleaf—It's better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all. Mr. Knox—Sure. That's a case where you win when you lose.—Chicago News.

Fidelity purchased with money, money can destroy.—Seneca.

State of Ohio, City of Toledo, } ss.
Lucas County.

Frank J. Cheney makes oath that he is senior partner of the firm of F. J. Cheney & Co., doing business in the City of Toledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for each and every case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by the use of HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

FRANK J. CHENEY.

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D. [illegible]

(Seal) A. W. GLEASON, Notary Public.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for testimonials free.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

Sold by all Druggists, 75c.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

WE HAVE $150,000.00 TO LOAN ON FARMS IN PENNINGTON COUNTY

Write Or Call on Us At FIRST NATIONAL BANK

THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN.

FARMERS & MERCHANTS STATE BANK

Oklee Minn.

The rapid growth of this bank is the best evidence that its policy and methods meet with the approval of the people in our community.
You will find this bank as liberal in its dealings as is consistent with sound banking.
We are at all times prepared to discuss your requirements with you and invite consultation.

Pay your bills with checks on this bank.
Farm Loans At Lowest Rates And On Easy Terms.
Six per cent interest paid on time deposits.

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS———————$14,500.00

J. A. C. Torgerson, V. P. W. B. Torgerson, Cashier.

DO YOUR BANKING WITH FARMERS STATE BANK

GOODRIDGE - - MINNESOTA

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS $12, 000.

5 per cent paid on time deposits

Fire and Torrado Insurance Written in Responsible Companies.

FARM LOANS A SPECIALITY

J. M. BISHOP, President JAY PAYNE Vice-President

NICK BUNDHUND. Cashier

We have for sale one of the best quarter sections of land in the town of Highlanding, located one mile south of Highlanding, Creamery. This farm will be sold cheap as the owner is a non resident and desires to use the money invested in other business. For terms and full particulars call on W. G. Hunt, Sunbeam, Minn.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Dec 11th. 1914

Department of the Interior U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Dec. 7th 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Matt Bakken, of Rhoda, Minn. who on April 8th, 1909, made Homestead Application Serial No. 04712, for N. ½ N. W. ¼ & S. E. ¼ N. W. ¼, Sec. 9, and who on April 16th, 1909 made additional Homestead Application Serial No. 04735, for S. W. ¼ N. W. ¼. Sec. 9, Township 152 N. Range 40 West Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make Commutation Proof to establish claim to the land above described; before N. W. Tarrant Municipal Judge for the city of Thief River Falls, Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 12th, day of January, 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:
Edward Singer, M. E. Hyland, Ole Skrieland, of Rhoda, Minn. Stephen Singer of Kratka, Minn.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register.

W. G. Hunt

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

FOR SALE: 120 acres in Section 14, Hickory Township, Pennington County, Minn. Price $1,800.

Nels Fore, Roland. Minn.

HIGHLANDing BLACKSMITH SHOP.

A Tharaldson, blacksmith of Highlanding will have a full line of buggy and wagon repairs on hand, and will be glad to oblige.

A. Tharaldson

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Dec. 11th 1914

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land office at Crookston December 3rd, 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Christoffer Nisson of Erie Minn. who on March 15th, 1912 made Homestead Application Serial No 0748, for S. ½ S. W. ¼ Section 21 Township 155 N. Range 39 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before
Wilhelm Michelet U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 21st, day of January 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:
Ljot Sigurdson. Nels Graue, Andrew Ellingson, Lars C. Fevig. all of Erie Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register.

U. S. Mail.

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 1.05 p. m., on Tuesday Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.55 p.m

Wm. G. Hunt, p.m.

FIRST STATE BANK,

Of Plummer Minnesota.

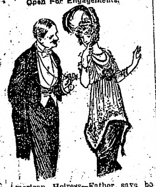
GIVE THE BURGLAR THE "HA,HA!" BANK YOUR CASH WITH US

SOME people extend invitations to the THIEF AND HOLDUP MAN. They carry on their persons or in their homes large sums of money. A CHECK BOOK is of no use to the professional thief. Still, a check is AS GOOD AS CASH to the tradesman or for the immediate household wants. If you haven't a bank account

OPEN ONE TODAY.

J.A.DUFFY President, Henry Enderlie, Cashier

Open For Engagements.



American Heiress—Father says he doesn't wish you for a son-in-law.

French Count—Ask him if he's got any other good position he could give a fellow, will you?—Philadelphia Record.

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Nov. 27th 1914.

Department of the Interior.U.S. Land Office, at Crookston Minn. Nov. 23rd 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Thomas G. Rome, of Rhoda, Minn., who on, February 8th, 1912 made Homestead Application Serial No. 07282 for Lots 5 and 6. Section 6, Township 152 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Commutatition Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for District of Minn. at Thief River Falls, Minn., on the 5th day of January, 1915,

Claimant names as witnesses:
Sam B. Swanson, Ole G. Skreland, of Rhoda, Minn., Andrew Feland, and William G. Hunt, of Sunbeam, Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register.

MONEY TO LOAN ON FARM LAND

MACKEY J. THOMPSON FARM MORTGAGES ST. PAUL, MINNESOTA

CONTRACTS, FIRST AND SECOND MORTGAGES BOUGHT

10 Great Serials

full of life and action, filled with the fire of fine inspiration and followed by 250 short stories of adventure, will make

The YOUTH'S COMPANION

Better Than Ever in 1915

Then the Family Page, a rare Editorial Page, Boys' Page, Girls' Page, Doctor's Advice, and "a ton of fun," Articles of Travel, Science, Education. From the best minds to the best minds, the best the world can produce for you and everyone in the home. There is no age limit to enthusiasm for The Youth's Companion.

CUT THIS OUT

and send it (or name of this paper) with $2.00 for The COMPANION for 1915, and we will send

FREE All the issues of THE COMPANION for the remaining weeks of 1914.

FREE THE COMPANION HOME CALENDAR for 1915.

THEN The 52 Weekly Issues of THE COMPANION for 1915.

52 Times a Year —not 12.

Send to-day to The Youth's Companion, Boston, Mass., for

THREE CURRENT ISSUES—FREE

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED AT THIS OFFICE

THIS YEAR, THE SAME AS LAST YEAR

THE

DULUTH HERALD

IS THE

BEST NEWSPAPER IN THE NORTHWEST

Send for sample copies—after you've read them you'll surely want to join The Herald's happy family of satisfied readers.

DAILY BY MAIL—THREE MONTHS FOR $1.00

ADDRESS—HERALD, DULUTH, MINN.

THE LOCAL NEWS

Fred E. Brown the Chicago grocery salesman was doing business in this locality to-day.

The ice on the river will soon be strong enough to cross with loaded teams.

Gunder Asbjornson was transacting business at Thief River Falls last Saturday.

There is strong competition in the grain market at Oklee, and as high as five cents above the market price is being paid for grain.

Read the new add of the Farmers' Bank at Goodridge, and give them a call when you have any banking to do. The names of the parties at the head of this bank is a guarantee of honest and square dealing.

Don't kick about high war prices, but read the add of S. P. Johnson published in another column, then call at that corner store in Oklee and price goods. Remember the sign S. P. Johnson, "The Right Place."

We understand that the farmers from the towns of Deer Park and Mayfield, who have business at the County Auditor's office are treated rather coolly, by the present County Auditor. But never mind boys, don't cry, for there will be a new man behind that counter in about twenty days.

Notwithstanding Goodridge is getting to be quite a city they still lack the luxury of a U. S. Post-Office. They now get their mail over what is called the grain sack line, from Thief River Falls. They now have their mail addressed to Goodridge and ship it up on the electric line railroad in grain sacks, and when the mail comes, each individual picks out his own mail.

We received a pleasant call yesterday from Jerry O'Brien, one of our pioneer residents, accompanied by E.H. Burau, breeder and dealer in fancy poultry, of Fergus Falls, Minn. Mr. Burau was favorably impressed with the developement of our country and may decide to locate here. We welcome farmers, while our wife attends to the poultry, and is always ready to trade chickens.

When we were directing you a few weeks ago where to put your potatoes and flour if your house was heavily insured and likely to CATCH ON FIRE, we forgot to instruct you to be sure and have the telephone unfastened from the wall so it could be quickly removed, and if you have a valuable lamp be sure to take it out and have it carefully stored, for in the fire haste it might get broken.

When the post-office department discontinued the post-office at Highlanding they ordered all Highlanding mail to Erie. But Post-Master General Singer, of Kratka made another ruling, and held the mail of John Quirk at Kratka, until he got enough for a wagon load, and then sent it up to Mr. Quirk who was surprised to know where his mail was being held up. There is nothing like having a Post-Master General in the eastern part of the county to direct the department how to run their business.

We visited the hustling new town of Goodridge last Monday, and were surprised at the rapid improvement that has been made in the past six weeks. We watched the electric engine making up a train of regular sized freight cars, and they done it as neatly and quickly as it could have been done on any of the old line railroads. after they had their freight loaded, cars ready, they backed up to the depot and took on a large number of passengers and baggage, and away they went for Thief River Falls, and we remarked to a bystander: "Who says eastern Pennington County has not got a railroad?"

The roads are in fine condition for autombiles now days.

The weather still continues fair, with bright sunshine every day.

There is to be a Calico Dance at the Wojnarowski hall, in the town of Hickory, next Saturday evening, December 19th. First class music. All are invited.

There is to be another elevator built at Goodridge next summer, by the Standard Ellivator Co. This will improve the appearance of the market, if it does not the prices paid.

There was a large crowd at the Wojnorowski hall last Saturday evening. The Kolski band furnished first class music for the dancers, and the ball went merrily on until morning.

Cash For Hides and Furs.

If you have Hides or Furs for sale, bring them to the Oklee meat market and get the highest market price in cash.

Meat Market,
Oklee, Minn.

6 Per Cent MONEY 6 Per Cent
MONEY 6 Per Cent

Loans may be obtained for any purpose on acceptable Real Estate security: liberal privileges; correspondence solicited.

A. C. Agency Company.
758 Gas & Electric Bldg.,
Denver Colorado.
and 446 Pierce Bldg.
St. Louis.

EAT

When you are AT GOODRIDGE, Call at the Goodridg Restaurant and get A cup of HOT COFFEE, or a good warm dinner for 25 cents. Don't forget the sign of

EAT

STEPHENSON BROS. Prop.

MINNESOTA NORTHWESTERN ELECTRIC RAILWAY.
TIME TABLE.

Trains going west leave Goodridge at 8:45 A.M and at 1:45 P.M

Arrive at Thief River Falls at 10:00 A. M. and at 3:30 P. M.

Leave Thief River Falls at 7:15 A. M. and at 10:00 A. M.

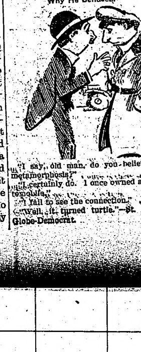
Arrive at Goodridge at 8:30 A. M. and at 12:10 P. M.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

We are sending out bills this week to a large number of our subscribers, and we hope that they will promptly pay up their subscription. If you had sold your wheat, one bushel in a place you would try to get your pay, and you would think when you asked a man for a dollar that he had not ought to say: "A dollar does not amount to much."

Other publishers have raised the price of subscription, but we have stuck to the old price of $1.00 a year, but now we feel that we have fairly earned the dollar a year, and we want it. Please remit,

Why He Believed.



"I say, old man, do you believe in metamorphosis?"

"I certainly do. I once owned an au-

"I fail to see the connection."

"Well, it turned turtle."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

LUMBER AND BUILDING MATERIALS.

When you get ready to build, come in and let us figure your bill and show you our stock of lumber and building materials.

Complete stocks at Thief River Falls, Mavie and Goodridge, Minn.

WINTON-NICHOLS LUMBER COMPANY.

Go to S. P. Johnson, at Oklee

"The Right Place"

Boys Suits from $1.25, to $4.50 per suit. Mens suits, former price $25.00, Now selling for $16.00. $15.00 suits now selling for $8.50

$8.50 suits now selling for $4.50.

Men's shoes from $1.25 to $3.50. Former price $4.00 now $3.25.

Ladies shoes $1.50 to $3.00.

Prints 5 cents per yard. Gingham 8 cents to 10 cents per yard.
All Dry Goods at cost. Men's Caps goes at any price.
Sugar for this week is $6.00 per 100 lbs. Good coffee for 18 cents to 30 cents a pound. Bargains in all kind of goods.

S. P. JOHNSON, Oklee, Minn.

MARKETING WORLD'S GREATEST PROBLEM

WE ARE LONG ON PRODUCTION, SHORT ON DISTRIBUTION.

By Peter Radford
Lecturer National Farmers' Union.

The economic distribution of farm products is today the world's greatest problem and the war, while it has brought its hardships, has clearly emphasized the importance of distribution as a factor in American agriculture and promises to give the farmers the co-operation of the government and the business men the solution of their marketing problem.

This result will, in a measure, compensate us for our war losses, for the business interests and government have been in the main assisting almost exclusively on the production side of agriculture. While the department of agriculture has been dumping tons of literature on the farmer telling him how to produce, the farmer has been dumping tons of products in the nation's garbage can for want of a market.

The World Will Never Starve.

At no time since Adam and Eve were driven from the Garden of Eden have the inhabitants of this world suffered from lack of production, but some people have gone hungry from the day of creation to this good hour for the lack of proper distribution. Slight variations in production have forced a change in diet and one locality has felt the pinch of want, while another surfeited, but the world as a whole has ever been a land of plenty.

We now have less than one-tenth of the tillable land of the earth's surface under cultivation, and we not only have this surplus area to draw on but it is safe to estimate that in case of dire necessity one-half the earth's population could at the present time knock their living out of the trees of the forest, gather it from wild vines and draw it from streams. No one should become alarmed; the world will never starve.

The consumer has always feared that the producer would not supply him and his fright has found expression on the statute books of our states and nations and the farmer has been urged to produce recklessly and without reference to a market, and regardless of the demands of the consumer.

Back to the Soil.

The city people have been urging each other to move back to the farm, but very few of them have moved. We welcome our city cousins back to the soil and this earth's surface contains 16,092,160,000 idle acres of tillable land where they can make a living by tickling the earth with a forked stick, but we do not need them so far as increasing production is concerned; we now have all the producers we can use. The city man has very erroneous ideas of agricultural conditions. The commonly accepted theory that we are short on production is all wrong. Our annual increase in production far exceeds that of our increase in population.

The World as a Farm.

Taking the world as one big farm, we find two billion acres of land in cultivation. Of this amount there is approximately 750,000,000 acres on the western and 1,260,000,000 acres on the eastern hemisphere, in cultivation. This estimate, of course, does not include grazing lands, forests, etc., where large quantities of meat are produced.

The world's annual crop approximates fifteen billion bushels of cereals, thirteen billion pounds of fibre and sixty-five million tons of meat.

The average annual world crop for the past five years, compared with the previous five years, is as follows:

Crops—	Past Half Decade.	Previous Half Decade.
Corn (Bu.)	3,934,174,000	3,403,655,000
Wheat (Bu.)	3,522,769,000	3,257,526,000
Oats (Bu.)	4,120,017,000	3,508,315,000
Cotton (Bales)	19,863,800	17,541,200

The world shows an average increase in cereal production of 13 per cent during the past decade, compared with the previous five years, while the world's population shows an increase of only three per cent.

The gain in production far exceeds that of our increase in population, and it is safe to estimate that the farmer can easily increase production 25 per cent if a remunerative market can be found for the products. In textile fibres the world shows an increase during the past half decade in production of 15 per cent against a population increase of three per cent.

The people of this nation should address themselves to the subject of improved facilities for distribution.

Over-production and crop mortgage force the farmers into ruinous competition with each other. The remedy lies in organization and in co-operation in marketing.

Music of Our Indians.

The music of our Indians is solely and simply vocal. It seems to be generally agreed by musical authorities that the Indians' songs have in them nothing borrowed from instruments, nothing of artificial instigation. An Indian melody never served two sets of words. There is no instance, it appears, where the people have followed our custom of singing the different stanzas of a ballad to the same air. A large proportion of Indian songs are entirely without words at all, syllables being employed to carry the tones. Perhaps the most striking peculiarity of Indian music is the lack of definite pitch, for there is no such thing as standard pitch among the musicians of the red men. The Indian begins his song where the natural quality of his voice and his mood at the time render it easiest for him to sing it. The pitch of the song depends upon the individual.—Philadelphia Record.

Old Nick and Nickel.

Nickel was first discovered by Cronstedt in 1751. No use was made of it, as it was found only in small amounts. For a great many years the German miners called it kupfernickel, or devil's copper. It was believed by those simple folk that Old Nick, or the devil, made this ore purposely to bother the miners, as it looked exactly like copper ore and yet no copper could be extracted from it. Nickel was scarce until a New York assayer found a quantity of it in a shipment of ore from Canada. He stated its value in his report, and the owner of the mine prospected for more and found large quantities of it. Nickel is hard, ductile and malleable. It is white in color, with a yellowish cast. It ranks next to iron and cobalt in magnetic properties and is extensively used for plating purposes, because it will take a high polish and will not rust. Nickel added to steel makes it harder and stronger.—New York World.

FIRST STATE BANK,

not merely name:--But a fixed policy.

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS $11000,00

The men who founded and organized the First State had a definite policy in mind, namely: To organize and conduct a bank that would give to all its patrons the best possible service and the most liberal returns on money deposited that can safely be given by a strong, conservative institution.

FIRST STATE BANK,
OKLEE minn.

A. P. [illegible], President. John [illegible], Cashier.
Ole Sarres, Asst Cashier.

THE PRICHARD Co.
Thief River Falls Minn.

DEALERS IN LUMBER AND FARM MACHIERY.
Located west of the new Soo Depot. Give us a call, and look over our stock of Lumber and Farm Machinery.

H. O. KJOMME
Attorney and Counselor at Law
McGinn Block
Thief River Falls, — — Minn.

Wilhelm Michelet
U. S. COMMISSIONER
COURT HOUSE
THIEF RIVER FALLS,
MINN.

[illegible]

The Sneeze.

People say "God bless me" after sneezing, from the fact that in the days of the plague this terrible malady began with violent sneezing and other indications of cold. The exclamation was thus originally a prayer to be delivered from the plague.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Nov. 27th, 1914.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minnesota November 23rd 1914

Notice is hereby given that Kari A. Korstad, of Erie, Minn. who on October 3rd 1911, made Homestead Application serial No. 06531 for N. E. ¼ Section 21, Township 153 N. Range 40 W. Fifth, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make Commutation proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for Dist. of Minn., at Thief River Falls Minn on the 30th day of December 1914.

Claimant names as witnesses:
Perley F. Palmer, Peder H. Thoreson Peder P. Korstad, Charles Palmer all of Erie, Minn.

PETER M RINGDAL,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Nov. 27th 1914.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office, at Crookston Minn. Nov. 21st 1914.

Notice is hereby given, that Clarence E. Peterson, of Kratka, Minn., who on June 3rd, 1911, made Homestead Entry No. 06259, for Lots 1&2, E.½ N.W.¼, Section 18 Township 153 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before N. W. Tarrant, Municipal Judge for the City of Thief River Falls, Minn. at Thief River Falls Minnesota, on the 30th day of December 1914

Claimant names as witnesses

Stephen Singer, Ole Nelson, Carl Klemmetson, Peter C. Wold, Jack Dunn, all of Kratka, Minn Roy Hoffman, of Erie, Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal.
Register.

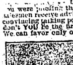
Cuts, Burns,

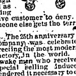
Bruises, Sores, Wounds and Piles quickly healed with Arnica Salve. It prevents infection, is antiseptic, soothing, healing. Try it once. Money Back If It Fails. The Original and Genuine.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve

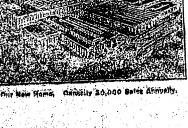
Heals the Hurt
All Druggists and Dealers, 25c.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH — That's $50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day





Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated [illegible]-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were showing them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing talking points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Why don't YOU be the first to apply from your vicinity before someone else gets the territory? We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.



Our New Home, Capacity 20,000 Safes Annually.

The 25th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide-awake men who received our special selling inducement, rendered it necessary to double our output. We are spending many thousands of dollars enlarging our sales organization, but to learn all particulars it will cost you only the price of a postal card.

Ask for Catalogue 16 T.

THE VICTOR SAFE & LOCK CO.
CINCINNATI, OHIO

DEFECTIVE PAGE

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

SCHULZ WILL BE HEAD OF SCHOOLS

GOVERNOR-ELECT HAMMOND TO REAPPOINT PRESENT STATE SUPERINTENDENT.

EDUCATOR TO ACCEPT PLACE

First Appointment of New State Executive Came as Surprise in Political Circles—Hammond Leaves for Congress Opening.

St. Paul.—Governor-elect Winfield S. Hammond announces that he will reappoint Charles G. Schulz, state superintendent of education.

This is the first appointment made by Mr. Hammond and his action in so speedily settling on Mr. Schulz as his own successor came as a decided surprise in political circles. Before the announcement was made, Mr. Schulz, who is in Duluth, was notified by the governor-elect and accepted the appointment.

Mr. Hammond departed for Washington where he will attend the opening of congress on Monday and present his resignation as representative from the Second Minnesota district. He expects to arrive here about December 15.

Mr. Schulz's appointment is nonpartisan. The superintendent first was appointed assistant in the department during the Van Sant administration in 1901. He was continued in the same capacity during Governor Johnson's first term.

When J. W. Olson retired in 1907 he was made superintendent and has held that position ever since, continuing under Johnson and Governor Eberhart.

The appointment not only is a recognition of Mr. Schulz's long service in the department, but also is a recognition of the civil service principles which Mr. Hammond has strongly advocated.

During the last session of the legislature the superintendent was instrumental in obtaining the passage of the act creating a state educational commission to revise the entire school system of Minnesota. He is an ex-officio member of this body.

FLOUR MILLS' BUSY SEASON

Northwestern Concerns Produce 35,602,985 Barrels of Flour During 1913-14 Season.

Minneapolis, Dec. 4.—Northwestern flour mills ground 160,213,441 bushels of wheat during the 1913-14 crop season and produced 35,602,985 barrels of flour. The carefully compiled report of the Northwestern Miller has just been issued and shows that this total has been equalled but once and that was in the previous season and only by a little over 3,000,000 bushels.

Minnesota with her 273 mills turned 137,981,970 bushels of wheat into 30,662,659 barrels of flour. North Dakota has 59 mills which last season ground 11,283,905 bushels of wheat in manufacturing 2,507,533 barrels of flour. South Dakota has 74 mills which used 6,370,219 bushels of wheat in making 1,425,604 barrels of flour. Montana, which has increased its milling industry from 15 mills in 1911 to 30 mills this year, ground 4,577,347 bushels of wheat to make 1,017,189 barrels of flour.

Big Increase in Building.

St. Paul—Building in St. Paul for November had a value of $710,697, bringing the total for the year up to $14,209,996. This is $5,460,853 greater than for the same corresponding eleven months of last year. Building this year will be almost double in value that of 1913. St. Paul's best building record for a whole year was made in 1909, when the permits represented $12,089,451. This year's building will surpass the record by more than $2,500,000. The local building this year has been general. During November 170 permits were registered against 156 for the corresponding month last year.

Evidence Hunters Drowned.

Ely.—All doubt about the three hunters, J. Kilitinen, Frank Anderson and Peter Peterson, being drowned in Burnside lake recently, while crossing in a canoe with two deer carcasses, was dissipated when searching parties found some of their equipment on the surface of the lake. Their canoe and a knapsack belonging to one of the victims were recovered.

Form New Abstract Company.

Mankato.—Just recently there has been organized in this city and incorporated under the laws of the state the Blue Earth County Abstract company, which is composed of influential business men of this city. The corporation is capitalized at $10,000, consisting of 100 shares at $100 each. Until the first annual meeting of the stockholders the following officers will act as directors of the company: President, George M. Palmer; vice president, W. D. Willard; secretary, J. J. [illegible]

ASK STATE TO AID PIONEERS

NORTHERN MINNESOTA BOOSTERS WANT REVOLVING FUND.

They Declare This Would Aid Farmer in Clearing Land and Getting Started.

Brainerd, Minn., Dec. 4.—Men of the Northern Minnesota Development association want the state of Minnesota to do just a fraction as much for her sturdy pioneers as the City of Minneapolis does every day for her residents.

To that end they propose that the development association demand of the state a revolving fund for land improvement that will be a revolving fund in all its senses and in all its blessings.

If a property owner in the city of Minneapolis wants curb and gutter around his home so that the beauty of his premises may be thereby enhanced he has but to ask the city council to instruct the city engineer to install the same. Not until the next year does the property owner advance a penny and then but one-fifth of the cost and he has four more years to pay the balance.

But if the sturdy pioneer of northern Minnesota sees before him handicaps even too great for him to master and turns to the state to ask that it give him a chance by clearing for him some five or ten of his 160 acres, he must plead in vain.

There have been proposals for revolving funds, say those who place the proposition up to the association here, but there has been proposed none so broad in its scope. Those previously suggested have applied to lands owned by the state, swamp lands, school lands, but always state lands.

Announces Butter Contest.

Mankato.—Joel G. Winkjer, dairy and food commissioner, sent out announcements of the butter and cheese contests the department will conduct in December and early in 1915. All butter and cheese makers in the state are invited to engage in the contest. Butter and cheese must arrive in St. Paul on the following dates: First contest, December 15; second contest, January 16, third contest, February 12; fourth contest, March 5. The contest will be continued in preparation for competition next March for the $100 silk banner offered by the National Butter Makers' association at their meeting at Mason City, Iowa, between March 1 and 12. One prize will be given for the highest average butter and cheese score in the four contests; also a diploma to those whose average in the four contests is 92 or higher. This score, Mr. Winkjer said, under winter conditions, is considered as much of an accomplishment as an average score of 93 on six entries in the summer.

Hill Gives $60,000 to School.

St. Paul, Dec. 2.—James J. Hill has donated $60,000 to the St. Charles College of Helena, Mont., according to an announcement made from the pulpit by Bishop John H. Carroll, dispatches of which were received in the Twin Cities. The announcement was confirmed by friends of Mr. Hill in St. Paul. Bishop Carroll was in St. Paul on the way from the east last week and at that time received a check for the amount from Mr. Hill. The Catholic school at Helena, by the donation of Mr. Hill, completes a $200,000 endowment fund. The school was established ten years ago by Bishop Carrol.

Blame Liquor for Accident.

Worthington.—Arguing that the furnishing of liquor to young men in an automobile that collided with a buggy was the primary cause of an accident fatal to one man, the county attorney of Nobles county has persuaded the grand jury to return 12 indictments against John Haff, a saloon keeper at Round Lake, and six against his bartender, John Johnson. Richard Gorman, a traveling man of Worthington, was killed, and others in the auto were injured in the crash. Mr. and Mrs. August Anderson of Round Lake, who were in a buggy, escaped with slight injuries.

Escapes Foot and Mouth Disease.

Red Wing.—"Every day that passes adds to Minnesota's possibilities of escaping the foot and mouth disease," said Dr. M. H. Reynolds, veterinarian at the university farm. Dr. Reynolds said the state health board has investigated suspected cases of the disease of this state, but none had proved to be the foot and mouth infection. "If the present rigid inspection is maintained there is little need to fear an outbreak here," said Dr. Reynolds.

Nearly $12,000,000 Gain.

Minneapolis, Dec. 1. — November bank clearings in Minneapolis were $146,287,314.30, or nearly $12,000,000 more than November, 1913. The total for the 11 months of 1914 is $1,223,504,354.04. This is the greatest total ever made in any 11 months in any year. It is $42,247,000 more than in the corresponding time in 1913. The 11 months' total is $88,907,902.60 less than the total for the full year 1913, which was a high record. These figures insure a new high record total for the year.

CROWDS WAIT FOR STAMPS

Shippers of Minneapolis Delayed By Failure to Secure New Tax Paper.

Minneapolis, Dec. 2.—With many large shippers of freight unable to obtain the internal revenue stamps necessary for every freight receipt issued Minneapolis shipping circles were disturbed and bitter complaints were forwarded to Washington by the Minneapolis Civic and Commerce Association.

Hundreds of men and women in the motley line stood for hours today on the third floor of the old postoffice building, waiting to reach the lone window and buy stamps for which business transactions are waiting. Petite stenographers held their places in line for wholesale houses, teamsters in sheepskin coats stood for hours while their teams waited with goods held up by the lack of stamps. Clerks from lawyer's offices were there waiting to get stamps for notarial acknowledgments, deeds and other papers that, beginning December 1, require the government stamps.

CONFESSION FREES TWO MEN

C. D. Van der Steenstraten Admits That He Robbed Store, Not Others.

Minneapolis, Minn., December 5.—J. B. Johnson bought a plate of beans for a man who was broke, and he and Joseph Smith were arrested, charged with robbery, and held to the grand jury. Such at least, is the story Smith told after he had been released, following C. D. Van der Steenstraten's confession of the crime for which the two were held.

Johnson and Smith were identified by Thomas Benson and two others as the men who robbed his store. Benson was not asked to pick the robbers out of a number of men, the only form of identification which has any degree of accuracy. He was shown the two and asked whether they were the robbers.

Holdup Man Confesses.

Minneapolis, Dec. 5.—Conscience stricken with the thought that two men had been indicted by the grand jury for a robbery which he had committed C. D. Van der Steenstraten gave himself up to the police and confessed. He implicated another man, who was arrested at a Nicollet avenue hotel. The second man gives the name of J. B. Riley. According to the police, Riley has corroborated Van der Steenstraten's story. J. B. Johnson of Canby, Minn., and Joseph Smith of Oklahoma City are the two men under arrest for the robbery of the grocery store of Thomas Benson, 256 Twenty-sixth avenue north, on the night of Nov. 24. Johnson and Smith had been positively identified by Benson. Van der Steenstraten told Captain Weare that his father is a millionaire in Holland and that he, until recently, had been assistant cashier of the Union State bank of Vancouver, B. C. Wine and song, he said, caused his discharge from the bank and he started on his downward career. While here he used the alias of C. H. Straten.

Sentenced for Attempted Blackmail.

St. Paul, Dec. 5.—Glen W. Dixon, 26 years old, was sentenced to one year and one day in Leavenworth penitentiary for attempted blackmail of Edward Yanish, postmaster of St. Paul, Nov. 6 last. Dixon maintained his reputation as a mysterious criminal by asserting before Judge Booth in United States district court that he is not insane and fully realized what he was doing when he made a demand for $1,000 from Mr. Yanish, and also by asking to be sent for one year to Leavenworth.

Red Wing Helps Belgians.

Red Wing.—Many Red Wing children have joined in the nation-wide movement now on foot to send Christmas gifts to the children of the countries now at war. Last Sunday the sum of $31 was raised in the Presbyterian Sunday school, which amount has been forwarded to the War Children's Christmas fund, of which Mrs. J. H. Hammond is national chairman and Theodore Roosevelt honorary president.

School Election at St. Cloud.

St. Cloud, Minn., Dec. 5.—Four thousand six hundred votes were cast here in the special city election held to decide on a site for the new school building. Three sites were up for the consideration of the voters—one on Third avenue, another on Fifth avenue, and a third known as the Lake George site. The latter site was chosen, with 209 votes to spare.

Sues Roosevelt Citizens.

Crookston.—An action in the district court at Roseau places the town of Roosevelt in a peculiar position The Minnesota & Manitoba railroad has started a suit against 90 residents of Roosevelt for damages aggregating $1,000. The railroad alleges that it owns a right of way through the village extending 200 feet on each side of the track, while the residents, believing it to extend but 100, built their places of business and many homes that distance from the track.

THE ACCUSING WRAITH

By ADRIAN C. HOWARD.

(Copyright, 1914, by W. G. Chapman.)

Crash—thud!

A crouching form had arisen stealthily from among the thick underbrush surrounding a lone log cabin. It held a light. In its flare, leaning over a table preparing his homely meal, the occupant could be plainly seen by the lurker, who, lifting his revolver, took steady aim.

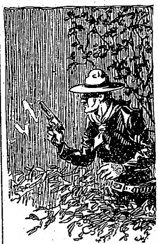
The window pane crashed to myriad splinters, the man at the table went over and down like a shot.

"I never missed yet!" growled out the lurker. A savage glee was dominant in his strong swarthy face. He turned from the spot, momentarily satisfied that he had wrought a measure of justice—rude, exacting frontier law.

All day long Greg Davis had hung around the spot. All day long he had nursed his fancied wrongs. The flask at his feet filled with fiery fluid had fed the dread appetite for blood. Now the deed was done.

"Dan Moffat will never double-cross another partner," he muttered, and he tramped on, striving to place forever behind him an episode that strangely, he fancied, persisted in obscuring all other thoughts.

With a growl he dashed the flask against a rock, its last drop exhausted. His eyes grew bloodshot as he hurried on. As the effects of the liquor began to dissipate, it seemed as if he could not escape the tormenting fancies that came to him. Nature appeared to have a thousand voices:



"I Never Missed Yet!"

"Coward—murderer—accursed!"

The chorus rang forth remorselessly. His fugitive course broke into a run, until at length, miles and miles away from the scene of his crime, Greg Davis sank to the ground and slept the sodden sleep of exhaustion.

He awoke with a start and sprang up with a shudder. All nature was smiling, yet a red mist seemed to obscure it all. A dull horror traversed the man's soul as he recalled what he had done.

Oh, to take back yesterday! The cursed drink, filling his mind with sophistry, driving him to slaughter in cold blood his friend, his chum, his partner.

Then he tried to justify himself. Together they had found a famous claim. It was remote, and quick as they got back to civilization, it was agreed that together they should go and make good their pre-emption, meantime keeping its discovery a sacred secret. Moffat had returned to the cabin. Davis had gone away for a week to settle an old lawsuit. Returning homewards, he had stopped to register the claim in his name and that of his partner.

"Filed on a week ago," was the astounding report, and Davis had staggered away, concluding that his partner had played him false. Who else knew of the claim?

And now the climax—the drink-driven, hate-burdened sin! And the reaction, remorse! Why had he done it? What evil thing in robes of sorrow had assailed his mentality and fired him to act the assassin?

Two days later, making a clean-up of his claims, Greg Davis left for the East. In one town he had picked up a newspaper. "Cowardly murder"—only the headline he read, to drop the sheet as if it were red hot pitch. Of course it alluded to his crime, although he was not suspected, for the dancing letters, "assassin unknown," had met his shrinking vision.

For a month Greg Davis tried the reckless career of a moneyed miner "living the life," amid the white lights of this and that metropolis. Through it all, however, there seemed to be an accusing wraith at his side. At times he swept his weary hand across his brow as though to brush away a veritable brand of Cain.

Then one day a great inspiration came to him. He reckoned up his resources. They were substantial. He set his lips firmly as he formed a mighty resolution. He patched together stories his old partner had told him of an old father and mother and a sister, somewhere in the East. Finally he recalled even the name of the town. It was Bridgeton. Thither he went.

He made secret cautious inquiries. He located the family. The old people were living in a state of semi-destitution, their home mortgaged, their future hopeless. He learned that they had not heard from the son they had missed and mourned for over a year.

A daughter supported them by working in a factory in a town some distance away. By careful stages Davis formed an acquaintanceship with the old people. He managed to arrange that they should give him room and board. He insisted on paying an extravagant price, "for a home," as he termed it. Then at the end of a month he offered to free the place from debt if they would accept him as a permanent guest.

There was little solace for him in viewing the new comfort and joy of the old couple, for was he not the murderer of their missing son? Still, he persevered in what he called restitution. Dark and gloomy was his life. Then the daughter, Alma, came home, and then in a short while Greg Davis knew that fate had yet to award to him the severest blow of all, for love, strange to him before, intense, almost feverish, now possessed his lonely, longing soul.

"What have you not done for us!" Alma said to him more than once, gratitude flooding her eyes.

"Why, I needed a home, friends," Davis would lamely explain, all the time his heart sinking like lead. It had occupied his time and thoughts to work around the place for the old folks. Alma, however, was a constant source of reproach and remorse to him. Every time his eyes fell upon her, full of love and longing, between them seemed to come her dead brother, waving him sternly back, pointing at him a menacing, accusing finger.

"Heaven shut out because I plunged recklessly into that hell of sin and crime!" he groaned. "I cannot endure my punishment. I will end it all."

Davis got all his money together and placed it in the hands of a lawyer, with instructions to deliver it to old Mr. Moffat should anything happen to himself.

Then one afternoon he proceeded to a retired spot in the home garden of the place, sat down on a bench and drew out a revolver. It was the same weapon that he had used that fateful night against his partner.

"A life for a life!" he breathed, solemnly, but his suicidal hand was suddenly stayed. Through the garden rang the echoing voice of Alma!

"Oh, Mr. Brown!"—under this name she knew him—"where are you? Such news, such glorious news! The letter just came. My brother, Dan—he is coming home!"

Astare, Greg Davis' eyes roved over the letter she placed before him. His dazed brain could scarcely take in its contents. It told of a partner mysteriously disappeared, of vain search. It told how Moffat, in order to surprise him had pre-empted the new claim in Davis' name, and in his hot haste Davis had not paused to ascertain that fact. The writer feared that some enemy had killed Davis, for his own life had been attempted, but the bullet had glanced from a bone, merely stunning him. So, the headlines Davis had seen in the newspaper had alluded to some other crime.

Amid his relief, his joy at learning that he was not a murderer, Greg Davis sank to his knees in grateful prayer. Then came a confession to the amazed girl at his side.

"How you have suffered!" breathed the gentle-hearted Alma, pityingly, and out of that pity grew love, and when Dan Moffet came home it was to greet a prospective brother-in-law.

SOME TRUTH IN STATEMENT

Auto Owner Was in Position to Believe Farmer's Information Was Correct.

A party of motorists touring from Cornwall lost their way one night while proceeding to St. Mawes, and eventually found themselves stranded with a burst tire on one of the hilliest, roughest, narrowest and most winding roads that even Cornwall produces. While the spare wheel was being fixed the rain came down in torrents, and language suitable to the occasion was used. Just then a farmer happened to come along.

"Can you tell us where we are?" asked the owner-driver, calming himself with an effort. "We have missed our way."

"You are on the road to Ruan," said the farmer, innocently. "It's a mile off."

"Oh, I see!" exclaimed the perspiring motorist. "On the road to ruin, am I? Well," he continued, as the humor of the situation dawned upon him, "I may be, and it may lead to destruction—but I always thought it was a sight broader and easier going than this."

Centipede Routs Girls.

A great big eight-inch centipede, an old fellow with black body and light brown claws, invaded the French class at the high school here. When first noticed he was crawling up Mme. Muenier's dress. The French class of nine girls screeched simultaneously, but Miss Lucie Woorten was the heroine of the hour, knocking the centipede from the teacher's clothing.

One would have thought a mouse was loose in the schoolroom by the way the young women hopped upon the benches.

The centipede escaped to its hole in the wall, but in a little while came out again. With the aid of the janitor and his broom and a boy who procured a bottle, the centipede was captured.—Austin (Tex.) Dispatch to the Chicago Tribune.

CHOICEST TOBACCOS
Just natural choice leaf skillfully blended — that is what makes so many friends for FATIMA Cigarettes.

If you cannot secure Fatima Cigarettes from your dealer, we will be pleased to send you three packages postpaid on receipt of 50c. Address Fatima Dept., 212 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y.

"Distinctively Individual"

Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

20 for 15¢
FATIMA
TURKISH BLEND CIGARETTES
Cameron & Cameron Co. RICHMOND, VA.
NO GOLD TIPS
FINEST QUALITY

Useful Artificial Arms
Write for free catalog "B 10."
Carnes Artificial Limb Company
904 EAST 12th STREET, KANSAS CITY, MO.

SOMETHING USEFUL FOR XMAS
Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pen
Sold at the best stores most everywhere. If your dealer cannot supply, we will gladly assist you. Illustrated folder on request.
L. E. WATERMAN COMPANY
173 Broadway New York

HONESTY HAD ITS LIMITS

Woman Resisted Temptation for a Time, but Finally Proved Herself Human.

Somebody on the back platform dropped a bundle. A woman saw it and picked it up. She was an honest woman; nevertheless she opened the package. It contained a waist pattern of very pretty silk. When she saw that she thanked her guardian angel she had been created honest.

"If I had been an ordinary dishonest thing," she told her husband, "I should keep this silk as sure as anything and make it up for myself."

"But since you aren't," said the man, "what are you going to do with it?"

"Oh, take it back to the lost and found department of the store where it was bought. The purchaser will probably inquire about it there."

One evening about two weeks later the woman appeared at dinner in a new waist.

"Hello," said the man admiringly, "seems to me I have seen that before. Isn't it something like the piece of silk you found?"

"It is just like it," sighed the woman. "It is the same piece. I took it to the lost and found department, but I—I couldn't stand it. I went around the next day and asked for it myself."

Once Over.

Barber—Shall I go over it again, sir?

Victim—Oh, no; I heard every word you said.—Boston Truth.

Appropriate.

"I saw a dog-faced man the other day."

"Was his nose a pug?"

To Build Strong Children

Supply their growing bodies with right food, so that Brain, and Muscle, and Bone development may evenly balance.

Grape-Nuts FOOD

was originated to supply, in proper proportion, the very elements required by the human body for growth and repair.

To supply children a dish of Grape-Nuts and cream for breakfast regularly, is to start them on the road to sturdy health.

"There's a Reason" for Grape-Nuts

Sold by grocers.

Perpetual Motion.

Alderman Curran of New York city worked his way through Yale college. During his course, he was kept very busy by the various jobs he did to help with his expenses. On graduation, he went to New York, and was even busier than he had been in New Haven.

After some months of life in New York, a friend met him, and said: "Henry, what are you doing?"

"I have three jobs," replied Mr. Curran. "I am studying law, I am a newspaper reporter, and I am selling life insurance."

"How do you manage to get it all in?" said the friend.

"Oh," replied Mr. Curran, "that's easy enough. They're only eight-hour jobs."—Youth's Companion.

To Get Rid of Pimples.

Smear the affected surface with Cuticura Ointment. Let it remain five minutes, then wash off with Cuticura Soap and hot water and continue bathing a few minutes. These fragrant, super-creamy emollients quickly clear the skin of pimples, blackheads, redness and roughness, the scalp of dandruff and itching and the hands of chaps and irritations. For free sample each with 32-p. Skin Book address post card: Cuticura, Dept. X, Boston. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

Hers.

"I suppose that you and your wife are two souls with but a single thought?"

"That's about the situation, but about half the time she will not tell me what that thought is."

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over 30 Years.

Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

Intended to Be.

"Are you worried over that cipher message?"

"Nac, it is naught to me."

YOUR OWN DRUGGIST WILL TELL YOU

Try Murine Eye Remedy for Red, Weak, Watery Eyes and Granulated Eyelids; No Smarting—just Eye comfort. Write for Book of the Eye by mail Free. Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago.

Practical.

"What do you expect for Christmas?"

"Company, as usual."

Love is blind—and a homely girl may well be glad of it.

Rheumatism

Just put a few drops of Sloan's on the painful spot and the pain stops. It is really wonderful how quickly Sloan's acts. No need to rub it in—laid on lightly it penetrates to the bone and brings relief at once. Kills rheumatic pain instantly.

Mr. James E. Alexander, of North Harpswell, Me., writes: "Many strains in my back and hips brought on rheumatism in the sciatic nerve. I had it so bad one night when sitting in my chair, that I had to jump on my feet to get relief. I at once applied your Liniment to the affected part and in less then ten minutes it was perfectly easy. I think it is the best of all Liniments I have ever used."

SLOAN'S LINIMENT

Kills Pain

At all dealers, 25c.

Send four cents in stamps for a TRIAL BOTTLE

Dr. Earl S. Sloan, Inc.
Dept. B. Philadelphia, Pa.

The Army of Constipation

Is Growing Smaller Every Day.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS are responsible — they not only give relief — they permanently cure Constipation. Millions use them for Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Sallow Skin.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

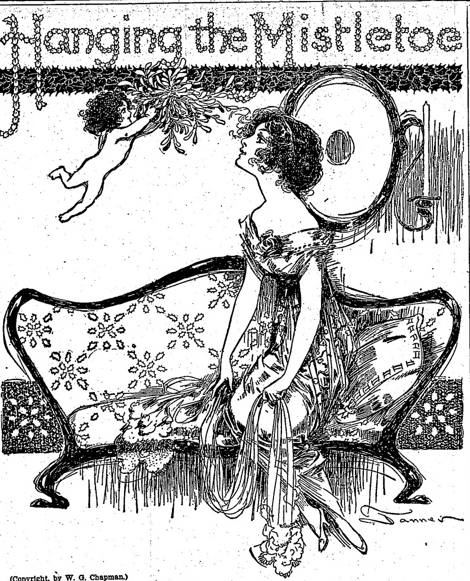
TYPHOID is no more necessary than Smallpox. Army experience has demonstrated the almost miraculous efficacy, and harmlessness, of Antityphoid Vaccination.

Be vaccinated NOW by your physician, you and your family. It is more vital than house insurance.

Ask your physician, druggist, or send for "Have you had Typhoid?" telling of Typhoid Vaccine, results from use, and danger from Typhoid Carriers.

The Cutter Laboratory, Berkeley, Cal., Chicago, Ill.

Producing Vaccines and Serums under U. S. License

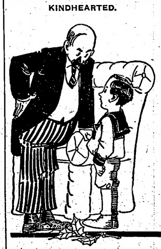


(Copyright, by W. G. Chapman.)

The Right Christmas Attitude

BEWARE of uttering pessimistic and cynical remarks about Christmas and Christmas joys. If only from motives of vanity, abstain from grumbling during the festive season, for nothing so surely fixes a person's age as disagreeable remarks about the utter futility and absurdity of keeping Christmas. However well preserved, however free from gray hair, wrinkles and other distressing marks of devouring Time, be quite sure that your Christmas attitude will not give you away. "Heigho for the holly! This life is most jolly!" is the correct attitude. It is the attitude of the child, and at Christmas time the immortal child which lurks in every human being wakes to life if we do not frighten it and allow it to creep back to its hiding place for want of encouragement. Grumpy, disagreeable people naturally do not like Christmas, because it shows them up.

KINDHEARTED.



"Are you going to hang up your stocking on Christmas eve?" asked the boy's uncle, patronizingly.

"I suppose so," answered the boy, still more patronizingly. "Father and mother seem to expect that sort of thing, and it would be a pity to disappoint them."

Christmas Beauty.

Think lovely thoughts in keeping with the spirit of the time.

FESTIVAL FOR THE YOUNG

Opportunity of Christmas of Bringing Happiness to Children Should Not Be Passed By.

Christmas, the celebration of the birthday of the Divine Child, is peculiarly the children's festival. And while it cannot, too, but be a time of special rejoicing among grown-ups, we realize after all, that it has no other charm to compare with the pleasure we take in some kiddy's delight over the doll or drum or picture book that our special Santa Claus has brought him.

This opportunity of making some child's Christmas one of surpassing joy, of which he will carry a gracious and ennobling memory into after life, years, it may be, after our direct influence for good or evil will have ceased forever—this opportunity of giving pleasure is one of the best that life has to offer us. And perhaps the greatest opportunity is his who in place of home times, has the wide, gray world of homeless, loveless, unhappy childhood from which to choose the most needy recipient of his Christmas giving. The chances of giving happiness in this way are so many, the means so simple, and the deed itself so worthy, that no one of us should let the season pass unimproved.

> For it is good to be children sometimes, and never better than at Christmas, when it's mighty Founder was a child himself.
>
> —Charles Dickens

WISE AND JUST.

There was a man in our town,
  And he was wondrous wise:
He said all plants were mistletoe
  To his discerning eyes.

Whene'er beneath a spray of green,
  From holly down to fir,
He found a maiden young and fair,
  He then and there kissed her.

And when the maids objected, he
  Did penance there and then;
He counted up each kiss he took,
  And gave it back again.

Satisfied.

He was a poor man but a contented one. Santa Claus came to him and said:

"What do you want, my friend?"

"Nothing," he replied, with becoming modesty, which he hoped would be rewarded.

And Santa Claus was so pleased that he gave it to him and passed on.

Papa's Suggestion.

Miss Fosdick (who is self-willed)—I wish I knew what to give dear Charles for a Christmas gift.

Fosdick, pere (who hates "dear Charles")—Give him a wide berth.

The GIFT CIGARS

By WILBUR D. NESBIT

DON'T laugh! But she gave me cigars,
  Selected the things by their color—
They came out in one of those jars—
  I think they were called the "Maud Muller."
I've read all these gift-cigar jokes,
  I know I must read them hereafter;
  Please wait for the place for the laughter.

Don't smile! But she bought them herself.
  I know how she talked to the dealer—
She looked at each box on the shelf
  And spoke of the wrapper as "peeler."

MAUD MULLER
FROM WIFE

O, beautiful-looking were they—
  I think they were called the "Maud Muller."
Of course you think now of hay
  Unless, as I was, you are duller.

Don't grin! They wore gilt and red bands,
  And really looked quite artistic.
She says that she now understands
  Why smoking has charms that are mystic.
She says that it's cheering to see
  How much as I smoke I enjoy them.
I know you are choking with glee
  And think that I wished to destroy them.

Now, wait! Well, I sat down and smoked;
  She placed the ash tray on the table;
I chuckled and subtly I joked—
  "Maud Muller," you know, was the label.
Well, talk of your jokes on cigars!
  I said you might laugh when I'd ended.
These came out in one of those jars—
  And, honestly, now, they were splendid.

Couldn't Have.

"Huh! I bet you didn't have a good time at your Christmas party yesterday" taunted Billy.

"I bet I did," answered little Eddie.

"Aw, go 'way. Why ain't you sick today, if you did?"

VITAL FORCE

Disease germs are on every hand. They are in the very air we breathe. A system "run down" is a prey for them. One must have vital force to withstand them. Vital force depends on digestion—on whether or not food nourishes—on the quality of blood coursing through the body.

DR. PIERCE'S Golden Medical Discovery

Strengthens the weak stomach. Gives good digestion. Enlivens the sluggish liver. Feeds the starved nerves. Again full health and strength return. A general upbuilding enables the heart to pump like an engine running in oil. The vital force is once more established to full power.

Year in and year out for over forty years this great health-restoring remedy has been spreading throughout the entire world—because of its ability to make the sick well and the weak strong. Don't despair of "being your old self again." Give this vegetable remedy a trial—Today—Now. You will soon feel "like new again." Sold in liquid or tablet form by Druggists or trial box for 50c by mail. Write Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's great 1008 page "Medical Adviser," cloth-bound, sent for 31 one-cent stamps.

SPOHN'S DISTEMPER CURE

HORSE SALE DISTEMPER

You know what you sell or buy through the sales has about one chance in fifty to escape SALE STABLE DISTEMPER. "SPOHN'S" is your true protection, your only safeguard, for as sure as you treat all your horses with it, you will soon be rid of the disease. It acts as a sure preventive no matter how they are "exposed." 60 cents and $1 a bottle; $5 and $10 dozen bottles, at all good druggists, horse goods houses, or delivered by the manufacturers.

SPOHN MEDICAL CO., Chemists and Bacteriologists, GOSHEN, IND., U. S. A.

Getting Double Value.

Senator Sniffensnuff likes to get double value out of his cigar. After snipping off the pointed end he generally inserts two-thirds of the weed into his mouth and munches it until all but the lighted end looks like a salad.

One afternoon while Sniffensnuff was sitting in front of his hotel a small boy tugged at the corner of his coat.

"What is it, son?" asked the senator, good-naturedly.

Pointing with a small, brown finger, the lad replied:

"If you please, sir, your chew is going out."—Youngstown Telegram.

Logical.

Nurse—Goodness me, what 'ave you been doing to your dolls?

Joan—Charley's killed them. He said they were made in Germany, and how were we to know they weren't spies?—Punch.

Explained.

"I know a girl who married a Chinaman."

"Mercy! How could she?"

"She was Chinese herself."

Indorsed.

"Does she approve of cosmetics?"

"She seems to lend countenance to them so far as I can see!"—Judge.

It Puts Out Fire!!!

Just hang can on convenient hook in Home, Store, Barn, Garage or in Automobile. It is always ready for use—never hardens—pulling down removes cover, then throw contents on flame. It will extinguish any kind of blaze instantly.

"UNIVERSE"

Dry Powder FIRE EXTINGUISHER is certain in effect and inexpensive. 3½ lb. can $1.75, or two cans for only $3.00, prepaid.

Try It Yourself

Send 25c for sample can. Protect your home. Order today. It's a sensible and useful Christmas gift.

HOFMAN MFG. CO., 33 Union Square New York City

SALESMEN!

Go into the business of selling groceries, paints, oils and stockfood. We teach you how to sell restaurants, farmers and the large buyers. No capital required. If you are anxious to earn $100 to $500 monthly and become independent, write us at once. The choice territory we have open will be grabbed up quickly. John Sexton & Co., Wholesale Grocers, Dept. 0, 236 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Washington, D.C. Books free. Highest references. Best results.

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 50–1914.

For Best Results Use Perfection Oil

This Light Saves Eyes

You can sew, embroider or read and the children can study without fear of straining the eyes if you have a RAYO LAMP. Experts agree that the light given by a good kerosene lamp is the most soothing and restful to the eyes—you will soon learn that no lamp equals

Rayo Lamps

Makes the long winter evenings the happiest times of the year—all the family will look foward to them. Sold by good dealers everywhere—3,000,000 now in use in progressive middle western homes.

Illustrated book Free.

Standard Oil Company
(AN INDIANA CORPORATION)
CHICAGO, ILL.

Getting Rough With Juanita.

Small Mary, who had been taught to read by the modern "sounding-out" system, was amusing herself by singing the school songster from cover to cover. Presently, as she reached "Juanita," one heard coming in her birdlike little voice from the depths of the big armchair:

"In the dark I slammed her."

A startled parent found that the line really read:

"In thy dark eyes' splendor."

Extravagant.

Clerk—Mr. Goldbug, as I am to marry, I would like more salary.

Boss—How much more do you want?

Clerk—Ten dollars a week.

Boss—My gracious! How many women are you going to marry?

Many a man who says nothing saws precious little wood.

Florida Chicken Farms

5 acres for $150, $10 cash, $5 per month. A proven success. Near the big Jacksonville markets. Driving distance from Jacksonville. 6 years development; 700 families now living there; schools, churches, telephones, roads, etc. GUARANTEED by reliable company. Write for literature. JACKSONVILLE HEIGHTS IMPROVEMENT CO., JACKSONVILLE, FLORIDA

WANTED An industrious man who can earn $100.00 a month and expenses selling our Products to farmers. Must have some means for starting expenses and furnish bond signed by 2 responsible men. Address W. T. RAWLEIGH CO., FREEPORT, ILL., giving age, occupation and references.

Minnesota Directory

Highest Cash Prices
Paid For CHICKENS, VEAL, CREAM
WRITE FOR SPECIAL PRICE LIST.
THE R. E. COBB CO., 14. 3rd Street, St. Paul, Minn.

Canadian Wheat to Feed the World

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

The war's fearful devastation of European crops has caused an unusual demand for grain from the American Continent. The people of the world must be fed and there is an unusual demand for Canadian wheat. Canada's invitation to every industrious American is therefore especially attractive. She wants farmers to make money and happy, prosperous homes for themselves while helping her to raise immense wheat crops.

You can get a Homestead of 160 acres FREE and other lands can be bought at remarkably low prices. Think of the money you can make with wheat at its present high prices, where for some time it is liable to continue. During many years Canadian wheat fields have averaged 20 bushels to the acre—many yields as high as 45 bushels to the acre. Wonderful crops also of Oats, Barley and Flax.

Mixed farming is fully as profitable an industry as grain raising. The excellent grasses, full of nutrition, are the only food required either for beef or dairy purposes. Good schools, markets convenient, climate excellent.

Military service is not compulsory in Canada, but there is an extra demand for farm labor to replace the many young men who have volunteered for the war. The Government this year is urging farmers to put extra acreage into grain.

Write for literature and particulars as to reduced railway rates to Superintendent Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or

R. A. GARRETT,
311 Jackson Street
St. Paul, Minn.
Canadian Government Agent

Underneath the High-Cut Vest

A Business Adventure of Emma McChesney

By EDNA FERBER

Author of "Dawn O'Hara," "Buttered Side Down," etc.

Copyright by Frederick A. Stokes Company

We all carry with us into the one-night-stand country called Sleepland, a practical working nightmare that we use again and again, no matter how varied the theme or setting of our dream-drama. Your surgeon, tossing uneasily on his bed, sees himself cutting to remove an appendix, only to discover that that unpopular portion of his patient's anatomy already bobs in alcoholic glee in a bottle on the top shelf of the laboratory of a more alert professional brother. Your civil engineer constructs imaginary bridges which slump and fall as quickly as they are completed. Your stage favorite, in the throes of a post-lobster nightmare, has a horrid vision of herself "resting" in January. But when he who sells goods on the road groans and tosses in the clutches of a dreadful dream, it is, strangely enough, never of canceled orders, maniacal train schedules. lumpy mattresses, or vilely cooked food. These everyday things he accepts with a philosopher's cheerfulness. No—his nightmare is always a vision of himself, sick on the road, at a country hotel in the middle of the spring season.

On the third day that she looked with more than ordinary indifference upon hotel and dining car food, Mrs. Emma McChesney, representing the T. A. Buck Featherloom Petticoat company, wondered if, perhaps, she did not need a bottle of bitter tonic. On the fifth day she noticed that there were chills chashing up and down her spine, and back and forth from legs to shoulder blades when other people were wiping their chins and foreheads with bedraggled-looking handkerchiefs, and demanding how long this heat was going to last, anyway. On the sixth day she lost all interest in T. A. Buck's featherloom petticoats. And then she knew that something was seriously wrong. On the seventh day, when the blonde and nasal waitress approached her in the dining room of the little hotel at Glen Rock, Minn., Emma McChesney's mind somehow failed to grasp the meaning of the all too obvious string of questions which were put to her—questions ending in the inevitable "tea, coffee 'r milk?" At that juncture Emma McChesney had looked up into the girl's face in a puzzled, uncomprehending way, had passed one hand dazedly over her hot forehead and replied, with great earnestness:

"Yours of the twelfth at hand and contents noted . . . the greatest little skirt on the market . . . he's going to be a son to be proud of, God bless him . . . want to leave a call for seven sharp— ".

The lank waitress' face took on an added blankness. One of the two traveling men at the same table started to laugh, but the other put out his hand quickly, rose, and said, "Shut up, you blamed fool! Can't you see the lady's sick?" And started in the direction of her chair.

Even then there came into Emma McChesney's ordinarily well-ordered, alert mind the uncomfortable thought that she was talking nonsense. She made a last effort to order her brain into its usual sane clearness, failed, and saw the coarse white table cloth rising swiftly and slanting to meet her head.

It speaks well for Emma McChesney's balance that when she found herself in bed, two strange women, and one strange man, and an all-too-familiar bell-boy in the room, she did not say, "Where am I? What happened?" Instead she told herself that the amazingly and unbelievably handsome young man bending over her with a stethoscope was a doctor; that the plump, bleached blonde in the white shirtwaist was the hotel housekeeper; that the lank ditto was a waitress; and that the expression on the face of each was that of apprehension, tinged with a pleasurable excitement. So she sat up, dislodging the stethoscope, and ignoring the purpose of the thermometer which had reposed under her tongue.

"Look here!" she said, addressing the doctor in a high, queer voice. "I can't be sick, young man. Haven't time. Not just now. Put it off until August and I'll be as sick as you like. Why, man, this is the middle of June, and I'm due in Minneapolis now."

"Lie down, please," said the handsome young doctor, "and don't dare remove this thermometer again until I tell you to. This can't be put off until August. You're sick right now."

Mrs. McChesney shut her lips over the little glass tube, and watched the young doctor's impassive face (it takes them no time to learn that trick) and, womanwise, jumped to her own conclusion.

"How sick?" she demanded, the thermometer read.

"Oh, it won't be so bad," said the very young doctor, with a professionally cheerful smile.

Emma McChesney sat up in bed with a jerk. "You mean—sick! Not ill, or grippy, or run down, but sick? Trained-nurse sick! Hospital sick! Doctor-twice-a-day sick! Table-by-the-bedside-with-bottles-on-it sick!"

"Well—a—" hesitated the doctor and then took shelter behind a bristling hedge of Latin phrases. Emma McChesney hurdled it at a leap.

"Never mind," she said. "I know." She looked at the faces of those four strangers. Sympathy—real, human sympathy—was uppermost in each. She smiled a faint and friendly little smile at the group. And at that the housekeeper began tucking in the covers at the foot of the bed, and the lank waitress walked to the window and pulled down the shade, and the bell-boy muttered something about ice water. The doctor patted her wrist lightly and reassuringly.

"You're all awfully good," said Emma McChesney, her eyes glowing with something other than fever. "I've something to say. It's just this. If I'm going to be sick I'd prefer to be sick right here, unless it's something catching. No hospital. Don't ask me why. I don't know. We people on the road are all alike. Wire T. A. Buck, Jr., of the Featherloom Petticoat company, New York. You'll find plenty of clean nightgowns in the left-hand tray of my trunk, covered with white tissue paper. Get a nurse that doesn't sniffle, or talk about the palace she nursed in last, where they treated her like a queen and waited on her hand and foot. For goodness' sake, put my switch where nothing will happen to it, and if I die and they run my picture in the Dry Goods Review under the caption, 'Veteran Traveling Saleswoman Succumbs at Glen Rock,' I'll haunt the editor." She paused a moment.

"Everything will be all right," said the housekeeper, soothingly. "You'll think you're right at home, it'll be so comfortable. Was there anything else, now?"

"Yes," said Emma McChesney. "The most important of all. My son, Jock McChesney, is fishing up in the Canadian woods. A telegram may not reach him for three weeks. They're shifting about from camp to camp. Try to get him, but don't scare him too much. You'll find the address under J. in my address book in my handbag. Poor kid. Perhaps it's just as well he doesn't know."

Perhaps it was. At any rate it was true that had the tribe of McChesney been as the leaves of the trees, and had it held a family reunion in Emma McChesney's little hotel bedroom, it would have mattered not at all to her. For she was sick—doctor-three-times-a-day-trained-nurse - bottles-by-the-bedside sick, her head, with its bright hair rumpled and dry with the fever, tossing from side to side on the lumpy hotel pillow, or lying terribly silent and inert against the gray-white of the bed linen. She never quite knew how narrowly she escaped that picture in the Dry Goods Review.

Then one day the fever began to recede, slowly, whence fevers come, and the indefinable air of suspense and repression that lingers about a sickroom at such a crisis began to lift imperceptibly. There came a time when Emma McChesney asked in a weak but sane voice:

"Did Jock come? Did they cut off my hair?"

"Not yet, dear," the nurse had answered to the first, "but we'll hear in a day or so, I'm sure." And, "Your lovely hair! Well, not if I know it!" to the second.

The spirit of small-town kindliness took Emma McChesney in its arms. The dingy little hotel room glowed with flowers. The story of the sick woman fighting there alone in the terrors of delirium had gone up and down about the town. Housewives with a fine contempt for hotel soup sent broths of chicken and beef. The local members of the U. C. T. sent roses enough to tax every vase and wash-pitcher that the hotel could muster, and asked their wives to call at the hotel and see what they could do. The wives came, obediently, but with suspicion and distrust in their eyes, and remained to pat Emma McChesney's arm, ask to read aloud to her, and to induge generally in that process known as "cheering her up." Every traveling man who stopped at the little hotel on his way to Minneapolis added to the heaped-up offerings at Emma McChesney's shrine. Books and magazines assumed the proportions of a library. One could see the hand of T. A. Buck, Jr., in the cases of mineral water, quarts of wine, cunning cordials and tiny bottles of liqueur that stood in convivial rows on the closet shelf and floor. There came letters, too, and telegrams with such phrases as "let nothing be left undone" and "spare no expense" under T. A. Buck, Jr's., signature.

So Emma McChesney climbed the long, weary hill of illness and pain, reached the top, panting and almost spent, rested there, and began the easy descent on the other side that led to recovery and strength. But something was lacking. That sunny optimism that had been Emma McChesney's most valuable asset was absent. The blue eyes had lost their brave laughter. A despondent droop lingered on the corners of the mouth that had been such a rare mixture of firmness and tenderness. Even the advent of Fat Ed Meyers, her keenest competitor, and representative of the Strauss Sanssilk company, failed to awaken in her the proper spirit of antagonism. Fat Ed Meyers sent a bunch of violets that devastated the violet beds at the local greenhouse. Emma McChesney regarded them listlessly when the nurse lifted them out of their tissue wrappings. But the name on the card brough a tiny smile to her lips.

"He says he'd like to see you, if you feel able," said Miss Haney, the nurse, when she came up from dinner.

Emma McChesney thought a minute. "Better tell him it's catching," she said.

"He knows it isn't," returned Miss Haney. "But if you don't want him, why—"

"Tell him to come up," interrupted Emma McChesney, suddenly.

A faint gleam of the old humor lighted up her face when Fat Ed Meyers painfully tip-toed in, brown derby in hand, his red face properly doleful, brown shoes squeaking. His figure loomed mountainous in a light-brown summer suit.

"Ain't you ashamed of yourself?" he began, heavily humorous. "Couldn't you find anything better to do in the middle of the season? Say, on the square, girlie, I'm dead sorry. Hard luck, by gosh! Young T. A. himself went out with a line in your territory, didn't he? I didn't think that guy had it in him, darned if I did."

"It was sweet of you to send all those violets, Mr. Meyers. I hope you're not disappointed that they couldn't have been worked in the form of a pillow, with 'At Rest' done in white curlycues."

"Mrs. McChesney!" Ed Meyers' round face expressed righteous grief, pain, and surprise. "You and I may have had a word, now and then, and I will say that you dealt me a couple of low-down tricks on the road, but that's all in the game. I never held it up against you. Say, nobody ever admired you or appreciated you more that I did—"

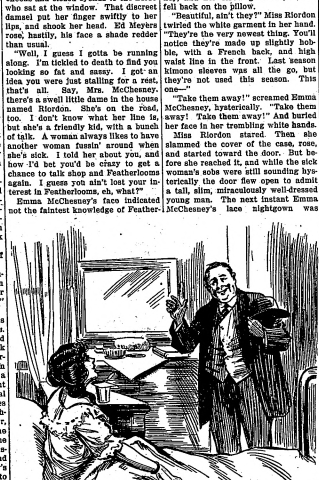
"Look out!" said Emma McChesney. "You're speaking in the past tense. Please don't. It makes me nervous."

Ed Meyers laughed uncomfortably, and glanced yearningly toward the door. He seemed at a loss to account for something he failed to find in the manner and conversation of Mrs. McChesney.

"Son here with you, I suppose," he asked, cheerily, sure that he was on safe ground at last.

Emma McChesney closed her eyes. The little room became very still. In a panic Ed Meyers looked helplessly from the white face, with its hollow cheeks and closed eyelids to the nurse who sat at the window. That discreet damsel put her finger swiftly to her lips, and shook her head. Ed Meyers rose, hastily, his face a shade redder than usual.

"Well, I guess I gotta be running along. I'm tickled to death to find you looking so fat and sassy. I got an idea you were just stalling for a rest, that's all. Say, Mrs. McChesney. there's a swell little dame in the house named Riordon. She's on the road, too. I don't know what her line is, but she's a friendly kid, with a bunch of talk. A woman always likes to have another woman fussin' around when she's sick. I told her about you, and how I'd bet you'd be crazy to get a chance to talk shop and Featherlooms again. I guess you ain't lost your interest in Featherlooms, eh, what?"



"Ain't You Ashamed of Yourself?" He Began, Heavily Humorous.

Emma McChesney's face indicated not the faintest knowledge of Featherloom petticoats. Ed Meyers stared, aghast. And as he stared there came a little knock at the door—a series of staccato raps, with feminine knuckles back of them. The nurse went to the door, disapproval on her face. At the turning of the knob there bounced into the room a vision in an Alice-blue suit, plumes to match, pearl earrings, elaborate coiffure of reddish-gold and a complexion that showed an unbelievable trust in the credulity of mankind.

"How-do, dearie!" exclaimed the vision. "You poor kid, you! I heard you was sick, and I says, 'I'm going up to cheer her up if I have to miss my train out to do it.' Say, I was laid up two years ago in Idaho Falls, Idaho, and believe me, I'll never forget it. I don't know how sick I was, but I don't even want to remember how lonesome I was. I just clung to the chambermaid like she was my own sister. If your nurse wants to go out for an airing I'll sit with you. Glad to."

"That's a grand little idea," agreed Ed Meyers. "I told 'em you'd brighten things up. Well, I'll be going. You'll be as good as new in a week, Mrs. McChesney, don't you worry. So long." And he closed the door after himself with apparent relief.

Miss Haney, the nurse, was already preparing to go out. It was her regular hour for exercise. Mrs. McChesney watched her go with a sinking heart.

"Now!" said Miss Riordan, comfortably, "we girls can have a real, old-fashioned talk. A nurse isn't human. The one I had in Idaho Falls was strictly prophylactic, and antiseptic, and she certainly could give the swell alcohol rubs, but you can't get chummy with a human disinfectant. Your line's skirts, isn't it?"

"Yes."

"Land, I've heard an awful lot about you. The boys on the road certainly speak something grand of you. I'm really jealous. Say, I'd love to show you some of my samples for this season. They're just great. I'll just run down the hall to my room—"

She was gone. Emma McChesney shut her eyes, wearily. Her nerves were twitching. Her thoughts were far, far away from samples and sample cases. So he had turned out to be his worthless father's son after all! He must have got some news of her by now. And he ignored it. He was content to amuse himself up there in the Canadian woods, while his mother—

Miss Riordon, flushed, and panting a little, burst into the room again, sample case in hand.

"Lordy, that's heavy! It's a wonder I haven't killed myself before now, wrestling with those blamed things."

Mrs. McChesney sat up on one elbow as Miss Riordon tugged at the sample-case cover. Then she leaned forward, interested in spite of herself at sight of the pile of sheer, white, exquisitely embroidered and lacy garments that lay disclosed as the cover fell back.

"Oh, lingerie! That's an ideal line for a woman. Let's see the yoke in that first nightgown. It's a really wonderful design."

Miss Riordon laughed and shook out the folds of the topmost garment. "Nightgown!" she said, and laughed again. "Take another look."

"Why what—" began Emma McChesney.

"Shrouds!" announced Miss Riordon, complacently.

"Shrouds!" shrieked Mrs. McChesney, and her elbow gave way. She fell back on the pillow.

"Beautiful, ain't they?" Miss Riordon twirled the white garment in her hand. "They're the very newest thing. You'll notice they're made up slightly hobble, with a French back, and high waist line in the front. Last season kimono sleeves was all the go, but they're not used this season. This one—"

"Take them away!" screamed Emma McChesney, hysterically. "Take them away! Take them away!" And buried her face in her trembling white hands.

Miss Riordon stared. Then she slammed the cover of the case, rose, and started toward the door. But before she reached it, and while the sick woman's sobs were still sounding hysterically the door flew open to admit a tall, slim, miraculously well-dressed young man. The next instant Emma McChesney's lace nightgown was crushed against the top of a correctly high-cut vest, and her tears coursed, unmolested, down the folds of an exquisitely shaded lavender silk necktie.

"Jock!" cried Emma McChesney; and then, "Oh, my son, my son, my beautiful boy!" like a woman in a play.

Jock was holding her tight, and patting her shoulder, and pressing his healthy, glowing cheek close to hers that was so gaunt and pale.

"I got seven wires, all at the same time. They'd been chasing me for days, up there in the woods. I thought I'd never get here."

And at that a wonderful thing happened to Emma McChesney. She lifted her face, and showed dimples where lines had been, smiles where tears had coursed, a glow where there had been a grayish pallor. She leaned back a bit to survey this son of hers.

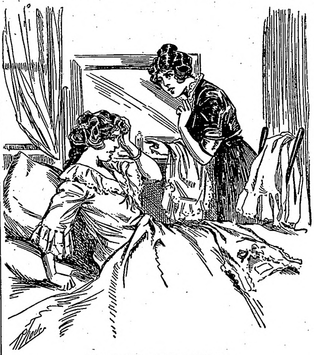
"Ugh! how black you are!" It was the old Emma McChesney that spoke. "You young devil, you're actually growing a mustache! There's something hard in your left-hand vest pocket. If it's your fountain pen you'd better rescue it, because I'm going to hug you again."

But Jock McChesney was not smiling. He glanced around the stuffy little hotel room. It looked stuffier and drearier than ever in contrast with his radiant youth, his glowing freshness, his outdoor tan, his immaculate attire. He looked at the astonished Miss Riordon. At his gaze that lady muttered something, and fled, sample-case banging at her knees. At the look in his eyes his mother hastened, womanwise, to reassure him.

"It wasn't so bad, Jock. Now that you're here, it's all right. Jock, I didn't realize just what you meant to me until you didn't come. I didn't realize—"

Jock sat down at the edge of the bed, and slid one arm under his mother's head. There was a grim line about his mouth.

"And I've been fishing," he said. "I've been sprawling under a tree in front of a darned fool stream and wondering whether to fry 'em for lunch now, or to put my hat over my eyes and fall asleep."



"Shrouds!" Shrieked Mrs. McChesney.

His mother reached up and patted his shoulder. But the line around Jock's jaw did not soften. He turned his head to gaze down at his mother.

"Two of those telegrams, and one letter, were from T. A. Buck, Jr.," he said. "He met me at Detroit. I never thought I'd stand from a total stranger what I stood from that man."

"Why, what do you mean?" Alarm, dismay, astonishment were in her eyes.

"He said things. And he meant 'em. He showed me, in a perfectly well-bred, cleancut, and most convincing way just what a miserable, selfish, low-down, worthless young hound I am."

"He—dared!—"

"You bet he dared. And then some. And I hadn't an argument to come back with. I don't know just where he got all his information from, but it was straight."

He got up, strode to the window, and came back to the bed. Both hands thrust deep in his pockets, he announced his life plans, thus:

"I'm eighteen years old. And I look twenty-three, and act twenty-five—when I'm with twenty-five-year-olds. I've been as much help and comfort to you as a pet alligator. You've always said that I was to go to college, and I've sort of trained myself to believe I was. Well, I'm not. I want to get into business, with a capital B. And I want to jump in now. This minute. I've started out to be a first-class slob, with you keeping me in pocket money, and clothes, and the Lord knows what all. Why, I—"

"Jock McChesney," said that young man's bewildered mother, "just what did T. A. Buck, Jr., say to you, anyway?"

"Plenty. Enough to make me see things. I used to think that I wanted to get into one of the professions. Professions! You talk about the romance of a civil engineer's life! Why, to be a successful business man these days you've got to be a buccaneer, and a diplomat, and a detective, and a clairvoyant, and an expert mathematician, and a wizard. Business—just plain, everyday business—is the gamiest, chanciest, most thrilling line there is today, and I'm for it. Let the other guy hang out his shingle and wait for 'em. I'm going out and get mine."

"Any particular line, or just planning to corner the business market generally?" came a cool, not too amused voice from the bed.

"Advertising," replied Jock, crisply. "Magazine advertising, to start with. I met a fellow up in the woods—named O'Rourke. He was a star football man at Yale. He's bucking the advertising line now for the Mastodon magazine. He's crazy about it, and says it's the greatest game ever. I want to get into it now—not four years from now."

He stopped abruptly. Emma McChesney regarded him, eyes glowing. Then she gave a happy little laugh, reached for her kimono at the foot of the bed, and prepared to kick off the bedclothes.

"Just run into the hall a second, son," she announced. "I'm going to get up."

"Up! No, you're not!" shouted Jock, making a rush at her. Then, in the exuberance of his splendid young strength, he picked her up, swathed snugly in a roll of sheeting and light blanket, carried her to the big chair by the window, and seated himself, with his surprised and laughing mother in his arms.

But Mrs. McChesney was serious again in a moment. She lay with her head against her boy's breast for a while. Then she spoke what was in her sane, far-seeing mind.

"Jock, if I've ever wished you were a girl, I take it all back now. I'd rather have heard what you just said than any piece of unbelievable good fortune in the world. God bless you for it, dear. But, Jock, you're going to college. No—wait a minute. You'll have a chance to prove the things you just said by getting through in three years instead of the usual four. If you're in earnest you can do it. I want my boy to start into this business war equipped with every means of defense. You called it a game. It's more than that —it's a battle. Compared to the successful business man of today the Revolutionary minutemen were as keen and alert as the Seven Sleepers. I know that there are more noncollege men driving street cars than there are college men. But that doesn't influence me. You could get a job now. Not much of a position, perhaps, but something self-respecting and fairly well-paying. It would teach you many things. You might get a knowledge of human nature that no college could give you. But there's something—poise — self-confidence — assurance — that nothing but college can give you. You will find yourself in those three years. After you finish college you'll have difficulty in fitting into your proper niche, perhaps, and you'll want to curse the day on which you heeded my advice. It'll look as though you had simply wasted those three precious years. But in five or six years after, when your character has jelled, and you've hit your pace, you'll bless me for it. As for a knowledge of humanity, and of business tricks—well, your mother is fairly familiar with the busy marts of trade. If you want to learn folks you can spend your summers selling Featherlooms for me."

"But, mother, you don't understand just why—"

"Yes, dear 'un, I do. After all, remember you're only eighteen. You'll probably spend part of your time rushing around at class proms with a red ribbon in your coat lapel to show you're on the floor committee. And you'll be girl-fussing, too. But you'd be attracted to girls, in or out of college, and I'd rather, just now, that it would be some pretty, nice-thinking college girl in a white sweater and a blue serge skirt, whose worst thought was wondering if you could be cajoled into taking her to the freshman-sophomore basketball game, than some red-lipped, black-jet-earringed siren gazing at you across the table in some basement cafe. And goodness knows, Jock, you wear your clothes so beautifully that even the haberdashers' salesmen eye you with respect. I've seen 'em. That's one course you needn't take at college."

Jock sat silent, has face grave with thought. "But when I'm earning money—real money—it's off the road for you," he said, at last. "I don't want this to sound like a scene from East Lynne, but, mother—"

"Um-m-m—ye-ee-es," assented Emma McChesney, with no alarming enthusiasm. "Jock, dear, carry me back to bed again, will you? And then open the closet door and pull out that big sample case to the side of my bed. The newest fall Featherlooms are in it, and somehow, I've just a whimsy notion that I'd like to look 'em over."

Too Much.

"Don't go into the courtroom now. The judge is charging the jury."

"Holy smoke! Is a man dragged away from his business to serve on the jury and then charged for it?"

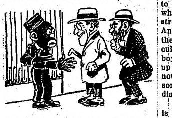
THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. XIV. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, DECEMBER 18, 1914. NO. 40.

TALES OF GOTHAM AND OTHER CITIES

Even the President Had to Be Announced There

NEW YORK.—President Wilson wound up a recent week-end in New York with a final Haroun-al-Raschid experience, over which he laughed heartily. En route to the station the president decided to pay a brief visit to Mrs. Anna Wilson Howe, his sister, who has apartments at Eightieth street and Columbus avenue. Miss Anderson, one of the proprietors of the apartment house, has had difficulty in impressing upon the elevator boys that no callers shall be taken up until they have first been announced to the guests. Miss Anderson reproved W. Higgins, a West India boy, saying:



"Understand now, Higgins, no one is to be taken up until they have been announced first—no one, understand, not even the president of the United States."

When two distinguished-looking gentlemen, followed by several alert young men, entered and walked directly to the elevator, Higgins promptly intercepted them.

"De rule is for to announce all gemmen fust," he said.

"Very well," replied the taller of the two men. "Just say to Mrs. Howe that Mr. Wilson is calling."

Higgins turned toward the telephone when one of the young men halted him.

"It's all right, boy," he said, "this is the president of the United States."

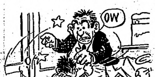
"Don't make up diffrunce, boss," he said. "Miss Anderson say even the president of the United States got to be announced fust."

The president burst into a hearty laugh, in which he was joined by Colonel House, his companion.

"That is perfectly right, my boy," he said.

Chicago Midget Is a Bit Rough When Drinking

CHICAGO.—Paul Paulus is little—but, as the saying is, Oh, my! When Paul was arraigned before (or more properly beneath) Judge Torrison he was completely concealed from the judge's eye by the left leg of a fat bailiff.



"Paul Paulus!" called the court, impatient. "Paul Paulus! Where is the defendant?"

"Here, sir," said Paul.

The fat bailiff chose that moment to shift his position and Paul, drawn down to his full height of two feet eleven, stood revealed. Judge Torrison blinked. At his side towered Charles H. Merzer, a 210 pounder, who used to be sheriff in Salt Lake City. Merzer now has a restaurant at 2150 North Clark street.

"This man, your honor," said Merzer, "came into my restaurant last night and started a disturbance. He smashed my watch, scared my customers, and threatened to clean out the place."

"Why didn't you pick him up and set him outside?" asked the court.

"I did that," answered the restaurant man. "I was trying it when he broke my watch. It took me nearly two hours to do it. He's strong and as tough a customer as I ever met."

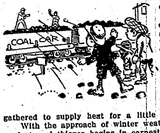
Judge Torrison called on the defendant.

"I guess it's just about the way this man says," said Paul sheepishly. "When I'm not drinking I'm as peaceful as anybody else, but I guess I get a little rough when I have a few."

Paul, after paying a one-dollar fine and promising to have Merzer's watch repaired reached up and grasped the hand of his late adversary.

Residents of Detroit Lay in Their Winter Fuel

DETROIT.—Al Jennings, the James brothers, the Daltons and other train robbers, whose deeds made them the heroes of many hair raising stories, have imitators among boys in the western part of the city who for effective measures cannot be outclassed.



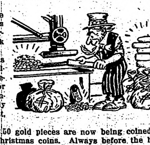
Stones are their weapons. Later on snowballs will be used. Selecting a careful place of ambush, the boys wait for a freight train to come by. The crew is treated to a shower of missiles. Back comes a fusillade of coal, heaved by engineer, fireman and brakeman.

"Hurrah!" shouted the boys—and begin to gather in the coal. After several repetitions enough coal has been gathered to supply heat for a little home which would otherwise be cold.

With the approach of winter weather the annual fight of the railroads against coal thieves begins in earnest. Each year the railroads in Detroit lose thousands of dollars in stolen coal. Women and children are the principal offenders. Nearly every morning now there are women brought into court, caught taking coal from railroad cars.

Christmas Present Factory in Denver Is Busy

DENVER.—Uncle Sam is busy in Denver turning out the largest order of Christmas presents manufactured in the nation. No factory in the United States will manufacture Christmas produce of greater value than will the government in Denver this fall.



So great is the rush for Uncle Sam's Christmas gifts that he has been at work for some time preparing them and will continue to work until the holidays.

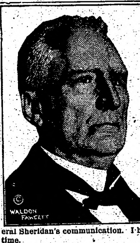
The particular gift to which he is turning his energies is money. Always before Christmas there is a demand from all parts of the nation for gold coins for presents, and the Denver mint has been selected to supply the entire output for the middle West, East and South.

One million dollars' worth of $2.50 gold pieces are now being coined at the mint. These are distinctively Christmas coins. Always before the holidays there is a heavy demand for them. And after Christmas they drift back to the banks and subtreasuries and only a few remain in circulation.

The order is the second in that denomination which the Denver mint has filled and the local mint will be the only one this year to coin gold in this denomination. The coins are the most difficult to handle of all those turned out by the government. They are smaller than pennies, yet their value is so high that great pains must be taken with them.

The mint will also coin $5, $10 and $20 gold pieces before the holidays

MOSBY ON THE WAR



© WALDON FAWCETT

"If I was there with 10,000 Cossacks and some of my old officers who served under me in our war, I'd break up all communication between the German army and Berlin, and I would run William back to his capital in a hurry."

This was the statement made by Col. John S. Mosby, late of the Confederate army and leader of Mosby's men, who caused so much trouble for the Union army during the Civil war. The venerable warrior lives in Washington, and is eighty-one years of age. Although his hair is white as snow and he is a little deaf, he is by no means feeble. He is now engaged in writing his memoirs and hopes to complete the volume in about six months.

"The communication of an army is its vulnerable point," he continued. "If I was over there in Europe I would do on a large scale what I accomplished on a smaller scale in the Shenandoah valley, when I cut off General Sheridan's communication. I had only three hundred men with me at that time.

"I don't look to see the war last more than six months. It is such a tremendous affair that it will break down of its own weight."

"What do you think of the war as compared with our Civil war?" Colonel Mosby was asked.

"They are making no progress in Europe. We made progress every day on one side or the other. As near as I can determine they are simply killing. The tide does not ebb and flow a single bit. We advanced or retreated and were not in the struggle simply to kill. And with how much humanity on both sides our war was conducted! It presents the greatest contrast."

LUCKY MR. WADSWORTH

© HARRIS & EWING

The first week in November showered honors on James Wolcott Wadsworth, Jr., with profligate hand. On Tuesday the electors of New York state, by a plurality of 47,000, made him a senator of the United States. On Thursday Father Stork brought him a bouncing boy. He was "raised" to be a senator. Not a single educational detail was overlooked. Senator "Jimmy's" grandfather followed states-manning until a Confederate shell ended his glorious career at Chancellorsville. So did his grandfather's son, who now wears the laurels as Senator "Jimmy's" father.

Thirty-seven years ago Jimmy was ushered, an innocent and lusty infant, into the ancient homestead in the Genesee Valley. When "Young Jimmy" went away to Yale college after finishing off at "the little red schoolhouse on the hill," he had the fundamentals. Then the future senator was sent a soldiering to Puerto Rico during the Spanish-American war in 1898, and later was given six months' exercise against the kris artists in the Philippines.

While studying national politics at Washington he married the daughter of the late John Hay, and thereby became the brother-in-law of Payne Whitney and a nephew-in-law of Oliver Payne, the Ohio oil magnate. In 1904 he was elected to the New York assembly.

MASTER OF SALONS IN TRENCHES

Paul Poiret, the master of salons, as he is distinguished in his beloved Paris, and commander in chief of fashion, as he is known to the world at large, has thrown aside the silken subtleties of smart mode creation and taken up the rifle and the pick in the defense of his country. He is no soldier by mere courtesy—holding a clerical job, for instance, at the safe distance of official headquartrs—but a grimy infantryman, whose hands, shaped to the deft designing of things of beauty to drape the form of woman, are now devoted to digging trenches, throwing up fortifications, when they are not pulling a trigger on the firing line. In the meanwhile his costly establishment, the paradise of fashion for millionaire maid and matron, is given over to the making of military wear. The entire celebrated Martine Salon is possessed by the grim spirit of war.

"The great establishment of Poiret," writes a recent visitor, "except for the gallant work it is doing for the soldiers, might as well be closed. The purple and pink stripes, the flaunting Bakst motifs, the rose-hued carpets, the green walls, the mural decorations of riotous colors and forms, the dull folds of curtains, which cut off fitting spaces, are not obscured from your leisurely study by the intrusion of any other visitor."

TUMULTY IS NEUTRAL

© HARRIS & EWING

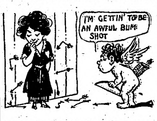
Serious international difficulties were barely avoided at the White House the other day. Gus Karger, Oswald Schuette and Louis Garthe, representing the right wing of the German forces in Washington, bore down on the executive offices, and, with glaring countenances, shoved at Secretary Tumulty a story, reprinted in various newspapers, that he has been singing "It's a Long Way to Tipperary," the popular song the English soldiers are singing in the trenches confronting the Germans in France.

Hastily reading the article, Mr. Tumulty's real Irish went high in the air for a few minutes. The outcome of it was that he had never even heard the "Tipperary" song; that he wouldn't have sung it if he had, because he has tried hard to promote President Wilson's request that every American take a neutral stand in the present war. He admitted that he did know "Has Anybody Here Seen Kelly?" and at rare intervals hummed it, but his favorite song is "We Take Our Hats Off to You, Mr. Wilson."

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

Cupid Is Making Very Poor Shots in Washington

WASHINGTON.—Cupid has neglected Washington. Either his accuracy with bow and arrow is deteriorating or he has passed over the capital of the United States to instill the germs of love in the hearts of old and young in other cities, leaving the boys and girls and the men and women to work out their own methods of heart attraction.



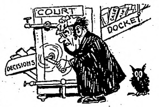
I'M GETTIN' TO BE AN AWFUL BUM SHOT

There is no doubt that Cupid has failed us, because the bureau of census has the figures to prove it, and figures don't lie, except at a tea dance. Although William Kroll, license clerk at the city hall, has been acquiring writer's cramp filling out blanks desired by heartsick swains which will allow them to get married and live in a cozy flat, the bureau of the census says more than one-third of the women fifteen years and over in Washington are single. Only three states lead in the number of unmarried women—Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Minnesota.

Unmarried men, young and old, have greater opportunity for finding a mate in Washington than in any other city. There are all kinds, all types, all ages. If a man likes brunettes, there are many. Blondes are in profusion. Mental qualifications range from the tea dance "chicken" with "nobody home" to the calm, studious, sedate female lawyer, doctor and scientist.

Hardest Working Federal Court in the Country

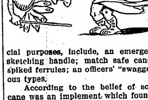
WASHINGTON has one judicial body which is said to be the hardest-worked federal court in the United States. It is the District of Columbia supreme court. In conversation with one of the justices the fact came out that a tabulation had been made of the docket and an assignment made of the work among the six justices, working up to the fullest possible capacity that could be required of a man, and it was found that it would be impossible to clear the docket in the next year. There is one vacancy on the bench, but an additional judge was taken into the calculation. This is the only federal court, department of justice officials say, which works continuously nine months of the year without interruption.



The reason for the overloaded docket of this tribunal is that so many actions are brought here at the seat of the national government, and every one is of transcendent importance, involving great issues. When an action is brought it is usually directed against the cabinet officer heading a department, and must be heard at the earliest possible moment. These cases take up days and weeks and sometimes months, thus deducting that much time from the regular program of the judge or judges hearing them, and the routine being thus interrupted, the court falls behind in its docket.

Canes of the World Shown in National Museum

AN UNUSUALLY fine collection of canes or walking sticks, representing some forty-five foreign countries and twenty-one states of this country, figures among the historical exhibits of the United States National Museum at Washington. The greater portion of this series comprises a collection of 152 pieces bequeathed to the United States by the late Homer N. Lockwood of Washington, traveler, geographer, engineer and statesman.



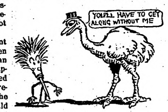
Forty different kinds of wooden canes are on exhibition, as well as canes made of ivory, bone, horn, skin, paper, tin, wire and other substances. Many of the specimens are very artistic, some are of curious shape and design, while others, designed for special purposes, include, an emergency cane, containing a whisky flask; a sketching handle; match safe canes; mountain climbing canes, with sharp spiked ferrules; an officers' "swagger stick," and sword and gun canes of various types.

According to the belief of some anthropologists and ethnologists, the cane was an implement which found its way into the families of nearly every race before history was recorded, as a defensive weapon, or as a staff or other useful instrument. In some countries it was used to represent a rod for punishment, and measuring.

One interesting theory is that the Roman cane derived its name from the fact that it was used to beat off the savage dogs of the street. There its general use was soon prohibited, however, since the populace came to use it in their personal quarrels, with disastrous results, and because too many dead dogs littered the streets. An imperial edict, issued to relieve this state of affairs, forbade all except those of patrician rank from carrying canes, thus making it a privilege. The ladies of this time carried them also; their richly and artistically decorated canes serving as a rod for the punishment of their slaves.

Ruling on the Rhea Hits the Feather Duster

THE United States government spent a long time trying to answer the question: "What is whisky?" It has been spending more time trying to answer the question: "What is an ostrich?" The question has been answered by a declaration that "the ostrich is not a rhea." Therefore hereafter the plumes of the rhea cannot be imported into the United States.



YOU'LL HAVE TO GET ALONG WITHOUT ME

The rhea, which is an inhabitant of the Southern continent, has been loosely called the South American ostrich, and as ostriches breed in captivity their plumes are not considered as the plumes of wild fowl, and therefore under the law which forbids the importation of the feathers of wild birds, the rhea plume, under plea that it was an ostrich plume, was held to be exempt and so was allowed to come in.

The rhea, however, it has finally been proved, is a wild bird, and as the demand for its plumes threatened its extinction, the bird protectors took hold of the matter and hereafter under a ruling just made by the treasury department no rhea plumes can be imported.

It is said that the decision will be felt heavily by the manufacturers of feather dusters, who are said to be dependent on these plumes for a supply of proper material for the goods which they make.

George K. Cherrie and Leo E. Miller, who went to South America with Colonel Roosevelt, visited a warehouse in Buenos Aires, where they found 60 tons of rhea feathers, all of which were taken from birds which had been killed.

MINNESOTA STATE FAIR DECLARED MOST SUCCESSFUL IN THE WORLD

Chicago.—The annual convention of the American Association of Fairs and Expositions, which has just adjourned at Chicago, resulted in giving international impetus to the policy inaugurated at the Minnesota state fair last fall and in the probable adoption of various plans and devices originated here, but applicable to all the fairs and expositions on the continent. This means that approximately 30,000,000 people will participate, during 1914, in carrying on campaigns which started in Minnesota.

This is forecasted by the fact that the association unanimously voted to publish immediately a pamphlet containing the annual address of J. C. Simpson, in which he outlined suggestions for an international publicity bureau, the Peace and Plenty movement and a new class of exhibits devoted to increasing economy and efficiency in all lines of business. The president's address is usually printed in the annual report months after the convention adjourns.

The association also manifested great interest in the registering devices worked out by the Minnesota state fair management, and used for the first time at the vehicle entrance last fall. This and the various features of the Minnesota state fair were shown in motion pictures at the Auditorium Thursday evening. Mr. Simpson explained the new system of rapid registering by which nearly 5,000 automobiles were able to enter the grounds in a single day without a moment's delay at the gate. Minnesota's films showing live stock were also warmly applauded, the representatives from all over the United States and Canada thus seeking what a leadership Minnesota takes not only in the success of its great fair, but in its live stock production.

Mr. Simpson was interrupted by question after question and applause greeted point after point in his motion picture lecture and his address. E. S. Warner of St. Paul also took a leading part in the discussions and E. J. Stillwell of Minneapolis was present every moment during the two day's session, together with Robert Crickmore of Owatonna, Thomas H. Canfield of Lake Park and George Achison of Mankato, working hard for results of perhaps world-wide importance, agricultural America being now the objective point of interest of all Europe.

Mr. Canfield's paper on "Live Stock Entries, Rules, etc." was one of the most notable of the session. Live stock being the largest factor in both prosperity in general and fairs in particular and the Minnesota state fair leading all the rest in the success of its live stock exhibit plan.

Mr. Crickmore was elected a member of the board of appeals, to which all matters relating to suspensions, expulsions, etc., are referred by the 52 fairs in the association.

The committees on publicity, peace and plenty, etc., will be announced later.

I. S. Mahan, secretary of the Oklahoma state fair, who was a visitor to the Minnesota state fair grounds very recently said:

"I am here to get ideas and inspiration. Your fair is the largest and most successful in the world. It leads even Iowa, where I came from originally and learned to think the Iowa state fair was the biggest thing ever. But Minnesota is ahead of them all and I tell you the livest bunch of competitors on earth are these state fairs.

"We keep up our publicity twelve months a year down in Oklahoma. Just as soon as I get back I shall go on a trip to confer with various county fairs and stir things up all over the state. A fair should be on the job just exactly 365 days per year, minus Sundays. And Sundays we ought to be out seeing what a wonderful state we are helping to make.

"Mr. Simpson touched on that in his address and he touched on the relationship between cities and fairs. Since our fair was built by Oklahoma City business men, who have put $350,000 into it in eight years and have earned and paid out nearly a quarter of a million dollars in premiums and expenses and have seen the annual expenses grow to $80,000 a year and the attendance to 125,000 in a state that was an Indian reservation not so many years ago, I can see how any state that doesn't have the closest cooperations between business men and the fair ought to get busy. The state fair boosts everything that boosts business. Just because it deals largely with live stock and farm products doesn't mean it isn't primarily on a business basis. Every business man who stops to think must realize that his prosperity depends on the farmer and the farmer must realize that his market, as well as about everything he uses in his work, is made in the city."

Mr. Simpson dealt with this question in his address as follows:

I think some fair managers labor under the delusion that a state fair is primarily a farmers' fair. This should not be, for no fair that is conducted exclusively for one class is entitled to support by taxation. To illustrate: I noticed an announcement in one of our papers of a "Lumber Exposition" that is to be held in Minneapolis next month. The purpose of the exposition is to exhibit all the various kinds of lumber, each in its different grades. Inspectors will be on hand to explain how lumber is graded, etc. The American lumber industry has long recognized a system of standard grades and lumber is marked up to this standard, but the idea of grades is but little known to the layman.

Why not this exposition? Is not practically everyone—merchants, bankers' lawyers, doctors, as well as farmers—interested in the purchase of lumber sometime or another? I submit to the necessity of this exposition, but believe more people would be reached if it were held as a feature exhibit at the state fair.

There are other commodities, such as office furniture and fixtures, food products, wearing apparel and what not that have never been a part of the exhibits at our state fairs.

Pure food shows are held annually in many of our cities. They are local in scope and do not reach much beyond the limits where the show is held. How much more useful, instructive and practical these shows would be if put on at our state fairs, which draw their attendance from every locality in the state?

Exhibits showing the equipment and arrangement in small stores, with a view to economy in conducting business by use of equipment and systems that will facilitate the carrying on of trade with less exertion, less expense and proper sanitation, should interest thousands of storekeepers as well as patrons.

A comprehensive electrical exhibit, electrical housekeeping utensils, gas fixtures, stoves, etc., is another line of exhibits that would get close to the city and village patrons of the state fair.

After dwelling on the failure of most fairs to awaken the proper amount of interest among city folks, except by entertainment, and, third, inability of a large number of fairs to accomplish their purpose without such support as is given colleges and other educational institutions, he said:

Our fourth conclusion speaks for itself.

The past season has been full of trials and tribulations for most fair managers. The unrestful feeling throughout the country the fore part of the season grew less noticeable as the season advanced with a bountiful harvest to be gathered; and then, when everybody began to take a more hopeful view of the future, the quarrel among the crowned heads of Europe broke out into the greatest war of all time.

At the beginning our busy and industrious American populace paid but little heed to the quarrels of our brothers across the water, especially throughout agricultural sections, but about the time the fair season opened—just at a time when the fairs needed the most publicity—fair managers were confronted with a publicity situation never before encountered; they found that the first page, second page, third page, sometimes the fourth page, and even the editorial page of the great metropolitan daily papers were filled with war news. I doubt if there has ever been a time in the history of the American fairs when it was as difficult to get news matter pertaining to a coming exposition as the past season.

We are not criticising the press for this situation, for they were giving their readers the news they wanted. This was true in our state, where the majority of the large dailies published in the Twin Cities and Duluth came forward and showed a generosity in opening their news columns to state fair publicity as of old. The country press gave the war small space and were even more generous in the space devoted to the state fair than ever before.

In order that the people's minds might not be entirely absorbed in reading daily reports from the seat of war our publicity department inaugurated a "peace and plenty" movement. We showed the farmer as the soldier of peace on our farmers' day. We showed his farm implements as machine guns of prosperity. On Minneapolis Day we showed the slogan: "Flour Barrels are Better Than Gun Barrels" in fireworks. So successful were we in our "peace and plenty" campaign of publicity that I took the liberty of wiring many of you to join us in our humble capacity as fair manager in a "peace and plenty" or "war on war" movement. Your responses showed that the American Association of Fairs and Expositions is a live body of "boosters."

Our peace, prosperity and plenty movement, or war on war movement, should be followed up by all of our fairs next year and each succeeding year until there shall be an unanimous and united sentiment of our people against war, with all its horrors, with all its suffering, and its every tendency to stagnation and ruin of prosperity.

Unanimous decision to publish this address at once for universal distribution in this country and Canada among all interested in state and county fairs and enthusiastic faith that united action is to follow in many matters of vital interest to the counry is voiced by those who attend the convention.

It is generally agreed the the American Association of Fairs is perhaps the one body that can unite all sections and all parties in a campaign for the public good of the entire country and that federal co-operation, probably in the shape of exhibits, is among the possibilities of the near future.

To Act as Selling Agents.

Duluth, Minn., Dec. 8.—M. A. Hanna & Co., of Cleveland, O., will act as selling agents for the Great Northern ore interests, beginning Jan. 1, at which time the agreement between the Great Northern company and the United States Steel corporation will end. The Great Northern company have estimated deposits of 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 tons. Earl Hunner, manager of the Great Northern ore properties said that arrangements with the Hanna company have been completed.

Canada Sets Day of Prayer.

Ottawa, Ont., Dec. 8.—The government has set aside Sunday, Jan. 3, as a day of special intercession and prayer on behalf of the British and allied cause in the war as a tribute to the memory of those who have fallen in battle. This Sunday will be observed in Great Britain in a similar manner.

Germans Sink British Submarine.

Valparaiso, Chile, Dec. 8.—The British steamer Charcas, from New York Oct. 1, has been sunk at sea off Port Corral, Chile, by the German transport Prinz Eitel Friedrich. The crew of the Charcas have been landed at Papudo, forty-five miles north of Valparaiso.

British Steamer Released.

San Diego, Cal., Dec. 8.—On telegraphic instructions received from Washington, Deputy Collector of Customs Clarence Sprigg announced that the British steamer Kingsway was released. Captain Tomkins of the Kingsway declared he would leave this port for Vancouver, but would file a protest with the British vice consul here. When the Kingsway entered port the American authorities held the ship, it being feared that the captain was furnishing coal to British warships.

CHECK GERMANS IN TWO VIOLENT ATTACKS IN WEST

FRENCH REPORT NOTABLE SUCCESS OVER KAISER'S FORCES IN EASTERN PART OF FRANCE.

BRITISH NEAR YPRES DRIVE BACK INVADERS

Teutons Make Three Desperate Infantry Assaults, Supported by Heavy Fire From Their Field Artillery, but Each Was Repulsed by Defenders.

Paris, Dec. 15.—The Germans have been checked in two violent attacks on the extreme ends of the battle front. Most pronounced was the onslaught against the British forces holding the line extending eastward from Ypres. The other was directed against the railway station of Aspach, west of Muelhausen, which the French captured on Friday.

The desperate efforts of the Germans to retake this advantageous position, like their attempt to break through the British lines in the north, resulted in failure, the allies maintaining themselves sturdily in their trenches while inflicting heavy losses upon the attacking forces.

French Are Successful.

Reports received from the front and made public in the official statements issued from the war office during the day told of a notable success of the French arms over the kaiser's forces in the forest of LaPetre. The battle has been raging in that section of eastern France for several days, with the French advancing steadily in spite of the determined resistance of the Germans.

The French threw the full force of their columns against the Germans, driving them to the north and compelling them to evacuate positions of great strategical values.

The aggressive campaign of the French on the forest of LaPretre forms a vital portion of the general plan of two closely related purposes—one the isolation of the German army corps at St. Mihiel and the other the gain of vantage points for the continuation of the march toward Metz.

Take Offensive in Alsace.

Supplementing the official statement is a report received in a dispatch from Geneva and published in Le Echo of Paris concerning the fighting in Alsace. The dispatch says:

"The French have taken the offensive in Alsace and are marching on Altkirch. They have seized the villages of Bisel, Largitzen, Hartsebec and Carspach, while near Pfeteenhaven they have captured a number of German trenches. In these operations the losses suffered by the French were only four killed and twelve wounded."

Intermittend cannonading was the only evidence of activity on the part of the Germans, with the exception of that division of their forces which is facing Ypres. Here three desperate infantry assaults were attempted, supported by a heavy fire from their field artillery, but each of them was met and repulsed by the British defenders. The losses sustained by the attacking force were considerable.

The Vosges region, particularly in the vicinity of Serones, where the French have established themselves in great force, was again the scene of attacks, first by one side, then the other. The sum of this fighting has been the retention by each of their respective fortified positions.

Germans Are Repulsed.

Several attacks have been directed by Germans against the post of La Mere Henri, northwest of Senones, which the kaiser's troops particularly covet because of its excellent command of the French supporting positions, but each time the venture has been made the Germans have been driven back. In the latest attacks it appeared that their energy had been greatly spent.

With the return to Paris of President Poincare and the greater number of the government officials, and with the revival of commerce, which is gaining momentum daily, the capital is rapidly resuming its normal aspect. Except for the arrival of wounded soldier from the fighting front and the aeroplane patrols in the skies above the city, there are no outward signs in Paris that the nation is engaged in a great struggle for its existence.

Forts Begin Firing.

Dover, Eng., Dec. 12.—The city of Dover was thrown into excitement by the announcement that the Germans in the early morning attempted a submarine attack upon the harbor works and the fleet at anchor in the harbor.

The forts were put on the alert early by the appearance at the harbor entrance of an unidentified steamer, believed to have been the tender of the submarines.

Half an hour later, it is said, a single submarine was sighted and one of the heavy guns in the harbor fired at her. The observers later sighted what they believed to be a fleet of six submarines several miles out in the channel. The fort began firing at the supposed submarines and kept it up for half an hour. At the same time the torpedo boat destroyer put to sea.

London, Dec. 12.—Half a dozen German submarines made an attempt to enter the admiralty harbor, according to a Dover dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company, and for half an hour the batteries kept up a furious fusillade, firing at least 200 shots. It is reported that two or three of the submarines were sunk, but no confirmation of this could be obtained.

Alarm Is Given.

The attempt was made under cover of early morning darkness and during a heavy rainstorm. The first alarm, says the dispatch, was given by the firing of a naval gun, and soon all the batteries were in action.

The admiralty, to whom this dispatch was submitted, said it had not received confirmation of the reported attack.

British Sink Cruiser Nurnberg.

London, Dec. 12.—The German cruiser Nurnberg, which withdrew from the battle off the Falkland islands last Tuesday and attempted to make her escape in company with the cruiser Dresden while the British warships under Vice Admiral Sir Frederick Doveton Sturdee were sinking the cruisers Sharnhorst, Gneisenau and Leipzig, was hunted across the water by units of the British fleet and sunk the same day.

This information was contained in a statement of the British official press bureau just made public. The statement added that search for the Dresden was proceeding.

French Cabinet Meets in Paris.

Paris, Dec. 14.—A cabinet council was held at the Palace of Elyssee, the first to meet here since Sept. 3, on which date the government left for Bordeaux when the invaders were within twenty miles of the capital. There was the utmost cheerfulness at the session, a singular contrast to the intense anxiety shown at the previous meeting in Paris. The war department alone remains at Bordeaux and there is no intention at present to move it back to Paris.

VICE ADMIRAL STURDEE

Vice Admiral Sir F. C. D. Sturdee, commander of the cruiser squadron of the British navy which destroyed the German cruisers Scharnhorst, Gneisenau and Leipzig off the Falkland islands.

KAISER MAY GO UNDER KNIFE

German Emperor to Undergo Operation of the Throat, Says Berlin Dispatch.

Amsterdam, via London, Dec. 14.—Emperor William has made so much progress toward recovering his health, telegrams received here from Berlin state, that he will be able to leave the capital this week for the battle front.

Geneva, Switzerland, Dec. 14.—A report reached Basel from Berlin that Emperor William will be obliged to undergo an operation of the throat when he has sufficiently recovered from his present illness, which is not considered serious.

The doctors, however, consider it inadvisable for him to return to the front for several weeks and he probably will spend Christmas at home.

Crown Prince Frederick William, the report from the capital says, has arrived in Berlin.

Russians Fight With Servians.

Amsterdam, via London, Dec. 14.—The Frankfurter Zeitung says the Servians have been reinforced by five Russian regiments which left Arch[illegible] Oct. 27 and arrived at Antivari Nov. 29.

French Court Sentences German.

Paris, Dec. 14.—The permanent court-martial sentenced Louise Zach, a German woman, to serve six months in prison and to pay a fine of 700 francs ($140), on the charge of using an American passport which was obtained by a fraudulent declaration. The woman was a governess in the employ of an American family. She got a passport at Geneva by representing herself as the wife of an American named Appel and on the strength of this came to Paris.

WOULD DEVELOP TIMBER SECTIONS TO YIELD RETURNS

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE RECOMMENDS CHANGE IN METHODS OF ADMINISTERING FORESTS.

DAIRYING HAS BECOME AN IMPORTANT BRANCH

Progress of Agriculture Reveals Itself More Particularly in Diversification, in the Rise of Minor Crops, Than in Increased Production of Staples.

Washington, Dec. 11. — David F. Houston, secretary of agriculture, in his report for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1914, recommends a change in the methods of administering the national forests in undeveloped sections, so that they will yield at once revenue that can be applied to local development which will further assist communities and aid in the settlement of the territory. Under this plan the department instead of waiting until timber is actually sold before the unsettled counties gain any revenue from this form of public domain, will, if congress grants the necessary authority, underwrite its proportion of expenditure for local improvement, especially for road construction, and charge this against the counties' shares of timber sales when the timber is opened for commercial cutting. The theory underlying the department's proposal in this matter is that the forests in these sections constitute a large part of the lands and prospective public income of the territory, and that the forests, therefore, should bear their share of the pioneering expense.

In the present report the secretary of agriculture has confined his discussion almost exclusively to the pressing problems of increasing the food supply of the nation and of bettering rural life.

Crop Production.

Dealing with the general crop production of the country, the report finds:

"The progress of agriculture reveals itself more particularly in its diversification, in the rise of minor crops to large proportions, than in the increased production of stable products. For example, dairying in the last generation has become an exceptionally important branch of the agricultural economy, the annual production including more than one and a half billion pounds of butter, a half billion pounds of condensed milk, and a billion pounds of cheese, having a value of approximately $600,000,000. The production of orchard fruits exceeds 216,000,000 bushels a year, with a value of more than $140,000,000. The value of the annual production of vegetables is in excess of $400,000,000. The production of hay and forage approximates 100,000,000 tons, with a value in excess of $800,000,000; the poultry products of the nation have reached a point where their annual value is about one-half that of the cotton crop at normal valuations, and marked increases are noted in the quantity and value of the cereals."

Products Show Marked Increase.

The secretary's report includes a table giving the census figures for 1899 and 1909, showing that in all products except corn and meat animals there has been a marked increase in production during the ten-year period. Continuing, the report says:

"We know that the wheat crop of 1914 of approximately 892,000,000 bushels is the greatest ever produced in our history, and that the crops of oats, barley, rye, potatoes, tobacco, and hay are unusually large. The cotton crop, forecast in October at 15,340,000 bales, is the second largest. The apple crop, estimated at 259,000,000 bushels, is the greatest ever harvested. The total production of six leading cereals is estimated to have been nearly 5,000,000 bushels, or about 428,000,000 bushels in excess of the crop of 1913. For the country as a whole the crop yield per acre was 2.3 per cent better than the average for the last ten years. The average yield per acre of all staple crops was 9.4 per cent greater than 1913, and except for corn, oats, and flaxseed, greater than the ten-year average."

British Advance in France.

London, Dec. 12.—Reuter's Boulogne correspondent, who has just returned to Boulogne from Armentieres, says that Tuesday the Germans were driven out of Armentieres by the British and hurled back beyond artillery range.

Asks British Consul's Release.

Rome, Dec. 14.—Baron Sonnino, the Italian minister of foreign affairs, has asked the Turkish government to liberate G. A. Richardson, the British consul at Hodeida, Arabia, who, it is alleged, recently was forcibly removed by the Turks from the Italian consulate, where he had taken refuge, and was placed on board a boat bound for an unknown destination. The foreign minister also has asked the Ottoman government to give public satisfaction to Italy for the violation of the consulate.

SWORD WIDOW IS SENTENCED

TO BE CONFINED AT HARD LABOR FOR REST OF LIFE.

Composure Is Unshaken as She Asserts She Is Innocent of Husband's Murder.

Minneapolis, Dec. 14.—Mrs. Sharpless was called to face Court—probably for the last time. And in no particular did the woman's demeanor differ from that which has marked her trial and her reception of the jury's verdict that she was guilty of murder in the first degree in having killed her husband, Leaming Sharpless, the night of Nov. 14.

Only the wife of a deputy sheriff preparing to take her to Stillwater and Mrs. Nels Clausen, County Jail Matron, sat beside Mrs. Sharpless when Judge Leary pronounced sentence, that condemned the woman to spend the rest of her life in the penitentiary.

With composure still unshaken, Mrs. Sharpless was called to the bar and answered the questions that the law provides the Court must ask before passing sentence. If the 200 men and women who had gathered expected Mrs. Sharpless to falter during this last ordeal they were disappointed.

"My name is Charlotte Sharpless," she said answering Judge Leary's questions. "For the last four years I have lived at 1329 Yale Place. I was born in Minneapolis Jan. 26, 1880. My parents died when I was very young. I have no relatives living. The only friends, whose names I care to give to the Court are Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Hicock, Mankato, and Mrs. Bertha Luhman, Farmington, Minn. I belong to no society or social organization.

"Have you anything to say, Mrs. Sharpless, why sentence should not be passed upon you?" asked Judge Leary.

"Nothing except that I am innocent."

"Well, the court has no option in this matter," said the Judge, and he sentenced the woman to be confined at hard labor in the State Penitentiary at Stillwater for the remainder of her natural life.

Mrs. Sharpless did not even bow her head. She turned slowly, stepped down from the stand and resumed her place beside Mrs. Clausen. A long-drawn sigh swept through the courtroom.

WANTS MORE SHIPS FOR DEFENSE OF THE COAST

Washington, Dec. 10.—For the first time in many years, the house naval committee conducted in public its hearings on the naval bill, which already has assumed the nature of a general inquiry into efficiency and general conditions of the fleet.

Rear Admiral Fletcher, commander of the Atlantic fleet, in a general statement at the outset, defended the dreadnaught as the greatest weapon of naval warfare.

"The European war has not demonstrated," said Admiral Fletcher, "that the battleship is any less valuable in naval warfare than heretofore or that it is not still the main factor in finally determining a conflict.

Defense Against Submarines.

"The submarine undoubtedly is a valuable adjunct to a navy. The defense against the submarine has not yet been fully developed. Eventually a defense against the submarine will be found, just as a defense was found against the old-style spar torpedo and the automobile torpedo. One defense against the submarine already developing is the airship."

The admiral gave it as his opinion that great naval battles would continue to be decided in the main by battleships.

Could Assail American Fleet.

Edmiral Fletcher told the committee a European nation could send submarines across the ocean to dart into an American harbor and assail the American fleet. It was, of course, he said, a suppositious case, as to the practicability of such a move. For instance, he said, England had a "nice little supply station" 700 miles away from New York harbor at Bermuda.

The admiral said he would recommend, as good policy, eight or ten more submarines for coast and harbor defense. He emphatically reasserted that the real success of the navy must ultimately rest with the dreadnaughts and battleship fleets generally.

Car Holds $1,000,000 in Gold.

Denver, Col., Dec. 14.—One carload of gold ore, 30,000 pounds, on which the assay would place a value of approximately $1,000,000, is being loaded at Cripple Creek for shipment to Denver, according to information received here. This is believed to be the most valuable car of ore ever transported in the country.

Rear Admiral Watson Passes.

Washington, Dec. 14.—Rear Admiral Eugene W. Watson, U. S. N., retired, died at his home here, aged 71 years. He was retired Nov. 22, 1889, after 40 years of service. Rear Admiral Watson was born at Northampton, Mass.

Encourage "Dixie Highway."

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 14.—Governor Samuel M. Ralston has issued an official call to the Governors of Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee, Georgia and Florida to meet in Chattanooga, Tenn., Monday, Jan. 15, 1915, to consider the forming of a North and South Highway Association. The purpose of the ordganization will be to encourage "The Dixie Highway," proposed to lead from Chicago through Indianapolis, Louisville, Nashville, Chattanooga, Atlanta, Macon, Ga., to Jacksonville, Fla.

The Ambition of Mark Truitt

By
HENRY RUSSELL MILLER

Author of
"THE MAN HIGHER UP," "HIS RISE TO POWER," Etc.

(Copyright, 1913, by The Bobbs-Merrill Company)

11

CHAPTER XXII—Continued.

"You see," he concluded, "it is critical. I can not understand," he exclaimed strongly, "the present attitude of labor. It is utterly lacking in sense of gratitude, of loyalty. I like to think of the mills as the means to life for thousands of men. And it pains me to see them become hostile and grasping. What have they to complain of?"

"Probably they feel entitled to a little more than a bare existence."

"Didn't we grant the sliding scale three years ago?"

"Perhaps," Mark returned dryly, "they guess from the number of temples to paleontology in prospect that the scale could fairly be raised. It could."

"I don't hold with you."

"What does Henley say?"

"What would Henley say but, Fight. He is mad—utterly mad in his hatred of unions."

"Quite mad."

"In this case he is right. I have not deserved to be compelled to stand and deliver. I have always been fair to labor. I have been willing to compromise our differences, to make concessions. I have felt toward them as a father to his children. They have now no just cause to organize to fight me. And my plans for the future do not admit of a shrinkage in income from raised scales or costly strikes. Oh!" Quinby's hands clenched in the stress of emotion. "If I were but as rich as MacGregor! He has been well served by the men he has made." Quinby, it seemed, had forgotten his late tribute to his young lieutenants.

"Who made him," Mark corrected.

"No," contradicted Quinby sternly. "To whom he gave opportunity. As I have given it to my partners. And never have I been so ill served as in the handling of this dispute." He paused to let the truth of this disservice sink into Mark's heart.

"That is where I need you. Henley is the last man in the world for such a matter. It is not a bully's task. Truitt, I want you to take charge of the situation, stand between Henley and the men, and settle it."

"Humph! Easier ordered than done. I don't hanker for the job, Mr. Quinby."

"You are the only one of the lot who can meet labor in a human plausible manner. It was you, I believe, who saved us from a strike three years ago—I have never voiced my appreciation of that, but I do so now. You can do it. And you owe it to me to try. Be tactful, be firm but gentle. Sauviter in modo sed fortiter in re. Make nominal concessions. Even go a little farther than that. But, Truitt, above all things there must be no strike." He leaned forward and put a hand impressively on Mark's knee.

"Truitt—I Place Myself In Your Hands."

"Truitt—" There was a hint of nervous haste in the mellifluous voice. "Truitt, a strike would place me in a false position. I am known to have uttered publicly certain views on labor's rights. I still hold firmly to those views—in the abstract. I also hold that they do not apply to this case. But the world would not understand that. It would say—" He paused again, leaving Mark to imagine what the cruel cynical world would say.

Mark thought he could imagine it.

"Truitt!" Quinby brought his hands in a slow splendid gesture down on Mark's shoulders. "I place myself in your hands. My reputation is dear to me. Not for my own sake, but because of the work to which I have pledged my life."

Mark turned a frowning gaze out of the window. Ten miles or more sped by before he looked at the waiting Quinby.

"I'll try it."

"I knew you would." Quinby smiled once more. "Succeed and you will find me not ungrateful. Henley, I believe, is thinking of retiring—" Their eyes met.

"Does Henley know it?"

Quinby ignored the question. "He himself has said you are the only man of the broad vision and—"

"It isn't done yet," Mark interrupted. "But if I pull it through, I'd rather you'd let me build that new city." He laughed queerly. "Strange as it may seem, the notion appeals."

"But that, I fear, is out of the question." Quinby shook his head sadly. "A beautiful dream but—paleontology has claimed me."

They left the matter of reward for future determination.

At Buffalo they left Quinby, whose car was attached to a New York train.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Philanthropy.

The Quinby strike is now history. It is, however, no part of recorded history that during the anxious months preceding one man was toiling, planning, spending himself to avert the tragic outcome he foresaw. It was quite hidden work. Even had it succeeded it would have been no more widely heralded than in failure.

He did foresee the outcome as tragic, but not because a philanthropist's reputation hung in the balance.

There was one man who saw and understood his efforts. He was Henley.

They were together one day, Mark arguing earnestly for a compromise. Henley listened, not because he was impressed by the arguments, but because he was studying the pleader.

"Are you for us," he interrupted a long period to demand sharply, "or for the men?"

"I'm for both."

"You can't be for both. Are you," Henley jeered, "still trying to play the man of peace?"

"No. I'm trying to obtain a little justice and to save the Quinby company from idle mills."

"They won't be idle long. And we can afford idleness better than the men can."

"They're growing bitter. There will be violence."

"Then let there be violence. I'll know how to meet it." Henley's jaws set. "There'll be no compromise. Let us fight it out now, while we're ready—and the men aren't. The harder the fight the better I'm satisfied, because the longer it'll take the union to recover."

"You're hopeless." Mark eyed him significantly. "I see I'll have to appeal to Caesar."

"Meaning Quinby? Caesar's ghost must feel flattered!"

"He has an interest in the premises. I should think it would be to your interest—"

"Is that a kind of a threat?" Henley inquired harshly. "I'm not afraid of Quinby just now. Sooner or later I expect to be kicked out of this company. But he can't kick me out of steel. And I don't propose to see the industry run to suit the whims of tough walking delegates and grafting labor bosses. You seem to be in Quinby's confidence. I'm free to say I don't like it. It looks to me as though you're hedging, so you won't have to go out with me."

"What do you expect?"

"I made you. I've given you all you have. I expect you to stand by me."

"You demand more than you give others. The men give you all they have and you refuse—"

"The men work for their living, as men must. Most of them get a good living. When they're worth it they get more. You got more. If they don't like our terms let them find better somewhere else—if they can. As for Caesar, don't count too much on him. There are bigger interests than his vanity at stake just now, and you'll find when it comes to a point they'll hold. Quinby's a blatherskite, but I've never said he's a fool."

Mark said nothing. Henley's words but echoed his own fears. Henley regarded him frowningly.

"What," he demanded abruptly, "has got into you the last year? Before that I could always count on you. Now—I don't understand you."

"When it comes to that," Mark laughed shortly, "I don't understand myself."

* * * * * * *

Mark had been partly right when he attributed the mood of their return to reaction. A lighter mood followed. Kazia's work allowed them to meet but seldom and then often for only hurried visits; the eagerness bred by separation drove such problems as Quinby and the meaning of their relation into the background. But the shadow never quite lifted. As winter wore on Kazia began to perceive growing up in Mark's heart a new interest, so strong that sometimes it intruded even into the brief hours that should have been given wholly to love.

There was an evening when he came to her apartment, tired and discouraged, but with an air that sent her memory back to a slender youth going doggedly forth each day to labor meant for stronger men. She, too, was tired from a long exacting case whose close allowed them this leisurely meeting, the first in weeks.

"This week," she told him after he had been there a little while, "I was offered the superintendency of nurses at the Todd hospital."

"That's fine! I'm glad. When do you begin?"

"Have you forgotten! I think it comes through Mr. Quinby."

"Take it anyhow," he answered promptly. "Since you won't let me help you."

"I don't like to be under obligations to him."

"Take it. If he meant mischief, I think we'd have heard from him before now. And it's only fair for somebody to get something out of him. God knows I'm doing enough for him."

"You mean with the men?"

"Yes. Though, if he only knew it, I'm not doing it for his sake. I believe it was for the men I undertook the job." He shook his head gloomily. "But the worst of it is, I'm almost certain to fail."

"Oh, I hope not."

"Yes. Sometimes I think I'm the only sane man left on earth. Each side thinks it's bound to win. One side is—and it isn't the men. But they won't listen to me. It makes me sick to think what they'll have to pay if they go into this hopeless contest. You don't know how the thing is taking hold on me. You think this queer talk from me?"

"I don't find it queer."

"It is queer. I haven't come to the why yet. Do you believe," he asked abruptly, "that love can awaken all the sympathies?"

"I believe that it can."

"Wouldn't it be strange," he went on musingly, "if through Quinby—the philanthropist!—I've found my big idea?"

"Your big idea?"

"Yes." He forgot that no Richard Courtney had ever defined it for her. "I'll probably fail in this wrangle. But after that—why not?—the happy city, and in Bethel. The thing's getting into my blood. Or am I, after all, the one who is mad?"

If she was white, he laid it to weariness. "If you are, I love your madness."

A silence. When she broke it he, absorbed in the train of thoughts set in motion by mention of the unbuilt city, did not catch the odd strained note in the words.

"Then you think I'd better take the position?"

"Ah!" He came back remorsefully to the subject. "Of course, you must take it."

"Even from Quinby?"

"However it comes, you're fitted for it. You've earned it."

"But," she insisted quietly, "I'd have to live at the hospital. I'd have no excuse for keeping this apartment."

"Oh, no, surely not! You musn't give it up. I need you, Kazia—these hours—" Alarm had driven all but love—he still called it love—from his heart for the moment. He leaned over and caught her to him.

"Not at once, perhaps," she murmured weakly. "I could come here sometimes—until the lease expires—"

He laughed. "Do you think love is determined by a landlord's contract?"

"Not by that!" With a little gasping cry she reached up and clung to him.

* * * * * * *

During the last days of the negotiations Mark almost hoped the strike could be averted. Then men, listening to his persuasions, agreed to accept a merely nominal increase in the wage scale. But the agreement must be signed, not by the men as individuals, but by the union for them; from that stand the young organization, its very life at stake, would not be moved.

Three men were in Henley's office on that last night before the decision was announced. One had just made his final plea for the compromise.

Henley shook his head firmly. "I will not recognize the union."

"But they ask so little."

Both glanced at the other man, a tall stately figure, pacing, hands clasped behind his back, up and down the room. A troubled despairing frown roughened the lofty brow.

"I'm looking ahead," Henley replied. "Labor organizations never go back, unless you catch 'em young and kill 'em off. Recognize them now and three years hence they'll demand a raised scale. Next, it will be the closed shop. Then another raise, and so on. We'll be running our mills for the benefit of men who have no stake in them, never knowing when they'll be after us with new outrageous demands. I will not have it." Henley spoke with feeling.

The pacing figure stopped, looking at Mark. "What have you to say to that?"

"I say, the men are desperate. They'll stop at nothing to win the strike. It will cost us millions."

"Cheaper now than ever," Henley interrupted.

"I say," Mark went on, "this industry, this company, can afford to grant any demands labor will ever make. And there's such a thing as humanity. If that isn't enough—" He paused, looking steadily at Quinby. "If that isn't enough, I say the public is on the men's side and it hasn't forgotten the Siamese twins of production and other beautiful sentiments publicly uttered by a certain famous philanthropist."

Quinby groaned and resumed his anxious pacing. But he was halted by Henley's next words.

"You had a visit from some men in New York last week."

"How do you know?" Quinby was visibly startled.

"I advised them to see you," Henley rejoined. "They're men of power. They own newspapers. They can make and unmake men and reputations. They can destroy you as easily as they would a corner grocer. They're interested in the future of steel. They're more interested, as every controller of property must be, in the fight to stamp out this epidemic of labor agitation. I remind you, it isn't safe to disregard their advice."

"What interest have they in my reputation?"

"Humph! They think as I do—damn your reputation!"

Quinby started, glared. His tongue fumbled vainly for words to answer this astounding lese-majesty. He took a step toward Henley, menacingly.

"Humph!" Henley grunted again. "You can save your wind. I'm not afraid of you just now. And I won't let this company be crippled by giving in to the union. The men who saw you won't permit it either—without punishing."

"I suppose you think they can keep you in this company, too?"

"No," Henley answered steadily. "Between you and me they won't interfere. But between you and them—between your expensive reputation and their interest—they will interfere. The labor unions are your common enemy. If you let them get a foothold here, you may as well lie down and die. For there isn't a spot on earth where the truth about Quinby"—hatred gave savagery to the threat—"the pious fraud, the hounder of women, the traitor in business dealings, won't reach."

Then Men Listened to His Persuasions.

Quinby's glare had no power now, as at another time, to subdue Henley.

He sank into a chair, stretching out his hands to Mark in a helpless gesture. "Can't you say something?"

"If you aren't a coward and a fraud," Mark answered with undisguised disgust, "you'll know what to say. If you are—" He concluded with a shrug.

It was an intolerable moment for Quinby. He rose, made a pitiable effort to gather the tatters of his vanity around his naked cowardice.

"I leave you in charge. I go to New York tonight. An expedition starts for Tibet tomorrow. I shall join it."

He stalked stiffly to the door. There he stopped for a second, looking back with eyes that were not good to see.

Henley turned to Mark. "As for you," he began sternly, "I've let you play your game, because you could do no harm. But now, having learned that you can't pin faith even to the vanity of a coward—"

Mark met his gaze quietly. "I have learned more than that. But, at least, the feet were of iron, after all."

The next day the failure of negotiations was announced. On the next the strike was ordered.

Henley was ready. On the morning of the third day detached squads of strangers appeared in the vicinity of the mills, trying to saunter along with the air of casual ease. They were Henley's strike breakers, gathered from many cities.

And the strikers were ready, though few of them wot of preparation.

The first squad slipped unnoticed into the mills, and a second. Then along the mile or more of street an electric word passed from watching crowd to crowd: "Henley's strike breakers!" The third squad reached the refuge of the mills only by a sudden overbearing dash. The fourth found its way blocked and itself pressed back by a surging cursing mob. The remaining strike breakers rallied to this point and in a body tried by brute force to drive a lane through the resisting pack of men and women. But the mob grew faster, gathered around the invaders, roughly jostling them and shrieking taunts and blasphemies. Blows were struck, missiles hurled. Then above the clamor a shot was heard.

A cry, "A woman is killed!" answered by a hoarse frenzied bellow. Many weapons flashed from pockets where they had lain hidden. Other shots were heard, fired pointblank at living targets. The melee became a battle. When it was over, the strike breakers had fled and two score and more lay dead on the streets. Through the labyrinth of silent machinery and chilling furnaces a mob that panted with the thirst for blood hunted out and shot down those of Henley's men who had reached the mills. . . . Mad? Mad as though a bastile waited to be taken.

Two days the terror lasted. The mills—sacred property!—were wrecked. Timid posses were driven back. Crazed orators harangued the mob and took for ironic text "the Siamese twins of production."

Then with measured tread and gleaming bayonets came the force of the law, and peace—the peace of the strong—hovered once more over Quinby's mills.

CHAPTER XXIV.

The Pressure of Truth.

The strike was broken. Engines crunched and furnaces glowed again. The men, starved out, had crept back to the mill gates, begging for work. The troops marched away and the union, at least in Quinby's mills, never raised its head again.

But at what a cost!

Jeremiah Quinby returned—not, however, with a blare of trumpets. In fact, he came almost secretly, though not wholly out of modesty; no reporter so bold or so shrewd as to win to his well-guarded presence. The cynical public had lately become deeply interested in the Siamese twins of production and upon the devoted head of their author had heaped its cruel satire.

But Quinby's return was not without its objects. One of them was to unseat the arrogant Henley, and to this Quinby, without concealment or delay, bent his energies. In the other, which seems to prove that in matters of sex are neither prince, priest nor peasant, but only man and woman, more finesse was employed. Only one person had an inkling of this project and she kept well the secret.

There was heard a merry cracking of whips. One by one Quinby won the minor stockholders over to his primary object and approached the point where he could deal the blow. Henley grimly waited. Mark was not approached on the matter, for the sufficient reason that he, too, had been singled out for vengeance.

"Quinby is back," he told Kazia once.

There was a perceptible pause before she answered. "Yes. He visited the hospital the other day."

"Keeping his hand in, I suppose," he said lightly. "Unhappily, Quinby is cut off from public philanthropic exercises until the present cloud passes."

She achieved a smile.

"But humanity's loss isn't our gain," Mark grinned wryly. "He's getting ready to eliminate Henley and me from the company."

"Oh, that's too bad. Will it make you—poor?"

"No. But it will leave me considerably less rich than I'd like to be."

"I thought you didn't care for money?"

"No man cares so little for it that he's willing to lose it. And I'll need every dollar I have."

She guessed what he had in mind. "You say you will need it?"

"For my happy city." He laughed, then grew serious. "Kazia, I'm going to build it. At least, I'm going to start it."

"Ah!" She turned away with a sharp intake of breath. "It—it would be something worth while."

For an hour, unconscious of cruelty, he discoursed of his plans, eagerly and eloquently. His eloquence was not in vain. She listened without comment, but as he talked the picture he saw grew before her, convincing, real—the happy city rising in the beautiful valley, a place where men toiled and were not consumed, found refuge from weariness not in vice, but in clean contented homes and wholesome sports, gave of their best to the labor because of its earnings they had a just share, living hopefully. . . . She measured it by the life of the steel maker as she had seen it, and him by the quality of his dream.

"Do you see it?"

"I see it."

"One of the things I've learned is to understand men of wealth. Their cruelties are the cruelties of cowardice—the fear of those who have that those who have not will force a distribution of the spoils. They're afraid of anything new or different. Therefore they will fight me as only cowards can—until they're convinced even humanity can pay dividends. That," he frowned, "is where Quinby will pinch me. Every dollar he takes from me will lessen my chances of pulling through the first fight."

"Can't you stop him?"

"As easy stop a mad snake. Quinby has much to take out on Henley and me. And we're helpless."

"Perhaps a way out will be found."

The flat lifeless voice, so unlike hers, recalled him to her.

"Are you disgusted?" he exclaimed remorsefully. "Here I've been clacking away like Quinby himself, never noticing how tired you are. Let me take you back to the hospital."

"No. I arranged to stay here overnight to begin packing my things up."

"But your lease—"

"Even leases," she answered quietly, "don't always run their full course. The agent has a tenant who wants this apartment and I promised to move out next week."

"Kazia!" He found himself flushing. Only by a strong effort could he make his eyes meet hers. "That means you think I'm forgetting you in my new plans."

"I think," she answered, "only that you're a man and that love, especially such love as ours, isn't enough."

He looked at her in silence for a moment. "Kazia," he began very gently, "I could lie to you, but there must be no lies between us. Love isn't enough—even such love as ours. A man must do his work. It's the inescapable law. But that doesn't mean that love—that you—won't always have a big place with me, a place all your own." He drew her closer, so that her head rested on his shoulder, and smoothed the thick dark hair. "It never occurred to me you wouldn't be as interested as I in my plans. You've given me so much, you've seemed so much a part of what I'm to do—I've thought of it as our work—"

A hand stole over his mouth. She raised her head, and she was smiling.

"Don't! You make me ashamed. And now you must go."

"Can't I stay to help you?"

"A man pack!" she laughed gaily.

"A man," he sighed, trying to be jocose, "has so many limitations. But it's all right, Kazia?"

"It's all right."

But when he was gone the gay manner vanished. The strong figure drooped wearily. She fell to her knees beside a chair, burying her face in her arms.

"What does he know of love?"

The next evening, returning to his hotel for a late dinner, Mark found a memorandum to call up the Todd hospital. From the hospital he received word that Mrs. Whiting had gone to Rose alley and asked him to follow her. Some one was dying. He did not wait for dinner, but hailing a cab, set out on another journey to Rose alley.

He stumbled hastily up the gloomy staircase to Roman's door and rapped lightly. It was opened by an unkempt foreign woman, doubtless a neighbor, and he entered. Save for her the kitchen was empty. But by the light of a smoky lamp that stood on the table near an inner door, he saw a group dimly outlined. On a narrow bed lay a huge dropsical figure, seeming to Mark already dead. The Matka, more faded than ever, sat at the dying man's side, motionless as he, her gaze fixed rigidly upon him.

"Thank you for coming," Kazia said.

"I'm glad you sent for me. Is there anything I can do?"

"Yes, get Piotr. He went away early this morning and doesn't know. It was very sudden. You'll probably find him at—" She named a corner a mile or more distant. "He makes speeches there every evening."

The cab came to a halt at a corner where many people passed. A small changing crowd had gathered around a man who from his soap box harangued them. He preached a gospel that, beginning with a germ of love, had grown in him into a creed of hate. It was a rambling incoherent harangue, full of bitter denunciation and vague generalities that never came to a point—the grotesque but pitiful outpouring of a feeble mind obsessed by a sense of injury real or fancied and cracking under the effort to inoculate others with its venom. Mark listened a moment.

"The man must be mad," he thought pitifully.

Piotr in his ramblings came to the late strike. He began a roll call of the masters of the Quinby company—Quinby himself, Henley, Higsbee, Hare—

"And Truitt!" The hoarse voice became, if that were possible, even more bitter. He fairly writhed as he shrieked out his charges. "Truitt the wife-beater! The rounder! With his women—!" For several minutes he raved on, regaling his audience with an array of disgusting but apocryphal details of Truitt's life that to his diseased fancy must have become proved facts.

"Go tell him to come here," Mark ordered the cabman. "Tell him his father is dying."

"Aw, hell!" growled a big Irishman in the crowd, audible even to the cab. "Shut up! Truitt's th' only wan av th' lot wid bowils t' him."

"Fool—fool!" Piotr shook clenched fists at the Irishman. "Are you taken in because he tried to stop the strike? Who was he working for then, you or Quinby? Where was he when Henley's strike breakers came to steal your jobs and shoot down your women? Where was his money when your children were starving for bread? Where—"

But the cabman had reached him with Mark's message. For a moment Piotr stared stupidly, trying to take in its meaning. Then he uttered a wild piercing cry.

"Dying!" He leaned toward the crowd, hands and face twitching in his frenzy. "My father's dying, but he can wait while I tell you about this Truitt. When he was starting out he came to our house, because my father took pity on him. My father loved him, better than he did his own son. He watched over him, cared for him, taught him all he knew of his trade. Then the old man broke. He wouldn't have been old anywhere else, but he had burned himself up trying to make Quinby's furnace hells pay. They threw him out, of course—and Truitt took his job. Truitt—partner of Quinby! The old man's heart broke. Then his mind gave way. And now he's dying—do you know where? In Rose alley!"

The crowd had become very still. To them, too, the tragedy that tortured the madman was clear; infinite repetition could not take away its bitterness.

"And that isn't all." The emotional delirium reached its climax. "In that house was a girl—just an ignorant Hunky girl but the kind men love. And Truitt made love to her. But when he left us, he left her, too—another broken heart! To forget him she married a worthless rummy she had to leave. Then she went out into the city to make her own living—you know the fight and the price women must pay or go down. And she—the girl he wouldn't take up with him—she paid—"

Bewilderment choked back the stream of words. For a man—whose pallor was not due to the garish arc lamp—had leaped from the cab and was elbowing a way swiftly toward him. The crowd fell back to let the man through, then pressed closer. Only Piotr and the Irishman recognized him. Mark caught Piotr by the arm and jerked him roughly from the box.

The Irishman's heavy hand fell on Mark's shoulder. "Let be, sor." Then he fell back before the livid countenance Mark turned on him.

"Keep out. I'll do him no harm. I'm only taking him to his father, where his place is instead of here blackguarding women he isn't fit to touch."

Piotr jerked his arm free. "I won't go with you!"

But the Irishman caught him. "Ye'll go as Misther Truitt tells yez. I'm thinkin' he's just loony, sor."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

One Line of Credit.

"So your grocer refuses to give you credit for another thing."

"Not exactly; he says he'll give me credit for any cash I pay on account."—Boston Transcript.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3.1879

There is a warm race for Speaker of the State House of Representatives, between Sam Y. Gordon and H. H. Flowers, and here is hoping that Sam lands the plum.

Those of our American citizens who do not approve of President Wilson's peace policy should bid some of their nearest relatives good-bye, and send them over to take part in the European war.

We shall endeavor to see that a bill is introduced early in the next session of the legislature placing all county officers, except the sheriff, on a yearly salary, and have them turn all fees collected by them into the county treasure's office.

The Mexican Revolution is not likely to end, as long as there is any generals left in that country to lead a revolution. It now looks as if the only way to pacify that country would be to establish schools to educate the children and let the old fellows fight until they have killed each other off the face of the earth.

All other lines of business except the farmers maintain a lobby at St. Paul to look after their interests during the session of the legislature. The farmers never pay any attention to what is going on down there, and if they are told they are likely not to believe the facts when they are placed before them, offering a very little incentive to watch the members by one who knows how to do it.

OUR CRIMINAL ASH HEAP THE WHEELS OF JUSTICE TURN SLOWLY.

Ohio State Fire Marshal Deffenbaugh is indignant over the slow operation of the wheels of justice in many arson cases in that state, and over the fact that in many cases, after conviction, the culprits have been given suspended sentences. Unless a good stiff sentence is given a person convicted of incendiarism, it would be better that no prosecution had been made. The moral effect of a conviction is what keeps the number of crimes down.

A CASE IN POINT

Not long ago a fire occurred in a store building in Omaha. The fire was extinguished in its incipiency and the body of one Bornstein was found in the debris. The Coroner's jury returned a verdict which stands on the records at Omaha that said Bornstein came to his death by reason of an exlosion and a fire while he was in the store of Spiegle and Klein for incendiary purposes, at the instigation of Alexander Spiegal, one of the firm.

Now, bear in mind that with this definate evidence before him, the prosecuting attorney made no move whatever to punish Alexander Spiegel. He was allowed to go scot-free. The insurance company paid the loss and taxed it up to the insuring public.

PUBLIC SENTIMENT TO BLAME.

The courts in most cases reflect public opinion with great accuracy. Without active co-operation on the part of the fire tax payers in general, the Fire Marshal finds it difficult to gather sufficient evidence to even indict, to say nothing of convicting the arson suspect. Thus the crooked fire gets across and fire insurance is on the edge of becoming a commercial sewer instead of a healthy avenue of benefit to humanity.

A petition will be presented to Congressman Steenerson to urge the passage of a bill to open the towns lying between this reservation and Red Lake for homestead entry during this session of Congress.

That investigation of the preparedness of the United States for war looks more like a scheme gotten up by the manufacturers of war material, than an honest alarm.

MUST PAY FOR THE PAPER.

Judge George Thomas, of Columbus, Neb., recently decided that if a man accepts a paper that is sent him he must pay for it. The decision was rendered in the case brought by the Columbus (Neb.) Telegram against a man for $2 35. The Telegram had been sent to the man's home and he had accepted the paper When called upon to pay for it he refused and suit was brought. When Judge Thomas heard the evidence he instructed the jury to bring in a verdict for The Telegram Judge Thomas ruled that the old common law principle that what a man received and used he was bound to pay for applied in this instance. —Bemidji Sentinel.

PROMPT ACTION WILL STOP YOUR COUGH.

When you first catch a Cold (often indicated by a sneeze or cough), break it up at once. The idea that "It does not matter" often leads to serious complications. The remedy which immediately and easily penetrates the lining of the throat is the kind demanded. Dr. King's New Discovery soothes the irritation, loosens the phlegm. You feel better at once. "It seemed to reach the very spot of my Cough" is one of many honest testimonials. 50c. at your Druggist.—adv.

A TEST FOR LIVER COMPLAINT MENTALLY UNHAPPY—PHYSICALLY DULL.

The Liver, sluggish and inactive, first shows itself in a mental state—unhappy and critical. Never is there joy in living, as when the Stomach and Liver are doing their work. Keep your Liver active and healthy by using Dr. King's New Life Pills; they empty the Bowels freely, tone up your Stomach, cure your constipation and purify the Blood. 25c. at Druggist.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve excellent for Piles.—adv.

KEEP IT HANDY FOR RHEMATISM.

No use to squirm and wince and try to wear out your Rheumatism. It will wear you out instead. Apply some Sloan's Liniment. Need not rub it in—just let it penetrate all through the affected parts, relieve the soreness and draw the pain. You get ease at once and feel so much better you want to go right out and tell other sufferers about Sloan's. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25 cents of any druggist and have it in the house—against Colds, Sore and Swollen Joints, Lumbago, Sciatica and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief. Buy a bottle to-day.—adv.

YOUR COLD IS DANGEROUS BREAK IT UP—NOW

A Cold is readily catching. A run-down system is susceptible to Germs. You owe it to yourself and to others of your household to fight the Germs at once. Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey is fine for Colds and Coughs. It loosens the Mucous, stops the Cough and soothes the Lungs. It's guaranteed. Only 25c. at your Druggist.—adv.

Subscribe for THE SUNBEAM.

WE HAVE

$150,000.00

TO LOAN ON FARMS IN

PENNINGTON COUNTY

Write Or Call on Us At FIRST NATIONAL BANK

THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN.

FARMERS & MERCHANTS STATE BANK

Oklee Minn.

The rapid growth of this bank is the best evidence that its policy and methods meet with the approval of the people in our community.

You will find this bank as liberal in its dealings as is consistent with sound banking.

We are at all times prepared to discuss your requirements with you and invite consultation.

Pay your bills with checks on this bank.

Farm Loans At Lowest Rates And On Easy Terms.

Six per cent interest paid on time deposits.

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS— — — — — — — — —$14,500.00

J. A. C. Torgerson, V. P. W. B. Torgerson, Cashier.

DO YOUR BANKING WITH FARMERS STATE BANK

GOODRIDGE - - MINNESOTA

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS $12, 000.

5 per cent paid on time deposits

Fire and Torrado Insurance Written in Responsible Companies.

FARM LOANS A SPECIALITY

J. M. BISHOP, President JAY PAYNE Vice-President

NICK BUNDHUND, Cashier

We have for sale one of the best quarter sections of land in the town of Highlanding, located one mile south of Highlanding Creamery. This farm will be sold cheap as the owner is a non resident and desires to use the money invested in other business. For terms and full particulars call on W. G. Hunt, Sunbeam, Minn.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Dec 11th. 1914

Department of the Interior U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Dec. 7th 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Matt Bakken, of Rhoda, Minn. who on April 5th, 1909, made Homestead Application. Serial No. 04712, for N. ½ N. W. ¼ & S. E. ¼ N. W. ¼, Sec. 9, and who on April 15th, 1909 made additional Homestead Application Serial No. 04735, for S. W. ¼ N. W. ¼ Sec. 9, Township 152 N. Range 40 West Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make Commutation Proof to establish claim to the land above described, before N. W. Tarrant Municipal Judge for the city of Thief River Falls, Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 12th. day of January, 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses

Edward Singer, M. E. Hyland, Ole Skrieland, of Rhoda, Minn. Stephen Singer of Kratka, Minn.

Peter M. Ringdal.
Register.

W. G. Hunt

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

FOR SALE: 120 acres in Section 14, Hickory Township, Pennington County, Minn. Price $1,800.

Nels Fore, Rolard. Minn.

HIGHLANDING BLACKSMITH SHOP

A Tharaldson, blacksmith of Highlanding will have a full line of buggy and wagon repairs on hand, and will be glad to oblige.

A. Tharaldson

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Dec. 11th 1914

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land office at Crookston December 3rd, 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Christoffer Nilson of Erie Minn. who on March 15th, 1912 made Homestead Application Serial No 0748. for S.½ S. W. ¼, Section 21 Township 153 N. Range 39 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 21st, day of January 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Ljot Sigurdson. Nels Graue, Andrew Ellingson, Lars C. Tevig, all of Erie Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register.

U. S. Mail,

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 1.00 p. m., on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.55 p.m

Wm. G. Hunt, p.m.

FIRST STATE BANK,

Of Plummer Minnesota.

GIVE THE BURGLAR THE "HA, HA!" BANK YOUR CASH WITH US

SOME people extend invitations to the THIEF AND HOLDUP MAN. They carry on their persons or in their homes large sums of money. A CHECK BOOK is of no use to the professional thief. Still, a check is AS GOOD AS CASH to the tradesman or for the immediate household wants. If you haven't a bank account

OPEN ONE TODAY.

J.A.DUFFY President, Henry Enderlie, Cashier

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Dec. 18th 1914

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. December 9th 1914.

Notice is hereby given that James Davis, of Erie, Minnesota., who on July 20th 1911, made Homestead Entry Serial No. 00432, for N.W.¼ S.E.¼ Section 8, Township 152, N. Range 39 W. 5th. Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before N. W. Terrant, Municipal Judge for the City of Thief River Falls, at Thief River Falls, Minnesota, on the 19th day of January, 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Edward Cotton, Edward Iverson, Rasmus Martinson, Otto Anderson, all of Erie, Minnesota.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register.

Corrected.

Teacher—Earl, did you whisper today? Earl — Yes; wunst. Teacher—Clarence, should Earl have said "wunst?" Clarence — No; he should have said "twicet."—Everybody's.

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Nov. 27th 1914.

Department of the Interior.U.S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Nov. 23rd 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Thomas G. Roms of Rhoda, Minn., who on February 8th, 1912 made Homestead Application Serial No. 07282 for Lots 5 and 6. Section 6 Township 152 N. Range 40 W. 5th. Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Commutation Proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for District of Minn. at Thief River Falls, Minn. on the 6th day of January, 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Sam B. Swanson, Ole G. Skreland, of Rhoda, Minn. Andrew Feland, and William G. Hunt, of Sunbeam, Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register

MONEY TO LOAN ON FARM LAND

MACREY J. THOMPSON FARM MORTGAGES ST. PAUL, MINNESOTA

CONTRACTS, FIRST AND SECOND MORTGAGES BOUGHT

10 Great Serials

full of life and action, filled with the fire of fine inspiration and followed by 250 short stories of adventure, will make

The YOUTH'S COMPANION

Better Than Ever in 1915

Then the Family Page, a rare Editorial Page, Boys' Page, Girls' Page, Doctor's Advice, and "a ton of fun," Articles of Travel, Science, Education. From the best minds to the best minds, the best the world can produce for you and everyone in the home. There is no age limit to enthusiasm for The Youth's Companion.

CUT THIS OUT

and Send it (or name of this paper) with $2.00 for The COMPANION for 1915, and we will send

FREE All the issues of THE COMPANION for the remaining weeks of 1914.

FREE THE COMPANION HOME CALENDAR for 1915.

THEN The 52 Weekly Issues of THE COMPANION for 1915.

52 Times a Year — not 12.

Send to-day to The Youth's Companion, Boston, Mass., for THREE CURRENT ISSUES—FREE

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED AT THIS OFFICE

THIS YEAR, THE SAME AS LAST YEAR

THE

DULUTH HERALD

IS THE

BEST NEWSPAPER IN THE NORTHWEST

Send for sample copies—after you've read them you'll surely want to join The Herald's happy family of satisfied readers.

DAILY BY MAIL—THREE MONTHS FOR $1.00

ADDRESS—HERALD, DULUTH, MINN.

THE LOCAL NEWS

Mike Kolski was transacting business at Crookston Monday.

Oscar Swanson, of Hickory, was a visitor at the County Seat tuesday.

The Thief River Falls High School let out for two weeks holiday vacation to-day.

We extend thanks to a number of payers of subscription the past week.

The ice across Red Lake River is a good safe bridge to cross on now days.

One of Elling Klemmetson's brothers from Canada is visiting him this week.

Two weeks from to-day there is to be some changes in office, down at the County Seat.

Oscar Nesland of Rhoda, was a visitor at the County Seat Monday and Tuesday.

The farmers have been improving the fine weather the past two weeks, getting up their winter's supply of fire wood.

There is a prospect that we will get a fall of snow to-night, Christmas would seem lonesome in northern Minnesota without snow.

There is to be a Calico Dance at the Wojnarowski hall, in the town of Hickory, next Saturday evening, December 19th. First class music. All are invited.

Jerry O'Brien returned home to Cavelier, North Dakota last Tuesday, after a week spent visiting relatives and friends in this locality.

Proposals are out for bids for carrying mail on star routes All bids should be mailed so as to reach Washington by January 19th, 1915.

Thief River Falls never was much of a city for booming, but there is not a city in the northern part of the state that can beat it for a steady substantial growth.

The Electric Line Railroad from Goodridge to Thief River Falls is doing a good business this winter, with a prospect of their freight business doubling in the next year.

There is no question about the money market tightening up. It is all right to whistle to keep up your courage, but we think it is a duty to say to our friends; "Look out for a repetition of 1895."

A petition will be circulated early in January to get the Red Lake River declared unnavigable above Thief River Falls. It seems to us that it is time that this was done, and we hope that those who differ with those favoring this move will carefully consider the matter from a business stand point.

SHORT COURSE

THIEF RIVER FALLS SCHOOLS

The Short Course of three months in the Thief River Falls school will open Monday, January 4th. This plan of study is arranged particularly for the young men and women who can spare but a few months each year to attend school, consequently it is of a very practical and useful character. The studies offered will be carpentry; blacksmithing; sewing; cooking; several branches of agriculture, among which will be stock judging, milk testing, seed study, etc, farm law; accounting; arithmetic; correspondence; spelling and writing. A student may choose from this list to suit his convenience and needs. No charges are made for books or any other purposes—the course is free. Students will be enrolled as high school pupils and will be admitted to all the high school activities. Neither is any preparation needed to enroll in this department. Further may be secured from the superintendent of the city schools.

Cash For Hides and Furs.

If you have Hides or Furs for sale, bring them to the Oklee meat market and get the highest market price in cash.

Meat Market,
Oklee, Minn.

6 Per Cent MONEY 6 Per Cent MONEY 6 Per Cent

Loans may be obtained for any purpose on acceptable Real Estate security; liberal privileges; correspondence solicited.

A. C. Agency Company,
758 Gas & Electric Bldg.,
Denver Colorado,
and 446 Pierce Bldg.
St. Louis.

EAT

When you are AT GOODRIDGE, Call at the Goodridg Restaurant and get A cup of HOT COFFEE, or a good warm dinner for 25 cents. Don't forget the sign of

EAT

BARBER SHOP IN CONNECTION

STEPHENSON BROS. Prop.

MINNESOTA NORTHWESTERN ELECTRIC RAILWAY. TIME TABLE.

Trains going west leave Goodridge at 8:45 A.M and at 1:45 P.M

Arrive at Thief River Falls at 10:00 A. M. and at 3:30 P. M.

Leave Thief River Falls at 7:15 A. M. and at 10:00 A. M.

Arrive at Goodridge at 8:30 A. M. and at 12:10 P. M.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

We are sending out bills this week to a large number of our subscribers, and we hope that they will promptly pay up their subscription. If you had sold your wheat, one bushel in a place you would try to get your pay, and you would think when you asked a man for a dollar that he had not ought to say: "A dollar does not amount to much."

Other publishers have raised the price of subscription, but we have stuck to the old price of $1.00 a year, but now we feel that we have fairly earned the dollar a year, and we want it. Please remit.

State of Ohio, City of Toledo, Lucas County, } ss.

Frank J. Cheney makes oath that he is senior partner of the firm of F. J. Cheney & Co., doing business in the City of Toledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for each and every case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by the use of HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

FRANK J. CHENEY.

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D. 1886.

(Seal) A. W. GLEASON, Notary Public.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for testimonials, free.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

Sold by all Druggists, 75c.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

HEIGHT OF WAVES.

In Severe Storms the Crests May Mount Fifty Feet.

It is only in the imagination of the poets that waves rise "mountains high." The exact altitude and length of waves have been measured with scientific accuracy, and the record waves are carefully recorded. Waves in shallow water are, as a rule, higher than those in open or deep water. The height of a wave is commonly about one-fifteenth its length.

The longest wave on record was 2,590 feet, measuring from crest to crest, its period being about twenty-two seconds. Waves of extreme length are seldom very high. A wave 2,500 feet in length, rising in deep water, will have a height of about fifty feet.

When a wave enters shallow water its crest becomes considerably higher, and one of a height of forty feet will frequently rise to fifty feet. If it meets resistance, it may be thrown up twice this height.

In severe storms at sea waves rarely reach a height of fifty feet. The average in such time has a period of about ten seconds, which would indicate a length of about 500 feet. Waves with a period of ten seconds have a length of from 150 to 300 feet and a height of thirty-three feet and form a very high sea.—Exchange.

LUMBER AND BUILDING MATERIALS.

When you get ready to build, come in and let us figure your bill and show you our stock of lumber and building materials.

Complete stocks at Thief River Falls, Mavie and Goodridge, Minn.

WINTON-NICHOLS LUMBER COMPANY.

Go to S. P. Johnson, at Oklee

"The Right Place"

Boys Suits from $1.25, to $4.50 per suit, Mens suits, former price $25.00, Now selling for $16.00. $15.00 suits now selling for $8.50

$8.50 suits now selling for $4.50.

Men's shoes from $1.25 to $3.50. Former price $4.00 now $3 25.

Ladies shoes $1.50 to $3.00.

Prints 5 cents per yard, Gingham 8 cents to 10 cents per yard.

All Dry Goods at cost. Men's Caps goes at any price.

Sugar for this week is $6.00 per 100 lbs. Good coffee for 18 cents to 30 cents a pound. Bargains in all kind of goods.

S. P. JOHNSON, Oklee, Minn.

CITATION FOR HEARING ON FINAL ACCOUNT AND FOR DISTRIBUTION.

ESTATE OF Mrs. Salve Myrum

STATE OF MINNESOTA, COUNTY OF Pennington IN PROBATE COURT.

In the Matter of the Estate of Mrs. SALVE MYRUM Decedent:

THE STATE OF MINNESOTA TO Salve Myrum, and Gunhild Thompson, also known as Nellie Reiersgaard, and all persons interested in the final account and distribution of the estate of said decedent: The representative of the above named decedent, having filed in this Court his final account of the administration of the estate of said decedent, together with his petition praying for the adjustment and allowance of said final account and for distribution of the residue of said estate to the persons thereunto entitled; THEREFORE, YOU, AND EACH OF YOU, are hereby cited and required to show cause, if any you have, before this Court at the Probate Court Rooms in the Court House, in the city of Thief River Falls in the County of Pennington State of Minnesota, on the 19th day of January 1915; at 10 o'clock A. M., why said petition should not be granted.

WITNESS, the Judge of said Court, and the Seal of said Court, this 16th day of December 1914.

[COURT SEAL] WILHELM MICHELET,
Probate Judge.
H. O. KJOMME,
Attorney for Petitioner.

CITATION FOR HEARING ON FINAL ACCOUNT AND FOR DISTRIBUTION.

ESTATE OF Hayes Wade

STATE OF MINNESOTA, COUNTY OF Pennington IN PROBATE COURT.

In the Matter of the Estate of Hayes Wade Decedent:

THE STATE OF MINNESOTA TO Giles Wade and Melvina Wade all persons interested in the final account and distribution of the estate of said decedent: The representative of the above named decedent, having filed in this Court his final account of the administration of the estate of said decedent, together with his petition praying for the adjustment and allowance of said final account and for distribution of the residue of said estate to the persons thereunto entitled; THEREFORE, YOU, AND EACH OF YOU, are hereby cited and required to show cause, if any you have, before this Court at the Probate Court Rooms in the Court House, in the city of Thief River Falls in the County of Pennington State of Minnesota, on the 22nd. day of January 1915; at 10:00 o'clock A. M., why said petition should not be granted.

WITNESS, the Judge of said Court, and the Seal of said Court, this 15th. day of December, 1914.

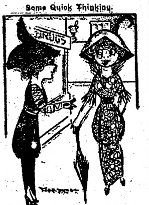
[COURT SEAL] WILHELM MICHELET
Probate Judge.
J. M. Bishop,
Attorney for Petitioner.

Not Much.

Howell—Reading maketh a full man.

Powell—But if you get arrested for drunkenness the judge isn't inclined to accept as an excuse your statement that you have been reading.—New York Press.

Some Quick Thinking.



"What in the world made you buy more postage stamps?"

"Why, I went into the drug store to get some face powder, and who should be there but Fred!"—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Almost Insulted.

Amid the lace bargains in one of the larger department stores the other day a shopper engrossed in thought set her little Japanese spaniel on the counter. One of the salesgirls, not seeing the little dog, threw a remnant of reduced lace over him and entirely submerged him. When the woman went to look for her pet he was not to be found, but several shrill yelps, accompanied by an upheaval of the lace, betrayed his presence. He was quickly rescued from his predicament, and the woman, showering kisses upon his moist, upturned nose, said, "Did they cover mamma's precious with cheap fifty cent lace?"

The salesgirl, who evidently had cultivated diplomacy, assured the dog's mistress that the lace had been reduced from $1 to 50 cents, and the woman took her pet away mollified.—Philadelphia Record.

Ready For Any Sacrifice.

Even when the London Times was sold at a high price its agony column was entertaining. Now that a copy of the journal costs only a penny the column is still more agonizing. Witness this advertisement:

"In order to save his aged parents from distress, gentleman (foreigner) wishes to sell himself for any purpose Willing to do right away anything. I sincerely desire an offer."

If this cry had been uttered in the old days Satan would have appeared in a pleasing form and with courteous address waited on the gentleman in despair. Only a scribbled signature, only a penful of blood, would have been necessary, and the aged parents would have rolled in luxury. This is a sadly prosaic age.—Boston Herald.

Panama Canal Lighthouses.

It is announced that a feature of the Panama canal will be lighthouses whose lamps are lit and extinguished by the sun, without the aid of human hands. Briefly, the warmth of the sun at dawn, falling on a rod which rests on a lever, expands that rod and so moves the lever which closes the gas valve. At night the rod, getting cooler, contracts and so opens the valve and lets the gas pass, to be lit by a small jet always left burning. The rod can be adjusted according to the temperature conditions of any country. The sun valve is the invention of Gustaf Dalen, the famous Swedish physicist, recently awarded a Nobel prize.—Illustrated London News.

FIRST STATE BANK,

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS $11000.00

not merely name--But a fixed policy.

The men who founded and organized the First State had a definate policy in mind, namely: To organize and conduct a bank that would give to all its patrons the best possible service and the most liberal returns on money deposited that can safely be given by a strictly conservative institution.

FIRST STATE BANK,
OKLEE minn.

A. P. [illegible], President. John [illegible], Cashier.
Ole [illegible], Asst. Cashier.

THE PRICHARD Co.

Thief River Falls Minn.

DEALERS IN LUMBER AND FARM MACHIERY.

Located west of the new Soo Depot. Give us a call, and look over our stock of Lumber and Farm Machinery.

H. O. KJOMME
Attorney and Counselor at Law
McGinn Block
Thief River Falls, - - Minn.

Wilhelm Michelet
U. S. COMMISSIONER
COURT HOUSE
THIEF RIVER FALLS,
MINN.

The Sneeze.

People say "God bless me" after sneezing, from the fact that in the days of the plague this terrible malady began with violent sneezing and other indications of cold. The exclamation was thus originally a prayer to be delivered from the plague.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub in the Sunbeam Nov. 27th, 1914.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minnesota November 23rd 1914

Notice is hereby given that Karl A. Korstad, of Erie, Minn. who on October 3rd 1911, made Homestead Application serial No. 06631 for N. E. ¼ Section 21, Township 153 N. Range 40 W. Fifth, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make Commutation proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for Dist. of Minn., at Thief River Falls Minn on the 30th day of December 1914.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Perley P. Palmer, Peder H. Thoreson Peder P. Korstad, Charles Palmer all of Erie, Minn.

PETER M RINGDAL,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. In the Sunbeam Nov. 27th 1914.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office, at Crookston Minn, Nov. 21st 1914.

Notice is hereby given, that Clarence F. Peterson, of Kratka, Minn., who on June 3rd, 1911, made Homestead Entry No. 06250, for Lots 1 & 2, E ½ N.W ¼, Section 1[illegible] Township 153 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before N. W. Tarrant, Municipal Judge for the City of Thief River Falls, Minn. at Thief River Falls Minnesota, on the 30th day of December 1914

Claimant names as witnesses

Stephen Singer, Ole Nelson, Carl Klemmetson, Peter C. Wold, Jack Dunn, all of Kratka, Minn Roy Hoffman, of Erie, Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal.
Register.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year: four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Cuts, Burns,

Bruises, Sores, Wounds and Piles quickly healed with Arnica Salve. It prevents infection, is antiseptic, soothing, healing. Try it once. Money Back If It Fails. The Original and Genuine.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve

Heals the Hurt

All Druggists and Dealers, 25c.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH - - That's $50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day

Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 200-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were piloting them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing talking points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Why don't YOU be the first to apply from your vicinity before someone else gets the territory. We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.

The 25th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide-awake men who received our special selling inducement, rendered it necessary to double our output. We are spending many thousands of dollars enlarging our sales organization, but to learn all particulars it will cost you only the price of a postal card.

Ask for Catalogue 16 T.

THE VICTOR SAFE & LOCK CO.

CINCINNATI, OHIO.

Our New Home. Capacity 25,000 Safes Annually.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

AGGRESSIVE CLUB FOR GOOD SPORTSMANSHIP

Hutchinson Society Preaches the Propaganda of Protecting All Wild Animal Life.

Hutchinson.—This may not be the largest town in the sovereign state of Minnesota, but it has more live wires loose in it than is ordinarily found in the roundhouse of a metropolitan trolley system. No implication of danger goes with this, as most of them look like they could be touched—for reasonable amounts—if approached under proper auspices and adequate or satisfactory reasons given. The power plant of this system of live wires seems to be located in the Gopher Campfire club, numerically the largest, temperamentally the liveliest, and in effect the most aggressive organization of its kind in the state, if not the country.

The fourth annual dinner of the club was given in the big auditorium of the Hutchinson High school and attended by more than 300 members and guests. This dinner has come to be an annual function and the Gophers seem, so far as can be discovered, to have been the original discoverers of how to put the fun in function.

Any organization which can give a dinner starting out at 7 o'clock and not breaking up until after midnight, with every trencherman in his place and loath to go home when the motion to adjourn is made, has solved the problem of entertaining and solved it well. This was accomplished.

Campfire Club Is Unique.

The Gopher Campfire club is unique. It is a social organization based upon good fellowship and good sportsmanship. It has no dues and the only test to which an applicant for membership is subjected is that he will sign the "Articles of Faith" and then live up to them—and make a conscientious effort to see if the fellow over the way lives up to them, whether he has signed the articles or not.

The articles of faith constitute an agreement to band together for the purpose of good sportsmanship; to cooperate with the authorities in enforcing and observing the game and fish laws and to use the privileges of those laws with intelligence and moderation and discourage the game and fish hog spirit.

The club also binds its members to recognize the rights of property owners and condemns discourtesy, vandalism and unsportsmanlike conduct on the part of hunters and fishermen. The club extends its domain of influence even beyond the fish and game preservation and is preaching the propaganda of protecting all wild life.

The club now numbers more than 300 members and there are no associate or brother-in-law members. Every man is active and the club has grown out of Hutchinson and is taking in the real sportsmen of Glencoe and surrounding towns. The present officers are: President, Carlos Avery; vice president, C. G. McEwen; secretary-treasurer, H. L. Merrill; councilor, E. P. Harms; purchasing agent, George Kasson.

Each summer the members lay aside business cares or worries and spend two or three days in camp on the shores of Belle lake. Every member attends and the summer outing is said to be as big a success as the annual dinner in the winter, and if that is the case the outing must be a hummer.

PRESIDENT WILSON COMING

Tells Governor-elect Hammond He Expects to Visit Minnesota in 1915.

Minneapolis.—President Wilson expects to pay Minnesota a visit some time next year. He indicated this purpose in a talk with Governor-elect W. S. Hammond, who called on the president at the White House to ask him to visit Minneapolis at the time of the Traffic association meeting in March. The president said that he will be in Panama at that time, but he is anxious to make another trip to Minnesota and expects to visit the state some time during 1915.

Winona Baseball Club Protests.

Winona.—The Winona Baseball club formally wired a protest to Secretary H. J. Farrell of the national commission against the action taken Monday at the Northern league meeting, when Winona was ousted from the league. The contention of the local club is that the ouster proceedings were not carried out in accordance with the league's constitution. A. H. Pulford of Winnepeg, it is announced, also has appealed to Mr. Farrell for the Winnipeg protection. Pulford's franchise was awarded to Horace C. Webb, a real estate dealer of Winnipeg.

Albert Lea to Have Tree.

Albert Lea.—Albert Lea, the first city in the United States to have a municipal Christmas tree, will commemorate the event by having a tree bigger and better than ever. "It was not the intention to continue the practice another year, but the children of the county protested so vigorously that the Business Men's league called a special session and voted to yield to the demand. Ludwig Kemper, H. C. Hanson and R. E. Barragan are in charge of the plans. A choir of 400 [illegible]

MAY RUN FOR SPEAKERSHIP

Frank E. Minnette of Sauk Center, Veteran Member of House, Has Good Chance.

St. Paul.—Frank E. Minnette of Sauk Center, veteran member of the Minnesota hause of representatives, said that he may become a candidate for speaker. He has been counted as a supporter of H. H. Flowers, being anti-county option, but says he is not pledged.

"The fight seems to be deadlocked tight between Flowers and Gordon," said Mr. Minnette, "and I think there is a good chance for me. I have been assured by five or six members that they would support me if I should become a candidate. I will not decide for a few days, until I know better where I would stand."

Mr. Flowers and S. Y. Gordon, the active candidates, are at their headquarters here, and each still claimed today to be in control of the situation.

A possibility of another vote for county option developed here, where the contest of C. P. Montgomery against George C. Sudheimer in the forty-second district remains in doubt after a court recount. Montgomery favors county option. The disputed ballots which will decide the contest are practically up to the election committee to be appointed by the new speaker.

COEDS ARE BETTER STUDENTS

Report of Minnesota College Shows Smaller Percentage of Women Than Men Below Grade.

Minneapolis.—The report of the committee of the Minnesota College of Science, Literature and the Arts on students who are falling behind in their work has just been issued. In November, 1914, there were registered 1,521 students. In November, 1914, the number was 1,721. A year ago 11.17 per cent of the men students were reported below grade in one subject. The corresponding percentage this year was 15.16. For women the percentages were: Last year, 11.17; this year, 11.56. The percentages for men below in two subjects were respectively 6.11 and 6.97; for women, 3.11 and 2.90. The percentages for students reported below in three subjects were: Men 2.36 a year ago, 2.26 this year. For women .92 and .98. A relatively small number of students were reported below in four subjects.

"From these figures it is evident that while there is an increase in the number of students reported in one subject, the average percentages of those reported in two, three and four subjects are practically the same as a year ago," said President George E. Vincent. "There is, therefore, no perceptible change from the situation of a year ago so far as failing to maintain work at a passing mark is concerned."

SHOOTS WIDOW; KILLS SELF

Farm Laborer Murders Restaurant Proprietoress at Atwater—No Motive Is Known.

Atwater.—Gus Palm shot Mrs. Elizabeth Bennett, a widow, twice and then went outside and shot himself through the head. Palm died instantly and Mrs. Bennett died half an hour later. He used a 44-caliber revolver.

No motive can be learned for the tragedy.

Mrs. Bennett formerly lived in Hutchinson and had been running a restaurant here since last spring and was highly respected. Palm came into Mrs. Bennett's kitchen and she ordered him out and as she turned away he shot her from behind. Palm's only relative known of is a son in Sweden. His wife is dead. He was 44 years old. He worked for a farmer two miles south of Atwater during the summer and the last month at a hotel in Atwater.

Frazee Saloons Close.

Frazee.—The four saloons here closed their doors for good, in compliance with the government order received last week. Nearly all stock was sold, for many laid in a supply against the coming "drouth." The closing was orderly and taken good naturedly by most of the people. The saloonkeepers have made no plans, but probably their places will be converted into soft drink parlors or billiard rooms pending action of congress on the treaty.

Almost Asphyxiated by Fumes.

Fergus Falls.—While Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Elliott and their little son were in their garage to start their automobile the child, 3 years old, fell unconscious from the effects of the auto exhaust fumes. His parents also were made ill, but escaped to the open air in time to save the lives of all three.

Socialists Outline Campaign.

Owatonna.—Members of the public ownership party held a district conference here, every county in the first congressional district being represented and about 75 delegates being present. Plans for an aggressive campaign to be waged the next two years in this section were discussed and it was unanimously decided that at the next general election a full ticket should be placed in the field. The conference was [illegible] and was kept [illegible] order.

WILL ESTABLISH FARM LABOR CLEARING HOUSE

New Employment Bureau Will Be Under the Auspices of Federal Government.

St. Paul.—The establishment in St. Paul of a clearing house for farm labor to which both demands of farmers for help and applications for employment on the farm will come has been planned by the commission on industrial relations in session at Kansas City.

The new employment bureau will be under the auspices of the Federal government and will co-operate with the United States Departments of Agriculture and Labor.

Don D. Lescohier, statistician for the State Bureau of Labor and Industries, who attended the session of the commission last week, said that such a clearing house worked on the same principles made use of by the banks is much needed in the Northwest to regulate the sending of farm hands from one state to another in search of work.

"It often happens," said Mr. Lescohier, "that demands for farm help are made to one employment office in the city unable to supply the demand while another office, perhaps next door, has many applications for work and cannot direct the applicants. The state bureau will co-operate with such a clearing house."

THROWS DYNAMITE INTO FIRE

Duluth Woman Mistakes Package of Explosives for Empty Box—Injuries Are Fatal.

Duluth.—Mistaking a package of dynamite caps for an empty box, Mrs. I. E. Bjork, wife of a prominent Ashland, Wis., merchant, threw it into the furnace. In the explosion that followed she received injuries which may prove fatal.

The force of the explosion shattered all the windows in the basement, and hurled the woman several feet. Later it was found that her left arm had practically been severed from the body and pieces of the iron furnace had become embedded in the flesh in a number of places.

DROWNS WHILE OUT SKATING

Harry Norton of Walker Was Going Over Lake to See His Parents.

Walker.—Harry Norton of Walker was drowned in Portage lake, five miles south of this place, while skating over the lake to see his parents who reside on a farm near Cyphers. On his failure to appear at home, a search was made and his cap was picked up on the ice, but no trace of the body could be found. He was about 25 and was the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Norton. He was in the railway mail service.

Christmas Joy for Everyone.

Red Wing.—A plan is on foot whereby every person in Red Wing will be able to participate in the joys of the Christmas season. All the poor and needy in the city will be taken care of by the generous people of Red Wing if the present plan of charity work is carried out. A meeting will probably be called some time at which an organization will be perfected for bringing sunshine to the needy people of Red Wing. Baskets of food will be distributed on Christmas day.

County Out of Wolf Belt.

Minneapolis.—Hennepin county was officially taken off the list of frontier counties. State Auditor S. G. Iverson sent more than $4,000 to Minnesota counties to pay bounties on wolves that have been killed in the last four months. For the first time on record, Hennepin county was not on the bounty list. Lake county leads with a total of $1,200.

Dreams He Lost Million Dollars.

Minneapolis.—Dreaming that somebody had thrown $1,000,000 out of his hotel window and that a crowd was making a rush for it, Walter Sanders, lodger at the municipal lodging house, rushed to the window in his sleep and leaped to the ground from the second story. He landed on his face, breaking both wrists and his nose.

For Better Roads.

Red Wing.—J. M. Davis of the Minnesota Good Roads Federation, St. Paul, addressed a gathering of business men at the Commercial club on the good roads movement, as promoted by the Minnesota federation, the object being to perfect a local organization for the improvement of highways in this community.

Stolen Car Found In Nashville.

Minneapolis, Dec. 9.—A stolen automobile that was taken from Minneapolis to Nashville, Tenn., has been recovered and its driver arrested, according to a long distance telephone message to the police. The machine was used by the Northwestern Automobile company as a demonstrator until it was stolen on Fourth street Nov. 15. Fred Coleman was suspected. Circulars were scattered and an inquisitive policeman spotted the car in Nashville.

The Major's Christmas

By Martha Pattie

THE major felt a vague sense of personal grievance. It was Christmas morning. Everything was most agreeable at the hotel. As he had distributed his customary gold pieces to the "bells," the telephone girls, the check-room boys, his waiter and the head waiter, and the chambermaid on his floor; he felt oddly disturbed.

"Carter, my boy," he told the tall, gray-haired image in the mirror, "You're getting sentimental. You're thoroughly disappointed because there isn't a soul in the world who can call out a 'Merry Christmas' to you, and mean it from the bottom of his heart. You're like a boy with nothing in his stocking. I'm ashamed of you, sir; I am indeed."

Yet that didn't help matters. He wandered around the deserted hotel corridors in the morning feeling utterly lost. Nearly every one seemed to be going out to dinner to some place where he was urgently desired. Four times he strolled over to the desk and looked casually up at his box, but there were no mail and no presents for Maj. Robert Lee Carter.

The last time he had really decided to give up and ring up some business associate to take dinner with him at the hotel. But he saw a letter in his box, and the clerk handed him a curiously shaped parcel, rather bulky and oval. He took it up to his own rooms, and opened it with a funny little thrill of anticipation.

By George, he was wrong. There was somebody, he didn't know who it was, but there was somebody who had remembered him. The last wrapper fell off, and he stood staring down at a little homemade willow basket, filled with mistletoe. A card on top read, "Love and Merry Christmas from Pam."

Pam? He remembered no Pam. He opened the letter for enlightenment, and as he read, his heavy gray eyebrows drew closer together, and every now and then he ejaculated, "God bless my heart and soul!"

"You won't remember me at all, but I'm Pamela Grayson, and my mother was your sister's daughter, so I'm your grandniece, see? Mother died about a year ago, just after we came north, and I have been here alone ever since. I didn't even know you were alive until cousin Florrie, of Carter's Landing, down home, wrote and told me to share this mistletoe with you, for she had gathered it in the old oak grove where you used to go when you were a little boy. Here's wishing you a merry, merry Christmas, and I wish I knew you, because it does certainly get fearfully lonesome here in New York holiday time when you haven't any one of your very own."

The telephone bell rang sharply just as the major was about to say "God bless my heart and soul" once again. But he lifted the receiver, and smiled at the voice that answered his hail.

"Delighted, Ralph, delighted, my boy, but you see, I am going to have a young lady guest here to dinner with me, my grandniece, sir, from Virginia. Now, instead of my joining you in your bachelor apartments, supposing you join us, and try and compensate to her for having a surely old chap for a dinner partner. Name's Miss Pamela Grayson. Come right down."

Then he smiled, and kept on smiling in the oddest, happiest way. And he leaned back in his deep leather chair, and lit a cigar, and watched the smoke rings form overhead, and smiled up at them. He had four sisters. Pam's grandmother had been the youngest. And now somehow, they were all gone, as he thought, "the way of the roses," and he was alone. He had rather lost track of all the nieces and nephews and grandnieces and grandnephews. Sentiment does not thrive in the New York atmosphere, yet as he looked at the letter, he felt an odd glow of pride, and he held the little basket of mistletoe out at arm's length, smiling retrospectively. Many a time he had gone up to the old oak grove to gather it for his mother to decorate the great hall at Christmas. And now this little Pam—

The major rose suddenly with quick intention. Five minutes later he was on his way up to the address in the letter. Upstairs two flights he climbed, and tapped at the low top door with its modest card:

"Pamela Grayson."

She stood at the easel with her back to him, a big blue apron on, and she was singing,

"Oh, holy town of Bethlehem,
How still we see thee lie.
Above thy deep and dreamless sleep
The silent stars go by."

The major stood at attention, but when she turned and caught sight of him, she gave a little cry of joy.

"Uncle Bob! How did you come so soon to me?"

Eh, but she was bonnie, thought the major approvingly; very much like her grandmother in her girlhood, soft brown bands of hair around her small head, and wistful, childish gray eyes. It took him about ten minutes to coax her into a "real" dress, as she said, and down into the waiting taxi.

And how fast she talked. There were years to catch up, she told him, and as long as there was only the two of them left in New York to uphold the pride of the Carters—

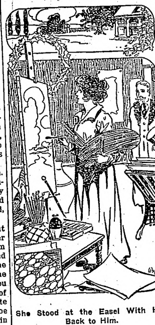
"There's one more, child," warned the major. "But he is very distantly connected, very. He is about your nineteenth cousin, but he is to dine with us, Ralph Carter."

Pam sat very still, and did not speak, looking straight ahead of her.

"Ever hear of him?" asked the major.

"I just love his shadow," said Pam solemnly. "If it's the same one. I've tried and tried to paint pictures that would sell, and finally I coaxed an old dealer on the avenue to let one of my Virginia gardens stand in his window awhile. You know Aunt Annabelle's rose garden with the sun dial, and the old white coach house in the back? Well, it was snapped up by a Mr. Ralph Carter. And he wanted to know if I had more Virginia scenes. So I sent down the oak grove at sundown along in November, with a big orange harvest moon stealing over the edge of the hill, and he bought that. And now I'm painting the old flagged walk under the grape arbor, with it all sunshiny, and Mammy Martha Ann coming along from the outdoor kitchen with a big covered platter of fried chicken, and he's going to take that."

The major leaned back his head, laughing and shaking with pure enjoyment. Up on the Hudson, at Hastings, stood Ralph Carter's bachelor home, and he had made it almost a replica of the old one in Virginia.



She Stood at the Easel With Her Back to Him.

Successful in every way in New York, he had clung to the old southern traditions almost fiercely, this tall, lean, clear-eyed lawyer.

"And so he's been hanging your pictures all over his walls," exclaimed the major. "God bless my heart and soul, child. This is certainly a merry Christmas for us all."

Pam was rather grave, though, as they went through the splendid red and gold corridors of the great hotel. The dinner was to be very select and private up in the major's reception room and she wondered what this distant cousin would be like.

He was all she had wanted him to be. Even Pam could find no fault as she sat next to him at the round table. And oh, after years of lonely striving among strangers, how it made her cheeks glow and her heart beat to hear these two, the splendid old major and Ralph, vie with each other in their delightful courtesy and compliments.

"You don't know how good it is to find some one of your very own," she said, when the major had gone out after the dinner was over.

"Don't I?" said Ralph, smiling down at her. "I've put in about fourteen years up here, and only the major to give me a cousinly greeting now and then. I'm mighty glad to find another one, even if she is a nineteenth one. The major tells me he's going to take a house for you and himself."

"Why," Pam caught her breath quickly. "I didn't know that."

"So I will see a great deal of you, I hope."

He stopped and looked into her eyes. Someway they wavered under his gaze. The major's voice hailed them.

"God bless my heart and soul, boy, can't you see she's under the mistletoe. I hung it there on purpose."

Ralph stooped, and pressed a kiss on the warm, half-averted pink cheek, while the major drank their health.

"And to our next Christmas together, the little Pam, and you, my boy, and this old chap who'll never be lonely again."

"To next Christmas," pledged Ralph. "Will you kiss me then, Pam?"

But Pam's eyes only shone with happiness, and very demurely she answered the toast:

"To next Christmas!"

(Copyright, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

WHY pay money for fancy boxes when what you really want is high-grade cigarettes?

FATIMA; the Turkish-blend cigarette. "No Gold Tips, but finest quality"—20 for 15c.

"Distinctively Individual"

If you cannot secure Fatima Cigarettes from your dealer, we will be pleased to send you three packages postpaid on receipt of 50c. Address Fatima Dept., 212 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y.

Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

20 for 15¢
FATIMA
TURKISH BLEND CIGARETTES
Cameron & Cameron Co.
NO GOLD TIPS
FINEST QUALITY

2,000% Profit in Few Days

Second well in Alberta field brought in black, crude oil in paying quantities. Stock shot up 2,000%. Beaver drilling site on adjoining section, also drilling in Sweetgrass field. Send us $2. We will send you certificate of 8 shares in Beaver Oils Limited. Buy before price raises. Remit by cash, P.O. or express order. Member of Calgary Exchange and Alberta Oil Men's Ass'n. References, Royal Bank of Canada. Buy now.

John T. Cox, 515 McLean Blk., Calgary, Can.

Highest Cash Prices Paid For CHICKENS, VEAL, CREAM

WRITE FOR SPECIAL PRICE LIST.

THE R. E. COBB CO., 14, 3rd Street, St. Paul, Minn.

Told at the Card Club.

"A little girl sitting next to me in church was coughing," said Mrs. Jones at the card club. "So I whispered to her mother for permission to slip her a cough drop. The child held it in her mouth a moment and then swallowed it."

"'Would you kindly give her another?' the mother whispered.

"'I'm sorry, but I had only the one.' I answered.

"Coming out of church I felt in my pocket and was horrified to fish out the cough drop. You see, I had had a cough drop and a button in my pocket."

"And what did you do?" chorused the women at the table. "Did you tell her mother?"

"No, I didn't. I was mad. It was a very unusual button from my new suit."

Seizing the Advantage.

"What are you boys making such a racket down there for?"

"Why, we're two big nations gone to war."

"But what are you both pummeling poor little Freddy for?"

"Oh, he's a neutral so he can't fight."

The loud smack is not always the sweetest kiss.

Some men succeed by taking chances with the other fellow's wad.

MESMERIZED

A Poisonous Drug Still Freely Used.

Many people are brought up to believe that coffee is a necessity of life, and the strong hold that the drug, caffeine, in coffee has on the system makes it hard to loosen its grip even when one realizes its injurious effects.

A lady writes: "I had used coffee for years; it seemed one of the necessities of life. A few months ago my health, which had been slowly failing, became more impaired, and I knew that unless relief came from some source I would soon be a physical wreck.

"I was weak and nervous, had sick headaches, no ambition, and felt tired of life. My husband was also losing his health. He was troubled so much with indigestion that at times he could eat only a few mouthfuls.

"Finally we saw Postum advertised and bought a package. I followed directions for making carefully, and added cream, which turned it to the loveliest rich-looking and tasting drink I ever saw served at any table, and we have used Postum ever since.

"I gained five pounds in weight in as many weeks, and now feel well and strong in every respect. My headaches have gone, and I am a new woman. My husband's indigestion has left him, and he can now eat anything."

Name given by Postum Co. Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

The cost per cup of both kinds is about the same.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

—sold by Grocers.

MANITOBA'S AGRICULTURAL INDUSTRY

REMARKABLE DEVELOPMENT IN THAT PROVINCE DURING THE PAST FEW YEARS.

The past year has shown that the Province of Manitoba, the Premier Province of Western Canada, stands out prominently in point of wealth in her agricultural productions. Manitoba had an excellent yield of wheat in 1914, the oat crop was not so good, and with the high price received, every farmer was placed in a good financial position.

For some years, as is probably the case in all new countries, Manitoba went largely into the growing of grain, and while this paid well for a time, it was found that having to purchase his meat, his milk and a number of other daily requisites, the farm did not pay as it should. Now, there is another side to it. Fodder crops are grown, cattle are being raised cheese factories and creameries are established, and the result is that the financial position of the farmers of Manitoba is as strong as that of those in any other portion of the continent Scarcely a farmer today but has realized that the growing of grains alone has a precarious side, and that positive security can only be assured by diversified farming, and securing the latest modern and most economic methods. Therefore timothy, clover, alfalfa, rye grass and fodder corn are universally grown. Most wonderful success meets the efforts of the farmers in the cultivation of these grasses, and the yields compare favorably with those of many older countries, while in many cases they exceed them.

It is worth while recording the acreage of these crops this season as compared with last, because the figures reflect the remarkable progress that is being made in dairying and in the beef and pork industry. In 1913 brome grass was sown on 24,912 acres, rye grass on 21,917 acres, timothy on 118,712 acres, clover on 5,328 acres, alfalfa on 4,709 acres and fodder corn on 20,223 acres. In 1914 the respective acreage under those crops were 25,444 acres, 27,100 acres, 165,990 acres, 7,212 acres, and 10,250 acres and 30,430 acres. Alfalfa particularly is coming into its own, the acreage having been more than doubled last year.

It is simply the natural process of evolution from the purely grain farming which Manitoba knew as the only method twenty years ago to the more diversified forms of agriculture that is responsible for the development along these other lines in this Province. Alberta is coming to it at an earlier stage than did Manitoba. Saskatchewan, too, is following rapidly in the same direction.

Then, as her fodder crop and root crop acreage indicate, there have been increases in the holdings of all kinds of live stock during the past twelve months, according to the correspondent for the Toronto Globe. Beef cattle number 42,000 head this year, as against 37,000 last year; milch cows are 160,474 head, as against 157,963 head; pigs number 325,000 as against 248,000; sheep number 75,000, as against 52,000; and there are 325,000 horses, as compared with 300,000 at this time last year. These are the latest Provincial figures, and they show that despite the great efflux of live stock to the United States since the opening of that market to Canada, the capital amount of live animals has increased instead of having decreased through the extra demand.

Dairying the Principal Industry.

Dairying is the industry, however, which is making dollars for the Manitoba farmer. It is developing at a rapid rate in this Province for that particular reason. The output of creamery butter last year was 4,000,000 pounds, at an average price of 27.5 cents per pound, which was an increase over the previous year of a million pounds. The output of dairy butter was recorded last year at 4,288,276 pounds. The Government department says that again this year a substantial increase in the dairy output will be shown from this Province. From this same source of information one finds that through the splendid growth in winter dairying, Winnipeg now, for the first time in years, is able to obtain a sufficient supply of milk and sweet cream from its city dairies to satisfy its demand throughout the year without having to import large quantities of these products from the United States as was done not longer than two years ago.—Advertisement.

A Comparison.

"There goes the Widow Blym. She's been married three times and she's still as pretty as a picture."

"That shows the superiority of a woman over an automobile."

"In what respect?"

"After a car has changed hands two or three times it's a sight to behold."

A Misanthropic Reader.

"I don't believe more than half of what I see in print," said the incredulous man.

"Trying to be on the safe side."

"Yes. And even at that I generally pick the wrong half."

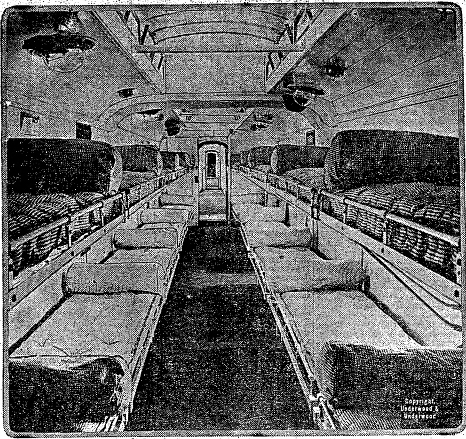
"Watchful Waiting."

"What are we to do for fashions, if the war in France continues?"

"Wear as little as we can and wait."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Don't worry—unless you can draw a salary for so doing.

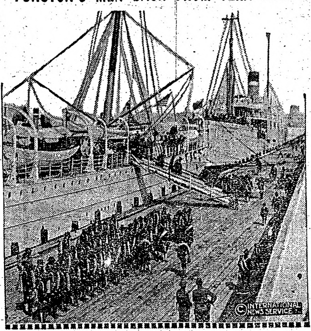
BRITISH MILITARY AMBULANCE TRAIN



Copyright, Underwood & Underwood

This photograph conveys an excellent idea of the appearance of a British military ambulance train. In its spotless interior the wounded are conveyed from the battle lines to the base hospitals. Every aid known to modern science and surgery is called on while the men are being borne in this train to the hospitals.

FUNSTON'S MEN BACK FROM VERA CRUZ



© INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE

The transports Kilpatrick and Sumner, from which the American troops which occupied Vera Cruz are disembarking at Galveston.

INDIAN TROOPS WEIGHING RATIONS

© INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE

One of the great problems of the allied armies is the feeding of the troops from India. Several of them are here shown in a camp near Ypres weighing out their rations.

Present-Day Caesars.

Since the days of that vigorous and successful man of war Julius Caesar, who did at last succeed in overcoming some parts of Britain (B. C. 55), after conquering Europe and the rest of the world, the Roman emperors took upon themselves the name Caesar, which became a title. After the destruction of the Roman empire which had become Byzantine by the removal of its capital from Rome to the new city of the first Christian emperor or caesar, called after himself Constantinople, several monarchies which arose upon its ruins claimed to represent the authority of the caesar, and called their monarchs by that title. Those surviving today are the czar of Russia, the czar of Bulgaria, the kaiser of Austria-Hungary and the German kaiser or emperor. Both czar and kaiser are lingual equivalents for the word caesar, and represent a claim to more than imperial monarchy. Though as Shakespeare put it:

Imperial Caesar dead and turned to clay
Might stop a hole to keep the wind away!

Tommy and the French Tobacco.

The only grievance against the French which Tommy has is their tobacco. There are no "Woodbines," that fag beloved above all others by the British army, to be had in France, and as for French tobacco, although it is smoked, it is not the same thing. "I never could like it; it is too much like kissing one's own sister, no taste to it."—Alfred Stead, in the New York Independent.

PRINCE ABDUL MOUNEM

Little Prince Abdul Mounem is the eldest son of Abbas II whom the British have deposed from his position as khedive of Egypt because he joined forces with the Turks.

LOCATING A "SNIPER"

German "snipers" have harassed the forces of the allies to such an extent that details of men have been assigned to the task of locating and "potting" the snipers. The photograph shows one of these details of British fighters searching a beet field where one of the "snipers," dressed in khaki to make it more difficult to find him, is known to be hidden. The men are standing in trenches as a protectory measure against shots from the sniper's gun.

A Caretaker.

"This plant belongs to the begonia family."

"Ah! And you are taking care of it while they are away."—Boston Times.

LITTLE CHANGE IN MANKIND

Scientists of Opinion That Dispersion and Separation of Races Was Not Rapid Process.

Thought it is conceivable that mankind may have spread from a common center over the entire earth in a few thousand years, Prof. Arthur Keith, in a Birmingham university lecture, has pointed out that the discoveries of the last 50 years clearly indicate that the dispersion and separation into widely separated races has not been a rapid process.

The inhabitants of the lower Nile valley, though immigrants have arrived among them, show clearly persistence of the old types for 8,000 years. The permanence of human types has been also shown in America, and a human skeleton of Yansing, Kan., found at a depth of 23 feet in a glacial deposit, probably dates back 12,000 years.

The men of England of 5,000 years ago had the modern stature, with the form of head and strength of muscle of many men of today. Professor Keith declared that his audiences had representatives of the men of the Derbyshire cave, in America the red Indian preserves the form of men who lived before the last glacial invasion, and the predynastic Egyptian survives in tribes on the Red sea.

Geometrical Staircase.

What is believed to be the first geometrical staircase ever built of concrete forms a part of the "Caracol" tower in a museum building that has just been completed in Los Angeles. The building with its tower is in the quaint ancient Spanish style of architecture and is constructed entirely of poured concrete. The tower is 125 feet high. In the center is the geometrical stairway, consisting of 160 steps, circling around an open space only 24 inches in diameter and mounting to a height of 120 feet. Unlike most geometrical staircases, including the one in St. Paul's cathedral in London, this staircase occupies only a small part of the tower, space being left for rooms of fairly large size on each of the seven floors.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

For Itching, Burning Skins.

Bathe freely the affected surface with Cuticura Soap and hot water. Dry without irritation and apply Cuticura Ointment with finger or hand. This treatment affords immediate relief, permits rest and sleep and points to speedy healment in most cases of eczemas, rashes, itchings and irritations of the skin and scalp of infants, children and adults. Free sample each with 32-p. Skin Book if you wish. Address post-card: Cuticura, Dept. X, Boston. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

Circumstantial.

Patrice denied that Young Wasserby kissed her in the conservatory, but the evidence is against her."

"How so?"

"There was a large hole in her complexion on the left side of her face."

Her Talent.

"Eve was something of a prestidigitator."

"How so?"

"When she handed Adam the apple she turned it into a lemon for the race."

YOUR OWN DRUGGIST WILL TELL YOU Try Murine Eye Remedy for Red, Weak, Watery Eyes and Granulated Eyelids; No Smarting—Just Eye comfort. Write for Book of the Eye by mail Free. Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago.

The fellow who is good at making excuses is not always so ready at taking them.

Occasionally it is cheaper to move than to try to live it down.

On the Trail of Friend Husband.

Mrs. Fury—Has yo' seed anything o' muh husband, Brudder Lopp?

The Night Owl—W'y, howdy, Sistah Fury; howdy! Nome, I isn't seed him since 'long 'bout ten o'clock. But what brings yo' downtown at dis time o' night?

Mrs. Fury—Lookin' for dat man o' mine. And I hopes to de Lawd nuth'n' happens to him befo' I finds him, uh-kaze I's gwine to bust his head wid dis club when I kotches him!—Kansas City Star.

Not the Place.

"Why don't you write to this paper for what you want to know? The editor says his column gives a few wrinkles on every matter."

"Not for mine. I want to know how to keep my complexion youthful."

How It Happened.

"How did the cashier of your bank get into jail?"

"Left the 's' off speculation."

A Suggestion.

Belle—Mamie is such a sensible girl, but she can't attract the men.

Nell—That's the reason.

It takes an experienced summer girl to twist any old thing a man says into a proposal.

Are Your Kidneys Weak?

Do you know that deaths from kidney troubles are 100,000 a year in the U. S. alone? That deaths from kidney diseases have increased 72% in 20 years? If you are run down, losing weight, nervous, "blue" and rheumatic, if you have backache, sharp pains when stooping, dizzy spells and urinary disorders, act quickly, if you would avoid the serious kidney troubles. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. There's no other medicine so widely used, so successful or so highly recommended.

A Minnesota Case

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

George Hayes, Wabasha, Minn., says: "Riding over rough roads weakened my kidneys and I was in bad shape. During one attack I had to be carried into the house. I was in such agonizing pain that morphine was my only relief. My back was badly affected and the kidney secretions were often retarded. Doan's Kidney Pills helped me as soon as I used them and saved me from a great deal of suffering. Though I am now seventy-nine years old I have been in much better health since using Doan's Kidney Pills."

Get Doan's at Any Store, 50c a Box

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

FOSTER-MILBURN CO., BUFFALO, N. Y.

Make the Liver Do its Duty

Nine times in ten when the liver is right the stomach and bowels are right.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS gently but firmly compel a lazy liver to do its duty.

Cures Constipation, Indigestion, Sick Headache, and Distress After Eating.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature

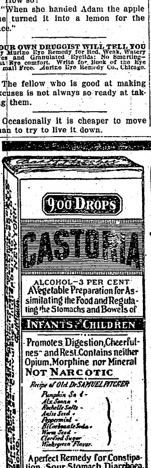
Brent Good

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM

A toilet preparation of merit. Helps to eradicate dandruff. For Restoring Color and Beauty to Gray or Faded Hair. 50c. and $1.00 at Druggists.

WANTED to hear from owner of good farm for sale. Send description and price. Northwestern Business Agency, Dept. 4, Minneapolis, Minn.

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 51–1914.



900 DROPS

CASTORIA

ALCOHOL—3 PER CENT

A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of

INFANTS & CHILDREN

Promotes Digestion, Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral

NOT NARCOTIC

Recipe of Old Dr SAMUEL PITCHER

Pumpkin Seed
Alx. Senna
Rochelle Salts
Anise Seed
Peppermint
Bi Carbonate Soda
Warm Seed
Clarified Sugar
Wintergreen Flavor.

A perfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP.

Fac Simile Signature of

Chas. H. Fletcher.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK.

At 6 months old

35 DOSES—35 CENTS

Guaranteed under the Foodan

Exact Copy of Wrapper

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of

Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over Thirty Years

CASTORIA

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

Catching Up With Christmas

A Business Adventure of Emma McChesney

By EDNA FERBER

Author of "Dawn O'Hara," "Buttered Side Down," etc.

Copyright by Frederick A. Stokes Company

Six months of bad luck had dogged the footsteps of Mrs. Emma McChesney, traveling saleswoman for the T. A. Buck Featherloom Petticoat company, New York. It had started with a six-weeks' illness endured in the discomfort of a stuffy little hotel bedroom at Glen Rock, Minn. By August she was back in New York, attending to out-of-town buyers.

Those friendly middle western persons showed dismay at her pale, hollow-eyed appearance. They spoke to her of olive oil taken thrice a day, of mountain air, of cold baths, and, above all, of the advisability of leaving the road and taking an inside position. At that Emma McChesney always showed signs of unmistakable irritation.

In September her son, Jock McChesney, just turned eighteen, went blithely off to college, disguised as a millionaire's son in a blue Norfolk, silk hose, flat-heeled shoes, correctly mounted walrus bag, and next-week's style in fall hats. As the train glided out of the great shed Emma McChesney had waved her handkerchief, smiling like fury and seeing nothing but an indistinct blur as the observation platform slipped around the curve.

In October it was plain that spring skirts, instead of being full as predicted, were as scant and plaitless as ever. That spelled gloom for the petticoat business. It was necessary to sell three of the present absurd style to make the profit that had come from the sale of one skirt five years before.

The last week in November, tragedy stalked upon the scene in the death at Marienbad of old T. A. Buck, Mrs. McChesney's stanch friend and beloved employer.

They had understood each other, those two, from the time that Emma McChesney, divorced, penniless, refusing support from the man she had married eight years before, had found work in the office of the T. A. Buck Featherloom Petticoat company.

Old Buck had watched her rise from stenographer to head stenographer, from head stenographer to inside saleswoman, from that to a minor road territory, and finally to the position of traveling representative through the coveted middle western territory.

Old T. A. Buck, gruff, grim, direct, far-seeing, kindly, shrewd—he had known Emma McChesney for what she was worth. Once, when she had been disclosing to him a clever business scheme which might be turned into good advertising material, old Buck had slapped his knee with one broad, thick palm and had said:

"Emma McChesney, you ought to have been a man. With that head on a man's shoulders you could put us out of business."

"I could do it anyway," Mrs. McChesney had retorted.

Old Buck had regarded her a moment over his tortoise-shell rimmed glasses. Then, "I believe you could," he had said, quietly and thoughtfully.

That brings her up to December. To some few millions of people D-e-c-e-m-b-e-r spells Christmas. But to Emma McChesney it spelled the dreaded spring trip. It spelled trains stalled in snowdrifts, baggage delayed, cold hotel bedrooms, harassed, irritable buyers.

It was just six o'clock on the evening of December 9th when Mrs. Emma McChesney swung off the train at Columbus, O., five hours late.

Columbus, Ohio, was a Featherloom town. Emma McChesney had a fondness for it, with its half rustic, half metropolitan air. Sometimes she likened it to a country girl in a velvet gown, and sometimes to a city girl in white muslin and blue sash. Singer & French always had a Featherloom window twice a year.

The hotel lobby wore a strangely deserted look. December is a slack month for actors and traveling men. Mrs. McChesney registered automatically, received her mail, exchanged greetings with the affable clerk.

"Send my trunks up to my sample-room as soon as they get in. Three of 'em—two sample-trunks and my personal trunk. And I want to see a porter about putting up some extra tables. You see, I'm two days late now. I expect two buyers tomorrow morning."

"Send 'em right up, Mrs. McChesney," the clerk assured her. "Jo'll attend to those tables. Too bad about old Buck. How's the skirt business?"

"Skirts? There is no such thing," corrected Emma McChesney, gently. "Sausage-casings business, you mean."

"Guess you're right, at that. By the way, how's that handsome youngster of yours? He's not traveling with you this trip?"

There came a wonderful glow into Emma McChesney's tired face.

"Jock's at college. Coming home for the holidays. We're going to have a dizzy week in New York. I'm wild to see if those three months of college have done anything to him, bless his heart! Oh, kind sir, forgive a mother's fond ravings! Where'd that youngster go with my bag?"

Up at last in the stuffy, unfriendly, steam-smelling hotel bedroom, Emma McChesney prepared to make herself comfortable.

She was glancing through her mail. Two from the firm—one from Mary Cutting—one from the Sure White laundry at Dayton (hope they found that corset cover)—one from—why, from Jock! From Jock! And he'd written only two days before. Well!

Sitting there on the edge of the bed she regarded the dear scrawl lovingly, savoring it, as is the way of a woman. Then she took a hairpin from the knot of bright hair (also as is the way of woman) and slit the envelope with a quick, sure rip. M-m-m—it wasn't much as to length. Just a scrawled page. Emma McChesney's eye plunged into it hungrily, a smile of anticipation dimpling her lips, lighting up her face. "Dearest Blonde," it began.

"The nerve of the young imp!!"

He hoped the letter would reach her in time. Knew how this weather mussed up her schedule. He wanted her honest opinion about something—straight, now! One of the frat fellows was giving a Christmas house party. Awful swells, by the way. He was lucky even to be asked. He'd never remembered a real Christmas—in a home, you know, with a tree, and skating, and regular high jinks, and a dinner that left you feeling like a stuffed gooseberry. Old Wells says his grandmother wears lace caps with lavender ribbons. Can you beat it! Of course he felt like a hog, even thinking of wanting to stay away from her at Christmas. Still, Christmas in a New York hotel—! But the fellows had nagged him to write. Said they'd do it if he didn't. Of course he hated to think of her spending Christmas alone—felt like a bloody villain—

Little by little the smile that had wreathed her lips faded and was gone.

She sat there, at the edge of the bed, staring dully until the black scrawls danced on the white page. With the letter before her she raised her hand slowly and wiped away a hot, blinding mist of tears with her open palm. Then she read it again, dully, as though every selfish word of it had not already stamped itself on her brain and heart.

After the second reading she still sat there, her eyes staring down at her lap.

A tentative knock at the door. The figure on the bed did not stir. Another knock, louder this time. Emma McChesney sat up with a start. She shivered as she became conscious of the icy December air pouring into the little room. She rose, walked to the window, closed it with a bang, and opened the door in time to intercept the third knock.

A waiter proffered her a long card. "Dinner, madame?"

"Oh!" She shook her head. "Sorry. I've changed my mind. I—I shan't want any dinner."

She shut the door again and stood with her back against it, eying the bed. In her mind's eye she had already thrown herself upon it, buried her face in the nest of pillows, and given vent to the flood of tears that was beating at her throat. She took a quick step toward the bed, stopped, turned abruptly, and walked toward the mirror.

"Emma McChesney," she said aloud to the woman in the glass, "buck up, old girl! Bad luck comes in bunches of threes. It's like breaking the first cup in a new Haviland set. You can always count on smashing two more. This is your third. So pick up the pieces and throw 'em in the ash-can."

Then she fastened her collar, buttoned her shoe, pulled down her shirtwaist all around, smeared her face with cold cream, wiped it with a towel, smoothed her hair, donned her hat. The next instant the little room was dark, and Emma McChesney was marching down the long, red-carpeted hallway to the elevator, her head high, her face set.

Down-stairs in the lobby—"How about my trunks?" she inquired of a porter.

That blue-shirted individual rubbed a hard brown hand over his cheek worriedly.

"They ain't come."

"Ain't come!"—surprise disregarded grammar.

"Nope. No signs of 'em. I'll tell you what: I think prob'ly they was overlooked in the rush, the train being late from Dayton when you started. Likely they'll be in on the ten-thirteen. I'll send 'em up the minute they get in."

"I wish you would. I've got to get my stuff out early. I can't keep customers waiting for me. Late, as it is."

She approached the clerk once more. "Anything at the theaters?"

"Well, nothing much, Mrs. McChesney. Christmas coming on kind of puts a crimp in the show business. Nice little bill on at the Majestic, if you like vaudeville."

"Crazy about it. Always get so excited watching to see if the next act is going to be as rotten as the last one. It always is."

The night air was grateful to her hot forehead as late that evening she walked from the theater to the hotel.

"Trunks in?" to the porter.

"No sign of 'em, lady. They didn't come in on the ten. Think they'd better wire back to Dayton."

But the next morning Mrs. McChesney was in the depot baggage room when Dayton wired back:

"Trunks not here. Try Columbus, Nebraska."

"Crash!" said Emma McChesney to the surprised baggage-master. "There goes my Haviland vegetable-dish."

"Were you selling china?" he inquired.

"No, I wasn't," replied Emma McChesney viciously. "And if you don't let me stand here and give my frank, unbiased opinion of this road, its president, board of directors, stockholders, baggage-men, Pullman porters and other things thereto appertaining, I'll probably have hysterics."

"Give it," said the baggage-master. "You'll feel better. And we're used to it."

She gave it. When she had finished:

"Did you say you was selling goods on the road? Say, that's a hell of a job for a woman! Excuse me, lady. I didn't mean—"

"I think perhaps you're right," said Emma McChesney slowly. "It is just that."

"Well, anyway, we'll do our best to trace it. Guess you're in for a wait."

Emma McChesney waited. She made the rounds of her customers, and waited. She wired her firm, and waited. She wrote Jock to run along and enjoy himself, and waited. She cut and fitted a shirtwaist, took her hat apart and retrimmed it, made the rounds of her impatient customers again, threatened to sue the road, visited the baggage room daily—and waited.

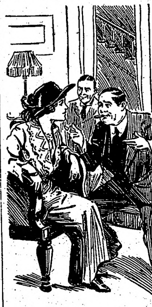
Four weary, nerve-racking days passed. It was late afternoon of the fourth day when Mrs. McChesney entered the elevator to go to her room. She had come from another fruitless visit to the baggage room. She sank into a leather-cushioned seat in a corner of the lift. Two men entered briskly, followed by a bellboy. Mrs. McChesney did not look up.

"Well, I'll be dinged!" boomed a throaty voice. "Mrs. McChesney, by the Great Horn Spoon! H'are you? Talking about you this minute to my friend here."

Emma McChesney, with the knowledge of her lost sample trunks striking her afresh, looked up and smiled bravely into the plump pink face of fat Ed Meyers, traveling representative for her firm's bitterest rival, the Strauss Sans-silk Skirt company.

"Talking about me, Mr. Meyers? Sufficient grounds for libel, right there."

The little sallow, dark man just at Meyers' elbow was gazing at her unguardedly. She felt that he had appraised her from hat to heels. Ed Meyers placed a plump hand on the little man's shoulder.



"Not That You Look Your Age—Not by Ten Years!"

"Abe, you tell the lady what I was saying. This is Mr. Abel Fromkin, maker of the Fromkin Form-Fit Skirt. Abe, this is the wonderful Mrs. McChesney."

"Sorry I can't wait to hear what you've said of me. This is my floor." Mrs. McChesney was already leaving the elevator.

"Here! Wait a minute!" Fat Ed Meyers was out and standing beside her, his movements unbelievably nimble. "Will you have dinner with us, Mr. McChesney?"

"Thanks. Not tonight."

Meyers turned to the waiting elevator. "Fromkin, you go on up with the boy; I'll talk to the lady a minute."

A little displeased frown appeared on Emma McChesney's face.

"You'll have to excuse me, Mr. Meyers, I—"

"Heigh-ho for that haughty stuff, Mrs. McChesney," grinned Ed Meyers. "Don't turn up your nose at that little Kike friend of mine till you've heard what I have to say. Now just let me talk a minute. Fromkin's heard all about you. He's got a proposition to make. And it isn't one to sniff at."

He lowered his voice mysteriously in the silence of the dim hotel corridor.

"Fromkin started in a little one-room hole-in-the-wall over on the East side. Lived on a herring and a hunk of rye bread. Wife used to help him sew. That was seven years ago. In three years, or less, she'll have the regulation uniform—full length seal coat, bunch of paradise, five-drop diamond La Valliere set in platinum, electric brougham. Abe has got a business head, take it from me. But he's wise enough to know that business isn't the rough-and-tumble game it used to be. He realizes that he'll do for the workrooms, but not for the front shop. He knows that if he wants to keep on growing he's got to have what they call a steerer. Somebody smooth, and polished, and politic, and what the highbrows call suave. Do you pronounce that with a long a, or two dots over? Anyway, you get me. You're all those things and considerable few besides. He's wise to the fact that a business man's got to have poise these days, and balance. And when it comes to poise and balance, Mrs. McChesney, you make a Fairbanks scale look like a raft at sea."

"While I don't want to seem to hurry you," drawled Mrs. McChesney, "might I suggest that you shorten the overture and begin on the first act?"

"Well, you know how I feel about your business genius."

"Yes, I know," enigmatically.

Ed Meyers grinned. "Can't forget those two little business misunderstandings we had, can you?"

"Business understandings," corrected Emma McChesney.

"Call 'em anything your little heart dictates, but listen. Fromkin knows all about you. Knows you've got a million friends in the trade, that you know just what his proposition is, but I'll bet he'll give you half interest in the livest, come-upest little skirt factory in the country, just for a few thousands capital, maybe, and your business head at the executive end. Now just let that sink in before you speak."

"And why," inquired Emma McChesney, "don't you grab this matchless business opportunity yourself?"

"Because, fair lady, Fromkin wouldn't let me get in with a crowbar. He'll never be able to pronounce his t's right, and when he's dressed up he looks like a 'bus boy at Mouquin's, but he can see a bluff farther than I can throw one—and that's somewhere beyond the horizon, as you'll admit. Talk it over with us after dinner then?"

Emma McChesney was regarding the plump, pink, eager face before her with keen, level, searching eyes.

"Yes," she said slowly, "I will."

"Cafe? We'll have a bottle—"

"No."

"Oh! Er—parlor?"

Mrs. McChesney smiled. "I won't ask you to make yourself that miserable. You can't smoke in the parlor. We'll find a quiet corner in the writing room, where you men can light up. I don't want to take advantage of you."

Down in the writing room at eight they formed a strange little group. Ed Meyers, flushed and eager, his pink face glowing like a peony, talking, arguing, smoking, reasoning, coaxing, with the spur of a fat commission to urge him on; Abel Fromkin, with his peculiarly pallid skin made paler in contrast to the purplish-black line where the razor had passed, showing no hint of excitement except in the restless little black eyes and in the work-scarred hands that rolled cigarette after cigarette, each glowing for one brief instant, only to die down to a blackened ash the next; Emma McChesney, half fascinated, half distrustful, listening in spite of herself, and trying to still a small inner voice—a voice that had never advised her ill.

"You know the ups and downs to this game," Ed Meyers was saying. "When I met you there in the elevator you looked like you'd lost your last customer. You get pretty disgusted with it all, at times, like the rest of us."

"At that minute," replied Emma McChesney, "I was so disgusted that if some one had called me up on the phone and said, 'Hullo, Mrs. McChesney! Will you marry me?' I'd have said: 'Yes. Who is this?'"

"There! That's just it. I don't want to be impolite, or anything like that, Mrs. McChesney, but you're no kid. Not that you look your age—not by ten years! But I happen to know you're teetering somewhere between thirty-six and the next top. Ain't that right?"

"Is that a argument to put to a lady?" remonstrated Abel Fromkin.

Fat Ed Meyers waved the interruption away with a gesture of his strangely slim hands.

"This ain't an argument. It's facts. Another ten years on the road, and where'll you be? In the discard. A man of forty-six can keep step with the youngsters, even if it does make him puff a bit. But a woman of forty-six—the road isn't the place for her. She's tired. Tired in the morning; tired at night. She wants her kimono and her afternoon snooze. You've seen some of those old girls on the road. They've come down step by step until you spot 'em, bleached hair, crow's feet around the eyes, mussy shirtwaist, yellow and red complexion, demonstrating green and lavender gelatin messes in the grocery of some department store. I don't say that a brainy corker of a saleswoman like you would come down like that. But you've got to consider sickness and a lot of other things. Those six weeks last summer with the fever at Glen Rock put a crimp in you, didn't it? You've never been yourself since then. Haven't had a decent chance to rest up."

"No," said Emma McChesney wearily.

"Furthermore, now that old T. A.'s cashed in, how do you know what young Buck's going to do? He don't know shucks about the skirt business. They've got to take in a third party to keep it a close corporation. It was all between old Buck, Buck junior, and old lady Buck. How can you tell whether the new member will want a woman on the road, or not?"

A little steely light hardened the blue of Mrs. McChesney's eyes.

"We'll leave the firm of T. A. Buck out of this discussion, please."

"Oh, very well!" Ed Meyers was unabashed. "Let's talk about Fromkin. He don't object, do you, Abe? It's just like this. He needs your smart head. You need his money. It'll mean a sure thing for you—a share in a growing and substantial business. When you get your road men trained it'll mean that you won't need to go out on the road yourself, except for a little missionary trip now and then, maybe. No more infernal early trains, no more bum hotel grub, no more stuffy, hot hotel rooms, no more haughty lady buyers—gosh, I wish I had the chance!"

Emma McChesney sat very still. Two scarlet spots glowed in her cheeks. "No one appreciates your gift of oratory more than I do, Mr. Meyers. Your flow of language, coupled with your peculiar persuasive powers, make a combination a statue couldn't resist. But I think it would sort of rest me if Mr. Fromkin were to say a word, seeing that it's really his funeral."

Abel Fromkin started nervously, and put his dead cigarette to his lips. "I ain't much of a talker," he said, almost sheepishly. "Meyers, he's got it down fine. I tell you what. I'll be in New York the 21st. We can go over the books and papers and the whole business. And I like you should know my wife. And I got a little girl— Would you believe it, that child ain't more as a year old, and says papa and mamma like a actress!"

"Sure," put in Ed Meyers, disregarding the more intimate family details. "You two get together and fix things up in shape; then you can sign up and have it off your mind so you can enjoy the festive Christmas season."

Emma McChesney had been gazing out of the window to where the street lamps were reflected in the ice-covered pavements. Now she spoke, still staring out upon the wintry street.

"Christmas isn't a season. It's a feeling. And I haven't got it."

"Oh, come now, Mrs. McChesney!" objected Ed Meyers.

With a sudden, quick movement Emma McChesney turned from the window to the little dark man who was watching her so intently. She faced him squarely, as though utterly disregarding Ed Meyers' flattery and banter and cajolery. The little man before her seemed to recognize the earnestness of the moment. He leaned forward a bit attentively.

"If what has been said is true," she began, "this ought to be a good thing for me. If I go into it, I'll go in heart, soul, brain, and pocketbook. I do know the skirt business from thread to tape and back again. I've managed to save a few thousand dollars. Only a woman could understand how I've done it. I've scrimped on little things. I've denied myself necessities. I've worn silk blouses instead of linen ones to save laundry bills and taken a street car or 'bus to save a quarter or fifty cents. I've always tried to look well dressed and immaculate—"

"You!" exclaimed Ed Meyers. "Why, say, you're what I call a swell dresser. Nothing flashy, understand, or loud, but the quiet, good stuff that spells ready money."

"M-m-m—yes. But it wasn't always so ready. Anyway, I always managed somehow. The boy's at college. Sometimes I wonder—well, that's another story. I've saved, and contrived, and planned ahead for a rainy day. There have been two or three times when I thought it had come. Sprinkled pretty heavily, once or twice. But I've just turned up my coatcollar, tucked my hat under my skirt, and scooted for a tree. And each time it has turned out to be just a summer shower, with the sun coming out bright and warm."

Her frank, clear, honest, blue eyes were plumbing the depths of the black ones. "Those few thousand dollars that you hold so lightly will mean everything to me. They've been my cyclone cellar. If—"

Through the writing room sounded a high-pitched, monotonous voice with a note of inquiry in it.

"Mrs. McChesney! Mr. Fraser! Mr. Ludwig! Please! Mrs. McChesney! Mr. Fraser! Mr. Lud—"

"Here, boy!" Mrs. McChesney took the little yellow envelope from the salver that the boy held out to her. Her quick glance rested on the written words. She rose, her face colorless.

"Not bad news?" The two men spoke simultaneously.

"I don't know," said Emma McChesney. "What would you say?"

She handed the slip of paper to Fat Ed Meyers. He read it in silence. Then once more, aloud:

"'Take first train back to New York. Spalding will finish your trip.'"

"Why—say—" began Meyers.

"Well?"

"Why—say—this—this looks as if you were fired!"

"Does, doesn't it?" She smiled.

"Then our little agreement goes?" The two men were on their feet, eager, alert. "That means you'll take Fromkin's offer?"

"It means that our little agreement is off. I'm sorry to disappoint you. I want to thank you both for your trouble. I must have been crazy to listen to you for a minute. I wouldn't have if I'd been myself."

"But that telegram—"

"It's signed, 'T. A. Buck.' I'll take a chance."

The two men stared after her, disappointment and bewilderment chasing across each face.

"Well, I thought I knew women, but—" began Ed Meyers fluently.

Passing the desk, Mrs. McChesney heard her name. She glanced toward the clerk. He was just hanging up the telephone receiver. "Baggage room says the depot just notified 'em your trunks were traced to Columbia City. They're on their way here now."

"Columbia City!" repeated Emma McChesney. "Do you know, I believe I've learned to hate the name of the discoverer of this fair land."

Up in her room she opened the crumpled telegram again, and regarded it thoughtfully before she began to pack her bag.

The thoughtful look was still there when she entered the big bright office of the T. A. Buck Featherloom Petticoat company. And with it was another expression that resembled contrition.

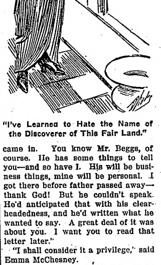
"Mr. Buck's waiting for you," a stenographer told her.

Mrs. McChesney opened the door of the office marked "Private."

Two men rose. One she recognized as the firm's lawyer. The other, who came swiftly toward her, was T. A. Buck—no longer junior. There was a new look about him—a look of responsibility, of efficiency, of clear-headed knowledge.

The two clasped hands—a firm, sincere, understanding grip.

Buck spoke first. "It's good to see you. We were talking of you as you came in. You know Mr. Beggs, of course. He has some things to tell you—and so have I. His will be business things, mine will be personal. I got there before father passed away—thank God! But he couldn't speak. He'd anticipated that with his clear-headedness, and he'd written what he wanted to say. A great deal of it was about you. I want you to read that letter later."



"I've Learned to Hate the Name of the Discoverer of This Fair Land."

"I shall consider it a privilege," said Emma McChesney.

Mr. Beggs waved her toward a chair. She took it in silence. She heard him in silence, his sonorous voice beating upon her brain.

"There are a great many papers and much business detail, but that will be attended to later," began Beggs ponderously. "You are to be congratulated on the position of esteem and trust which you held in the mind of your late employer. By the terms of his will—I'll put it briefly, for the moment—you are offered the secretaryship of the firm of T. A. Buck, incorporated. Also you are bequeathed 30 shares in the firm. Of course, the company will have to be reorganized. The late Mr. Buck had great trust in your capabilities."

Emma McChesney rose to her feet, her breath coming quickly. She turned to T. A. Buck. "I want you to know—I want you to know—that just before your telegram came I was half tempted to leave the firm. To—"

"Can't blame you," smiled T. A. Buck. "You've had a rotten six months of it, beginning with that illness and ending with those infernal trunks. The road's no place for a woman."

"Nonsense!" flashed Emma McChesney. "I've loved it. I've gloried in it. And I've earned my living by it. Giving it up—don't now think me ungrateful—won't be so easy, I can tell you."

T. A. Buck nodded understandingly. "I know. Father knew, too. And I don't want you to let his going from us make any difference in this holiday season. I want you to enjoy it and be happy."

A shade crossed Emma McChesney's face. It was there when the door opened and a boy entered with a telegram. He handed it to Mrs. McChesney. It held ten crisp words:

"Changed my darn fool mind. Me for home and mother."

Emma McChesney looked up, her face radiant.

"Christmas isn't a season, Mr. Buck. It's a feeling; and, thank God, I've got it!"

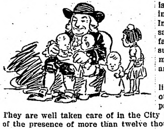
THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. XIV. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, DECEMBER 25, 1914. NO. 41.

HAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

Philadelphia Has a Great Family of Foundlings

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The city of Philadelphia is the official father and mother of thousands of children, according to Miss Ella F. Harris, children's agent of the department of public health and charities. The city has selected their names and religion and is trying to be the best parent that an impersonal city government can be. In addition to supervising the health, safety, entertainment and general welfare of its citizens, the city also assumes the parental obligations of the many nameless little strangers that are each year found within its limits.



The foundling, the orphan, the delinquent, and the child who for some other reason has been cut off from its parents are very numerous in the city. They are well taken care of in the City of Brotherly Love and but few know of the presence of more than twelve thousand children in nearly seventy-five institutions within the city limits. A social worker in touch with the facts has said that nearly $1,000,000 are spent annually in the care of the city's future citizens, who have been deprived of a home training.

Recently a policeman had occasion to bring a young colored boy to his station house. When asked his name by the house sergeant he gave the same name as the policeman. Investigation showed that this name, even to the initial, was all that he had ever had. It later developed that this same policeman had about seventeen years before picked up a small colored baby from an ash can and taken it to the Women's Homeopathic hospital. The hospital authorities had taken the officer's name for their record and had also given it to the baby who was the same that he picked up again over seventeen years afterward.

Many Chinese Farms Within the City of New York

NEW YORK.—One who from a skyscraper window looks across the East river to the Long island part of Greater New York commands a view of a patch of rural China thriving there, its farmers using ancient methods of tilling, mostly by means of the tools of Marco Polo's time, and cultivating the very vegetation immemorially cultivated along the Sikiang and the levels of Quangjung. Using their native intensive methods, these Cantonese farmers average in profits about $500 per man per season. When the growing season is over they come farther into the city, take jobs as cooks and waiters in chop-suey restaurants or as helpers in laundries, returning to the farm lands in the spring. They prosper and are healthy and peaceable. Doubtless they could do something with the cost of living problem if they took over more nearby farms and "truck" gardens. But the Chinese farmers raise no more than they and their New York countrymen consume. They are in competition with no one outside their own people. Mon Foon Jung, editor of the Chinese Daily News (Mon Jee Yat Bo), enumerates the vegetables grown, as follows:

Goy-choy—a green plant, boiled for eating.

Bak-choy—a white plant, boiled with rice.

Dungwa—a melon, not sweet, weighing from ten to twenty pounds, boiled for eating.

Tak-wa—a green, bitter squash, used in chop-suey.

Lunga-baktu—a sort of elongated cabbage or Chinese artichoke, used for soups.

Doog-wa—a bean with a pod one to two feet long.

Chinese cucumber—as large as a squash, used in chop-suey.

American corn—as fodder for the mules on the farms.

Also a few of the American vegetables for ingredients of the chop-suey made for Americans.

Chicago Has Produced a New Type of Irish Beauty

CHICAGO.—Chicago has evolved a new type of Irish beauty. It tumbles down all the old traditions of the Irish race and stands forth as the new ideal of Celtic pulchritude. Its sole exponent—at least as far as is known—is a girl of sixteen years—Miss Agnes Daley of 4236 St. Lawrence avenue. She is blonde instead of brunette, and short and slender instead of tall and stately.

Five judges selected her at the annual ball of the Irish Counties Social union as the most beautiful colleen in Chicago. These are the charms which led the judges unanimously to declare her beauty superior to that of 400 other contestants:

Hair, light blonde; eyes, deep blue; lashes, jet black; complexion, "pink and white;" height, 5 feet 5½ inches; weight, 128 pounds.

That the new type is unique is shown by the fact that selections of the judges for second and third prize were girls of the conventional type of Irish beauty.

Dig Up Skulls on Site of Old Fort Pontchartrain

DETROIT, MICH.—The annual crop of skeletons is now being harvested on the site of Fort Pontchartrain. Souvenir fiends are dashing madly up and down and across Jefferson avenue, carrying skulls, arrow heads, beads, wampum, bayonets, musket locks, horseshoes, brass buttons and other mementoes of a gory but historic past.

Merchants along the big thoroughfare are preparing to decorate their windows with grisly remnants of an ancient burial ground.

A workman digging in a trench in Jefferson avenue, near Griswold street, made the first important find. His spade struck something hard, and in a few seconds he unearthed a skull of magnificent proportions. In close proximity he found two others. He grew voluble and everybody quit work. Business men dashed out of their stores and shops and people got off street cars. There was much comment. The Old Residenter was among those present. He said the skulls were resting on the site of the gateway to old Fort Pontchartrain. He said no doubt many more skeletons will be found before the trenches are completed.

A man in shirtsleeves said the skulls probably were once the property of members of the Iroquois tribe of Indians.

The workmen were digging a sewer and the excavations extend east in Jefferson avenue as far as Mt. Elliott avenue. This serves to bring to light a collection of fine old ruins, as it includes the ground where the battle of Bloody Run was staged.

BRITAIN'S WAR CENSOR

Sir Stanley Owen Buckmaster, K. C., M. P., who is censor of war news for the British government, is practically unknown to this country, and is not yet a very familiar figure to the public in England. But he has a great reputation in the courts, where he has been a leader in chancery for many years. Whereas Mr. Smith at forty-two would be called young by all men, Sir Stanley Buckmaster, who is fifty-three, would only be called young by some men. His great gift is lucid exposition and directness in thought and speech. He can clothe the dry bones of chancery law with such interest and fascination that it is a recreation for a layman to hear him argue. A case the presenting of which by the average lawyer would be a painful punishment to hear, when argued by Sir Stanley becomes almost romantic.

For many years he has been what lawyers call a "special," a rank which has been created by lawyers in obedience to the injunction that to him that hath shall be given. It means that upon every brief delivered to his law chambers there must be marked, in addition to all ordinary fees, a special sum of 50 guineas, about $260.

WOULD PREPARE FOR WAR

© HARRIS & EWING

In the discussions of the lessons of the European war as applied to the military problems of the United States no man in congress has a larger part than Representative Julius Kahn of California. Mr. Kahn, as president of the National Defense league of the United States, is an earnest advocate of peace, but he holds that for the United States, at least, preparedness for war is the only insurance against war.

"Militarist," his very good friend, Representative Richard Bartholdt of Missouri, calls him, in their debates on the subject. "Pacifist," retorts Mr. Kahn, for Mr. Bartholdt is committed to the cause of peace, and is one of the country's most noted advocates of arbitration as a cure for war.

Both of German nativity, both of long service in congress, both leaders of thought on their respective sides, Messrs. Kahn and Bartholdt are at opposite points of the pole on military subjects. Mr. Kahn, personally gentle and kind of manner, fair and liberal in debate, philosophical in his habits of mind, never comes so near to losing his patience as when he hears pacifist arguments, and especially when he hears them in these days of the European war.

"Yes, yes," said he, almost impatiently, when some of the recent publications were brought to him in which appeared articles arguing that preparation for war inevitably is an invitation for war. "Yes, yes; I have seen all that stuff. How silly and futile it appears in the light of what is going on in Europe!

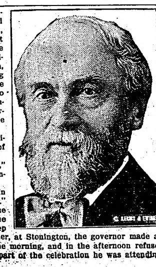
MRS. DAISY OWEN

© HARRIS & EWING

"Fancy names, abbreviations, or pet names do not claim much favor in these times," remarked Mrs. Owen, wife of the Oklahoma statesman. "I am frequently asked why I do not call myself Margaret, and I reply promptly because I have no right to the name. I was born when the fields of my native heath, then Indian Territory, now the growing state of Oklahoma, were abloom with the starry flowers we called the daisies. My mother had gone to the new land with my father from among her kindred and beloved friends in North Carolina, and naturally she was homesick. The daisies reminded her of the old place back in Carolina, for there, too, thousands of snowy blossoms dot the fields, and she called me Daisy Deane. The latter is a family name, and also the words of the plaintive old song 'Daisy Deane,' very popular in the times of romantic ballads and before the era of ragtime and the coon song. I never see one of the lovely little flowers without thinking of my mother, and I cling to the rather infantile name without the least desire to make it more dignified or sedate. I like names with meaning, so we called our only daughter Dorothea, gift of God, for she was the only grandchild on both sides of the house, and her coming meant so much to us all."

Senator and Mrs. Owen are among the adaptable members of official society, and have affiliated with many active organizations. They belong to the Chevy Chase club.

SIMEON E. BALDWIN, WALKER



© HARRIS & EWING

Gov. Simeon E. Baldwin of Connecticut, defeated for the United States senate at the recent election, is seventy-five years old, but a great walker. He believes in walking. He was in Washington while the American Bar association was in session, and he and ex-President Taft, among others, were named to go to the White House and escort President Wilson to the session. They rode across Washington in an automobile and the governor explained their purpose to the president.

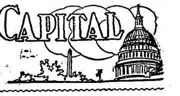
"I hear, governor," the ex-president said, "that you are fond of walking."

"I take a daily constitutional," was the reply of the tall, sparse, wonderfully active executive.

"Good," said the president. "In that case we'll foot it to the meeting."

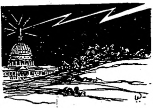
And off the party started. The governor acted as pacemaker and the ex-president had hard work to keep up with the procession. Last summer, at Stonington, the governor made an eight-mile through the country in the morning, and in the afternoon refused to ride in the parade, which was a part of the celebration he was attending.

NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS



Gold-Plated Lightning Guard for Miss Freedom

WASHINGTON.—Three new gold-plated, platinum-tipped lightning points have been placed upon the statue of Freedom, which rises above the capitol dome, to protect the bronze lady from lightning.



These tips, which extend above the feathers in the lady's headdress, need renewal each time they are struck, and examination showed that at least three shocks had been sustained. The gold-plated platinum tips offer a fine lightning conductor, and they are renewed as fast as they are knocked off or melted by lightning, according to the annual report of Superintendent Elliott Woods of the capitol building and grounds.

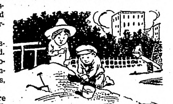
Owing to the almost continuous session of congress, the superintendent says it has been impossible to make any extensive repairs or general improvements to the building, but the usual repairs have been made.

The most important item in upkeep, he says, has been the renovating and repainting of the central portion of the capitol and the dome. This is done every four years, if possible. The dome work required thorough inspection of the inner and outer shells, recalking of the joints, and covering them with loose woven canvas soaked in white lead and oil.

Mr. Woods tells of the securing of a new filtered air supply for the house, which is taken from the center courtway between the new house wing and the old central building, and of the raising of the roof and building of another story on the house office building to make office room for new members of congress who came in under the last census.

Willow Tree Alley Slum Becomes Fine Playground

COLONEL HARTS, the engineer officer in charge of public buildings and grounds, has completed the principal portion of the big job he undertook last spring of transforming the purlieus of Willow Tree alley, formerly one of the worst of the slums in the District, into a modern playground and recreation park, with attractive, artistic surroundings.



The high iron picket fence inclosing the marginal gardens is finished. E. S. Martin of the Playground association has installed the open-air gymnastic apparatus, including swings, slides, horizontal bars, etc.

Sand boxes and wading pools are also provided for the younger children. The large open space, bordered by trees and flowering plants, has been laid off as a baseball diamond, with backstop, bases, etc.

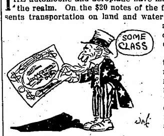
The making of this interior park is the first work of the kind ever undertaken in this vicinity. It is an experiment in public welfare activities. Considerable interest is displayed by public-spirited citizens in the enterprise, and its advocates predict that it will be a powerful and material factor in the movement for the moral improvement and well-being of the community.

The new park is unique in that it is located in the interior of a square of ground in the heart of the city and is surrounded entirely by buildings occupied either as dwellings or places of business. To that extent it is secluded from the public streets, and strangers passing by on the outside thoroughfares are not aware of its existence.

The square is bounded by B and C streets and by Third and Four-and-a-half streets southwest. The part devoted to public use covers an area of about four acres. Shut in on all sides by brick and frame buildings, mostly of the two-story kind, the only means of entrance are short, narrow alleys.

Handsome Designs on New Federal Reserve Notes

THE automobile and aeroplane have made their appearance on the money of the realm. On the $20 notes of the federal reserve issue the design represents transportation on land and water and in the air. A railroad, an auto and an aeroplane, together with an ocean liner, are engraved on this latest money.



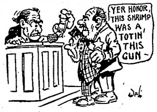
Orders were issued by John Skelton Williams, comptroller of the currency, to print at the bureau of engraving and printing $250,000,000 of federal reserve notes for the use of the banks which have recently been organized and opened. The notes are in denominations of $5, $10, $20, $50 and $100. The designs are all new, and, according to the experts, are the most artistic yet made. An allegorical picture covers the entire back of the $100 bill. America, with peace and plenty on either side, is an imposing center, while labor is shown reaping the harvest, with Mercury distributing it.

The Panama canal is shown in allegory on the $50 bills. The $20 bills contain the transportation designs. The $10 bills represent a typical mining and agricultural scene, a harvest scene on one side and a modern factory in operation on the other half.

The $5 bills, which will be most often seen, contain an engraving of the landing of Columbus, also of the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers on Plymouth Rock.

No Mercy for Deadly Weapon Carriers in Capital

PERSONS carrying deadly and dangerous weapons who are taken into the police court in the future will be severely dealt with, if Assistant United States Attorney Ralph Given can carry out his intentions. Mr. Given, who prosecutes the cases in the United States branch of the court, where persons are tried on charges of carrying concealed weapons, intends to ask an absolute jail sentence in any case where the person charged with carrying a concealed weapon did so maliciously. "Of course, the court will use discretion in the cases," he said, "as every one who is found with a deadly weapon in his possession is not carrying it with the intention to harm any one."



YER HONOR, THIS SHRIMP WAS A TOTIN' THIS GUN –

Mr. Given was instructed by United States Attorney Laskey to ask Major Sylvester, chief of police, to instruct the officers at the various police stations to demand $300 bond in each case where a person is charged with carrying a concealed weapon. "It has been the practice for some time for a person to leave $50 collateral for his appearance in court, but there have been too many such cases and I propose to stop it," said Mr. Given.

"It certainly is an awful situation. I have cases day after day of persons who are cut about the face or body and others who are shot or otherwise injured by persons who committed the acts with dangerous weapons," said Mr. Given. "There is a man in the hospital now who had his arm cut open from the shoulder to his wrist with a large knife by another man."

NEW FIGHT FOR POSSESSION OF POLISH CAPITAL

ANOTHER BIG BATTLE IS IN PROGRESS ALONG THE BZURA RIVER, SOUTH OF RAWA.

RUSSIANS RETIRE AND DESTROY ALL BRIDGES

Field Marshal Von Hindenburg Expects Stern Resistance, Which the Strongly Reinforced Russian Army Is Certain to Offer—Allies' Operations Resisted.

London, Dec. 22. — Field Marshal von Hindenburg's army, which is advancing on Warsaw over a wide front, between the Vistula and the Pilica rivers, and which occupied Lowicz a few days ago, has reached the new Russian positions along the Bzura river and southward to Rawa, with the result that another big battle is in progress.

The Russians retired across the Bzura river, destroying the bridges behind them and two German detachments which followed over a partly burned bridge were attacked and are said to have been annihilated, 50 survivors being taken prisoners.

Battle for Warsaw Begins.

This is only the beginning of the great battle for Warsaw, from which the Germans are now only thirty miles or less. Field Marshal von Hindenburg, however, expects stern resistance, which the strongly re-enforced Russian army is certain to offer his further advance, protected as it is by the Vistula river, which the Germans have been unable to cross.

The Russians are continuing their operations against East Prussia, as though the capital of Poland were not threatened, and by counter-attacks are attempting to throw off the Austro-German attacks in Galicia. An Austrian sortie in force from Przemysl, according to the Russian official statement, has entirely failed, and there, as well as at other points, prisoners and guns were taken.

Germans Resist Allies' Advance.

The offensive operations of the allies in the west are being carried out under conditions of siege warfare and are being stubbornly opposed by the Germans who, in their intrenchments, and surrounded by wire entaglements, make an advance of even a few yards a costly matter for the attacking forces.

In Flanders a little ground has been gained at considerable cost, despite the fact that along the coast the allies have the assistance of warships which continually bombard the German positions. The advance has been more marked from the Belgian border south of the River Oise, where the ground is not as wet as in the flooded regions of Flanders.

Along the Aisne and in the Champagne district, the French artillery, which is now probably stronger than the German, has been busy keeping the Germans on the move, but in the Argonne region it is the Germans who are on the offensive, and they claim to have made a slight advance.

Germans Have More Guns.

The general opinion of military men here is that some time must elapse before the allies can expect to make any very marked progress. Besides being in fortified positions, which could only be taken after being thoroughly searched out by the artillery, the Germans still have more machine guns than the allies; and, as has been proved in previous battles, these, so long as they can be successfully operated, make infantry attacks too costly to be attempted.

The Servian and Montenegrin armies have again joined hands after the defeat of the Austrians who invaded Servia, and are now making their second advance toward Sarajevo, capital of Bosnia. The two armies, the supplies of which have been replenished by captures from the Austrians, have formed a junction near Vishegard, which the Montenegrins have occupied. They expect to be before Sarajevo before three or four days.

Polish Legion to Join Russians.

Warsaw, Russian Poland, Dec. 21, via Petrograd and London.—By authority of Grand Duke Nicholas, a Polish legion has been organized. The Russian army contains2 many Polish volunteers, but the legion will be the first Polish contingent flying a distinctive flag, to be accepted. Four thousand Poles are enrolled in the legion and will be ready to go to the front in six weeks.

Belgium One Long Breadline.

New York, Dec. 18.—"Tragic misery, the like of which the world has never seen," was the term applied to conditions in Belgium by Theodore Waters, secretary of the Christian Herald, who went to Belgium last month to supervise the distribution of the food cargo of the Dutch steamer Jan Block among the starving noncombatants, and who returned on the Transylvania. Belgium, he said, is one long breadline of starving men, women and children.

LATE WAR DEVELOPMENTS

The German forces moving against Warsaw have come in contact with the new Russian positions along the Bzura River, precipitating still another battle of enormous proportions for the possession of the Polish capital. Petrograd claims to have gained a preliminary success over the Teutons when the latter attempted to cross the river, and Berlin says officially that the Slavs are offering fierce resistance and cannot yet be considered as demoralized.

* * *

In the west the allies continue their offensive and claim to be gaining ground, but slowly and at considerable cost. The guns of the British fleet are assisting in the advance in Belgium, yet the biggest gains are reported to have been achieved south of the Belgian frontier.

* * *

In the south where a short time ago the Austrians drove their enemies before them, but were suddenly turned upon and themselves forced to retreat, the Servians and Montenegrins have now reformed a junction and are re-entering Bosnia expecting to be before Sarajevo, the capital, again inside of three or four days.

* * *

Rulers of three Scandinavian nations resolve to combine their respective interests to safeguard their neutrality.

ROADS GET RATE INCREASE

ADVANCES OF 5 PER CENT ON FREIGHT TARIFFS GRANTED.

Interstate Commerce Commission Gives Opinion—Means $30,000,000 Increase Annually to Railways.

Washington, Dec. 19.—Increases in freight rates, approximately 5 per cent, on all the railroads between the Atlantic seaboard and the Mississippi, north of the Potomac and Ohio rivers, were granted by the Interstate Commerce Commission in a divided opinion, excepting upon certain heavy commodities, which comprise a large bulk of the traffic.

The increases will further apply to those railroads west of Buffalo and Pittsburgh, that were granted partial advances in the decision of last August, which denied them altogether to the roads east of those points. It is estimated the advanced rates will increase the annual income of the roads about $30,000,000.

Confronted With Emergency.

The commission made its decision upon the showing of the railroads that in addition to conditions from which they previously asked relief, they now are confronted with an emergency because of the war in Europe.

With Commissioners James S. Harlan and Judson C. Clements dissenting, the majority of the commission declared:

"Whatever the consequences of the war may prove to be, we must recognize the fact that it exists; the fact that it is a calamity without precedent, and the fact that by it, the commerce of the world has been disarranged and thrown into confusion. The means of transportation are fundamental and indispensable agencies in our industrial life, and for the common weal should be kept abreast of public requirements."

Report Gives Three Causes.

Summarizing the basis of its decision, the majority report of the commission said:

"The facts disclosed, and occurrences originating subsequent to May 29, 1914, as presented at the further hearing, may be summarized under three heads—first, completed returns for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, and returns for succeeding months; second, the war in Europe and, third, results of the original order.

"When these cases were originally submitted, as also when the original report was prepared, the revenue and expenditure account for June, 1914, and the property investment account for that fiscal year were not available, the war was unforseen and the results of our order were, of course, yet to come. Collectively, they present a new situation."

To Give Ten Days' Notice.

The commission issued this order:

"It is ordered that respondents herein be, and they are hereby authorized to publish and file, by not less than 10 days' notice to the Interstate Commerce Commission and to the general public, in the manner prescribed in section 6 of the act to regulate commerce, schedules of rates which do not exceed the limits or transgress the limitations stated and prescribed in said report.

"It is further ordered that the permission hereby granted does not waive any of the requirements of the commission's published rules relative to the construction and filing of tariff publications, nor any of the provisions of the act to regulate commerce, as amended, except as to the notice to be given."

Consider U. S. Coast Defense.

Washington, Dec. 21.—Headed by Assistant Secretary Breckenridge, a special board of army officers of high rank has been in session at the war department for several days considering the state of the coast defenses of the country, and particularly the military situation in the Canal Zone. Proceedings of the board are secret, but the fact that it was sitting has become known. It is expected evidences of its work will soon be visible through recommendations to Congress for funds.

REPORT BRITISH DREADNAUGHT IS SUNK BY MINES

EIGHT MEN WITNESS SINKING OF WARSHIP IN THE NORTH SEA, ACCORDING TO CHICAGOAN.

CREW HURRIES TO SCENE TO RESCUE SURVIVORS

Thirty-five Men Taken From Steamship by British Authorities at Plymouth and Detained for Eight Days Pending Investigation as to Their Being Spies.

New York, Dec. 22.—A report that the British dreadnaught Thunderer was sunk in the North Sea on Nov. 7 by coming into contact with a mine or being hit by a torpedo was brought here by George Rottweiler of Chicago, a passenger on the steamship St. Louis from Liverpool.

According to Mr. Rottweiler, the sinking of the dreadnaught was witnessed by eight men, members of the crew of a small Swedish sailing ship called the Soefjord, that put into Liverpool with survivors from the dreadnaught on board.

Said Thunderer Blew Up.

"These men were taken in charge by British officers and were kept under surveillance at an out-of-the-way sailors' mission," said Mr. Rottweiler. "I heard of the report in a roundabout way and through a friend I managed to talk with one of the crew. He told me the Thunderer blew up and sank in full view of himself and his mates on the Soefjord. The crew hastened to the scene and a dozen or so of men were picked up from the water."

Mr. Rottweiler said he is the European representative of the Western Metals Products company of Chicago. He was a passenger on the steamship Noordam, leaving New York for Rotterdam the early part of September.

He and thirty-five others were taken from the ship by British authorities at Plymouth and detained for eight days, pending investigation as to their being Germans, but they were released on proof of identity. He spent ten days in Germany and since that time has been in England with indorsements, indicating that he visited many of the prominent cities of England and on the continent.

The Soefjord is not listed in the maritime register, but this may be due to her being a small boat, as indicated by the small number of the crew.

F. W. Pethick Lawrence, husband of the widely known suffragette leader, also was on the St. Louis. He said he came to New York to meet his wife.

"I fully support the views of Mrs. Lawrence," he said. "I intend to talk, however, on the subject of peace and what I believe will be the outcome of the war. I predict a closer union of the nations of the world, an universal language, and eventually disarmament."

Rottweiler Not Known in Chicago.

Chicago, Dec. 21.—George Rottweiler, who told a story in New York of the sinking of the dreadnaught Thunderer, is known to the Western Metal Products company of Chicago only by name. The company name had been taken by Fred Bauer, manufacturers' agent, who had rented a small downtown office. Frequently mail addressed to the Metal Products company was found to be meant for Rottweiler, who also acted as agent for metal manufacturers, and Bauer surmised, had stumbled onto the same trade name.

The Auburn Ignition company of Auburn, N. Y., recently made efforts to locate Rottweiler, according to Bauer and a few months ago wrote they had heard Rottweiler was detained in London. They asked whether he was held as a prisoner of war or for some criminal offense.

The first of November, several letters addressed to Rottweiler in Berlin were delivered to Bauer's office, with a stamp showing they had been forwarded by the United States consul at Berlin.

Rottweiler for a time occupied desk room in an office building here, it was said. His name does not appear in the city or telephone directories.

Blame Black Cat for Mishap.

San Diego, Cal., Dec. 21.—The black cat, blamed by the crew of the big freighter Isthmian for the mishap which nearly sent the big boat to the bottom of the sea, has been summarily executed and the body thrown overboard.

New Sultan of Egypt.

London, Dec. 21.—A British protectorate over Egypt has been proclaimed. Prince Hussein Kemal has been appointed sultan and has accepted that position. He is an uncle of Hilma, until now khedive. The French government has recognized the British protectorate over the country in which France formerly had such important interests and in return the British government has given notice that it adheres to the Franco-Moorish treaty of 1912, which gave France a protectorate over Morocco.

JAMES MARK SULLIVAN

© HARRIS & EWING

James M. Sullivan, the Brooklyn lawyer who is now American minister to the Dominican Republic, has asked for an investigation of the numerous charges that have been filed against him, and President Wilson has directed Secretary Bryan to conduct an inquiry into Mr. Sullivan's official conduct.

RULERS REACH AGREEMENT

SCANDINAVIAN MONARCHS TO PRESERVE NEUTRALITY.

Express Their Hopes That Conference Would Have Good and Happy Results for Three Peoples.

Stockholm, via London, Dec. 22.—King Christian of Denmark, King Gustave of Sweden and King Haakon of Norway, who, with their foreign ministers, met in conference at Malmo to formulate a plan designed to combine their respective interests during the war, reached an agreement on the special questions raised.

The statement is made in an official communication issued here. The communication in substance follows:

"The meeting of the three monarchs was inaugurated with a speech by King Gustave, who alluded to the unanimous desire of the kingdoms of the north to preserve their neutrality and pointed to the desirability of limited co-operation between the kingdoms as a safeguard to their common interests. He said that when he invited the monarchs of Norway and Denmark to meet him he was impressed with a deep sense of the responsibility which would be incurred in relation to the present and the future if any measure which would contribute to the welfare of the three pepoles were neglected."

Kings Haakon and Christian replied, testifying their sincere joy at the initiative of King Gustav and expressing their hopes that the conference would have good and happy results for the three peoples.

The deliberations of the monarchs and ministers consolidated the good relations among the three kingdoms and also enabled an agreement to be reached on the special questions raised. It finally was agreed to pursue the co-operation so happily begun and to arrange, when circumstances should occur, for fresh meetings between representatives of the three governments.

COUNTRIES READY TO CLASH

Greece and Turkey Are at Swords' Points—Germany Tries to Prevent War.

Athens, Dec. 21.—Germany is making every effort to prevent a rupture between Greece and Turkey. Relations between the two countries are now strained to the utmost as a result of the arrest of the naval attache of the Greek embassy at Constantinople by the Turks. The naval officer was sentenced to death as an alleged spy. The German ambassador at Constantinople has been ordered to prevent the proposed execution.

Casualties of British Officers.

London, Dec. 21.—During the week ended Dec. 7, 92 British officers were killed in France, 153 were wounded and 20 were reported missing. The Indian contingent evidently has been active, for 29 British officers attached to the Indian forces were killed and 49 wounded. The total casualties of officers since the war began follows: Killed, 1,058; wounded, 2,071, missing, 602.

Kaiser to Return to Front.

Berlin, Dec. 18.—The kaiser's health is improving and he will be able to return to the front in a day or two, at most, says an official announcement.

Business Boom Predicted.

Chicago, Dec. 21.—A business boom of wide proportions and far-reaching effect, with steel mills and factories running full blast and thousands of men now idle back to work, is the prospects of a result in the increase of rates granted eastern roads. Bankers, railroad men, car builders and representatives of railroad labor unions united in predicting that railways will at once restore their normal working forces and place orders for millions of dollars' worth of supplies.

GERMANS SHELL ENGLISH CITIES

Elude Vigilance of British War Vessels and Wreak Destruction.

OVER 100 PEOPLE KILLED

Immense Amount of Property Destroyed in Raid, and Kaiser's Vessels Escape Unharmed—Believed to Be the First of a Series of Devastating Raids Planned by German Naval Board of Strategy.

London, Dec. 17.—Conflicting reports from Hartlepool, Whitby and Scarborough make it difficult to give the exact number of dead. The Chronicle announces that 48 were killed and 116 wounded in the three towns. A London Times dispatch from Hartlepool says 50 soldiers and civilians were killed in that town alone and 48 bodies have been recovered. The war office statement issued early in the evening gave the total as 31. The Evening Standard says 12 were killed at Scarborough, while another dispatch says 18 died at that place. Reports seem to agree that only two were killed at Whitby.

Berlin, Dec. 17. — An official announcement issued here says:

"Parts of our high seas fleet made an attack on the English east coast and bombarded December 16, early in the morning, both fortified and coast places at Scarborough and Hartlepool. Regarding its further course of action no information can yet be given."

London, Dec. 17.—Germany daringly attacked England herself early in the morning.

After a dash across the North sea on a misty night, a German flotilla bombarded Hartlepool, Scarborough and Whitby, unfortified cities on the east coast of England, early in the morning.

Some thirty women and men were killed. Churches were ruined, hotels, dwellings and stores were destroyed by the bombardment, which endured 40 minutes, after which the Germans steamed northward from Scarborough and escaped pursuing British cruisers.

The gun flashes indicated that four big warships were firing. One shell that has been picked up was 12 inches in diameter and 33 inches long.

Hundreds fled in panic while the invaders' projectiles thundered and burst, setting on fire the structures they had set in ruins. Others, affrighted, took refuge in cellars.

The exploding shells of the bold cruisers who slipped through the British fleet and the guard ships and dodged the mines thickly strewn in the North sea, dug holes in the streets of Scarborough so wide and deep that a railway truck could pass through them.

Warships Repel Raiders.

Hurriedly called by wireless, British warships hastened from the nearest points to attack the enemy. But the German cruiser force, made up of their fastest cruisers, escaped in the mist from the British squadron.

The squadron which shelled Hartlepool, where the bombardment was most destructive to life and property, was composed, the admiralty announces, of two battle cruisers and an armored cruiser, while from four to six light cruisers attacked Scarborough and Whitby.

The number of the attacking force has been variously estimated at from three to six cruisers. Some had a submarine. Necessarily there is no information on this point yet.

The attack began at Hartlepool about five minutes after eight in the morning when most of the people were at breakfast. It was like a thunderbolt from a clear sky, most persons thinking a thunderstorm had arisen. The first shell exploded near a man who said afterward he thought a British squadron was practicing gunnery and was making bad marksmanship of it.

Several victims of the bombardment of Scarborough arrived in London. Arthur Wood and his twelve-year-old son, both wounded by fragments of shells, came in with bandaged heads and were interviewed by an International News service correspondent.

"The bombardment was incessant for three-quarters of an hour," said Wood. "The cruisers first directed their fire toward the wireless station, but without effect. They next trained their guns on the electric light plant and the gas works, but their shots went wide and inflicted severe damage on property in the vicinity.

"My son and I were injured by the same shell."

Scarborough English Resort.

Scarborough, which was shelled by the Germans, is a seaport and fashionable resort of England, in the northern part of Yorkshire, on a headland extending into the North sea. It is 37 miles northeast of the important English city of York. It is a little more than two hundred miles from London.

Scarborough has been popularly styled the "queen of watering places." The permanent population of the place is more than forty thousand persons.

Hartlepool a Trade Center.

Hartlepool is a seaport and municipal borough of England, in the southeast portion of the county of Durham. Its population is about twenty-five thousand. Adjoining Hartlepool is West Hartlepool, a city of more than sixty-five thousand inhabitants.

The Hartlepools are provided with a vast system of docks.

Whitby is in the north riding of Yorkshire, on the coast, and about half way between Scarborough and Hartlepool. It is a town of about twelve thousand people, and also is a seaside resort.

The extensive ruins of the celebrated Abbey of St. Hilda at Whitby, upon the summit of the east cliff, and the ancient church closely adjoining, are the most notable buildings of the town and are prominent from the sea.

Germans Escape in Fog.

The German squadron escaped practically unharmed. The organizer pursuit that drew England's great ships from their stations at sea could not catch up or cut off the fast raiders.

The Germans had in their favor a heavy mist, which covered the sea, and they made a rapid withdrawal after dropping shells on the coast towns for about thirty minutes.

The only official mention of damage to the raiders is contained in an official British statement which said the batteries at Hartlepool had damaged at least one of the vessels which appeared there.

The Yorkshire Evening News prints a dispatch to the effect that two German cruisers have been sunk, and that British warships were damaged.

Most Daring Raid of War.

It is the most daring and successful exploit the Germans have performed in the war, amazing in its savage thoroughness. All England is alarmed and enraged because a squadron of Germany's most dangerous war craft was permitted to escape from the Kiel canal and remain undetected long enough to give Englishmen even a light experience of the horrors of war that have come to Belgium and France.

There is fear that an invasion will be attempted, but there is more reason to believe that the devastating raid was the first stroke of a great coup.

Germany, it is positively known, has been planning for weeks a concerted rush of battle cruisers and dreadnaughts from Helgoland and the mouth of the Elbe, in an attempt to ruin British commerce on the Atlantic.

Many Dead at Hartlepool.

It is officially announced that at Hartlepool seven soldiers were killed and 14 wounded and 22 civilians were killed and 50 wounded. In opposition to this dispatch from Stockholm-on-Tees to the Exchange Telegraph company says:

"The effect of the bombardment at Hartlepool was that 30 persons were killed and 100 injured. At West Hartlepool 20 persons were killed and many injured."

The admiralty places the casualties at Scarborough at 11, but refugees from that city say that 18 persons were killed there. At Whitby two were killed and two wounded.

Precautions which are being taken by the military authorities indicate that they do not consider that today's raid will end the efforts of Germany.

British Expect New Attack.

The Newcastle Chronicle, according to a dispatch reaching London this evening, says there is a probability of a hostile attack on Tynemouth, in Northumberland, at the mouth of the Tyne, and about twenty-five miles north of Hartlepool.

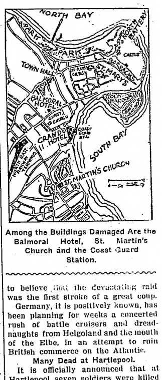
The mayor of Tynemouth has issued a notice declaring that the local emergency committee has been advised by the military authorities to have the gas in Tynemouth turned off at once for military reasons. The civil population have been advised to remain indoors, but if necessary to leave their dwellings they are advised to go in the direction of Newcastle, eight miles away.

Started on Monday Night.

It was supposed that the admiralty was thoroughly prepared to prevent such a raid as occurred, and German threats that a successful attack would soon be made on the English coast were taken as mere boasts.

From all that can be gathered from the official news and such detailed reports as have come from the 50-mile stretch of coast that suffered from German shells it would seem that the German cruiser squadron left its base at Helgoland probably on Monday night, since it could hardly have made the distance between Helgoland and the northeast coast of England on Tuesday night alone.

TOWN OF SCARBOROUGH.



Among the Buildings Damaged Are the Balmoral Hotel, St. Martin's Church and the Coast Guard Station.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

STATE APPOINTMENTS SOON

NEIL M. CRONIN TO BE INSURANCE COMMISSIONER.

Governor Elect Hammond to Fill Other Positions Between Now and Jan. 1.

Minneapolis, Dec. 17. — Winfield Scott Hammond will be back in Minnesota this week, his congressional ties severed, and his return is heralded by knowledge of some of the important appointments which he, as governor elect, is to make between ow and Jan. 1.

Neil M. Cronin, Minneapolis attorney, is to be the next insurance commissioner, succeeding J. A. O. Preus, who becomes state auditor by virtue of the vote of the people on Nov. 3 last. This knowledge is based on information little short of positive.

Herman E. Samuelson, formerly of St. Peter, but until a few months ago politcal editor of a St. Paul newspaper, is to be executive clerk to the governor, succeeding Archibald Hayes, clerk to Governor Eberhart. There is no question about this appointment.

A. H. Turritin, state bank examiner, and Andrew Fritz, state public examiner, are the present department heads who can count themselves as sure of their posts under the Democratic administration. These men are Eberhart appointees. The appointment of neither has been confirmed by the senate. The term of each has two years to run. Ir Mr. Hammond wanted new men in these posts he likely could accomplish their retirement, but it is positively understood that in their cases at least no effort will be made to head off senate confirmation.

Beyond this appointments up to date are largely speculative. This is not entirely true as regards those who are slated to go. There are quite a number who are sure to be relieved of their posts, but for whom no sucessor has been chosen.

Charles E. Vasaly, chairman of the state board of control, is an example of this situation. Mr. Vasaly hails from Little Falls. Presumably he is a Democrat. He was appointed by Governor Johnson and has been allowed to hold over through his term by the Eberhart administration. But the coming of another Democratic administration just about the time his term is to close—which will be April 1 next—means nothing to him, for the Democrats coming into power are not particularly impressed by the political activity shown by Mr. Vasaly during the recent campaign—that is, not impressed in favor of Mr. Vasaly.

As to a successor to Mr. Vasaly, there is nothing more than speculation. In fact, it will not take concrete form until it is learned whether the legislature will abolish the board of control by passage of the efficiency and economy commission bill.

It is possible that another of the choice plums will fall to Minneapolis. Louis V. Klein, a real estate man, resident of the Third ward, is strongly backed for the post of state fire marshal. He lives at 1501 Dupont avenue north. John Ryan, St. Paul politician, is mentioned for the same post. Mr. Klein never has been prominent politically.

NO SWEETS FOR GIRL DEBTORS

Sauk Center Has Unique Wage-Earning Plan in Force at Home School.

Sauk Center.—Get into debt at the Home School for Girls at Sauk Center and you don't get dessert or sweets.

This is the novel scheme evolved by those in charge of the school to discourage the incurring of debts by the inmates. The scheme is a part of the unique wage-earning plan in force at the institution.

Every girl entering the school is placed on dependency for one month. At the end of thirty days she is assigned to one of the cottages. She then becomes a citizen in the community. She is given food and shelter. Beyond this she must earn her support. The school has its own legal tender. Each week the girls receive payment for services given, less any fines that may have been imposed.

With the money received the girl must cloth herself from the school store and pay for luxuries. No extravagance is permitted. If any girl has not the money with which to buy some bit of finery, she must do without it. If a girl cannot make her clothes she must pay another to do the work. If she is not willing to attend to her laundry she must pay another for its care. There is even a debtor's table maintained at the school on which no desserts or sweets appear.

Bandits Would Not Shoot.

LeSueur Center.—The four young men who made an attempt to rob the Kasota State bank are in jail here awaiting the action of the grand jury. One of the bandits said the intention never was to shoot anyone, as they had thought to scare the cashier into handing out some money, and that the attempted robbery had not been thought of until the quartet had reached Kasota. Lack of funds and inability to obtain employment is given by all of them as their reason for attempting the robbery.

FLEE FROM BURNING HOUSE

Twelve Tenants Safely Cross Gap to Neighboring Building on Bridge of Bed Rails.

Minneapolis.—The melodramas of a quarter of a century ago, with their "spans of life," had no thrillers surpassing the situations created by a fire that swept through an apartment building at 808-810 Sixth avenue S and trapped 13 occupants on the second floor. The fire, believed by the owners of the building to have been incendiary, or due to the carelessness of some tramp, burned out the stairway before the occupants were aroused. One woman jumped from a window to the ground in her bare feet, and a dozen others crossed from the burning building on a bridge made of bed rails, to the second story of a building at 812 Sixth avenue S.

Twenty-five persons in all, including those on the first floor, escaped and ran in their nightclothes to the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Crow, 802 Sixth avenue S.

Believe Fire Deliberately Set.

Mr. and Mrs. Crow declared after the fire that they believed the fire had been set deliberately or that some tramp had taken refuge in the basement from the cold and had accidentally started the fire.

Mr. and Mrs. Crow own the entire row of apartment buildings and rent out the rooms and small apartments.

The fire started in the front building at 3:30 a. m., while all the occupants were asleep. Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Chapman, living on the first floor, were first awakened by the noise of flames in the hall. They shouted to the other occupants and then jumped out of the window.

Woman Hurt by Jumping.

Miss Alice Morton, occupying a side room on the second floor, rushed to the door of her room and found it burning. She threw her clothes to the ground and before the fire department arrived she jumped from the window. She sprained her right ankle when she struck the frozen ground.

Twelve others on the second floor found themselves trapped and were about to jump when A. L. Schmidt devised the bridge plan. He knocked down the wooden bed in his room and in a room adjoining and taking the side rails, laid them from a balcony on the narrow alley to the balcony of the adjoining building. Then the men and women walked over the bridge, through the window and then to the street. George Flemming, who was also on the second floor, dropped from a window without injury, while the others were crossing the bridge.

An investigation of the fire showed that it started in the front of the basement 20 feet from the furnace. A window in the basement was open. The fire burned the furnishings in all but three of the rooms and caused a loss of more than $2,000, according to Mr. Crow.

GOVERNOR HELPS CAMPAIGN

Eberhart Urges Generous Purchase of Christmas Seals From Minnesota Health Association.

St. Paul.—Governor Eberhart is doing personal work to help the Minnesota Public Health association in its Christmas seal campaign. The Governor urges a generous purchase of the seals.

"The campaign of our health association deserves the highest commendation," says the Governor. "The Christmas seals will not only aid this campaign financially but will have a tendency to stir up greater interest in behalf of public health throughout the state.

"No greater achievement along the lines of public welfare can be accomplished without favorable public sentiment, and I am sure the efforts of the health association not only will be reflected in advanced legislation, but in a general desire throughout the state to co-operate with the association to stamp out preventable and curable disease."

Get Pay Before Christmas.

Minneapolis.—All city employes will get their December salaries in time to purchase Christmas presents. The City Council meeting passed the pay rolls presented by the various committees.

The Council was asked to authorize the sale of the $47,500 worth of City Hospital bonds in order that the contagious building might be completed. Alderman Parks introduced the resolution providing for the sale of the bonds, pointing out the necessity of immediate action.

The Council was asked to donate enough money to pay for Christmas candies and toys to be presented to poor children at a municipal celebration which is being planned under the direction of Mayor Nye.

Fire Destroys Brainerd Block.

Brainerd, Minn., Dec. 18.—Fire, believed to have started from a defective furnace, completely destroyed the E. C. Bane block in the heart of the business district and damaged the C. M. Patek building and the Citizens' State bank building adjoining. The first floor of the Bane block, which was of brick, two stories high and valued at $15,000, was occupied by the Paris Drygoods company. Ray A. Campbell conducted a billiard hall and bowling alley in the basement.

DECISION TO HELP BUSINESS

Increased Freight Rates Mean Renewed Activity and Greater Prosperity Say Railroad Men.

Minneapolis.—Some prices in Minneapolis will be affected indirectly by the decision of the Interstate Commerce commission to permit the Eastern roads to advance freight rates up to 5 per cent on specified commodities.

The decision excepts the rates on bituminous coal and anthracite, so the rates on those commodities will not be affected. Certain manufactured articles being shipped to this territory from points in New England will carry, as a consequence, a heavier freight rate, and, therefore, will be of greater cost to the consumer here.

Railroad men rejoice over the decision and say that it means renewed activities in railroad circles. The steel industry will be particularly benefited, say Minneapolis men. The railroads in the East will now become buyers and conditions will improve in the steel districts.

"Nothing could take place of more beneficial importance to the prosperity of the United States that an amelioration of the railroad rate situation," said E. W. Decker, president of the Northwestern National bank. "The railroads form the heart of our business system. They present a most vital factor governing business conditions. While I do not gather the scope of this decision, not having seen it yet, I note that stocks went up as a result and sentiment seems to be that it means much to the roads. Whatever will help the roads at this time will help business in general."

BIG FIRE AT NORTH BRANCH

Main Business Block Is Wiped Out With Loss Estimated at About $100,000.

North Branch.—Fire starting over John Satterstrom's store here wiped out the main business block of the city with a loss estimated at $100,000.

The fire was not under control for three hours after it started. A call for aid was sent to Pine City and apparatus from there arrived as the local firemen had controlled the flames.

A building containing the North Branch Review and Dr. Stein's office and the Drew residence are the only two saved in the block.

Buildings destroyed other than that in which the fire started are: Snedberg's millinery store; Herried & Erickson mercantile store; W. C. Nelson, confectionery; city library, Euclid hotel and Strait livery barn. All buildings, except the hotel, carried insurance.

No one was injured.

SOCIETY ELECTS OFFICERS

Minnesota Grange Association Closes Convention at Owatonna—Austin Man Is State Master.

Owatonna.—The Minnesota State Grange association closed its convention and elected officers as follows: State master, Charles Rice, Austin; overseer, C. S. Reinhard, Medford; state lecturer, George R. Brushof, Owatonna; steward, A. L. Hassell of Harris; assistant steward, S. H. Hubbard, Austin; chaplain, H. G. Hickok, Owatonna; treasurer, E. May Gillespie, Minneapolis; secretary, L. L. Hackett, Austin; gatekeeper, A. R. Hammergren of Harris; ceres, Mrs. C. L. Rice, Austin; pomona, Mrs. J. E. Cartwright, Dodge Center; flora, Mrs. E. W. Hart, Austin; woman assistant steward, Mrs. Jay Lightley, Austin.

Robbers Leave Man in Swamp.

Minneapolis.—A squad of detectives and uniformed policemen searched nearly all night for two robbers who beat, choked and robbed E. E. Howe, 4817 York avenue, in a swamp near York avenue and Forty-eighth street while he was on his way home. Howe called the police and told them he had been beaten until unconscious and left in the swamp. The robbers took some change from his pocket and took his overcoat. He lay in the swamp for a long time, he said, and when he regained consciousness he was almost frozen.

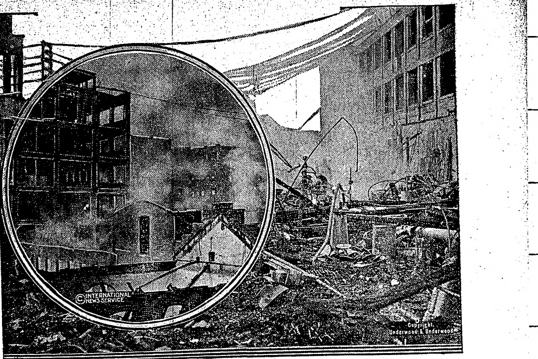
Will Recover From Railroad Injury.

Owatonna, Minn., Dec. 16.—Miss Clara Huseth, injured in the Rock Island wreck near Faribault, will recover. Miss Huseth is a teacher in the state public school. Other Owatonna people in the wreck were G. F. Cardiff, proprietor of the Neal and Gatlin Institutes in the Twin Cities; Leslie Jefferson, lecturer, and Vernun Backus, salesman. None was seriously injured.

Run Down; Gets License Number.

Minneapolis, Dec. 18.—While prostrate beneath an automobile that ran him down, Hazzard Conwell retained his presence of mind and noted the license number of the car that struck him. The driver speeded on without stopping, according to Conwell's story to the police, and the police were asked to locate the owner of the car. Conwell was driving in a buggy at Central and West Island avenues. He was run down from behind and tossed to the pavement under the wheels of the auto.

FIRE DESTROYS GREAT EDISON PLANT



© INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE
Copyright, Underwood & Underwood

Photographs taken during the burning of the Edison company's big plant at West Orange, N. J. The property destroyed was valued at $7,000,000.

ISLE OF MARKEN FLOODED

Copyright, Underwood & Underwood

The Isle of Marken, in the Zuyder Zee, known to nearly every American tourist, is suffering from floods caused by the cutting of the dikes in Flanders. One of its streets is here shown, with natives rowing about in their gardens.

WITH THE GERMANS IN EAST PRUSSIA

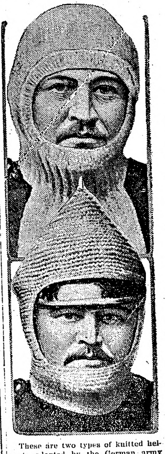
German soldiers guarding an outpost in East Prussia, near the Russian border, passing away the time by studying war pictures. The lower photo shows a German supply column making its way to the base of supplies

BEAUTIFUL CHURCH LAID IN RUINS

© INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE

Exterior of the church at Ramscapelle after the once beautiful edifice had been wrecked by the shells of the contending armies.

GERMAN WINTER HELMETS



These are two types of knitted helmets adopted by the German army for the troops during the winter. Not only are they warm, but they also cover the metal helmets so their shining does not afford a mark for the enemy.

MAJ. DWIGHT E. AULTMAN

© HARRIS & EWING

Major Aultman of the Sixth Field artillery of the United States army is one of the six officers who have been sent over to observe the operations of the armies in the European war. He graduated from West Point with the class of 1890.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3.1879

We wish all our readers a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Get Up To Date.

Any man that is talking about Red Lake River being a navigable stream, is as much out of date as the man who would cut his grain with an old fashioned sickle.

When this territory was in its wild state with the swamps undrained there was periods during the summer season that boats could be run on this river. But when this country was opened up for settlement, and the farmers came in, they soon discovered that in order to farm this land that it must be drained. They got up petitions for state ditches, and today land that used to be swamps and natural reservoirs for Red Lake River is farming land, and the river has gone down from a navigable stream to a creek, that is not navigable at all, and never will be.

To show you the utter uselessness of talking about raising the level of Red Lake River, we quote the following from the Duluth Herald of Dec. 17.

"Bemidji, Minn., Dec. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—In answer to a telegram sent to County Auditor J. L. George of Beltrami county by Congressman Charles A. Lindberg asking for advice regarding the placing of a dam at the mouth of Red Lake river to raise the level of Red Lake, the Beltrami county commissioners passed a resolution requesting the government to lower rather than raise the level of Red lake.

The main objection made by the county board was that should the level of the lake be raised it would make it necessary for several hundred homesteaders living in that vicinity to move to some other place and that it would also be detrimental to the judicial ditches.

WOULD HELP DRAINAGE.

Should the level of Red lake be lowered it would be beneficial to drainage and would also convert many small lakes and low places into meadow lands according to O. L. Dent, ditch referee, and if the level should be raised it would mean that thousands of acres of land would be overflowed with water. Mr. Dent also said that it would retard the outlets of ditches now constructed."

As the river is now, it is under the control of the war department, and it is an impossibility to get any bridges across it, unless they are draw bridges, or placed thirty-two feet high, and they might as well said one hundred feet high so far as the ability to cross one goes.

The lower part of Red Lake River used to be navigable, when Crookston was about the size of Goodridge, and they had a half way stopping place between there and Grand Forks called Fishers Landing. But after the country got settled up and railroads built there was no longer any use for boats, and the people got the river declared unnavigable. The talk about it hindering the running of logs down the river, or any boat of a size that the amount of the water in the river will float is nonsense. Look at the bridges across this river at Thief River Falls and St. Hilaire. Did you ever hear that they in any way interfered with the driving of logs, or running wanagens, down the river? We think not; but if the river had been under the control of the war department, at Thief River Falls that bridge that connects the east and west side would have had to been higher than any building in Thief River Falls.

We have been asked by a large number of farmers why they did not get any copy of the last year's financial statement of Pennington county, so they could see what their their tax money was used for. What answer could we give them? We simply told them that it was economy on the part of our board of county commissioners, but some of them remarked that they guessed that it was more of a scheme to not let the people know what was going on down there. It is business to place a copy of the preceedings of that board, and of that financial statement before every tax payer in this county, and the only way to do it, is to do as they do in many other counties, have a copy of all proceedings published in every newspaper.

Some of the papers are advocating a short session of the legislature, but we always like to see them go the limit, for the reason that meritous laws are the ones left to die in the pigeon hole in a short session, while the "interests" look after their laws in the early part of the session. After they have done this they promptly start all their "log rollers" howling for an adjournment.

PROMPT ACTION WILL STOP YOUR COUGH.

When you first catch a Cold (often indicated by a sneeze or cough), break it up at once. The idea that "It does not matter" often leads to serious complications. The remedy which immediately and easily penetrates the lining of the throat is the kind demanded. Dr. King's New Discovery soothes the irritation, loosens the phlegm. You feel better at once. "It seemed to reach the very spot of my Cough" is one of many honest testimonials. 50c. at your Druggist.—adv.

A TEST FOR LIVER COMPLAINT

MENTALLY UNHAPPY—PHYSICALLY DULL.

The Liver, sluggish and inactive, first shows itself in a mental state—unhappy and critical. Never is there joy in living, as when the Stomach and Liver are doing their work. Keep your Liver active and healthy by using Dr. King's New Life Pills; they empty the Bowels freely, tone up your Stomach, cure your constipation and purify the Blood. 25c. at Druggist.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve excellent for Piles.—adv.

KEEP IT HANDY FOR RHEMATISM.

No use to squirm and wince and try to wear out your Rheumatism. It will wear you out instead. Apply some Sloan's Liniment. Need not rub it in—just let it penetrate all through the affected parts, relieve the soreness and draw the pain. You get ease at once and feel so much better you want to go right out and tell other sufferers about Sloan's. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25 cents of any druggist and have it in the house—against Colds, Sore and Swollen Joints, Lumbago, Sciatica and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief. Buy a bottle to-day.—adv.

YOUR COLD IS DANGEROUS BREAK IT UP—NOW

A Cold is readily catching. A run-down system is susceptible to Germs. You owe it to yourself and to others of your household to fight the Germs at once. Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey is fine for Colds and Coughs. It loosens the Mucous, stops the Cough and soothes the Lungs. It's guaranteed. Only 25c. at your Druggist.—adv.

Subscribe for THE SUNBEAM.

A Little Knowledge.

Mrs. Wheatpit—Do tell! I didn't know Titian was an artist. Miss Wheatpit—Sh, mamma! Of course he was an artist. Mrs. Wheatpit—Well now! I thought he put up one of those preparations for the hair.—Harper's Magazine.

WE HAVE $150,000.00 TO LOAN ON FARMS IN PENNINGTON COUNTY

Write Or Call on Us At FIRST NATIONAL BANK

THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN.

FARMERS & MERCHANTS STATE BANK

Oklee Minn.

The rapid growth of this bank is the best evidence that its policy and methods meet with the approval of the people in our community.

You will find this bank as liberal in its dealings as is consistent with sound banking.

We are at all times prepared to discuss your requirements with you and invite consultation.

Pay your bills with checks on this bank.

Farm Loans At Lowest Rates And On Easy Terms.

Six per cent interest paid on time deposits.

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS—————$14,500.00

J. A. C. Torgerson, V. P. W. B. Torgerson, Cashier.

DO YOUR BANKING WITH FARMERS STATE BANK

GOODRIDGE - - MINNESOTA

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS $12,000.

5 per cent paid on time deposits

Fire and Tornado Insurance Written in Responsible Companies.

FARM LOANS A SPECIALITY

J. M. BISHOP, President JAY PAYNE Vice-President

NICK BUNDHUND, Cashier

We have for sale one of the best quarter sections of land in the town of Highlanding, located one mile south of Highlanding Creamery. This farm will be sold cheap as the owner is a non resident and desires to use the money invested in other business. For terms and full particulars call on W. G. Hunt, Sunbeam, Minn.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Dec 11th. 1914

Department of the Interior U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Dec. 7th 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Matt Bakken, of Rhoda, Minn. who on April 8th, 1909, made Homestead Application Serial No. 04712, for N. ½ N. W. ¼ & S. E. ¼ N. W. ¼, Sec. 9, and who on April 16th, 1909 made additional Homestead Application Serial No. 04735, for S. W. ¼ N. W. ¼, Sec. 9, Township 153 N. Range 40 West Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make Commutation Proof to establish claim to the land above described, before N. W. Tarrant Municipal Judge for the city of Thief River Falls, Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 12th. day of January, 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses: Edward Singer, M. E. Hyland, Ole Skrefeland, of Rhoda, Minn. Stephen Singer of Kratka, Minn.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register.

W. G. Hunt

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

FOR SALE: 120 acres in Section 14, Hickory Township, Pennington County, Minn. Price $1,500.

Nels Fore, Rolland, Minn.

HIGHLANDING BLACKSMITH SHOP.

A Tharaldson, blacksmith of Highlanding will have a full line of buggy and wagon repairs on hand, and will be glad to oblige.

A. Tharaldson

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Dec. 11th 1914

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land office at Crookston Decemuer 3rd, 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Christoffer Nilson of Erie Minn. who on March 16th, 1912 made Homestead Application Serial No 0748, for S ½ S. W. ¼, Section 21 Township 155 N. Range 39 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 21st, day of January 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses: Liot Sigurdson, Nels Graue, Andrew Eilingson, Lars C. Fevig, all of Erie Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register.

U. S. Mail,

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 1.05 p. m., on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.55 p.m

Wm. G. Hunt, p.m.

FIRST STATE BANK,

Of Plummer Minnesota.

GIVE THE BURGLAR THE "HA,HA!" BANK YOUR CASH WITH US

SOME people extend invitations to the THIEF AND HOLDUP MAN. They carry on their persons or in their homes large sums of money. A CHECK BOOK is of no use to the professional thief. Still, a check is AS GOOD AS CASH to the tradesman or for the immediate household wants. If you haven't a bank account

OPEN ONE TODAY.

J.A.DUFFY President, Henry Enderlie, Cashier

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Dec. 18th 1914

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. December 9th 1914.

Notice is hereby given that James Davis, of Erie, Minnesota., who on July 20th 1911, made Homestead Entry Serial No. 00432, for N.W. ¼ S.E. ¼ Section 3, Township 152, N. Range 39 W. 5th. Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before N. W. Tarrant, Municipal Judge for the City of Thief River Falls. at Thief River Falls, Minnesota, on the 19th day of January, 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses: Edward Cottom, Edward Iverson, Rasmus Martinson, Otto Anderson; all of Erie, Minnesota.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register.

Corrected.

Teacher—Earl, did you whisper today? Earl—Yes; wunst. Teacher—Clarence, should Earl have said "wunst?" Clarence—No; he should have said "twicet."—Everybody's.

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Nov. 27th 1914.

Department of the Interior. U.S. Land Offices at Crookston Minn. Nov. 23rd 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Thomas G. Rome of Rhoda, Minn., who on February 8th, 1912 made Homestead Application Serial No. 07282 for Lots 5 and 6. Section 6 Township 152 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Commutatition Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for District of Minn. at Thief River Falls. Minn. on the 5th day of January, 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses: Sam B. Swanson, Ole G. Skreland, of Rhoda, Minn: Andrew Feland, and William G. Hunt, of Sunbeam, Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register.

MONEY TO LOAN ON FARM LAND

MACKEY J. THOMPSON FARM MORTGAGES ST. PAUL, MINNESOTA

CONTRACTS, FIRST AND SECOND MORTGAGES BOUGHT.

10 Great Serials

full of life and action, filled with the fire of fine inspiration and followed by 250 short stories of adventure, will make

The YOUTH'S COMPANION

Better Than Ever in 1915

Then the Family Page, a rare Editorial Page, Boys' Page, Girls' Page, Doctor's Advice, and "a ton of fun," Articles of Travel, Science, Education. From the best minds to the best minds, the best the world can produce for you and everyone in the home. There is no age limit to enthusiasm for The Youth's Companion.

CUT THIS OUT and send it (or name of this paper) with $2.00 for The COMPANION for 1915, and we will send

FREE All the Issues of THE COMPANION for the remaining weeks of 1914.

FREE THE COMPANION HOME CALENDAR for 1915.

THEN The 52 Weekly Issues of THE COMPANION for 1915.

52 Times a Year —not 12.

Send to-day to The Youth's Companion, Boston, Mass., for THREE CURRENT ISSUES—FREE

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED AT THIS OFFICE

THIS YEAR, THE SAME AS LAST YEAR

—THE—

DULUTH HERALD

IS THE

BEST NEWSPAPER IN THE NORTHWEST

Send for sample copies—after you've read them you'll surely want to join The Herald's happy family of satisfied readers.

DAILY BY MAIL—THREE MONTHS FOR $1.00

ADDRESS—HERALD, DULUTH, MINN.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE LOCAL NEWS

Three Dakota banks closed their doors last week, owing to getting too much "dead head" paper on hand.

Miss Marie Causin is spending her holiday vacation with her uncles and aunts at Cavalier, N. Dakota.

The mail on the Plummer route was so late yesterday that it failed to connect with the Rudell and Sunbeam routes.

An auction sale was held at Highlanding on Wednesday, at which some of the farmers disposed of some of their surplus stock and farm machinery.

We were surprised to receive notice from the post master at Rhoda on Tuesday last, that Ed Ruston had removed from there and left no address.

The Kratka writer for the Eleven Towns, s. s. says that we have discovered that they had a warm election down there. We suppose so Stephen, and are sorry that you were not elected for attorney general, but suppose you will have to get along with being post master general for the eastern part of the county, until the department "gets next" to some of your tricks.

Goodridge is still without a post-office, but they must soon receive recognition from the department. There will undoubtedly be many changes of the mail service on the north side of Red Lake River east of Thief River Falls, as soon as the Electric Railroad gets a mail contract as all star routes east of that city will merge into the one line mail route, with prehaps short loop routes or rural delivery.

There is beginning to be some complaint by the patrons of the Erie hall, since the Singer management took hold of it. They will soon begin to lunch the dancers on those snow ball buns that they used to feed the boys on at Kratka. They got them made to order from a pinch of flour and an ounce of air. They then cut them open and made a motion with a knife at a chunk of butter, closed them up, and said, "Here you are, $1.25 please."

G. M. Patterson of Grand Forks purchased a gallon of whiskey for a half breed Indian, at Crookston last Monday morning, and was promptly arrested and bound over to the grand jury, and will undoubtedly be sent to the penitentiary. His only excuse was that he did not know the seriousness of the offense. Any man in northern Minnesota who is caught placing liquor within reach of Indians is likely to peek through the grates of a prison cell on short notice.

SHORT COURSE
THIEF RIVER FALLS SCHOOLS

The Short Course of three months in the Thief River Falls school will open Monday, January 4th. This plan of study is arranged particularly for the young men and women who can spare but a few months each year to attend school, consequently it is of a very practical and useful character. The studies offered will be carpentry; blacksmithing; sewing; cooking; several branches of agriculture, among which will be stock judging, milk testing, seed study, etc, farm law; accounting; arithmetic; correspondence; spelling and writing. A student may choose from this list to suit his convenience and needs. No charges are made for books or any other purposes—the course is free. Students will be enrolled as high school pupils and will be admitted to all the high school activities. Neither is any preparation needed to enroll in this department. Further may be secured from the superintendent of the city schools.

The weather has been extemely cold for the past week.

The gasoline wood saw is in good demand now days.

As there is some difference of opinion regarding getting the Red Lake River declared unnavigable, we wrote D. N. Winton regarding the matter, and we publish his reply in full as follows:

Mr. W. G. Hunt,
Sunbeam, Minn.

Friend Hunt:

I am in receipt of yours of the 8th and glad to hear from you.

Relative to having an act passed in Congress declaring Red Lake River an unnavigable stream, would state that I have for a long time thought this was a proper move to make. The boating which takes place on that river practically amounts to nothing and the inconvenience caused the settlers along the river on account of having to operate ferrys instead of being able to cross river on bridges it a very serious matter, and a source of great inconvenience. I imagine that if you could enlist the services of congressman Steenerson that this might be accomplished, and it certainly would meet with no opposition from us; on the contrary, if I could do anything to be of assistance to you, you can gladly call on me.

I have been in hopes that the Red Lake Indian lands, as well as the Red Lake Indian timber, would be thrown open to market, and that we might get some timber to again operate the mill at Thief River Falls. If this was the case, however, the building of bridges across the river would in no way interfere, it seems to me, with our log driving in case they are properly constructed. I believe another good move, which I think yourself, and possibly the editor of the Eleven Towns might inaugnrate, would be to take up vigorously with Congressman Steenerson the question of opening up at least the farming lands east of you on Red Lake River, lieing in the Red Lake Indian Reservation. There is a big area there which could be easily settled which would make good farms, and it would be a great benefit to all that territory to have it settled. I am inclined to think that if we could all work together on this matter that something could be accomplished.

I had a long talk with Congressman Steenerson on this matter some little time ago, and I know that he is very favorable to the project, but, of course, it is a hard matter to get it through Congress.

I was up to Goodridge yesterday. The development that has taken place all through that territory in the past ten years is wonderful.

Yours very truly,
D. N. Winton.

Cash For Hides and Furs.

If you have Hides or Furs for sale, bring them to the Oklee meat market and get the highest market price in cash.

Meat Market,
Oklee, Minn.

6 Per Cent MONEY 6 Per Cent
MONEY 6 Per Cent

Loans may be obtained for any purpose on acceptable Real Estate security; liberal privileges; correspondence solicited.

A. C. Agency Company,
758 Gas & Electric Bldg.,
Denver Colorado,
and 446 Pierce Bldg.
St. Louis.

EAT

When you are
AT GOODRIDGE, Call at the Goodridg Restaurant and get A cup of HOT COFFEE, or a good warm dinner for 25 cents. Don't forget the sign of

EAT

BARBER SHOP IN CONNECTION

STEPHENSON BROS. Prop.

MINNESOTA NORTHWESTERN ELECTRIC RAILWAY.
TIME TABLE.

Trains going west leave Goodridge at 8:45 A.M and at 1:45 P.M

Arrive at Thief River Falls at 10:00 A. M. and at 3:30 P. M.

Leave Thief River Falls at 7:15 A. M. and at 10:00 A. M.

Arrive at Goodridge at 8:30 A. M. and at 12:10 P. M.

LUMBER AND BUILDING MATERIALS.

When you get ready to build, come in and let us figure your bill and show you our stock of lumber and building materials.

Complete stocks at Thief River Falls, Mavie and Goodridge, Minn.

WINTON-NICHOLS LUMBER COMPANY.

Go to S. P. Johnson, at Oklee

"The Right Place"

Boys Suits from $1.25, to $4.50 per suit. Mens suits, former price $25.00, Now selling for $16.00. $15.00 suits now selling for $8.50

$8.50 suits now selling for $4.50.

Men's shoes from $1.25 to $3.50. Former price $4.00 now $3.25.

Ladies shoes $1.50 to $3.00.

Prints 5 cents per yard. Gingham 8 cents to 10 cents per yard.

All Dry Goods at cost. Men's Caps goes at any price.

Sugar for this week is $6.00 per 100 lbs. Good coffee for 18 cents to 30 cents a pound. Bargains in all kind of goods.

S. P. JOHNSON, Oklee, Minn.

Of course it looks unfair to an ordinary observor to see the people of Rudell post office get a daily mail, and the people of Malone only get mail twice a week, on a stub line arranged to take all the cancellation to post master general Singer, at Kratka.

The school children of the Highlanding school gave a Christmas program and Christmas tree entertainment at the school house last night. The children gave a very good entertainment to the audience; after which Santa Claus remembered them with many presents distributed from the tree.

CITATION FOR HEARING ON FINAL ACCOUNT AND FOR DISTRIBUTION,

ESTATE OF Mrs. Salve Myrum

STATE OF MINNESOTA, COUNTY OF Pennington IN PROBATE COURT.

In the Matter of the Estate of Mrs. SALVE MYRUM Decedent:

THE STATE OF MINNESOTA TO Salve Myrum, and Gunhild Thompson, also known as Nellie Reiersgaard, and all persons interested in the final account and distribution of the estate of said decedent: The representative of the above named decedent, having filed in this Court his final account of the administration of the estate of said decedent, together with his petition praying for the adjustment and allowance of said final account and for distribution of the residue of said estate to the persons thereunto entitled; THEREFORE, YOU, AND EACH OF YOU, are hereby cited and required to show cause, if any you have, before this Court at the Probate Court Rooms in the Court House, in the city of Thief River Falls in the County of Pennington State of Minnesota, on the 19th day of January 1915; at 10 o'clock A. M., why said petition should not be granted.

WITNESS, the Judge of said Court, and the Seal of said Court, this 16th day of December 1914.

[COURT SEAL] WILHELM MICHELET,
Probate Judge.

H. O. KJOMME,
Attorney for Petitioner.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists. Price 75c per bottle.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Coming.

"Have you any unanimity in your family, Mrs. Jobbs?"

"Not yet, ma'am, but we'll ketch it. We get everything that's a-goin'."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Dec. 25th 1914.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land office at Crookston Minn. Dec. 21st, 1914. Notice is hereby given that Harry Stucy, of Hilda Minn. who on October, 3rd 1912 made Homestead Application Serial No 08491, for W ½ N W ¼ Sec. 33, and N E ¼ N E ¼, Section 32 Township 153 N. Range 39 West Fifth Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof, to establish claim to the land above described before Wilhelm Michelet U.S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls, Minnesota on the 20th day of January 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Chas. L. Stucy, Fred Stucy, of Erie, Minn William Lueck, Gilbert G. Hanson, of Hilda, Minn.

Proof made under act of June 6, 1912.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register.

CITATION FOR HEARING ON FINAL ACCOUNT AND FOR DISTRIBUTION,

ESTATE OF Hayes Wade

STATE OF MINNESOTA, COUNTY OF Pennington IN PROBATE COURT.

In the Matter of the Estate of Hayes Wade Decedent:

THE STATE OF MINNESOTA TO Giles Wade and Melvina Wade all persons interested in the final account and distribution of the estate of said decedent: The representative of the above named decedent, having filed in this Court his final account of the administration of the estate of said decedent, together with his petition praying for the adjustment and allowance of said final account and for distribution of the residue of said estate to the persons thereunto entitled; THEREFORE, YOU, AND EACH OF YOU, are hereby cited and required to show cause, if any you have, before this Court at the Probate Court Rooms in the Court House, in the city of Thief River Falls in the County of Pennington State of Minnesota, on the 22nd. day of January 1915; at 10:00 o'clock A. M., why said petition should not be granted.

WITNESS, the Judge of said Court, and the Seal of said Court, this 15th. day of December, 1914.

[COURT SEAL] WILHELM MICHELET
Probate Judge.

J. M. Bishop,
Attorney for Petitioner.

Chinese Criminal Law.

Curiously like the Mosaic and Roman customs, the fixed laws of China are carved in stone and set up in the streets. Chinese criminal law, which is founded on the "Chau Kung," or ritual of Chau, is based upon the accused confessing, and no punishment can ensue until this is brought about. Before the condemned are decapitated they are offered all the samschu they desire to drink, and in most cases they are allowed to choose whether they will ride in a ricksha or be carried in a sedan.—J. S. Thomson's "The Chinese."

Severing Old Ties.

Willie was sent out by his mother to the woodshed to saw and split some stove wood out of a pile of old railroad ties. Going outdoors shortly after, she found the youth sitting on the sawhorse with his head bowed down in his hands. She asked her hopeful why he didn't keep at his work.

"My dear mother," he replied with much feeling, "I find it so hard, so very hard, to sever old ties."—Lippincott's.

FIRST STATE BANK,

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS $11000.00

not merely name;--But a fixed policy,

The men who founded and organized the First State had a definate policy in mind, namely: To organize and conduct a bank that would give to all its patrons the best possible service and the most liberal returns on money deposited that can safely be given by a strong conservative institution.

FIRST STATE BANK,
OKLEE minn,

A. P. [illegible], President. John [illegible], Cashier.

Ole [illegible], Asst. Cashier.

THE PRICHARD Co.
Thief River Falls Minn,

DEALERS IN LUMBER AND FARM MACHIERY.

Located west of the new Soo Depot. Give us a call, and look over our stock of Lumber and Farm Machinery.

H. O. KJOMME
Attorney and Counselor at Law
Mc inn Block
Thief River Falls, - - Minn.

Wilhelm Michelet
U. S. COMMISSIONER
COURT HOUSE
THIEF RIVER FALLS,
MINN.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Nov. 27th 1914.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minnesota November 23rd 1914 Notice is hereby given that Karl A. Korstad, of Erie, Minn. who on October 3rd 1911, made Homestead Application serial No. 06631 for N. E. ¼ Section 21, Township 153 N. Range 40 W. Fifth, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make Commutation proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for Dist. of Minn., at Thief River Falls Minn on the 30th day of December 1914.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Perley P. Palmer, Peder H. Thoreson Peder P. Korstad, Charles Palmer all of Erie, Minn.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam Nov. 27th 1914.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office, at Crookston Minn. Nov. 21st 1914. Notice is hereby given, that Clarence E. Peterson, of Kratka, Minn., who on June 3rd, 1911, made Homestead Entry No. 06259, for Lots 1 & 2. E. ½ N.W.¼. Section 18 Township 153 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before N. W. Tarrant, Municipal Judge for the City of Thief River Falls, Minn. at Thief River Falls Minnesota, on the 30th day of December 1914

Claimant names as witnesses

Stephen Singer, Ole Nelson, Carl Klemmetson, Peter C. Wold, Jack Dunn, all of Kratka, Minn. Roy Hoffman, of Erie, Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal.
Register.

The Sneeze.

People say "God bless me" after sneezing, from the fact that in the days of the plague this terrible malady began with violent sneezing and other indications of cold. The exclamation was thus originally a prayer to be delivered from the plague.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

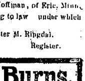
MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

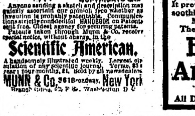
Cuts, Burns,
Bruises, Sores, Wounds and Piles quickly healed with Arnica Salve. It prevents infection, is antiseptic, soothing, healing. Try it once. Money Back If It Fails. The Original and Genuine.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve
"Heals the Hurt"
All Druggists and Dealers, 25c.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH — That's
$50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day

Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 20-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were showing them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing talking points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Why don't you be the first to apply from your vicinity before someone else gets in ahead of you? We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.





The 25th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide-awake men who received our special selling inducement found it necessary to double our output. We are spending thousands of dollars enlarging our sales organization, but to learn all particulars it will cost you only the price of a postal card. Ask for Catalogue 181.

THE VICTOR SAFE & LOCK CO.
CINCINNATI, OHIO

Capacity 20,000 Safes Annually.

The Ambition of Mark Truitt

By
HENRY RUSSELL MILLER

Author of
"THE MAN HIGHER UP," "HIS RISE TO POWER," Etc.

(Copyright, 1913, by The Bobbs-Merrill Company)

CHAPTER XXIV—Continued.

Together he and Mark dragged Piotr to the cab and forced him within. Piotr, dazed by Mark's appearance, resisted but feebly.

Before the grim majesty of approaching death even Piotr's madness was abashed. The supreme consciousness received back the atom that, when imprisoned in flesh, had been Roman. It was Kazia who saw.

"He is dead."

The Matka uttered a low moan, then became silent again, resumed her rigid gazing at the not less still body. Piotr's hand passed over his eyes in a bewildered gesture. The woman who kept the door made the sign of the cross and went quietly out.

Kazia bent over to kiss Roman's forehead. Then Piotr came out of his daze. He caught her roughly and drew her back.

"No!"

"Piotr!"

"You're not fit to touch him."

She turned and went slowly into the kitchen. Piotr followed.

He confronted her and Mark. "You can go now, both of you."

"Oh, Piotr, not now!" Kazia began pleadingly. "The Matka needs me and—"

"We need nothing from you. We weren't good enough for you once. You left us to be a fine lady. Now we don't want you."

"But I came back and you wouldn't let me stay."

"Yes, when you found that Jim Whiting couldn't give you what you wanted. You thought you could use us then—as he did." He nodded toward Mark. "How," his teeth bared in an ugly accusing leer, "how did the Hunky girl get to be such a fine lady?"

"Be still!" Mark stepped close to him, sternly. "Isn't there any decency in that cracked mind of yours? Remember she came to them," he pointed toward the little bedroom, "when they needed some one. You were out filling the streets with your blackguardly rant. And whose money do you think had to keep them alive because you wouldn't do a man's work?"

"A man's work!" Piotr laughed, a horrible startling cackle. "To a cracked brain that isn't to betray and gouge and drive—" He broke off. "Do you mean it was her money?"

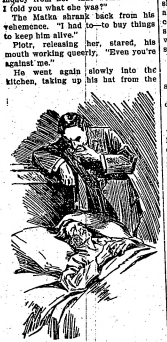
"Who else would have cared?"

Piotr went back into the death room, clutched his mother by the shoulder and shook her cruelly. "Tell me," he cried in her tongue, "have you taken money from her—that woman—when I told you what she was?"

The Matka shrank back from his vehemence. "I had to—to buy things to keep him alive."

Piotr, releasing her, stared, his mouth working queerly. "Even you're against me."

He went again slowly into the kitchen, taking up his hat from the table. He did not stop until he reached the door. There he turned, facing Kazia.



"What Have You Found, Roman? Is It Simple, There?"

"You can have her now. I'm going."

"He's crazy," Mark muttered. "Don't mind him."

With an effort she recalled herself to the situation. "You had better go now. I must take care of the Matka. Will you please telephone to the hospital that I shan't be back tonight?"

"But I can't leave you alone here, while Piotr's at large. I'm going out to arrange for tomorrow. Then I'll come back here."

"It may be best," she agreed.

Two hours later he returned and rapped lightly. Receiving no answer, he tried the door. It opened and he entered quietly.

Hanka lay on a narrow cot, in the sleep of exhaustion. In a chair by the table, head pillowed on one arm, Kazia, too, slept. She stirred uneasily as he entered, then became still. He tiptoed to another chair and began his lonely watch.

The night seemed endless. To sit motionless, looking at the relaxed forlorn figure she made, became impossible. He rose and crept silently into the room where Roman lay. A single candle was burning low in its socket. By its faint flickering glow the waxen face and folded hands seemed not dead, but only at peace. Mark looked long at him, as though Roman held the answer to his questions. Once he leaned over, whispering.

"What have you found, Roman? Is it simple there? Is there a new birth in which mistakes can be paid for? . . . I want to pay."

CHAPTER XXV.

Payment.

It was two days after the funeral. Mark had seen Kazia but for a few minutes, merely long enough to learn her new plans, and then Hanka had been present. Kazia proposed to take care of her, and that they might not have to be apart, to give up her fine position at the hospital; she thought she could obtain a new one that would take up only her days. She had, of course, to find a new apartment.

All day Hanka had been alone in the dismantled flat, thinking not of him who had gone but of the woman who had assumed her protection. Often her head shook in troubled gesture. Hanka had not lost the habit of seeing and understanding many things from her shadowy corner. Not out of grief for the dead, she knew, had the look that haunted her come into Kazia's eyes.

The dinner was over, the dishes washed and put away; this being part of Hanka's share in the new division of labor. She went into the little bedroom whither Kazia had gone to dress. But at the door she stopped, unnoticed, looking at the figure that lay motionless and, face downward on the bed. She started to steal away, then turned again and went timidly to the bedside. She laid a gentle hand on Kazia's hair.

"Little Kazia," she murmured, half frightened at her boldness, "what is troubling you?"

"Nothing, Matka," came the muffled answer.

"Is it because of me? I don't want to be a burden. I can go."

"No, no! You musn't leave me. I'm just tired."

"Heart tired. Is it because of him—your lover?"

"I have no lover."

Kazia rose wearily, and going to the mirror, began to take down her hair. The thick soft tresses fell tumbling around her. Hanka, in troubled wonder, watched the round arm that wielded the comb, the smooth firm shoulders. At Kazia's age Hanka had already begun to wither into an uncomeliness that men passed by undesiring. She went over to the dressing woman and touched timidly the firm, still youthful flesh.

"You are like your mother."

"What was she like?"

"She was like you." Kazia did not smile. "Men saw her and wanted her."

The comb became still. "Did she—did she love my father?"

"Such a love I have never seen."

It had been dark almost an hour when the bell rang. Hanka heard Kazia going to the door and a startled exclamation answered by a mellifluous voice Hanka did not know. The visitor was admitted and taken into the sitting room. To the kitchen came the murmur of Kazia's voice and his, chiefly his.

He had been there but a few minutes when his voice changed. It became eager, with an undertone that perturbed Hanka strangely. Once Kazia uttered a low hurt cry. Hanka rose and crept along the little hall. She crouched in the darkness near the sitting room door, listening intently and wishing she had not been so stupid about English.

"Am I an ogre?" the mellifluous voice was saying.

"I do not love you."

"It is not a question of love. I am not old, but I have lived long enough to prick that illusion. We scientists know what love is."

"I don't care for you in any way," Kazia answered coldly. "Mr. Quinby, you oughtn't to be here. A man in your position—"

"My dear lady, let me remind you that the interest of a man in my position is not to be rejected lightly. With a word I gave you the best position your profession offers a woman. With a word I can take it away. I can relieve you of the necessity of working at all. I can make it impossible for you to find work in this city."

"Threats—"

"My dear lady!" the stranger's voice protested. "I would not do that. I would harm no one. I am a tender-hearted man. I, too, suffer, if by chance others suffer through me." The voice, vibrant with emotion, would have wrung tears of sympathy from a stone. But Hanka, as we have seen, could not weep. "I am only trying to show that those who enlist my interest do not lose by it."

"So you think I am for sale?"

"Forgive me, my dear," said Quinby, "but that is gross. Say rather that, since you have struck a responsive chord in my breast, it will be my pleasure to be guardian of your welfare, to lift you out of the sordid struggle for existence. And have I not proved that? You lay in the hollow of my hand. With a breath I could have destroyed your reputation. But I kept silence, I advanced your interests, I held you tenderly in my heart. Woman, you have bewitched me. I want you."

Hanka understood at least his last words and she understood his tone. She crept closer and through the crack of the sitting room door saw Kazia elude Quinby's outstretched arms.

At the same moment she heard a halting step on the stairway. She opened the outer door and went out to meet Mark Truitt, whispering excitedly to him in Polish. When he, astonished by her appearance and emotion, would have spoken, she clapped a hand over his mouth, and clutching him by a sleeve, drew him into the hall. She pointed through the crack.

Again Quinby reached toward Kazia and again she recoiled.

"Don't—don't touch me."

"Why do you rebuff me? You're not an ignorant child. You must have known what my interest in the hospital and in you this year has meant. You wouldn't have taken my help unless you were willing to give me what I want."

"What is it—what is it you want?"

"I want you to be to me what you have been to Truitt."

"And if—if I refuse?"

"I have never yet told that I caught Truitt and a sun-browned woman alone in an Ottawa hotel under circumstances—I have no reason to love him. I have refrained from telling only for your sake. I—Why do you force me to say this? I have no wish to be brutal to you. Seeing you has turned my head. But you will not—surely you can not refuse."

She dropped back into a chair, covering her face with her hands. When she looked up, she wore again the strange rapt expression.

"You said," she whispered chokingly, "you said—you would pay."

"Yes, yes!" he cried eagerly.

"You are trying to rob Mark Truitt—to force him out of the company. Will you—give that up?" Still in the same broken whisper.

"Even that. You are worth everything."

"And will you give me time—to send him away—and never let him know?"

"It is for you to make conditions. Ah! my dear—"

In triumph Quinby stepped toward her and bent over to take her hand.

"Don't do that!" said a voice behind him.

Quinby whirled. For a long silent minute the trio faced one another.

Then Mark, white of face, hands working convulsively, went slowly to the stupefied Quinby, who seemed turned to stone. He did not resist even when Mark's hand leaped up and caught him cruelly by the throat. He was pressed back until his back met the wall. The grip tightened. Quinby's face grew purple. He squirmed and tried to cry out, but only a hoarse gurgle resulted.

Kazia came to herself. She sprang to her feet and caught Mark's arm, breaking his grip.

"Don't hurt him. He's not worth it."

Gently, without taking his eyes from Quinby, Mark freed his arm from her clasp. But he did not touch Quinby again. The first murderous impulse died. He turned contemptuously away from him.

Quinby, released from the cruel hand and eyes, started across the room. Mark whirled upon him once more.

"Stop!"

Quinby stopped. "This," he said weakly, "is a trap."

"Set by yourself." Mark turned to Kazia with a helpless mirthless laugh. "What is my cue? Shall I kick him down stairs—or spring his dirty trap?"

"Let him go," she answered listlessly.

Mark shook his head. "Not without paying. He said," grimly, "he was willing to pay."

"I'm not afraid of you," Quinby muttered a feeble defiance. "What can you say of me that isn't true of you?"

"Ah!" Mark drew a sharp whistling breath. Quinby shrang back, his hands going protectively to his aching throat. "Now you shall pay. You—" He broke off with a gesture of disgust. "I find I've no stomach for blackmail just now. I'll telephone Henley to come over. He'll know how to handle this situation."

Then Quinby was indeed fear-struck. He clutched Mark's arm tightly. "Don't tell him!" he quavered. "We can settle this ourselves. I didn't really intend to force you out of the company, only to—to frighten you a little."

Mark jerked his arm free. "So you're a coward as well as a fraud! But I knew that before. This is too sickening. You'd better go."

Quinby started again to go.

"Wait!"

Quinby waited.

"You seem to be afraid of Henley. You have reason. Tomorrow at ten-thirty you have an engagement to meet him at his office—I have just made it for both of you. At eleven I will meet him. You know best what Henley in his present mood will do if he gets wind of your latest adventure in philanthropy. Now go."

Quinby went. The next morning, prompt on the hour, he kept his engagement with Henley.

A weakness for epigrams has defeated more than one fair project. After a discreet interval—long enough, as he thought, for the interment of the dead past—Jeremiah Quinby sought to revive the paleontological propaganda. He found that for once the public memory was long and laid more stress on the fateful twins of production than on ichthyosauri and kindred monsters. The air was darkened with poisoned barbs of satire and derision. There fell a great philanthropist, pierced to the heart. That is to say, Quinby retired from the realm of beneficence and his rival reigned absolute once more.

A heavy troubled silence was in the little room. Kazia stood passively by the table, waiting for Mark to speak. After a long while he raised his eyes to hers.

"Kazia, you poor romantic fool! Did you think any amount of money was worth that—even if he had kept his word? When I think what—oh, how could you think of it!"

"I wanted," she answered in a queer lifeless voice, as if benumbed by this crisis into which they had stumbled, "I wanted to do one thing for you—and your happy city."

"My happy city! What happiness could it have had, built on that? And I—hadn't you given me enough?"

"I gave you only love."

"Only—!"

"It was all I had to give. It wasn't enough."

"I wish I could have given as much as you." The wistful words slipped out.

He stepped closer to her.

"Kazia, this has got to end."

"Yes."

"You must marry me tomorrow."

Life, and with it pain, flickered once more.

"You are trying to give something now. But I'm glad you said that."

"I'm asking you to give something more. You will?"

"Why do you ask it?"

"Because I've hurt you enough. I did hurt you when I let you—led you to sin, even though we kept it a secret from the world. I want to make you happy—you said yourself we've broken a law. I want happiness—and I can't have it, knowing that for all I've taken from you I've given nothing."

She tried to smile; the sight of it cut to his heart. "Every reason but the one. But I'm glad you wouldn't lie to me now." The smile faded. "You see. I can't."

"Kazia, dear," he pleaded, "we started wrong—let's begin over again. Let's give love a new birth."

His voice rang with a longing she could not understand, but he could not touch her. She shook her head spiritlessly.

"There can be no new birth so long as there is memory. You could never forget that I—that I am not clean."

"Do you think me so small as to hold my own fault against you? It is my sin, too." He stepped closer, reaching out his arms to take her. "Come, dear, your poor little reasons aren't enough."

She shrank away from his clasp, trembling. Into the tired white face came a look of fear and despair. She glanced this way and that, as though she sought an escape. Her hands went to her face. Then she forced them down and her eyes to his.

"I thought—I thought you understood. . . . I—I wasn't clean—before we sinned. The doctor who helped me, I—" She could say no more.

Suspicion had not prepared him for this. He stared foolishly at her, showing how he recoiled from the fact her broken words had revealed. He did not then think it strange that the shame of a woman he did not love should stab so deeply.

"Kazia, how could you—how could you!"

After a while he forgot his own pain a little in pity for the silent stricken woman. Again his arms reached out for her and would not be denied.

"It must make no difference." His sternness was all for himself. "What am I to blame you? You sold your body to live. I gave my soul to feel others squirming under my feet. You hurt only yourself. I've hurt every one I touched. I hurt you. If I hadn't been a coward years ago when we first loved, you would never have been tempted. Your sin is only a part of mine. It is you who have most to forgive."

Slowly she raised her head to look at him. "And you," came a broken incredulous whisper, "and you would marry me—even now?"

"All the more now!"

For an instant a faint pitiable hope, defying knowledge, shone in her eyes. "Have I been mistaken? Only love could ignore—ah! don't lie to me now. It wouldn't be kindness. Is it just pay—or love?"

He tried to look away from her and could not. Her eyes held his, seeking through them to hunt out the last truth hidden in his soul. With a rough convulsive movement he drew her head down on his shoulder.

"How can I know what it is? It must be love, since I need you and want to make you happy. If it isn't now, surely love will come when we start right. Kazia, don't refuse me this chance to make up to you a little of the harm I've done you."

Her answer was a stifled sob. He felt her body relax; her head rested heavily on his shoulder.

She released herself. He did not try to hold her. They faced each other in a heavy throbbing silence.

His soul quivered with the cruelty of it; it would have been infinitely easier for him if she had been the unfaithful one. His words echoed mockingly in his ears, torturing him with their hopeless futility.

"You will not?"

"You couldn't say it—and I don't want pay."

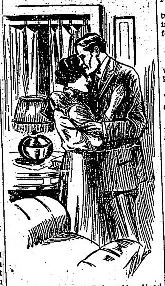
The sight of her had become more than he could endure. He turned away and dropped into a chair, letting his head fall to the table.

After a little he felt her hand gently smoothing his hair. And soon she began to speak in a voice unsteady at first but gathering strength as she went on.

"You mustn't reproach yourself. I know you'd love me if you could. And you mustn't think I refuse just for your sake. I'd do what you want—since you want it so much—only it would be misery for me always. You wouldn't want that. . . . And this—it seems I've always known it would come. It was a chance I took for a few months' happiness. I've had my happiness. . . . You haven't harmed me—I beg you to believe you haven't harmed me."

"Kazia—"

But the hoarse cry died away. There was nothing to say. His humiliation was complete. Magdalen that she was, he looked up to her from depths of self-abasement she could never know.



He Felt Her Body Relax—Her Head Rested Heavily on His Shoulder.

The voice was growing unsteady again. "When I think how it might have ended—if you hadn't come tonight—! I'm glad you came—to save me from —that. . . . And now—I think you had better—go. . . ."

CHAPTER XXVI.

The Penitent.

It was a red sunrise, that Sabbath morning, and the ruddy glow lingered in the eastern sky long after the sun had swung clear above the hills. A slanting shaft found his window and fell upon him as he dreamed. He stirred restively.

He awoke slowly, reluctantly, drifting toward consciousness through a golden haze that vibrated with faraway dwindling harmonies.

"Where have I heard that before?"

After a little he remembered—a youth, full of dreams and credulous, joyously facing his great adventure.

"And tomorrow I set out on a new adventure. It was a long way from there to here. . . . I wonder, would any man, given the choice, travel his road a second time?"

He rose and went to the window.

Two years had passed, crowded with effort, crowned with achievement. From the window where he stood, still seeking to recover the lost harmonies, he could see the beginning of his happy city, all ready for the great experiment.

He bathed and dressed—in the new bathroom that was his one concession to the luxuriousness of the old life—and descended to the kitchen. The pleasant odor of frying ham met his nostrils; there was a hotel in Bethel now at which the Truitts generally had their meals, but sometimes, of a leisurely Sabbath morning, Simon still served as cook.

But the bent old man at the south window had forgotten breakfast. For a little Mark watched him without salutation.

"Good morning, father," he said at last.

"Good morning, Mark." Simon turned reluctantly from the window. "I was jest thinkin' it'll be 20 years tomorrow ye went away—an' now there's that."

"Yes. Your dream has come true. If you live until tomorrow night you'll have seen it all—steel made in Bethel."

Breakfast ready, they sat down and began the meal in silence. Mark ate lightly, absently.

Ever since Mark had returned, Simon had been vaguely sensible of a suffering to which some solacing word might be said. But the word would not come to his unschooled lips.

"I wish," Simon thought, "I could give him something."

It was a real suffering Simon sensed, no day without its hour of payment, no hour so heavy as on that Sabbath morning.

From across the town came a mellow clamor, the voice of the new church bell calling the faithful.

The clamor ceased and after an interval resumed for a few last taps before he rose and went into the house for his hat and cane. When he emerged again he found Simon sitting on the front stoop.

"Goin' to church?"

"I guess I'd better."

"Yes. Courtney likes ye to. Do ye," Simon asked suddenly, "still believe what he preaches?"

Mark hesitated a moment. "I suppose I never did. I'd like to, but I can't. It takes a certain quality of mind, I suppose—or early habit. I can't quite see—" There was that in Mark's tone which made Simon look up quickly. "I can't see the logic of letting another's suffering pay for our sins."

"Ye'll be late," Simon suggested.

Doctor Hedges, driving along the valley road, drew up at the station until the eleven o'clock train, having discharged its Bethel passengers, sped onward. The passengers were two, a man and a woman, strangers to the doctor and therefore alien to Bethel. The woman stood on the otherwise deserted platform looking uncertainly around her. The man made directly for the doctor.

"Do you," he demanded, "know where Mark Truit lives?"

"Why, yes." The doctor bestowed a friendly smile on the stranger. "I guess I do."

"Can you show me how to find it?"

"Yes." Hedges glanced toward the woman; she was entering the station. "I can do better. I can take you there."

"If you will." And the stranger promptly entered the buggy.

The doctor clucked to his horse and turned hospitably, with conversational intent, to his guest. But the latter forestalled him.

"Live here?"

"Between whiles."

"Ha!" The stranger smiled, a brief wintry smile. "Doctor, I see. Do you know Truitt?"

"Well," Hedges spat ruminatively, "that's a pretty risky thing to say of any man, but I guess—"

"What do they think of him here?"

"They think he's a great man—and it's his own—"

"He's a great mechanic," said the guest shortly.

"I," drawled the doctor, "know more about men than mechanics, but—"

"What do you think of him?" the guest interrupted again.

The doctor, hoping to complete at least one sentence, quickened his drawl. "He's a man who's either losing himself or finding himself, I'm not sure—"

"Meaning?"

"You wouldn't," chuckled the doctor, "have time for the explanation." He drew up before the little cottage. "He lives here."

"Hardly!" the visitor retorted. "I take the three o'clock train. Much obliged." He sprang, more briskly than his rotundity promised, out of the buggy.

The doctor drove away still chuckling. The chuckle would not have died even had he known his passenger to be none other than that Henley whose star, flashing with comet-like swiftness and brilliancy above the horizon of speculation, had in two years achieved full planetary dignity and importance. But the doctor was not a student of Wall street astronomy.

"Humph!" The luminary surveyed the weather-beaten little cottage with its unkempt yard and near-by smithy. "So he lives here. Affectation, of course!"

He strode up the path and saluted the old man on the stoop.

"Mr. Truitt lives here, I believe?"

"I'm Simon Truitt. But I reckon ye want Mark, Mr. Henley."

"Ha! You know me. His father, I suppose?"

"Yes. I saw ye once, years ago, when he was in the hospital."

"I remember," said Henley, who had forgotten that incident completely. "Is Truitt about?"

"He's at church."

"Church! Surely not a habit?"

"He goes gener'ly, since he come back."

"Hmm! Something new for Truitt." Henley frowned. "And my time's short. I suppose I may as well save some of it by going over the plant now. There's no objection, I suppose?"

"No; I," Simon ventured uncertainly, "I was jest about to go over myself."

"I'll be glad of your company," Henley graciously replied. "Shall we start?"

An hour later Henley emerged from the shadowy finishing mill, blinking hard in the midday's sunshine and trying to revise his estimate of the situation.

He followed Simon out on a tiny cape that jutted into the river, whence they could see other evidences of Truitt's lucidity—the hospital, the bank, the store, the cluster of homes gleaming white on the hillside.

And Henley saw—not as the experts had seen, happy if they perceived all that had been reduced to fact—but with the eyes of one whose greatness was to see what might be, what could be. And as he looked part, at least, of Truitt's dream was unfolded before him. The valley a teeming, throbbing citadel of industry. The city clambering over the slopes, capturing the heights, reclaiming other slopes from the forest, until in length and breadth, in numbers and importance, it rivaled that other fastness where he, the master, had been known only as a lieutenant. The creator in him, not yet killed, but only obscured by the madness of exploitation, thrilled at the sight.

"He sees big," he muttered. "He sees big. I didn't think it was in him."

He stood on the point, scanning thoughtfully the noble valley, forgetting his silent companion. "He's picked out a great site. . . ." And then to Henley came a vision of his own.

That city and citadel his, creature of his genius and might, doing his bidding, yielding him homage and tribute, carrying forth his fame to the paling of lesser men's reputations, capital of an empire—his empire.

"By God!" he breathed aloud. "By God! . . . And it's possible—how did the builders of cities overlook this place? . . . It would be better than doing faker's tricks with stocks and bonds."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Gumdrops.

An old man in Indianapolis, who has lost all his teeth, takes his "toothlessness" philosophically.

It is difficult for him to articulate as he did in the days of his youth, and he admits that gums are not quite as useful as teeth when it comes to talking.

In fact his sole dependence on his gums in his old days has led him to refer to his misfortune cheerfully by calling his words "gumdrops."

HAPPY NEW YEAR
1915
1915

(Copyright, by W. G. Chapman.)

Brother Sinner

By Harry Irving Greene

JOHN HARDING was not a mild man, neither was he inclined to be superstitious. As a rule he had small belief in signs, presentiments or hunches, but just now all this was different. For he had seen certain signs that one of his shoats had been stolen; had a presentiment that a certain unworthy known as "Shiftless Joe" had done the foul deed, and possessed a hunch that he was about to horsewhip Joe until he outsquealed any pig critter that was ever lifted over a fence on a moonless night. So, being a man of deeds as well as thoughts, he took down his trusty bull whip and started swampward towards the abode of his victim to be.

Now Shiftless Joe was not reckoned among the 400 of John Harding's community, and when one is told that there were but 400 people in that district he will understand that the statement has a well-defined meaning. He lived alone at the edge of the big swamp, fishing in summer when it was not too hot; trapping in winter when it was not too cold; sleeping and loafing the year around, he was avoided by the entire hard-working, hard-praying settlement.

It was a long tramp from the home of Harding to the miserable cabin of the trapper, and by the time the former had arrived there his righteous wrath against the slothful, sinful being whom he sought was grim and unrelenting. "My house is the house of prayer; but ye have made it a den of thieves," he quoted sternly. Then he raised his fist and smote upon the wretched door such a blow as Moses of old might have struck when he split the rock and bade the waters gush forth. From within a squeaky, rat-like voice bade him enter, and through the narrow doorway he crowded.

He glanced around the cluttered place. From one corner a thin, weasel-like figure arose and stood cringing before the mighty one, fear thickly spreading his face as he noted the formidable whip tightly clutched in the equally formidable hand. "Good morning, Mr. Harding. Happy New Year," he said, fawningly.

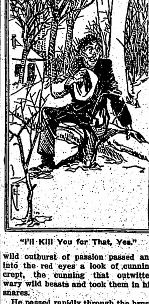
"It is a bad morning for you, and it is going to be an unhappy beginning of the New Year," he retorted. "Steal my shoat, will you!' The smaller man threw up his hands with a protesting gesture as quick denial leaped to his lips. But Harding silenced him with a roar.

"Don't add lying to your thievery, you sheep-killing cur. One false word from your lips and your punishment shall be doubled. You thought you were cunning, but in several places I found the mark of that club foot of yours while you were making off with my good pork. Now what have you to say?"

"Nothing, except that I did not steal —" As a bear strikes, so did the heavy arm of the invader shoot out, the hand gripping the thin shoulder like a trap.

"I warned you if you lied your punishment should be doubled. Has not the good Lord commanded 'Thou shalt not steal?'. Thank your stars that you did not live in those days, for you would have been stoned to death. Rather, bless your luck that you have fallen into the hands of a compassionate man." With a hiss the lash fell and a shuddering scream burst from the lips of the cringing one. But from then on no sound escaped them until, at last released from the iron grip, Joe fell limply upon the frozen ground. Sternly gazing down upon his victim for a moment, Harding turned away. "It was the just punishment of a rogue by a just man," he muttered to his conscience.

From a shapeless, writhing heap the fallen one arose, his small eyes glinting with the deadly glare of a prodded serpent. "Whip me, you black devil—you usurer—you forecloser of widow's mortgages—you dodger of taxes—you —you—" The voice rose to an inarticulate scream of rage. "By the Eternal, I'll kill you for that—yes, murder you in cold blood." Then the first wild outburst of passion passed and into the red eyes a look of cunning crept, the cunning that outwitted wary wild beasts and took them in his snares.



"I'll Kill You for That, Yes."

He passed rapidly through the brush until he came to a hollow log, from which he drew an ancient gun which he had stolen and hidden there years before. None knew that he possessed it, and he chuckled at his own cunning as he plotted his details. He knew that Harding's family was away and that John would attend church that night and return home alone after services. Nothing would be easier than to raise a window of his foe's house during his absence, and upon his return kill him at his own threshold and, leaving the weapon behind him, flee. Joe was known to never carry a weapon, and the leaving of this firearm behind, together with the forcible entry of the place, would throw the crime upon mysterious tramps or burglars. As darkness fell he prowled forth, assured himself that Harding had gone, then, prying open the window, entered and sat waiting by the low burning lamp until the sound of distant wheels reached his ears. He had not loaded his weapon yet, having reasoned that should he be caught before the act with an unloaded gun he would be deemed guilty of a far less offense than should it be loaded. But now the time had come.

From his pocket he drew some powder and poured it into the yawning muzzle, laying the bullet upon the table. Next, he must have some paper wadding for both powder and ball, and a book lay close at hand. Without looking at its cover he tore forth a handful of leaves and, selecting one, laid the others aside as he raised the first piece preparatory to crumpling it up and ramming it home upon the powder. As he did so the words upon the leaf caught his eye, and slowly he read:

"Thou shalt not kill."

His hand trembled and his face grew gray. Then in the night without he heard the beat of hoofs before the barn, coupled with the loud command to "whoa," and with a gasp he clutched another sheet. Before his eyes swam the words:

"Likewise I say unto you, there is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth."

Slowly the gun slipped from his hand, his form relaxed and he sank into a chair, his head falling upon the table.

Five minutes later John Harding, fresh from unharnessing his team, throwing open the door, started back in fear and amazement. Then softly he approached the man who was now shuddering as he had beneath the whip, laid the gun aside and gazed at the mutilated Bible. Upon the floor he saw the dropped pages, gathered them up, read them, then slowly understood.

For the second time that day Harding's hand fell upon the shoulder of the other, but this time it was with a parent's gentleness.

"Brother sinner," he whispered huskily.

The New Year Presents.

The French "etrennes," both in name and in date, preserve historical continuity with a clearness that our Christmas box has lost. According to the ancient Roman legend the custom went back to the rape of the Sabines, or, rather, to the reconciliation of the two peoples afterward, when Romulus cut green branches from a grove of the goddess Strenua and presented them to Tatius. Thereafter Romans gave each other branches for luck January 1, together with figs, dates, honey and a small coin—such luck gifts being termed "strenae." Even emperors were powerless to put down a custom that in time became burdensome and the church similarly failed and was driven to Christianizing the practice.

CLIPPING THE WORK HORSES

If Animal Is Worked to Extent of Perspiring It Dries Off Quickly When Hair Is Cut Short.

Logic and practical experience indicate that any horse which must regularly exert itself to the point of profuse perspiration should be clipped whenever the hair is long. Unless a horse obliged to labor until covered with perspiration has the long hair taken off, it naturally holds its perspiration for a considerable time, and if the animal is left outside in cold weather, or even if stabled in other than a warm building, it is likely to suffer from coughs, colds, pneumonia and other diseases that may be brought on by such a condition. On the other hand if the long hair is clipped off and the horse is forced to labor to the extent of perspiring, it dries off very quickly when left standing, but in all cases it is wise to use a blanket. The blanketed horse with short hair will dry off quickly while the same animal with a coat of long hair dries off very slowly with or without a blanket, and the probability that it would be disabled in some manner is much greater for the unclipped horse. It is growing to be quite a common practice to clip work horses in the fall, the owner being careful to instruct the driver to use a blanket whenever the animal is left to stand on a cold day, and when stabled in any but a comfortable building.

LAY OUT VEGETABLE GARDEN

Good Idea to Have Everything Planned So That Gardener Knows How to Go Ahead at Proper Time.

(By R. A. M'GINTY, Colorado College.)

It is a good idea to take a piece of paper and lay out the garden to scale, with lines to show the location of rows of different vegetables. Arrange to plant the quick-maturing crops near the front of the garden and the long-season vegetables, asparagus bed, strawberries, etc., at the back of the garden. Have the rows to run the long way of plot, as this allows for easier cultivation.

Attractive Package of Vegetables.

By making such a plan, a succession of crops can be arranged for and the greatest yield obtained from the ground. One may arrange to have beans follow lettuce, or radishes may be put between the cabbage rows. Everything is planned so that the gardener knows just how to go ahead with the work when planting times comes around.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

An idle garden grows weeds.

* * *

Everybody knows more than anybody. Read!

* * *

Of fruits, market the best and evaporate the rest.

* * *

Weeds, self-seeded, are "a run on the bank" that spells failure.

* * *

Pinch the new wood of the blackberry back to within three or four feet of the ground.

* * *

Save a few of the best cockerels for Christmas time. Lots of folks think they are better eating than turkey.

* * *

Keep the cellar window open except in the very coldest weather. The vegetables and fruit will keep longer for it.

* * *

If you have a well that is exposed to the cold, keep it thawed out every day. A single day's start may make you a week's trouble with broken pipes.

* * *

Keep a pail full of water standing at the barn so if fire should happen to break out you can put a stop to it quick. But try hard to avoid such a calamity.

* * *

Get around with the chores before dark. Half the bad farm fires are caused by poking around in the dark with a lantern. Don't do it any more than you have to.

* * *

Where water pipes come to the open air, build a box around them and pack with straw. Jack Frost is no respecter of pipes. You must fight him or he will win you out every time.

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

WAITING FOR YOU

Yes, waiting for every farmer or farmer's son — any industrious American who is anxious to establish for himself a happy home and prosperity. Canada's hearty invitation this year is more attractive than ever. Wheat is higher but her farm land just as cheap and in the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta

160 Acre Homesteads are Actually Free to Settlers and Other Land at From $15 to $20 per Acre

The people of European countries as well as the American continent must be fed—thus an even greater demand for Canadian Wheat will keep up the price. Any farmer who can buy land at $15.00 to $30.00 per acre —get a dollar for wheat and raise 20 to 45 bushels to the acre is bound to make money—that's what you can expect in Western Canada. Wonderful yields also of Oats, Barley and Flax. Mixed Farming is fully as profitable an industry as grain raising. The excellent grasses, full of nutrition, are the only food required either for beef or dairy purposes. Good schools, markets convenient, climate excellent.

Military service is not compulsory in Canada but there is an unusual demand for farm labor to replace the many young men who have volunteered for service in the war. Write for literature and particulars as to reduced railway rates to Superintendent Immigration, Ottawa, Canada; or to

R. A. GARRETT
311 Jackson Street, St. Paul, Minn.
Canadian Goverment Agent.

PROBABLY COULD DO WORK

Soldier's Occupation in Civil Life Certainly Should Have Fitted Him for the Job.

Real war conditions sometimes give rude shocks to the professional soldier trained to arms in the well-ordered days of peace. Here is a case in point. A Prussian landwehr company was being mustered into service and there were many things to be done. Uniforms, equipment, rifles, were to be distributed, rolls prepared, reports made out, and quartermaster's lists checked up. The captain had his hands full. He ordered his first sergeant to find a noncom, who could write neatly and figure a little. The first sergeant was equal to the emergency. Corporal Kammermeyer was promptly summoned and crisply detailed for duty as company clerk. The corporal reported to the captain, who looked him over with a mixture of wonder and distrust.

"So you can figure, corporal," he said.

"A little, sir, at your service."

The captain still looked dubious.

"What is your trade in civil life, anyway?" he said.

"I am professor of mathematics, captain," was the reply.

Travesty on Real Falstaff.

Yarmouth has a claim upon all Englishmen quite independently of its associations with the breakfast bloater, remarks a writer in St. Nicholas. For it was the home of Shakespeare's Falstaff, who appears to have been a man of exemplary piety. The Falstaffs were an old Yarmouth family.

"A Falstolfe or Falstaff," writes John Richard Green, "was bailiff of Yarmouth in 1281. Another is among the first of its representatives in parliament, and from that the members of that family filled the highest municipal offices. John Falstolfe, a man of considerable account in the town, purchased lands at the close of the fourteenth century in Caistor, and became the father of Sir John Falstolfe, who, after a distinguished military career, was luckless enough to give his name to Shakespeare's famous character. In Yarmouth, however, he was better known as a benefactor to the great church of St. Nicholas.

At the First Signs

Of falling hair get Cuticura. It works wonders. Touch spots of dandruff and itching with Cuticura Ointment, and follow next morning with a hot shampoo of Cuticura Soap. This at once arrests falling hair and promotes hair growth. For free sample each with 32-p. Skin Book, address post card: Cuticura, Dept. X, Boston. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

Signs of War.

So many of our busy burghers are standing in front of the war maps, arguing and declaiming, that dozens of safes and pianos are being hoisted into high buildings with almost nobody to observe the phenomenon.

And on Broadway a man repaired a tire to a gallery of four boys.—New York Tribune.

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it

Bears the Signature of Chas H. Fletcher
In Use For Over 30 Years.
Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

Inconsistent.

"The English are queer people."

"You think so?"

"Yes. In time of peace they treated Tommy Atkins with contempt and made him sore, and now in time of war they treat him with so much good liquor that they make him drunk."

YOUR OWN DRUGGIST WILL TELL YOU
Try Murine Eye Remedy for Red, Weak, Watery Eyes and Granulated Eyelids; No Smarting—just Eye comfort. Write for Book of the Eye by mail Free. Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago

Quite Old Fashioned.

"Did she marry well?"

"No; it was a case of true love."—Harvard Lampoon.

The more a man knows the less he thinks he knows.

COSTLY METHOD OF REVENGE

Procedure in Europe Reminded Andrew Carnegie of a Somewhat Humorous Incident.

Andrew Carnegie, in a recent interview on peace, said to a New York reporter:

"A lad twenty killed a man and woman in Sarajevo. All Europe is now fighting to avenge this wrong. England alone is spending $35,000 a minute, according to Sidney Webb, on gunpowder.

"Well, this is such an expensive way to avenge a wrong that it reminds me of the man at the banquet.

"A man entered the cloakroom, at the end of a banquet, and began to smash in silk hat after silk hat.

"'Hold on, boss! What fo' yo' smashin' all dem high hats?' demanded the attendant.

"'I'm looking for my own," the gentleman answered. 'It's an opera hat—collapsible, you know. None of these seem to be it.'"

The self-made man can't understand why anyone should prefer a family tree to a business plant.

Fatima Cigarettes—mild, delightful Turkish-Blend. The choicest of leaf—always a pure and wholesome smoke—always satisfactory.

"Distinctively Individual"

Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

20 for 15¢

FATIMA TURKISH BLEND CIGARETTES
Cameron & Cameron Co. RICHMOND, VA.
LIGGETT & MYERS TOBACCO CO. SUCCESSOR
NO GOLD TIPS BUT FINEST QUALITY

Highest Cash Prices
Paid For CHICKENS, VEAL, CREAM
WRITE FOR SPECIAL PRICE LIST.
THE R. E. COBB CO., 14, 3rd Street, St. Paul, Minn.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Patent Lawyer, Washington, D.C. Advice and books free. Rates reasonable. Highest references. Best services.

WE BUY, sell farms, unimproved lands, business properties from owner, any kind, anywhere. Write Interstate Realty Co., Durango, Iowa

Don't Persecute Your Bowels

Cut out cathartics and purgatives. They are brutal, harsh, unnecessary Try

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

Purely vegetable. Act gently on the liver, eliminate bile, and soothe the delicate membrane of the bowel. Cure Constipation, Biliousness, Sick Headache and Indigestion, as millions know.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

BLACK LEG LOSSES SURELY PREVENTED by Cutter's Blackleg Pills. Low-priced, fresh, reliable; preferred by Western stockmen, because they protect where other vaccines fail. Write for booklet and testimonials.
10-dose pkge. Blackleg Pills $1.00
50-dose pkge. Blackleg Pills 4.00
Use any injector, but Cutter's best.
The superiority of Cutter products is due to over 15 years of specializing in vaccines and serums only.
Insist on Cutter's. If unobtainable, order direct.
The Cutter Laboratory, Berkeley, Cal., or Chicago, Ill.

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 52-1914.

COLT DISTEMPER

Can be handled very easily. The sick are cured, and all others in same stable, no matter how "exposed," kept from having the disease, by using SPOHN'S LIQUID DISTEMPER CURE. Give on the tongue, or in feed. Acts on the blood and expels germs of all forms of distemper. Best remedy ever known for mares in foal. One bottle guaranteed to cure one case. 50c and $1 a bottle; $5 and $10 dozen of druggists and harness dealers, or sent express paid by manufacturers. Cut shows how to poultice throats. Our free Booklet gives everything. Local agents wanted. Largest selling horse remedy in existence—twelve years.

SPOHN MEDICAL CO., Chemists and Bacteriologists, Goshen, Ind., U. S. A.

Knee-Deep in Knickers

A Business Adventure of Emma McChesney

By EDNA FERBER

Author of "Dawn O'Hara," "Buttered Side Down," etc.

Copyright by Frederick A. Stokes Company

When the column of figures under the heading known as "Profits," and the column of figures under the heading known as "Loss" are so unevenly balanced that the wrong side of the ledger sags, then to the listening stockholders there comes the painful thought that at the next regular meeting it is perilously possible that the reading may come under the heads of assets and liabilities.

There had been a meeting in the offices of the T. A. Buck Featherloom Petticoat company, New York. The quarterly report had had a startlingly lop-sided sound. After it was over Mrs Emma McChesney, secretary of the company, followed T. A. Buck, its president, into the big, bright showroom. T. A. Buck's hands were thrust deep into his pockets.

He turned to face Emma McChesney.

"Well," he said, bitterly, "it hasn't taken us long, has it? Father's been dead a little over a year. In that time we've just about run this great concern, the pride of his life, into the ground."

Mrs. Emma McChesney, calm, cool, unruffled, scrutinized the harassed man before her for a long minute.

"What rotten football material you would have made, wouldn't you?" she observed.

'Oh, I don't know," answered T. A. Buck, through his teeth. "I can stand as stiff a scrimmage as the next one. But this isn't a game. You take things too lightly. You're a woman. I don't think you know what this means."

"Maybe I don't take myself seriously. I'd have been dead ten years ago if I had. But I do take my job seriously. Don't forget that for a minute. You talk the way a man always talks when his pride is hurt."

"Pride! It isn't that."

"Oh, yes, it is. I didn't sell T. A. Buck's featherloom petticoats on the road for almost ten years without learning a little something about men and business. When your father died, and I learned that he had shown his appreciation of my work and loyalty by making me secretary of this great company, I didn't think of it as a legacy—a stroke of good fortune."

"No?"

"No. To me it was a sacred trust—something to be guarded, nursed, cherished. And now you say we've run this concern into the ground. Do you honestly think that?"

T. A. shrugged impotent shoulders. "Figures don't lie." He plunged into another fathom of gloom. "Another year like this and we're done for."

Emma McChesney came over and put one firm hand on T. A. Buck's drooping shoulder. It was a strange little act for a woman—the sort of thing a man does when he would hearten another man.

"Wake up!" she said, lightly. "Wake up, and listen to the birdies sing. There isn't going to be another year like this. Not if the planning, and scheming, and brain-racking that I've been doing for the last two or three months mean anything."

T. A. Buck seated himself as one who is weary, body and mind.

"Got another new one?"

Emma McChesney regarded him a moment thoughtfully. Then she stepped to the tall show case, pushed back the sliding glass door, and pointed to the rows of brilliant-hued petticoats that hung close-packed within.

"Look at 'em!" she commanded, disgust in her voice. "Look at 'em!"

T A. Buck raised heavy, lack-luster eyes and looked. What he saw did not seem to interest him. Emma McChesney drew from the rack a skirt of king's blue satin messaline and held it at arm's length.

"And they call that thing a petticoat! Why, fifteen years ago the material in this skirt wouldn't have made even a fair-sized sleeve."

T. A. Buck regarded the petticoat moodily. "I don't see how they get around in the darned things. I honestly don't see how they wear 'em."

"That's just it. They don't wear 'em. There you have the root of the whole trouble."

"Oh, nonsense!" disputed T. A. "They certainly wear something—some sort of an—"

"I tell you they don't. Here. Listen. Three years ago our taffeta skirts ran from thirty-six to thirty-eight yards to the dozen. We paid from ninety cents to one dollar and five cents a yard. Now our skirts run from twenty-five to twenty-eight yards to the dozen. The silk costs us from fifty to sixty cents a yard. Silk skirts used to be a luxury. Now they're not even a necessity."

"Well, what's the answer? I've been pondering some petticoat problems myself. I know we've got to sell three skirts today to make the profit that we used to make on one three years ago."

T. A. rose as wearily as he had sat down. Even the most optimistic of watchers could have discerned no gleam of enthusiasm on his face.

"I thought," he said listlessly, "that you and I had tried every possible scheme to stimulate the skirt trade."

"Every possible one, yes," agreed Mrs. McChesney, sweetly. "And now it's time to try the impossible. The possibilities haven't worked. My land! I could write a book on the decline and fall of the petticoat, beginning with the billowy white muslin variety, and working up to the present slinky messaline affair. When I think of those dear days of the glorious—er—past, when the hired girl used to complain and threaten to leave because every woman in the family had at least three ruffled, embroidery-flounced white muslin petticoats on the line on Mondays—"

The lines about T. A. Buck's mouth relaxed into a grim smile.

"Remember that feature you got them to run in the Sunday Sphere? The one headed 'Are Skirts Growing Fuller, and Where?'"

"Do I remember it!" wailed Emma McChesney. "And can I ever forget the money we put into that fringed model we called the Carmencita! We made it up so it could retail for a dollar ninety-five, and I could have sworn that the women would maim each other to get to it. But it didn't go. They won't even wear fringe around their ankles."

T. A.'s grim smile stretched into a reminiscent grin. "But nothing in our whole hopeless campaign could touch your Municipal Purity league agitation for the abolition of the form-hugging skirt. You talked public morals until you had A. Comstock and Lucy Page Gaston looking like Parisian apaches."

A little laugh rippled up to Emma McChesney's lips only to die away to a sigh. She shook her head in sorrowful remembrance.

"Yes. But what good did it do? The newspapers and magazines did take it up, but what happened? The dressmakers and tailors, who are charging more than ever for their work, and putting in half as much material, got together and knocked my plans into a cocked hat."

They were both laughing now, like a couple of children. "And, oh, say!" gasped Emma, "remember Moe Selig of the Fine-Form Skirt company, trying to get the doctors to state that hobble skirts were making women knock-kneed! Oh, mercy!"

But their laugh ended in a little rueful silence. It was no laughing matter, this situation. T. A. Buck shrugged his shoulders, and began a restless pacing up and down. "Yep. There you are. Meanwhile—"

"Meanwhile, women are still wearing 'em tight, and going petticoatless."

Suddenly T. A. stopped short in his pacing and fastened his surprised and interested gaze on the skirt of the trim and correct little business frock that sat so well upon Emma McChesney's pretty figure.

"Why, look at that!" he exclaimed, and pointed with one eager finger.

"Mercy!" screamed Emma McChesney. "What is it? Quick! A mouse?"

T. A. Buck shook his head, impatiently. "Mouse! Lord, no! Plaits!"

"Plaits!"

She looked down, bewildered.

"Yes. In your skirt. Three plaits at the front left, and three in the back. That's new, isn't it? If outer skirts are being made fuller, then it follows—"

"It ought to follow," interrupted Emma McChesney, "but it doesn't. It lags way behind. These plaits are stitched down. See? That's the fiendishness of it. And the petticoat underneath—if there is one—must be just as smooth, and unwrinkled, and scant as ever. Don't let 'em fool you."

Buck spread his palms with a little gesture of utter futility.

"I'm through. Out with your scheme. We're ready for it. It's our last card, whatever it is."

There was visible on Emma McChesney's face that little tightening of the muscles, that narrowing of the eyelids which betokens intense earnestness.

"Not now. Just because it's our last card I want to be sure that I'm playing it well. I'll be ready for you tomorrow morning in my office. Come prepared for the jolt of your young life."

For the first time since the beginning of the conversation a glow of new courage and hope lighted up T. A. Buck's good-looking features. His fine eyes rested admiringly upon Emma McChesney standing there by the great show case. She seemed to radiate energy, alertness, confidence.

"When you begin to talk like that," he said, "I always feel as though I could take hold in a way to make those famous jobs that Hercules tackled look like little Willie's chores after school."

"Fine!" beamed Emma McChesney. "Just store that up, will you? And don't let it filter out at your finger tips when I begin to talk tomorrow."

The little scarlet leather clock on Emma McChesney's desk pointed to 9:29 a. m. when there entered her office an immaculately garbed, miraculously shaven, healthily rosy youngish-middle-aged man who looked ten years younger than the harassed, frowning T. A. Buck with whom she had almost quarreled the evening before. Mrs. McChesney was busily dictating to a sleek little stenographer.

"'Morning!" said Emma McChesney, looking up briefly. "Be with you in a minute. . . . and in reply would say we regret that you have had trouble with No. 339. It is impossible to avoid pulling at the seams in the lower grade silk skirts when they are made up in the present scant style. Our Mr. Spalding warned you of this at the time of your purchase. We will not under any circumstances consent to receive the goods if they are sent back on our hands. Yours sincerely. That'll be all, Miss Casey."

She swung around to face her visitor as the door closed. If T. A. Buck looked ten years younger than he had the afternoon before, Emma McChesney undoubtedly looked five years older. There were little, worried, sagging lines about her eyes and mouth.

T. A. Buck's eyes had followed the sheaf of signed correspondence, and the well-filled pad of more recent dictation which the sleek little stenographer had carried away with her.

"Good Lord! It looks as though you had stayed down here all night."

Emma McChesney smiled a little wearily. "Not quite that. But I was here this morning in time to greet the night watchman. Wanted to get my mail out of the way." Her eyes searched T. A. Buck's serene face. Then she leaned forward, earnestly.

"Haven't you seen the morning papers?"

"Just a mere glance at 'em. Picked up Burrows on the way down, and we got to talking. Why?"

"The Rasmussen-Welsh Skirt company has failed. Liabilities three hundred thousand. Assets one hundred thousand."

"Failed! Good God!" All the rosy color, all the brisk morning freshness had vanished from his face. "Failed! Why, girl, I thought that concern was as solid as Gibraltar." He passed a worried hand over his head. "That knocks the wind out of my sails."

"Don't let it. Just say that it fills them with a new breeze. I'm all the more sure that the time is ripe for my plan."

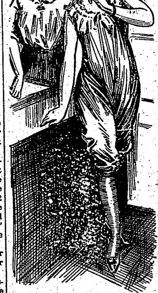
T. A. Buck took from a vest pocket a scrap of paper and a fountain pen, slid down in his chair, crossed his legs, and began to scrawl meaningless twists and curlycues, as was his wont when worried or deeply interested.

"Are you as sure of this scheme of yours as you were yesterday?"

"Sure," replied Emma McChesney, briskly. "Sartin-sure."

"Then fire away."

"Here's the plan. We'll make featherloom petticoats because there still are some women who have kept their senses. But we'll make them as a side line. The thing that has got to keep us afloat until full skirts come in again will be a full and complete line of women's satin messaline knickerbockers made up to match any suit or gown, and a full line of pajamas for women and girls. Get the idea?



"Say, I'd Go Without My Lunch for a Week to Get It."

Scant, smart, trim little taupe-gray messaline knickers for a taupe gray suit, blue messaline for blue suits, brown messaline for brown—"

T. A. Buck stared, open-mouthed, the paper on which he had been scrawling fluttering unnoticed to the floor.

"Look here!" he interrupted. "Is this supposed to be humorous?"

"And," went on Emma McChesney, calmly, "in our full and complete, not to say nifty line of women's pajamas—pink pajamas, blue pajamas, violet pajamas, yellow pajamas, white silk—"

T. A. Buck stood up. "I want to say," he began, "that if you are jesting, I think this is a mighty poor time to joke. And if you are serious I can only deduce from it that this year of business worry and responsibility has been too much for you. I'm sure that if you were—"

"That's all right," interrupted Emma McChesney. "Don't apologize. I purposely broke it to you this way, when I might have approached it gently. You've done just what I knew you'd do, so it's all right. After you've thought it over, and sort of got chummy with the idea, you'll be just as keen on it as I am."

"Never! I never will approve it!"

"Oh, yes, you will. It's the knickerbocker end of it that scares you. Nothing new or startling about pajamas, except that more and more women are wearing 'em, and that no girl would dream of going away to school without her six sets of pajamas. Why, a girl in a regulation nightie at one of their midnight spreads would be ostracized. Of course I've thought up a couple of new kinks in 'em—new ways of cutting and all that, and there's one model—a washable crepe, for traveling, that doesn't need to be pressed—but I'll talk about that later."

T. A. Buck was trying to put in a word of objection, but she would have none of it. But at Emma McChesney's next words his indignation would brook no barriers.

"Now," she went on, "the feature of the knickerbockers will be this: They've got to be ready for the boys' spring trip, and in all the larger cities, especially in the hustling middle western towns, and along the coast, too, I'm planning to have the knickerbockers introduced at private and exclusive exhibitions, and worn by—get this, please—worn by living models. One big store in each town, see? Half a dozen good-looking girls—"

"Never!" shouted T. A. Buck, white and shaking. "Never! This firm has always had a name for dignity, solidness, conservatism—"

"Then it's just about time it lost that reputation. It's all very well to hang on to your dignity when you're on solid ground, but when you feel things slipping from under you the thing to do is to grab on to anything that'll keep you on your feet for a while at least. I tell you the women will go wild over the knickerbocker idea. They've been waiting for it."

"It's a wild-cat scheme," disputed Buck hotly. "It's a drowning man's straw, and just about as helpful. I'm a reasonable man—"

"All unreasonable men say that," smiled Emma McChesney.

"—I'm a reasonable man, I say. And heaven knows I have the interest of this firm at heart. But this is going too far. If we're going to smash we'll go decently, and with our name untarnished. Pajamas are bad enough. But when it comes to the firm of T. A. Buck being represented by — by — living model hussies stalking about in satin tights like chorus girls, why—"

In Emma McChesney's alert, electric mind there leapt about a dozen plans for winning this man over.

"I expected just this," she said. "And I prepared for it." She crossed swiftly to her desk, opened a drawer, and took out a flat package. "I expected opposition. That's why I had these samples made up to show you. I designed them myself, and tore up 50 patterns before I struck one that suited me. Here are the pajamas."

She lifted out a dainty, shell-pink garment, and shook it out before the half-interested, half-unwilling eyes of T. A. Buck.

"This is the jacket. Buttons on the left; see? Instead of the right, as it would in a man's garment. Semi-sailor collar, with knotted soft silk scarf. Oh, it's just a little kink, but they'll love it. They're actually becoming. I've tried 'em. Notice the frogs and cord. Pretty neat, yes? Slight flare at the hips. Makes 'em set and hang right. Perfectly straight, like a man's coat."

T. A. Buck eyed the garments with a grudging admiration.

"Oh, that part of it don't sound so unreasonable, although I don't believe there is much of a demand for that kind of thing. But the other—the—the knickerbocker things—that's not even practical. It will make an ugly garment, and the women who would fall for a fad like that wouldn't be of the sort to wear an ugly piece of lingerie. It isn't to be thought of seriously—"

Emma McChesney stepped to the door of the tiny wash room off her office and threw it open.

"Miss La Noyes! We're ready for you."

And there emerged from the inner room a trim, lithe, almost boyishly slim figure attired in a bewitchingly skittish-looking garment consisting of knickerbockers and snug brassiere of king's blue satin messaline. Dainty black silk stockings and tiny buckled slippers set off the whole effect.

"Miss La Noyes," said Emma McChesney, almost solemnly, "this is Mr. T. A. Buck, president of the firm. Miss La Noyes, of the 'Gay Social Whirl' company."

Miss La Noyes bowed slightly and rested one white hand at her side in an attitude of nonchalant ease.

"Pleased, I'm shaw!" she said, in a clear, high voice.

And, "Charmed," replied T. A. Buck, his years and breeding standing him in good stead now.

Emma McChesney laid a kindly hand on the girl's shoulder. "Turn slowly, please. Observe the absence of unnecessary fullness about the hips, or at the knees. No wrinkles to show there. No man will ever appreciate the fine points of this little garment, but the women!

"Do you mean to tell me," burst from the long-pent T. A. Buck, "that you wear 'em too?"

"Crazy about 'em. Miss La Noyes, will you just slip on your street skirt, please?"

She waited in silence until the demure Miss La Noyes reappeared. A narrow, straight-hanging, wrinkleless cloth skirt covered the much discussed undergarment. "Turn slowly, please. Thanks. You see, Mr. Buck? Not a wrinkle. No bunchiness. No lumps. No crawling up about the knees. Nothing but ease, and comfort, and trim good looks."

T. A. Buck passed his hand over his head in a dazed, helpless gesture. There was something pathetic in his utter bewilderment and helplessness in contrast with Emma McChesney's breezy self-confidence, and the show girl's cool poise and unconcern.

"Wait a minute," he murmured, almost pleadingly. "Let me ask a couple of questions, will you?"

"Questions? A hundred. That proves you are interested."

"Well, then, let me ask this young lady the first one. Miss—er—La Noyes, do you honestly and truly like this garment? Would you buy one if you saw it in a shop window?"

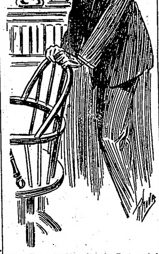
Miss La Noyes' answer came trippingly and without hesitation. She did not even have to feel of her back hair first.

"Say, I'd go without my lunch for a week to get it. Mrs. McChesney says I can have this pair. I can't wait till our prima donna sees 'em. She'll hate me till she's got a dozen like 'em."

"Next!" urged Mrs. McChesney, pleasantly.

But T. A. Buck shook his head. "That's all. Only—"

Emma McChesney patted Miss La Noyes lightly on the shoulder, and smiled dazzlingly upon her. "Run along, little girl. You've done beautifully. And many thanks."



"I Believe in You Now! Dad and I Both Believe in You."

Miss La Noyes, appearing in another moment dressed for the street, stopped at the door to bestow a frankly admiring smile upon the abstracted president of the company, and a grateful one upon its pink-cheeked secretary.

"Hope you'll come and see our show some evening. You won't know me at first, because I wear a blonde wig in the first scene. Third from the left, front row." And to Mrs. McChesney: "I cer'nly did hate to get up so early this morning, but after you're up it ain't so fierce. And it cer'nly was easy money. Thanks."

Emma McChesney glanced quickly at T. A., saw that he was pliant enough for the molding process, and deftly began to shape, and bend, and smooth and pat.

"Let's sit down, and unravel the kinks in our nerves. Now, if you do favor this new plan—oh, I mean after you've given it consideration, and all that! Yes, indeed. But if you do, I think it would be good policy to start the game in—say—Cleveland. The Kaufman-Oster company of Cleveland have a big, snappy, up-to-the-minute store. We'll get them to send out announcement cards. Something neat and flattering-looking. See? Little stage all framed up. Scene set to show a bedroom or boudoir. Then, thin girls, plump girls, short girls, high girls. They'll go through all the paces. We won't only show the knickerbockers: we demonstrate how the ordinary petticoat bunches and crawls up under the heavy plush and velvet top skirt. We'll show 'em in street clothes, evening clothes, afternoon frocks. Each one in a different shade of satin knicker. And silk stockings and cunning little slippers to match. The store will stand for that. It's a big ad for them, too."

Emma McChesney's hair was slightly tousled. Her cheeks were carmine. Her eyes glowed.

"Don't you see! Don't you get it! Can't you feel how the thing's going to take hold?"

"By Gad!" burst from T. A. Buck, "I'm darned if I don't believe you're right—almost—But are you sure that you believe—"

Emma McChesney brought one little white fist down into the palm of the other hand. "Sure? Why, I'm so sure that when I shut my eyes I can see T. A. Senior sitting over there in that chair, tapping the side of his nose with the edge of his tortoise-shell-rimmed glasses, and nodding his head, with his features all screwed up like a blessed old gargoyle, the way he always did when something tickled him. That's how sure I am."

T. A. Buck stood up abruptly. He shrugged his shoulders. His face looked strangely white and drawn. "I'll leave it to you. I'll do my share of the work. But I'm not more than half convinced, remember."

"That's enough for the present," answered Emma McChesney, briskly. "Well, now, suppose we talk machinery and girls, and cutters for a while."

Two months later found T. A. Buck and his sales manager, both shirt-sleeved, both smoking nervously, as they marked, ticketed, folded, arranged. They were getting out the travelers' spring lines. Entered Mrs. McChesney, and stood eyeing them, worriedly. It was her dozenth visit to the stock room that morning. A strange restlessness seemed to trouble her. She wandered from office to show room, from show room to factory.

"What's the trouble?" inquired T. A. Buck, squinting up at her through a cloud of cigar smoke.

"Oh, nothing," answered Mrs. McChesney, and stood fingering the piles of glistening satin garments, a queer, faraway look in her eyes. Then she turned and walked listlessly toward the door. There she encountered Spalding—Billy Spalding of the coveted middle-western territory, Billy Spalding, the long-headed, quick-thinking; Spalding the persuasive, Spalding the mixer, Spalding on whom depended the fate of the T. A. Buck featherloom knickerbocker and pajama.

"'Morning! When do you start out?" she asked him.

"In the morning. Gad, that's some line, what? I'm itching to spread it. You're certainly a wonder-child, Mrs. McChesney. Why, the boys—'

Emma McChesney sighed, somberly. "That line does sort of—well, tug at your heart-strings, doesn't it?" At eight the next morning there burst upon Mrs. McChesney a distracted T. A. Buck.

"Hear about Spalding?" he demanded.

"Spalding? No."

"His wife 'phoned from St. Luke's. Taken with an appendicitis attack at midnight. They operated at five this morning. One of those had-it-been-twenty-four-hours-later-etc. operations. That settles us."

"Poor kid," replied Emma McChesney. "Rough on him and his brand-new wife."

"Poor kid! Yes. But how about his territory? How about our new line? How about—"

"Oh, that's all right," said Emma McChesney, cheerfully.

"I'd like to know how! We haven't a man equal to the territory. He's our one best bet."

"Oh, that's all right," said Mrs. McChesney again, smoothly.

A little impatient exclamation broke from T. A. Buck. At that Emma McChesney smiled.

"I'm going out with that line. I'm going to leave a trail of pajamas and knickerbockers from Duluth to Canton."

"You! No, you won't!" A dull, painful red had swept into T. A. Buck's face. It was answered by a flood of scarlet in Mrs. McChesney's countenance.

"I don't get you," she said. "I'm afraid you don't realize what this trip means. It's going to be a fight. They'll have to be coaxed and bullied and cajoled, and reasoned with. It's going to be a 'show-me' trip."

T. A. Buck took a quick step forward. "That's just why. I won't have you fighting with buyers, taking their insults, kowtowing to them, salving them. It—it isn't woman's work."

Emma McChesney was sorting the contents of her desk with quick, nervous fingers. "I'll get the twentieth century," she said, over her shoulder. "Don't argue, please. If it's no work for a woman then I suppose it follows that I'm unwomanly. For ten years I traveled this country selling T. A. Buck's featherloom petticoats. My first trip on the road I was in the twenties—and pretty, too. I'm a woman of thirty-seven now."

She arose, and shut her desk with a bang, locked it, and turned a flushed and beaming face toward T. A. Buck, as he stood frowning before her.

"Your father believed in me—from the ground up. We understood each other, he and I. You've learned a lot in the last year and a half, T. A. Junior-that-was, but there's one thing you haven't mastered. When will you learn to believe in Emma McChesney?"

She was out of the office before he had time to answer, leaving him standing there.

In the dusk of a late winter evening just three weeks later, a man paused at the door of the unlighted office marked "Mrs. McChesney." He looked about a moment, as though dreading detection. Then he opened the door, stepped into the dim quiet of the little room, and closed the door gently after him. Everything in the tiny room was quiet, neat, orderly. It seemed to possess something of the character of its absent owner. The intruder stood there a moment, uncertainly, looking about him. Then he took a step forward and laid one hand on the back of the empty chair before the closed desk. He shut his eyes and it seemed that he felt her firm, cool, reassuring grip on his fingers as they clutched the wooden chair. The impression was so strong that he kept his eyes shut, and they were still closed when his voice broke the silence of the dim, quiet little room.

"Emma McChesney," he was saying aloud, "Emma McChesney, you great big, fine, brave, wonderful woman, you! I believe in you now! Dad and I both believe in you."

MINNESOTA
HISTORICAL SOCIETY

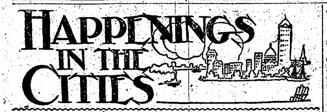
THE SUNBEAM.

Complete

84215

VOL. XIV. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, JANUARY 1, 1915. NO. 42.



Chicago Children Appeal to Storks in the Zoo

CHICAGO.—Cy De Vry, head animal keeper at Lincoln park, was sitting in his office next to the tigers' cage in the lion house opening his mail the other day when he came across a letter in the large unsteady scrawl of a child. It read as follows:

"Mr. Stork, Lincoln Park, Chicago: Dear Mr. Stork—Please send me a black baby brother with blue eyes. I am lonely and want somebody to play with. I want a black baby brother because they are pretty. Be sure he has blue eyes. I have blue eyes and I like them. Mamma said I could have a black baby if I wanted one. Truly yours, NORMA."

Mr. De Vry smiled, moved his fat black cigar to the other end of his mouth, called the stenographer, and dictated the following reply:

"Dear Norma—Your letter received. I had a talk with the storks this morning and told them what you wanted. They said they were very busy now, but would attend to your request as soon as they found time. Yours very truly,

CY DE VRY,
"Keeper of the Storks."

Mr. De Vry soon came upon another letter printed in a childish hand. It read:

"Dear Stork Keeper—Please send a baby to Aunt Julia. From "RUTH."

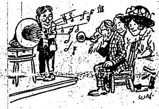
Mr. De Vry dictated a reply similar to the one sent to Norma.

"I continually receive letters from children asking for babies," he said. "The children see the storks in the park and their parents tell them the birds are 'baby expresses.' We have four storks and they are kept busy. I have been married twelve years, but they have not had time to visit me."

eaching Kansas People How to Listen to Music

OPEKA, KAN.—Kansas claims the first and only school in the country in which the general public is taught how to listen to music intelligently. is a school of music appreciation, run by the state, not for musicians, but or those who love music, and is intended to give the laymen an understanding of music which is ordinarily confined to those of more or less musical experience.



A great many people do not at concerts and know little about good things of music because they not understand it. Kansas started out to change this condition and to show that Kansas was looking for an opportunity to learn something about music, nearly one hundred thousand persons studied the course in music appreciation the first year it was in existence, and it is expected that close to a quarter of a million people will take the courses during the present winter.

Prof. Frank A. Beach, head of the music department of the Kansas State Normal school, is the originator of the plan. He asked the state to buy for is department a phonograph and the necessary records to form a complete music appreciation course, starting with the simplest melodies and gradually extending into the classics. But the state school authorities, having read e jokes about the phonograph, refused, so Professor Beach bought it out of his own pocket and began giving regular graded lessons in music by the phonograph to the teachers.

In a few weeks the value of the course was seen, and the state purchased the instrument and also a player-piano for the school and has purchased additional phonographs for the use of the movable music appreciation courses that are traveling through the state.

Indianapolis Wireless Amateurs Organize a Club

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—The recent organization of all amateur wireless operators in and about Indianapolis and the formation of a permanent body known as the Hoosier Radio club has brought to light the fact that Indianapolis is more active perhaps than any other city of its size in this country in the field of amateur wireless telegraphy. There are more than forty operators here and some of the wireless stations which have been equipped are regarded as being quite as efficient and powerful as many of the commercial wireless stations of the country.

In fact, it was recently established through an interesting chain of circumstances that Carl Dean, one of the members of the local amateur organization, had established what is regarded as the amateur distance record for sending. One night young Dean in attempting to get in communication with another of the local stations flashed his name and address instead of his call. A few days later he received a letter from Archie Thomas, an operator at Penekese, Mass., stating that he had "picked up" the message with his instrument, but that his outfit was not powerful enough to send back a greeting to Dean. It has been estimated that Dean's message covered nearly nine hundred miles.

Sudden Spread of Heroin Habit Alarms St. Paul

ST. PAUL, MINN.—So sudden and alarming is the growth of the heroin habit in St. Paul that Chief of Police O'Connor has asked for the passage of an ordinance according to which the mere possession of heroin will constitute an offense, unless the possessor is a druggist, a physician or a veterinarian; or unless he can show that he obtained the drug through a physician's prescription. But such a prescription may not be filled more than once. The penalties will be a fine of $50 to $100 and imprisonment for thirty to ninety days.

THIS HEROIN WILL MAKE YOU VERY BRAVE

The old-time "dope fiend," as Chief O'Connor explains, was worthless enough, yet as soon as he "hit the pipe" his only desire was to lie down and dream. But the heroin victim no sooner swallows a few tablets than he's seized with a desire to do something bold and startling. A great many robberies, especially where the robber acts quickly and runs great risks, have been inspired by heroin. The user of the drug becomes so self-confident and artificially brave that, regardless of his age or his previous character, he may easily commit a crime both reckless and atrocious.

It's only within the last year or eighteen months that the heroin habit has spread seriously in St. Paul. But now a large proportion of the youths arrested here are so dependent on "the dope" that, if kept without it over night in a cell, they are well-nigh frantic before morning. They get the drug, it is said, mainly from other "fiends" who peddle the tablets in poolrooms and saloons.

NO COFFEE FOR SMOOT

Senator Reed Smoot, in consequence of his Mormon training, uses no stimulants—no tobacco, alcohol, coffee or tea. No one who has ever undertaken to go through life without the use of coffee or tea has any idea of the petty annoyances that such abstinence entails. A man can quit drinking malt, vinous, or spirituous liquors, and his friends merely remark: "On the wagon, eh?" and let it go at that. They don't ask why he quit, and usually do not insist on his drinking, regardless of what may be the prevailing notion to the contrary. Anybody knows that when a man quits drinking he does so because he does not wish to take all the natural finish off his insides and die ahead of schedule, or have a befuddled brain, such as one can see on the charts in any doctor's office.

But with a man who does not drink coffee or tea it is different. Everybody desires to know why. Wherever Smoot goes to dine people ask: "Do you find that coffee makes you nervous?" "Don't you drink it for breakfast even?" "Did you ever try that Battle Creek substitute for coffee?" "Does it keep you awake?" And, oh, a great many more.

Of late years, in order to avoid a scene, Smoot usually takes a cup of coffee when it is offered to him, but does not drink it. But this avails him little. Sooner or later his hostess inquires:

"Do you find your coffee too strong?" or, "Did you get cream and sugar?" Then the truth leaks out and the questions begin.

"HANSI," ALSATIAN ARTIST

Not long ago a mild sensation was created when John Waltz, an Alsatian artist and writer, widely known under the pseudonym of "Hansi," was condemned by the German authorities to a year's imprisonment on account of a book for children which he had written and illustrated. In this book, which was called "Mon Village," he dealt in a humorous and satirical vein with life in his native village, and he was lavish both with pen and pencil in criticism of the German masters of Alsace-Lorraine and praise of the French, its rulers of yesterday.

Since then "Hansi" has produced another work, which, together with its predecessor, has become so enormously popular in France since the outbreak of war against Germany that copies are scarcely to be obtained. This, "The History of Alsace for Little Children, Told by Their Uncle Hansi," gives little Alsatians a survey of the story of their native land that is anti-German in every line. And while this book and "Mon Village" are selling like hot cakes in France and doubtless being smuggled into Alsatian homes by the hundred, there to be scanned with delight spiced with the thought of what may befall if "the men from across the Rhine" get wind of the treasured volumes, "Hansi" himself is fighting in the French army against the nation which he has so consistently and humorously criticized in word and picture.

MAJ. GEN. SAM HUGHES

©INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE

One of the most picturesque figures in public life in Canada is Maj. Gen. Sam Hughes, minister of militia. His admirers call him independent and efficient; his critics say he is a marvel of indiscretion. He organized Valcartier camp, where the Canadian contingent was trained for the European war, and, bossing the job to suit himself, succeeded in arousing a lot of adverse criticism. But on his return from England he wiped all that out with this typical speech:

"I have it on the word of the late Lord Roberts that Valcartier camp displayed on the part of your humble servant, a capacity for organization and driving power, unsurpassed in military history."

But Hughes was not long in finding fresh trouble. General Lessard, a French-Canadian officer, who did valiant service in South Africa, but who is ineligible for active service now on account of failing eyesight, as general officer commanding the Toronto district, ordered a surprise mobilization of troops for the purpose of testing the efficiency of his organization to meet a possible invasion of German-Americans.

Hughes did not approve. But instead of reprimanding the G. O. C. privately, he blazed forth his criticism in a public address. Immediately the fat was in the fire. Opposition papers said little. But government papers forthwith demanded Hughes' head.

MISSOURI BOY SHOWS KANSAS

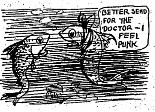
Everyone in Kansas, and particularly in the Seventh congressional district, is talking about a former Columbia and Mexico, Mo., boy, Jouett Shouse. He moved to Kinsley, Edwards county, from his former home in Lexington, Ky., on November 18, 1911, and on November 3, 1914, was elected to represent the largest congressional district of the Union.

Shouse is the son of the late Rev. John S. Shouse, one of the most widely known and beloved ministers of the Christian church. During the period from 1892 to 1898, Mr. Shouse had charges in Columbia and Mexico. His son Jouett was a student at the University of Missouri. In 1911, through Shouse's efforts, the delegates to the state convention from the Seventh went to Topeka with instructions for Champ Clark. The state convention instructed for Champ Clark. And Kansas was one of the first states to have a whirl at the Clark boom. Next year Shouse was elected a state senator and his brilliant work in that position resulted in his election to congress. Only twice before has that district sent a non-Republican to Washington.

WASHINGTON CITY SIDELIGHTS

Fish Doctor Wanted for Government Hatcheries

WASHINGTON.—Congress has been asked by the bureau of fisheries of the department of commerce for an appropriation of $2,500 annually to cover the salary of a family physician for all the domesticated fishes of the United States. It has been estimated by fish experts in the employ of the government that epidemics among infant fish at government hatcheries cost more than $1,000,000 a year. These epidemics usually occur among fish less than six months of age, and the damage worked by disease is greatly increased when the adult value of the fish is taken into consideration.



BETTER SEND FOR THE DOCTOR—I FEEL PUNK

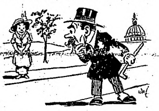
For $2,500 a year, officials of the bureau say they can obtain the services of a fish pathologist, whose training has made him an expert in diseases of the finny youngsters.

Once the $2,500 is secured, it is proposed to retain a male fish pathologist who has made a life work of one of the strangest paths of scientific endeavor known. There are barely a score of recognized fish pathologists in the United States at the present time, it is said, and one of the possible sources of difficulty the government may experience is the employment of such an expert at a salary of only $2,500 a year. He will be required to make his headquarters at Washington and receive here the reports of threatened outbreaks of epidemics at government hatcheries in any part of the country.

It is not particularly well known to the general public that trout and salmon are greatly troubled with a disease which in the human being would be considered somewhat close to a goitre. This is a swelling of the thyroid gland in the throat of a salmon or a trout, which soon becomes apparent by a swelling of the throat, and eventually results in the death of the afflicted fish. At the present there is no known remedy for the disease, and it is to begin a study of this and similar ailments that the fish doctor is needed.

Many Eligible Bachelors in the National Capital

WASHINGTON has a long list of eligible bachelors. Among them is the new associate justice of the Supreme court, Judge McReynolds. However, he is by no means a misogamist. He is fond of the society of girls and likes to do nice things for them and pay them little attentions. The third assistant postmaster-general, Alexander Dockery, is another bachelor. At his home in Missouri he is a political force. He was at one time governor of the state.



There is also John Barrett, director of the Pan-American union. He is a man of some means, with a taste for society.

The presence of the diplomatic corps in Washington naturally means the presence of a host of young attaches, not all eligible, perhaps, but dear to the heart of the debutante and the hostess. And there are six foreign ministers here who are bachelors—namely, Don Roberto Brenes Mesen from Costa Rica, Mehdi Khan from Persia, Dr. Alberto Membreno from Honduras, Dr. Carlos Manuel de Cespedes from Cuba, Viscount d'Alte from Portugal and Constantin Brun from Denmark.

The senate has a full allowance of bachelors, and the house bristles with them. Moreover, an unusual number of army and navy bachelors now occupy positions of trust and importance in the national capital.

Finger-Print System Proves Useful to the Army

BRIG. GEN. GEORGE ANDREWS, as adjutant general of the army, has made a report to the war department in regard to the successful operation of the finger-print system of identification in the detection of military offenders. At present, he says, the adjutant general's office has on file the finger-print records of 202,244 individuals who are now or had been previously enlisted in the army.

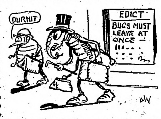
During the past fiscal year 467 cases of fraudulent enlistment of former deserters, general prisoners and others were discovered through the finger-print system. During the preceding year the number of cases of fraudulent enlistment discovered through that system was 256, and during the fiscal year 1912 the number was 337.

"This office," says General Andrews, "has identified by means of this system dead men who were former soldiers and whose identity could not be satisfactorily established in any other way, as well as civil offenders who sought to evade arrest for their crimes by enlisting in the army under assumed names, and soldiers who left impressions of their fingers while in the act of committing some serious offense.

"It is undoubtedly true that the use of finger-print records and photographs has deterred criminals from attempting to enter the army for the purpose of escaping detection and arrest by the civil authorities."

Bugs, Deprived of Food, Desert the Patent Office

BUGS of varied shapes and hues no longer lap up milk with great gusto in the patent office as of yore. The good old days of Bugdom's free dairy lunch in that building have passed forever, if Judge James I. Parker, chief clerk of the interior department, has anything to say in the matter—and he has everything to say, as a matter of fact.



DURNIT
EDICT
BUGS MUST LEAVE AT ONCE —

The judge has just issued an edict that milk bottles—either full, half full or empty—are to disappear at once from the precincts of the patent office. It is not so much that the bugs scramble in gangs and troops from all corners and crevices of the patent office and invade the galleries where the employees of the office are wont to congregate at lunch hours and regale themselves with foods and milk. It is not so much that the bugs clamber down the sides of empty milk bottles and eagerly lap up the succulent drops of the white fluid. The judge hasn't the slightest desire to deprive poor hungry bugs of their sustenance.

But the judge has a decided feeling against the bugs eating up the thousands of drawings and descriptions of patents stored in the galleries. It appears that the bugs, after feeding on milk left by kind-hearted employees of the department, are still hungry, and go foraging around in the files for choice documents upon which to finish their repasts. Perhaps it is wrong to drink first and eat afterward, but these are bugs, remember, and there is no accounting for what bugs will do.

84215

DEFECTIVE PAGE

TO TILL UNOCCUPIED CANADIAN LANDS

THE CANADIAN GOVERNMENT ASKING FOR INCREASED ACREAGE IN GRAIN, TO MEET EUROPEAN DEMAND.

There are a number of holders of land in Western Canada, living in the United States, to whom the Canadian Government will shortly make an appeal to place the unoccupied areas they are holding under cultivation. The lands are highly productive, but in a state of idleness they are not giving any revenue beyond the unearned increment and are not of the benefit to Canada that these lands could easily be made. It is pointed out that the demand for grains for years to come will cause good prices for all that can be produced. Not only will the price of grains be affected, but also will that of cattle, hogs and horses, in fact, everything that can be grown on the farms. When placed under proper cultivation, not the kind that is often resorted to, which lessens yield and land values, many farms will pay for themselves in two or three years. Careful and intensive work is required, and if this is given in the way it is given to the high-priced lands of older settled countries, surprising results will follow.

There are those who are paying rent, who should not be doing so. They would do better to purchase lands in Western Canada at the present low price at which they are being offered by land companies or private individuals. These have been held for the high prices that many would have realized, but for the war and the financial stringency. Now is the time to buy; or if it is preferred advantage might be taken of the offer of 160 acres of land free that is made by the Dominion Government. The man who owns his farm has a life of independence. Then again there are those who are renting who might wish to continue as renters. They have some means as well as sufficient outfit to begin in a new country where all the advantages are favourable. Many of the owners of unoccupied lands would be willing to lease them on reasonable terms. Then again, attention is drawn to the fact that Western Canada numbers amongst its most successful farmers, artisans, business men, lawyers, doctors and many other professions. Farming today is a profession. It is no longer accompanied by the drudgery that we were acquainted with a generation ago. The fact that a man is not following a farming life today, does not preclude him from going on a Western Canada farm tomorrow, and making a success of it. If he is not in possession of Western Canada land that he can convert into a farm he should secure some, make it a farm by equipping it and working it himself. The man who has been holding his Western Canada land waiting for the profit he naturally expected has been justified in doing so Its agricultural possibilities are certain and sure If he has not realized immediately by making a sale, he should not worry. But to let it lie idle is not good business. By getting it placed under cultivation a greater profit will come to him. Have it cultivated by working it himself, or get some good representative to do it. Set about getting a purchaser, a renter or some one to operate on shares.

The department of the Dominion Government having charge of the Immigration, through Mr. W. D. Scott, Superintendent at Ottawa, Canada, is directing the attention of non-resident owners of Western Canada lands to the fact that money will be made out of farming these lands The agents of the Department, located at different points in the States, are rendering assistance to this end.—Advertisement.

Awaiting the Outcome.

"The folks at our hotel are greatly interested in a problem."

"What is it?"

"An irresistible blonde has just met an immovable bachelor."—Judge.

GRANDMA USED SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HER GRAY HAIR

She Made Up a Mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to Bring Back Color, Gloss, Thickness.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of the famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time, by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.—Adv.

Many a school boy's life is made miserable by trying to learn the multiplication table.

BRITISH MAKE SEA AND AIR ATTACKS ON GERMAN COAST

SEVEN NAVAL AIRMEN ASSISTED BY LIGHT CRUISERS AND SUBARMINES IN DARING RAID.

COMMANDER AND THREE SEA-PLANES ARE LOST

Teutons Declare Assault on Naval Base at Cuxhaven is Fruitless—Damage Done by Bombs Thrown Not Yet Ascertained.

London, Dec. 29.—Assisted by light cruisers, destroyers and submarines, seven British naval airmen, piloting sea-planes made a daring attack Christmas day on the German naval base at Cuxhaven, at the mouth of the Elbe. Six of the airmen returned safely, but the seventh, Commander Hewlett, it is feared has been lost as his machine was found off Helgoland wrecked.

What damage was done by the bombs thrown by the attacking party could not be ascertained, but the German report of the affair says that the raid was fruitless.

Test of Modern Machines.

The enterprise of the British navy in thus attempting to "dig out" the German fleet brought about a battle between the most modern of war machines, the British squadron, including the light cruisers Arethusa and Undaunted, which have been engaged in previous exploits on the German coast was attacked by Zeppelins, seaplanes and submarines.

By rapid maneuvering the ships were able to avoid the submarines, while the Zeppelins found the fire of the cruisers too dangerous for them to keep up the fight.

The German seaplanes dropped bombs which, according to the British account, fell harmlessly into the sea.

The Germans, however, claim to have hit two destroyers and their convoys, the latter being set afire.

The British ships remained in the vicinity for three hours without being attacked by any surface warships, and picked up three of the seven pilots and their planes.

Three others were picked up by submarines, but their machines were sunk. Commander Hewlett, it is thought, was drowned.

Make Daylight Attack.

The official press bureau gave out the following statement, regarding the raid on the German coast:

"On Friday, December 25, the German warships lying off Schilling Roads off Cuxhaven were attacked by seven naval seaplanes piloted by Flight Commanders Oliver Hewlett, Boss and Kilner, Flight Lieutenants Miley and Edwards and Sub-Lieutenant Blackburn.

"The attack was delivered in daylight, starting from a point in the vicinity of Helgoland. The seaplanes were escorted by a light cruiser and destroyer force, together with submarines. As these ships were seen by the Germans from Helgoland—two Zeppelins and three or four hostile seaplanes and several hostile submarines attacked them.

"It was necessary for the British ships to remain in the neighborhood to pick up the returning airmen, and a novel combat ensued between the most modern cruisers and the enemy's aircrafts and submarines. By swift maneuvering the enemy's submarines were avoided and the two Zeppelins were easily put to flight by the guns of the Undaunted and Arethusa.

Unmolested by Surface Vessels.

"The enemy's seaplanes succeeded in dropping their bombs near our ships, but without hitting any of them. The British ships remained for three hours off the enemy's coast without being molested by any surface vessel and safely re-embarked three out of the seven airmen with their machines. Three other pilots returned later and were picked up by British submarines which were standing by. Their machines were sunk.

"Six out of the seven pilots returned safely. Flight Commander Hewlett is missing. His machine was seen in a wrecked condition about eight miles from Helgoland, and the fate of the daring and skillful pilot is at present unknown.

"The extent of the damage by the British airmen's bombs cannot be estimated, but all were discharged at points of military significance."

Congress Takes Recess.

Washington, Dec. 26.—Congress has suspended business for Christmas. Both house and senate adjourned to meet again Tuesday, Dec. 29. The holiday recess finds the legislative work well advanced. The constitutional amendment for woman suffrage probably will come up early in January. Several committees will report appropriation bills soon after the recess and house leaders are determined to press them vigorously in their effort to clear up the session's business by March 4.

ENGLAND WANTS U. S. LUMBER

LIKELY TO ORDER 20,000,000 FEET FROM PACIFIC COAST.

Gives Opportunity to Portland Exporters to Bid for Business of Supplying Product.

Portland, Ore., Dec. 28.—America's lumber industry revival is at hand. Pacific coast lumber aggregating 20,000,000 feet is wanted in the United Kingdom and Portland exporters are being given the opportunity to bid for the business of supplying a big portion of the product.

This is the largest quantity for which inquiries have been received from abroad locally since war started. No particulars have been given as to what the lumber will be used for, but it is presumed that part of it will be for bridge and railroad construction.

It is reported that the main difficulty in taking new contracts for shipments of lumber to off shore ports is the trouble experienced in chartering suitable vessels. Just now practically all craft are in demand for the transportation of grain and other foodstuffs to the warring countries.

Before many weeks elapse lumber men are looking for decided revival in that line of business. In addition to the likelihood of many cargoes of product being dispatched to Europe in the near future it is believed that the railroad companies in this country soon will begin to place extensive orders.

FLOODS RAGING IN ARIZONA

Three Persons Lose Lives, Live Stock By Hundreds Drowned and Houses Wrecked.

Tucson, Ariz., Dec. 26.—Floods, the result of a week of practically unbroken rainfall, have inflicted severe damage upon nearly the entire area of the state lying between Phoenix and the Mexican border. Three persons have lost their lives; live stock by hundreds have been drowned; ranch houses and city residences wrecked or washed away by torrents roaring through what usually are dry canyons, and traffic by rail, highway and wire either has been badly crippled or completely suspended.

The most serious damage seems to have been suffered in that part of Santa Cruz valley lying 30 miles south of here. The Santa Cruz river attained a width of more than a mile and a half and the crest of the flood, after sweeping through Amado and the farming region about, reached Tucson, sweeping away bridges and houses and threatening to work further destruction.

Capture Gifts to Germans.

Petrograd, Dec. 28.—At least one Russian battalion in northern Poland celebrated Christmas day, though the Russian holiday does not come until Jan. 7. These troops of the czar celebrated at the expense of the Germans, who were without gifts from home when other soldiers of the kaiser were proudly displaying their presents. During the fighting about Mlawa, a detachment of Russians made a raid on a transport train. They swooped down with great force on the defenders of the transport and after a brisk fight captured a quantity of Christmas presents intended for the German troops.

Food Prices Advance.

London, Dec. 28.—Average change in retail food prices in London between Aug. 1 and Dec. 1 was an advance of about 17 per cent, according to the board of trade's official figures. In Berlin, according to Prussian official statistche correspondence, the advance for the same period was 16.4 per cent. The most marked advances in London were in eggs, tea and fish, which in the past month rose 13, 12 and 6 per cent respectively. Sugar and eggs now average about 65 per cent above the level of Aug. 1. Potatoes are cheaper than in July.

Send Cotton to Germany.

Galveston, Tex., Dec. 28.—The first cargo of cotton to Germany from the port of Galveston since the European war began has departed for Bremen on the American steamship Pathfinder. The cargo is 6,550 bales, valued by the shippers at $455,000. The hatches were sealed in the presence of the French consul and a representative of Lloyds of London. Both certified that the vessel is entitled to unobstructed passage into a German port.

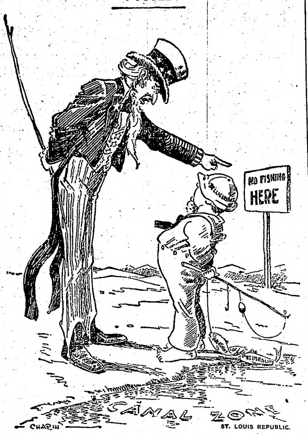
Eleven Hurt in Wreck.

Reno, Nev., Dec. 28.—Eight passengers and three trainmen were injured, none fatally, in the rear-end collission between two sections of a westbound Southern Pacific passenger train at Imay, Nev., 250 mies east of here. The injured passengers occupied the observation car of the first section. The engineer of the second section said the wreck was due to fog obscuring the signals.

Segregation of Negroes Upheld.

Lo[illegible] segregation of the 40,000 negroes in Louisville is the rightful exercise of a police power of the state, according to an opinion handed down in criminal court here by Judge James P. Gregory. It violates neither the 14th amendment nor the Kentucky bill of rights, said the court. The ordinance contemplates no immediate ouster of one race from blocks where the other predominates, but requires that future removals of citizens be made only to blocks where their race is in the majority.

POSTED!



ST. LOUIS REPUBLIC.

FILIPINO REVOLT DECLARED SMALL; IS NOT A SUCCESS

DETAILS OF UPRISING IN PHILIPPINES GIVEN IN CABLEGRAM FROM GOVERNOR GENERAL HARRISON.

FORTY MEN ARRESTED AND ONE SHOT TO DEATH

Sentence of Native on Charge of Homicide Beginning of Trouble—Disorders Are Suppressed and Leaders Are Expected to Be Taken Soon.

Washington, Dec. 29.—Details of native uprisings in the Philippines beginning Christmas Eve, were given in a cablegram received from Governor General Harrison at the war department, and made public by Assistant Secretary Breckenridge.

The report minimized the extent of the trouble, but stated that small bodies of Filipinos had assembled in Manila and Navotas Christmas Eve, and at Laguna De Bay Saturday night and attempted to make trouble. As a result forty men were arrested and one man was shot by a policeman.

Suppress Uprisings.

Governor Harrison reported that the disorders had been suppressed; that everything was quiet and efforts were being made to arrest the leaders, the chief of whom he said, was believed to be a man under sentence of imprisonment for homicide. He added that nobody of any influence or standing was concerned in the movement; that it was "small and unsuccessful," and was connected with the campaign of Ricarte, who has conducted a revolutionary propaganda from Hong Kong for several years, "appealing to the most ignorant classes of Filipinos."

With the dispatch the department gave out one sent to Governor Harrison on Dec. 21, telling of newspaper reports here of a threatened Filipino revolt and of the disarmament of two companies of scouts because of the discovery of a plot to free prisoners and start an uprising.

To this, on Dec. 22, Governor Harrison replied:

"No foundation whatever known here for reports."

Russians Take Many Prisoners.

London, Dec. 28.—According to a Petrograd dispatch to the Reuter Telegraph company the number of German prisoners registered is 1,140 officers and 131,700 men; the number of Austrians registered is 3,166 officers [illegible] men. The Slav prisoners have asked for Russian naturalization so that they may be sent against the Turks.

Handle 100,000,000 Parcels.

Washington, Dec. 28.—Preliminary estimates by postoffice officials place the number of parcel post packages handled during the Christmas rush at 100,000,000, and indicated that the total volume of parcel post traffic for 1914 will total nearly 1,000,000,000,000 packages.

British Trawler Is Sunk.

Grimsey, England, via London, Dec. 28.—The trawler Ocana has been sunk by a mine. Eight men were drowned, only the second engineer being saved.

ARREST 91 IN BIG VOTE FRAUD

U. S. MARSHALS "ROUND UP" OFFICIALS IN TERRE HAUTE.

Place Mayor Donn M. Roberts in Jail —Court Hearing at Indianapolis January 12.

Terre Haute, Ind., Dec. 29.—With the arrest of 91 persons, 69 of whom were able to secure their release on bond to appear for arraignment before Judge A. B. Anderson in the federal court at Indianapolis on Tuesday, January 12, United States Marshal Mark Storen and a force of 25 deputies completed the "round up" of alleged election conspirators in Terre Haute.

The list of indicted men include Mayor Donn M. Roberts, Circuit Judge E. H. Redman, John F. Nugent, chief of police, Sheriff Dennis Shea, John Masseling, city inspector of weights and measures, William Doyle, policeman, and many saloonkeepers and party hangerson.

The twenty-two who were unable to secure bonds were escorted to the station where they took a train for the state capital.

Mayor Donn M. Roberts was among those taken to Indianapolis, he having refused to make any attempt to give bond after Marshal Storen refused his request to be permitted to go out in person to seek sureties on his bond of $10,000.

The direct acts leading to the indictments were frauds at the last registration a few weeks before the election, and at the election but there have been complaints of fraudulent registration and frauds at elections in Terre Haute for the last five years.

The United States court took cognizance of the frauds because a member of congress in the Fifth district, and a United States senator were to be chosen at the election.

The indicted parties are all members of what is known as the Taggart-Crawford-Fairbanks machine in Vigo county, but there are also some twenty republicans in the indicted list.

It is charged that Roberts and the others entered into a conspiracy to keep qualified voters from registering, to keep other such voters from casting their ballots, to purchase votes from the gang's candidates, to round up voters, and by the use of money and liquor, keep them from the polls on election day.

Dissolves Japanese Diet.

Tokio, Dec. 28.—The imperial diet has been dissolved. The house of representatives rejected the army expansion measures proposed by the government. This led to the dissolution of the house. There was no sign that the debate was approaching its end when, shortly before 10 p. m. it was announced that Emperor Yoshihito had exercised his royal prerogative dissolving the diet.

Seven Firemen Burned.

Oklahoma City, Okla., Dec. 28.—Seven firemen were burned, two of them dangerously, as the result of a gas explosion which caused the destruction by fire of a music store. The loss was estimated at $85,000.

Turks Fear British Submarines.

Washington, Dec. 26.—Delayed advices to the United States Government from Constantinople say that Turkish officials regarded the loss of the battleship Messudieh, which was blown up by a British submarine recently, as a severe loss. The feat caused consternation in the Turkish capital, because of the fear that more submarines would penetrate the Dardanelles in the future. The Turkish officials, according to the same advices, have been much perturbed about spies.

BILIOUS, HEADACHY, SICK "CASCARETS"

Gently cleanse your liver and sluggish bowels while you sleep.

Get a 10-cent box.

Sick headache, biliousness, dizziness, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath—always trace them to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months. Adv.

His Frame of Mind.

The horse had run away and was tangled up in the wire fence at the side of the muddy road. Its half-witted owner had kicked and sworn and tried to lift the animal until he was out of sorts and covered with mud.

A well-groomed man came along, took in the situation, and suggested: "Spring the fence back, then he can get his feet free."

The owner of the horse did as he was told. "Now give him a cut with the whip and he'll get up himself."

This the owner did. Then he looked at the horse, up and ready for travel, looked at himself covered with mud, and looked at the immaculate gentleman in the road. Wrath filled his soul.

"Well," he grumbled, "thank you just as much as if you'd helped me."

Ammunition Used in War.

How much ammunition does a modern army use? We shall not know until after the war what the German and the allied forces have been expending; but we know what the Germans used in 1870-71. The total for rifles was 30,000,000 cartridges, for field artillery 362,000 rounds. It is worth noting that battles are much less costly in ammunition than sieges. The siege of Strassburg alone cost, weight for weight, three times the amount of ammunition used in all the decisive battles and actions throughout the whole war. Of course these figures are a mere bagatelle compared with those of the present struggle, with its millions of soldiers and its quick-firing guns and its weeks-long battles.—Manchester Guardian.

CLEAR YOUR SKIN

By Daily Use of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Trial Free.

You may rely on these fragrant supercreamy emollients to care for your skin, scalp, hair and hands. Nothing better to clear the skin of pimples, blotches, redness and roughness, the scalp of dandruff and itching and the hands of chapping and soreness

Sample each free by mail with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard, Cuticura, Dept. Y, Boston. Sold everywhere. Adv.

Something in This Name.

In New York a teacher found that a little negro girl was named Fertilizer Johnson.

"Are you sure that Fertilizer is your right name?" she asked.

"Yes, ma'am," replied the little girl.

"Well, tell your mother to come here," said the teacher.

The mother came the next day.

"Yes; Fertilizer is right," she said. "You see, I named her after her father and mother both. Her father's name is Ferdinand and my name is Liza, so we called her Fertilizer."

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

In Use For Over 30 Years.

Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

Few Survivors Left.

"I wonder why there are so many more borrowers than lenders in this world?"

"The explanation is most simple, my dear fellow. Fully 90 per cent are born borrowers and always remain such, and the few who start in as lenders are soon driven into the other class."

WANTED

Butternut and Black Walnut Meats Write, stating price per pound, numbe of pounds you can furnish. Addre P. O. Box 898, Omaha, Neb. Adv.

Not at All.

"I've noticed one thing."

"And what is that?"

"No matter how often a tough chicken gets stewed, it doesn't seem to make him tender."

YOUR OWN DRUGGIST WILL TELL YO Try Murine Eye Remedy for Red, Weak, Watery Eyes and Granulated Eyelids; No Smarting—Just Eye Comfort. Write for Book of the Eye by mail Free. Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago

A man would rather have fortur smile on him than give him the lau

DEFECTIVE PAGE

WHAT YEAR 1914 GAVE TO MANKIND

Chronological Record of Most Important Events of the Twelve Months.

EUROPEAN WAR STANDS FIRST

Mexico's Muddled Affairs—Pope Pius and Earl Roberts Among the Illustrious Dead — Disasters and Sports—Financial and Industrial Happenings.

COMPILED BY E. W. PICKARD.

EUROPEAN WAR

June 28.—Archduke Francis Ferdinand, heir to the Austrian throne, and his morganatic wife, the duchess of Hohenberg, shot and killed by a student in Sarajevo, capital of Bosnia, after a futile attempt had been made to blow them up with a bomb.

July 23.—Austria sent peremptory note to Servia demanding punishment of all accomplices in murder of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and suppression of all societies which had fomented rebellion in Bosnia.

July 26.—Troops mobilized by Austria, Servia, Russia and Montenegro. Servians moved their capital to Nish.

July 28.—Austria declared war against Servia.

July 29.—Austrians invaded Servia and shelled Belgrade.

July 31.—Kaiser demanded Russian mobilization cease and czar refused. Martial law proclaimed in Germany.

Stock exchanges in nearly all cities of the world closed.

Aug. 1.—Germany declared war on Russia and mobilized its army. Czar declared martial law and France issued decree of mobilization. Italy declared its neutrality.

Aug. 2.—German troops advanced on France through neutral Luxembourg.

Russia began invasion of East Prussia and Posen.

Aug. 3.—Germans started three armies toward France, through Belgium, violating the neutrality of that country.

French troops crossed German frontier in Vosges mountains.

Aug. 4.—Great Britain demanded that Germany withdraw her troops from Belgium. Germany and England declared war on each other and Germany declared war on Belgium. France declared war on Germany.

United States proclaimed its neutrality.

Aug. 5.—Germans repulsed at Liege by Belgians.

Field Marshal Earl Kitchener made British secretary of state for war.

President Wilson offered the services of the United States as mediator.

Aug. 6.—Austria-Hungary declared war on Russia.

British cruiser Amphion sunk by German mine.

Aug. 7.—Germans entered Liege.

Aug 8.—Twenty thousand English troops landed on French coast. French invaded Alsace-Lorraine and captured Altkirch and Muehlhausen.

Italy reaffirmed its neutrality.

Aug. 10.—France broke off diplomatic relations with Austria-Hungary.

Aug. 11.—French driven out of Cernay and Muelhausen.

Aug. 13.—Germans occupied Hasselt, Tongres and St. Trond, Belgium. France and England declared war on Austria.

Aug. 15.—Japan issued ultimatum to Germany demanding withdrawal of German warships from the Orient and evacuation of Kiauchau.

Aug. 17.—Belgian seat of government was transferred from Brussels to Antwerp.

Beginning of five days' battle in Lorraine, ending in repulse of French across frontier with heavy loss. Beginning of five days' battle between Servians and Austrians on the Jadar, ending in Austrian rout.

Aug. 19.—Brussels occupied by the Germans, the allies retiring to Antwerp.

Servians defeated 80,000 Austrians at Shabats, forty miles west of Belgrade.

Aug. 20.—French recaptured Muelhausen, Alsace, but were driven back in Lorraine.

Aug. 21.—Germans began bombardment of Namur forts and levied war tax of $40,000,000 on Brussels and $10,000,000 on Liege.

Aug. 22.—Germans occupied Ghent and Bruges.

Aug. 23.—Japan declared war on Germany.

Luneville, France, occupied by the Germans

Russians drove back the Germans from the eastern frontier.

Aug. 24.—The allied armies along the line from Mons to the Moselle defeated and driven back by the Germans.

Germans captured Namur, drove the French out of Alsace and advanced from Lorraine into France.

Japanese warships began bombardment of Tsing Tao, fortified seaport of Kiauchau.

Aug. 25.—Austria declared war on Japan.

Germans levied a war tax of $90,000,000 on the Belgian province of Brabant.

Aug. 26.—French cabinet resigned and new cabinet formed by Premier Viviani. Russians took Marienburg. German island of Yap near Guam seized by Japanese. Austrian defeated Russians on Galician frontier. Louvain sacked and burned by Germans.

Aug. 27.—British cruiser Highflyer destroyed German armed merchant cruiser Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse off west coast of Africa.

Aug. 28.—British fleet sunk five German warships off Helgoland.

Allies checked the march of Germans to Paris and terrific battle was begun at Arras and one near Nancy.

Austria declared war on Belgium.

Aug. 29.—British forces from New Zealand seized Apia, chief town of German Samoa.

Russians defeated near Tannenberg.

Aug. 30.—Germans occupied Amiens.

Sept. 2.—Seat of French government moved to Bordeaux.

Russians captured Lemberg, Austria, after seven days' battle.

Sept. 5.—Germans captured Reims.

Sept. 6.—British cruiser Pathfinder sunk by torpedo in North sea.

Sept. 7.—Allies victorious in a battle along the line from Nanteuil to Verdun, the imperial guard under the German crown prince being nearly annihilated by the British.

Germans destroyed Dinant and captured Maubeuge.

Sept. 8.—Allies pushed back the entire line of invading Germans.

Sept. 9.—British forced Germans to retreat along the river Marne.

Sept. 11.—Russians drove the Germans from several fortified positions in Russian Poland, but repulsed with heavy losses in East Prussia.

Sept. 12.—British warships from Australia took Herbertshoehe, seat of government of the German Bismarck archipelago and the Solomon islands.

French troops reoccupied Luneville and Soissons.

Sept. 13.—Lille evacuated by Germans and occupied by allies.

Steamer Red Cross with American Red Cross nurses and surgeons sailed from New York.

Sept. 14. — Retreating German army halted in strongly intrenched position along the Aisne river. Amiens reoccupied by the French.

Sept. 22.—Three British cruisers were torpedoed and sunk by German submarine in the North sea.

Sept 26.—British troops from India landed at Marseilles.

Sept. 29.—Germans began attack on defenses of Antwerp.

Oct. 2.—Germans defeated at Augustowo and forced out of Russia.

Oct. 5.—Belgian government moved to Ostend.

Oct. 9.—Germans entered Antwerp.

Russian army occupied Lyck, East Prussia.

Oct. 10.—German army of 20,000 was repulsed at Quatrecht, east of Ghent.

Oct. 11.—Germany imposed war fine of $100,000,000 on Antwerp.

Russian cruiser Pallada sunk by German submarines.

Oct. 12.—Ghent occupied by the Germans.

Oct. 13.—Belgian government moved to Havre, France.

Colonel Maritz and his troops in the northwest of Cape province, South Africa, rebelled. Martial law proclaimed throughout Union of South Africa.

Oct. 15.—Germans occupied Ostend and Bruges.

Oct. 16.—British cruiser Hawke sunk in the North sea by German submarine.

Oct. 17.—Japanese cruiser Takachiho sunk by torpedo in Kiauchau bay.

British cruiser Undaunted and four destroyers sunk four German destroyers in North sea.

Oct. 18.—Allies recaptured Armentieres.

Oct. 19.—Desperate fighting along Belgian coast, British warships taking part.

Oct. 23.—French retook Altkirch, Alsace, at the point of the bayonet.

Oct. 24.—Ten days' battle before Warsaw ended in German defeat.

Oct. 25.—Germans crossed River Yser and slowly pressed toward the south.

Oct. 26.—Germans bombarded Nieuport but were checked by allies.

Maritz and his rebel force defeated by Union of South Africa troops.

Prinzip, slayer of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his wife, and 23 others found guilty of treason.

Von Falkenhayn, German minister of war, made chief of staff to succeed Von Moltke.

Oct. 28.—De Wet and Beyers joined in South Africa revolt.

British dreadnaught Audacious sunk by mine

Russians reoccupied Lodz and Radom, Germans retreating.

Oct. 28.—Prinzip was sentenced to 20 years' imprisonment; four of his accomplices sentenced to death and others to various terms of imprisonment.

Botha reported the rout of the rebel Boers.

German cruiser Emden torpedoed Russian cruiser and French destroyer in Penang harbor.

Oct. 29.—Turkey began war on Russia, the cruiser Breslau bombarding Odessa, Theodosia and other places on the Black sea.

Nov. 1.—British cruiser Hermes sunk by German submarine in Dover straits.

Five German warships engaged four British warships off the coast of Chile and sank two and disabled a third; the fourth escaped.

Nov. 3.—British and French fleet bombarded the Dardanelles forts, and British vessels destroyed the barracks of Akabah, Arabia.

Germans abandoned left bank of the Yser below Dixmude.

Nov. 5.—France, Great Britain and Russia declared war on Turkey. Great Britain annexed Cyprus.

Nov. 6.—The sheik-ul-Islam ordered a holy war against Russia, France and England.

Nov. 7.—German fortress of Tsing Tao, China, stormed by Japanese and British and captured.

Nov. 9.—Belgian troops penetrated to Ostend.

Ypres set fire by German shells and destroyed.

German cruiser Emden driven ashore on Cocos islands and destroyed by Australian cruiser Sydney.

Nov. 10.—Russian fleet in Black sea sank four Turkish transports.

Nov. 11.—British gunboat Niger sunk by a torpedo off Deal.

Russians occupied Johannisburg, East Prussia.

Germans captured Dixmude.

Nov. 15.—Germans forced from all positions on left bank of the Yser.

British destroyed Turkish fort at entrance to Red sea.

Nov. 16.—Floods in West Flanders cut off a large number of Germans.

Pope issued encyclical urging cessation of warfare.

Nov. 18.—Russians checked by Germans at Soldau after four days of bloody fighting.

Nov. 22.—Ypres bombarded by Germans, town hall and market place being destroyed.

Nov. 23.—Russians won great victory over Germans who were advancing on Warsaw.

Nov. 24.—Germans opened a terrific attack on the allies from Ypres to La Bassee.

Naval base of Germans at Zeebrugge demolished by shells from British fleet.

Nov. 25.—British battleship Bulwark destroyed by explosion off Sheerness.

Nov. 27.—Germans renewed fierce bombardment of Reims.

Two British ships sunk off Havre by German submarines, and one off Grimsby by a mine.

Dec. 1.—Germans cut their way out of the Russian trap in Poland but with great losses.

General De Wet, Boer rebel leader, captured.

Dec. 2.—Germans in Poland resumed the offensive.

Belgrade, capital of Servia, occupied by the Austrians.

Dec. 6.—Germans occupied Lodz, Russian Poland, after severe bombardment.

Dec 7.—Germans defeated Russians north and south of Lodz.

Dec. 8.—German cruisers Scharnhorst, Gneisenau, Leipzig and Nuernberg, under Admiral von Spee, sunk by British squadron under Vice-Admiral Sir Frederick Sturdee off the Falkland islands. The Dresden, badly damaged, escaped.

Emperor William ill in Berlin.

General Beyers, rebel Boer leader, reported dead.

Turkish forces at Kurna, at head of Persian gulf, surrendered to a British expeditionary force from India.

Dec. 9.—Terrific fighting around Lowicz, Russian Poland.

Dec. 10.—Allies captured Roulers and Armentieres.

Austrians in Servia compelled to retreat.

Dec. 11.—Russians checked three of the five German columns advancing on Warsaw.

Allies repulsed violent attacks of Germans near Ypres.

German submarine attack on Dover repulsed.

Dec. 12.—German barracks at Kiel destroyed by fire.

Governor Goethals asked that destroyers be sent to Panama canal at once to enforce neutrality.

British submarine passed under mines in Dardanelles and torpedoed Turkish battleship Messudieh.

Dec. 14.—Servians retook Belgrade after fierce battle.

Dec. 16.—German cruisers bombarded Scarborough, Hartlepool and Whitby on the Yorkshire coast, killing about one hundred and fifty persons and escaping.

Dec. 17.—Great Britain proclaimed a protectorate over Egypt.

Allies with aid of warships entered Ostend.

Russians retreated in Galicia and Poland.

Dec. 18—General Potiorek, commander of Austrian army, defeated in Servia, removed from command.

Allies made advances at Dixmude and Middelkerke by desperate bayonet charges.

British appointed Prince Hussein Kamel, uncle of the ex-khedive, sultan of Egypt.

Russians captured Lowicz.

Dec. 19.—The kings of Denmark, Norway and Sweden agreed to act together in war matters and to remain neutral.

Two British mine sweepers sunk by mines.

Dec. 20.—German army in Poland reached new Russian positions and battle for Warsaw opened.

Germans evacuated Dixmude.

Dec. 21. Desperate battle in front of Warsaw continued.

FOREIGN

Feb. 2.—City of Gonaive, Haiti, burned during a battle between rival rebel forces.

Feb. 4.—Guillermo Billinghurst, president of Peru, captured by revolutionists and his deportation ordered.

Feb. 14. — Chinese government issued proclamation decreeing the death penalty for opium smokers.

March 16.—Wife of French Minister of Finance Caillaux killed Gaston Calmette, editor of Paris Figaro.

May 6.—House of Lords defeated woman suffrage measure, 104 to 60.

May 19.—Revolt broke out in Albania, 5,000 suporters of Essad Pasha attacking King William's palace at Durazzo.

May 25.—Irish home rule bill passed its third and final reading in the house of commons by a majority of 77.

July 5.—Carlos Mendoza, liberal, elected president of Panama.

July 28.—Mme. Henriette Caillaux found not guilty of the murder of Gaston Calmette in Paris, on the ground of temporary insanity.

Sept. 3.—Cardinal Giacomo della Chiesa, archbishop of Bologna, elected pope and assumed name of Benedict XV.

Sept. 5.—William of Wied, prince of Albania, abandoned that country to the rebels.

Sept. 28.—Albanian senate elected Prince Burhan-Eddin, son of the former sultan, Abdul Hamid, to be prince of Albania.

Oct. 12.—Ferdinand, nephew of the late king of Roumania, took the oath as his successor.

Oct. 23.—Haitien rebels formed a government under presidency of Gen. Davilmar Theodore.

MEXICO

Jan. 10.—Mexican rebels under Villa captured Ojinaga, many of the Federal troops and several of the generals taking refuge on American side of the Rio Grande.

Feb. 3. — President Wilson lifted embargo on exportation of arms which was applied to Mexico by President Taft.

Feb. 20.—Mexican situation brought to new crisis by slaying of W. S. Benton, rich rancher and a British subject, supposedly by Villa.

April 2.—Villa captured Torreon after eleven days' of bloody fighting. Villa's loss 500 killed and 1,500 wounded and that of the federals much greater.

April 9.—Arrest of unarmed American bluejackets by federal authorities at Tampico brought demand from Admiral Mayo that Huerta apologize and that American flag be saluted.

April 12.—Huerta refused to render a salute to the American flag in Tampico.

April 14.—President Wilson ordered Atlantic and Pacific fleets to Mexican waters at once to enforce his demands on Huerta.

Federal army routed by Villa at end of nine days' battle at San Pedro.

April 19.—Huerta refused to agree to the demands of the United States for an unconditional salute of the flag, and President Wilson drafted his message to congress and two proclamations declaring a "hostile" blockade of Mexico ports and harbor.

April 20.—President Wilson personally asked congress for support in action against Huerta.

House adopted resolution giving president free rein, after debate in which his policy was assailed. Senate postponed action for a day.

April 21.—American marines captured part of Vera Cruz after a fight in which four Americans were killed and twenty-one wounded and about 200 Mexicans were killed. Read Admiral Badger with five ships arrived at Vera Cruz.

April 22.—Senate passed resolution justifying the president in using the armed forces of the nation to enforce his demands on Huerta.

Taking of Vera Cruz completed by marines and bluejackets, supported by the guns of the warships, twelve Americans being killed and fifty wounded.

April 23.—President Wilson ordered the Fifth brigade, General Funston in command, to embark for Vera Cruz at Galveston.

The embargo on shipment of arms to Mexico was restored.

April 24.—Fifth brigade sailed from Galveston for Vera Cruz.

Congress passed the volunteer army bill.

April 25.—President Wilson accepted the offer of Brazil, Chile and Argentina, through their plenipotentiaries, to mediate the Mexican trouble, stipulating that Huerta must resign.

April 28.—Fifth brigade arrived at Vera Cruz and General Funston assumed the supreme command there. Robert J. Kerr of Chicago appointed civil governor of the city. A thousand refugees landed at Galveston.

May 1.—Secretary Garrison ordered General Funston to establish complete military government in Vera Cruz, displacing the civil government.

May 10.—American naval forces seized Lobos island as a base for operations.

May 11.—Funeral services for marines and sailors killed at Vera Cruz held at Brooklyn navy yard, President Wilson delivering the address.

May 13. — Constitutionalists captured Tampico.

May 20.—Mediators met at Niagara Falls, Ont., and outlined program including elimination of Huerta, Carranza and Zapata and the holding of a free election under the auspices of a provisional government.

June 5.—Huerta accepted the Niagara Falls peace program.

June 23.—Zacatecas taken by Villa's army.

July 2.—The A. B. C. mediators left Niagara Falls after issuing a statement that "all that remains to be done is to organize and establish a provisional government for Mexico."

July 5.—Huerta received the majority of votes cast in the Mexican presidential election and Blanquet was chosen vice-president.

July 15.—Huerta resigned as president of Mexico and left the city. Francisco Carbajal was sworn in as president.

July 20.—Huerta sailed on the German cruiser Dresden for Jamaica.

Aug. 13.—Carbajal abandoned presidency of Mexico.

Aug. 20.—General Carranza entered Mexico City and assumed the office of provisional president.

Sept. 23.—Villa denounced government headed by Carranza and announced his independence.

Oct. 15.—Convention of Mexican constitutionalist chiefs at Aguas Calientes voted itself the supreme power in Mexico.

Nov. 1.—Aguas Calientes conference named E. Gutierrez president of Mexico for 20 days.

Nov. 11.—War declared between Carranza and Villa factions in Mexico.

Nov. 25.—American troops under General Funston evacuated Vera Cruz.

Nov. 29.—Gen. Pablo Gonzales proclaimed himself provisional president of Mexico.

Nov. 30.—Villa entered Mexico City with 25,000 troops.

Dec. 8.—President Wilson sent troops to protect Naco, Ariz., on Mexican border.

Dec. 16.—General Bliss told commanders of Carranza and Villa forces at Naco, Mex., that he would open fire on both if any more shots came across the border.

Dec. 18.—San Luis Potosi surrendered to Carranza forces.

Dec. 21.—Gen. Hugh Scott and General Maytorena, Villaista leader, conferred near Naco rearding firing across boundary line.

POLITICAL

Feb. 18.—House passed Alaska railroad bill.

Feb. 21.—Senate ratified general arbitration treaties between United States and Great Britain, Japan, Italy, Spain, Norway, Sweden, Portugal and Switzerland.

March 5.—President Wilson read to congress message urging that the clause in the Panama canal act exempting American coastwise vessels from payment of tolls be repealed.

March 10. — Senate approved Alaska railroad bill.

March 31.—House passed bill to repeal canal tolls exemption clause by majority of 86.

June 5.—House passed the three Wilson antitrust bills by huge majorities.

June 11.—Bill to repeal exemption clause of the Panama canal tolls act passed by senate.

July 1.—George T. Henry, Jr., of San Francisco and Washington nominated for ambassador to Russia.

July 6.—Ira Nelson Morris of Chicago appointed minister to Sweden.

Aug. 19.—President Wilson appointed James C. McReynolds to the Supreme court and T. W. Gregory to succeed McReynolds as attorney-general.

Sept. 15.—Secretary of State Bryan and the envoys of Great Britain, France, Spain and China signed the Bryan peace treaties.

Sept. 24.—Frederic Jesup Stimson appointed ambassador to Argentine.

Sept. 29.—The house passed the rivers and harbors bill as reduced to $20,000,000 by the senate.

Oct. 24.—Congress adjourned after a session of 567 days.

Nov. 3.—In general elections Republican party gained over the vote of 1912 but failed to control congress. Progressive party fell to third place. Washington, Colorado, Oregon and Arizona went dry.

Dec. 7.—Sixty-third congress was called to order for its final session.

DOMESTIC

Jan. 27.—President Wilson ordered permanent government of Canal Zone into operation April 1 and appointed Col. George W. Goethals the first governor.

Feb. 24.—Court of appeals reversed death verdict in case of Charles Becker, former police lieutenant in New York.

April 1.—Col. George W. Goethals assumed his duties as governor of Canal Zone.

April 5.—Secretary Daniels issued order prohibiting use of alcoholic liquors for drinking purposes on vessels and in yards of the navy.

April 12.—Four gunmen electrocuted in New York for murder of Rosenthal.

May 7.—Eleanor Randolph Wilson, youngest daughter of the president, married to Secretary of the Treasury W. G. McAdoo in the White House.

May 19.—Colonel Roosevelt returned South America.

May 22.—Charles Becker, former police lieutenant, found guilty a second time of murder in the first degree for Rosenthal slaying in New York.

June 11.—Kermit Roosevelt and Belle Willard married in Madrid.

July 4.—Twelve persons were killed and more than 900 injured in Independence day celebrations.

Aug. 15.—Panama canal formally opened to commercial traffic.

Sept. 4.—David J. Palmer of Washington, Ia., elected commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Sept 10.—James Gordon Bennett, owner of New York Herald, married Baroness George de Reuter in Paris.

Oct. 17.—Robert Taft, son of the former president, married Miss Martha Bowers.

Nov. 2.—Twenty-one directors or former directors of the New Haven railroad indicted by federal jury in New York for criminal conspiracy to violate the Sherman antitrust law.

Nov. 4.—Chicago stockyards ordered closed ten days to check epidemic of the foot-and-mouth disease in the middle West.

Dec. 16.—U. S. senate ratified the international convention for safety at sea.

DISASTERS

Jan. 5.—Oil tank steamer Oklahoma sank off Sandy Hook, 25 of the crew perishing.

Jan. 10. — Great storm on the Baltic caused submersion of several villages and drowning of many persons.

Floods in Belgium did millions of dollars' worth of damage.

Jan. 11.—Terrific storm hit northwest Russia and 150 peasants lost their lives in snow.

Many thousands of persons perished in southern Japan when volcano of Sakura-Jima burst into activity, following repeated earthquake shocks. Large city of Kagoshima partly destroyed and several villages blotted out.

Jan. 16.—British submarine A-7 with crew of eleven, lost during maneuvers off Plymouth.

Steam whaler Karluk, flagship of Canadian government's arctic exploring expedition under Villjalmur Stefansson, crushed in the ice and sunk northeast of Siberia.

Jan. 17.—Loss of the German steamer Acilia with passengers and crew of 98 of the coast of Terra del Fuego confirmed.

Jan. 19.—Three hundred Japanese refugees from the volcanic eruptions on Sakura buried under falling cliff and killed.

Jan. 30.—Old Dominion liner Monroe sunk in collision with the steamer Nantucket off the Virginia coast and 41 persons drowned.

March 8.—St. Louis Athletic club destroyed by fire; 40 perished.

March 15.—Quake and volcano killed many on Hondo Island, Japan.

March 16.—Many perished in hurricane and flood in Province of Stavropol, Russia.

March 19.—Fifty drowned when boats collided near Venice.

March 31.—Sixty-four lives lost in blizzard that overtook Newfoundland sealing fleets.

April 2.—Fire in St. Augustine, Fla., destroyed five tourist hotels and the county court house; loss, $500,000.

April 28.—Explosion in mine at Eccles, W. Va., resulted in the entombing of 172 men and hope of their rescue was given up. Fifty-nine men, severely burned, saved.

May 4.—Fire in commercial center of Valparaiso, Chile, burned over two and a half acres and cost more than fifty lives.

May 29.—Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Ireland sunk in collision with Danish collier Storstad in St. Lawrence river; 1,024 lost, of whom 798 were passenger; 452 saved, of whom 246 were passengers. Laurence Irving, English actor, and his wife, and Sir Henry Seton-Kerr, noted big game hunter, among the drowned.

June 4.—One hundred villages in Japan devastated by terrible storm.

June 19.—Mine explosion at Hillcrest, Alberta; resulted in the death of about 200 miners.

June 25.—Nearly half the city of Salem, Mass., destroyed by fire, loss being about $10,000,000. Most of the historic buildings were saved.

Aug. 5.—Thirty-eight persons killed and 25 injured in train collision near Joplin, Mo.

Aug. 26.—Steamer Admiral Sampson sunk by steamer Princess Victoria 20 miles from Seattle and 11 lives lost.

Sept. 18.—Steamer Francis H. Leggett sunk in a gale off Oregon coast, 70 lives being lost.

Oct. 3.—Earthquake destroyed Isbarta and Burdur, Asia Minor, 2,500 lives being lost.

Oct. 17.—Earthquake in Grecian provinces of Attica, Beotia and Peloponnesus killed many persons and wrought great damage.

Oct. 27.—Explosion and fire in the Franklin company's coal mine at Royalton, Ill., resulted in death of 59 men.

Dec. 9.—Seven-million-dollar fire in plant of Edison company at West Orange, N. J.

NECROLOGY

Jan. 4.—Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, noted author and physician, in Philadelphia.

Jan. 8.—Gen. Simon B. Buckner, veteran of Mexican and Civil wars.

Jan. 13.—Dr. Edgar C. Spitzka, famous alienist, in New York.

Jan. 14.—Count Yukyo Ito, fleet admiral of the Japanese navy, in Tokio.

Jan. 19.—Gen. Marie-George Picquart, defender of Dreyfus, at Amiens, France.

Jan. 20.—Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, high commissioner for Canada, in London.

Jan. 21.—Edwin Ginn, Boston publisher, leaving $1,000,000 to the "world peace foundation" which he established in 1909.

Jan. 28.—Shelby M. Cullom, former United States senator from Illinois.

Feb. 5.—Congressman Robert G. Bremer of New Jersey.

Feb. 13.—Alphonse Bertillon, creator of the famous system of criminal identification.

Feb. 14.—Senator Augustus O. Bacon of Georgia.

Feb. 19.—Mrs. Robert Louis Stevenson, widow of the famous novelist.

Feb. 22.—Samuel W. Allerton, pioneer Chicago packer.

Joseph Fels, millionaire philanthropist and single tax advocate, of Philadelphia.

Feb. 23.—Former United States Senator Teller of Colorado.

March 6.—George W. Vanderbilt, owner of Biltmore.

March 8.—Frederick Townsend Martin.

March 12. — George Westinghouse, famous inventor.

March 27.—Dr. Josiah L. Pickard, former president of the Iowa State university and before that superintendent of schools of Chicago.

April 1.—"Rube" Waddell, famous ball player.

April 4.—Frederick Weyerhaeuser, Minnesota lumber magnate.

April 6.—Mrs. Lillian M. W. Stevens, head of the W. C. T. U.

April 9.—Haruko, dowager empress of Japan.

Ex-Governor E. S. Draper of Massachusetts.

April 15.—George Alfred Townsend, journalist who won fame writing over the name "Gath."

April 17.—McKee Rankin, veteran actor.

April 26.—George F. Baer, president of the Reading railway.

April 23.—S. S. Beman, famous architect.

May 2.—Duke of Argyll, son-in-law of the late Queen Victoria.

May 3.—Gen. Daniel E. Sickles, last of the great Civil war commanders.

May 9.—Charles W. Post, millionaire breakfast food manufacturer of Battle Creek, Mich., committed suicide at Santa Barbara, Cal.

May 10.—Lillian Nordica, grand opera star, in Batavia, Java

May 23.—William O. Bradley, U. S. senator from Kentucky.

May 26.—Jacob Riis, noted author and sociologist.

June 3.—W. M. French, director of the Chicago Art institute.

June 14.—Adlai E. Stevenson, former vice-president of the United States.

June 18.—Former United States Senator Frank M. Hiscock of New York.

June 21.—Baroness Bertha von Suttner, Austrian peace advocate and winner of the Nobel prize.

July 3.—Joseph Chamberlain, veteran British statesman.

July 12.—Horace H. Lurton, associate justice of the Supreme court of the United States.

Aug. 6.—Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wife of the president.

Jules Lemaitre, famous French litterateur.

Aug. 12.—Pol Plancon, famous grand opera singer.

Aug. 19.—Pope Pius X.

Aug. 20.—Father Francis Xavier Wernz, head of the Society of Jesus.

Aug. 23.—Darius Miller, president of the Burlington railroad.

Sept. 8.—Sir J. Henniker Heaton, father of penny postage between England and America.

Sept. 8.—Baron O'Brian, lord chief justice of Ireland.

Sept. 16.—James E. Sullivan, secretary-treasurer of the Amateur Athletic union.

Sept. 18.—Mrs. Frank Leslie.

Sept. 25.—Rear Admiral Herbert Winslow, U. S. N., retired.

Sir James P. Whitney, premier of Ontario.

Oct. 10.—King Charles of Roumania.

Cardinal Ferrata, papal secretary of state.

Oct. 16.—Marquis di San Giuliano, Italian foreign minister.

Oct. 25.—Sir Charles H. Douglas, chief of the British imperial staff.

Nov. 1.—Lieut. Gen. Adna R. Chaffee retired.

Nov. 4.—John Kean, former U. S. senator from New Jersey.

F. Augustus Heinze, copper magnate.

Nov. 14.—Field Marshal Earl Roberts.

Nov. 19.—Dr. Robert J. Burdette, humorist, writer and pastor.

Nov. 20.—Mrs. Vinnie Ream Hoxie, noted sculptor.

Nov. 24.—Cardinal Cavalleri, patriarch of Venice.

Dec. 1.—Rear Admiral Alfred T. Mahan, U. S. N., retired.

Dec. 4.—Sig. Perugini, noted singer and actor.

Dec. 8.—W. W. Rockhill, noted American diplomat.

Dec. 10.—Congressman Sereno E. Payne of New York.

Joseph Smith, president of the Reorganized Church of the Latter Day Saints.

Dec. 18.—Major E. A. Bigelow, U. S. A., retired, in Chicago.

Dec. 20.—Eugene Zimmerman, Cincinnati millionaire.

Gen. Thomas Sherwin at Boston.

FINANCIAL

Jan. 2.—J. P. Morgan & Co. announced withdrawal of members of the firm from directorates of many corporations.

Feb. 9.—Mercantile bank of Memphis, Tenn., failed, President C. H. Raine admitting he had used its funds in cotton speculation.

Feb. 12.—Standard Oil company arranged to lend China $15,000,000 in return for oil concessions in Shan-Si province.

March 13—United States Express company went out of business.

April 1.—The great "Princes' Trust" of Germany collapsed with loss of $25,000,000.

April 2.—Location of the twelve regional reserve banks under the new currency law announced.

June 6.—Chaplin, Milne, Grenfell & Co., London bankers, failed for $5,000,000

June 15.—President Wilson nominated following as members of federal reserve board: Charles S. Hamlin of Boston, Thomas D Jones of Chicago, Paul Warburg of New York, W. P. G. Harding of Birmingham, Ala., A. C. Miller of San Francisco.

June 25.—The H. B. Claflin company, leading wholesale dry goods concern of New York, failed with liabilities of about $44,000,000.

July 6.—Iowa's blue sky law providing for the regulation and supervision of investment companies held unconstitutional by federal judges.

July 23.—Government bagan suit for dissolution of New Haven railroad monopoly.

July 23.—President Wilson withdrew nomination of Thomas D. Jones as member of the federal reserve board.

Aug. 4.—Frederick A. Delano selected for federal reserve board.

Aug. 11.—Directors of the New Haven road agreed to the attorney general's terms for a peaceful dissolution of the system.

Aug. 12.—Dissolution of the International Harvester company as a monopoly in restraint of trade ordered by the United States district court at St. Paul, Minn.

Sept. 4.—President Wilson presented to congress an appeal for an emergency internal revenue measure to raise $100,000,000 to make up for the loss in customs receipts.

Sept. 25.—War tax bill passed by the house.

Oct. 17.—Senate passed war tax bill.

Nov. 16.—United States federal reserve banks opened.

Dec. 18.—Interstate commerce commission granted in part the 5 per cent freight rate advance asked by railroads east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio.

INDUSTRIAL

Jan. 5.—Ford Automobile company set aside $10,000,000 of its profits to distribute among its employees, mostly in the form of increased wages.

Jan. 6.—United States circuit court of appeals confirmed the conviction of 24 members of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers on the charge of dynamite conspiracy, and granted new trials to six others.

April 20.—Striking coal miners and members of Colorado National Guard fought an all day battle at Ludlow, a number of men being killed.

April 22.—Entire National Guard of Colorado called out and ordered to Trinidad strike zone, where several more men were killed in the continued fighting.

April 28.—Heavy fighting took place in the Colorado mine strike war and President Wilson ordered federal troops there to restore order.

April 29.—Colorado mine strikers attacked the Forbes camp of the Rocky Mountain Fuel company, killing seven mine guards and burning most of the buildings. Federal troops from Fort D. A. Russell arrived in the strike zone.

May 1.—Fourteen more troops of federal cavalry ordered to Colorado strike zone.

May 11.—United States Supreme court set aside contempt sentences of Gompers and other labor leaders.

May 16.—United States circuit court of appeals remanded 24 union labor men, convicted of conspiracy to transport dynamite, to federal penitentiary within three weeks.

June 23. — One man killed and two wounded fighting between factions of miners' union at Butte, Mont.

Aug. 3.—Western railroad managers agreed to mediate trouble with enginemen.

Dec. 8.—The Colorado coal strike, in force since April, 1910, was called off by the miners.

SPORTING

Feb. 26.—Ralph De Palma won Vanderbilt cup at Los Angeles, making average speed of 75.5 miles an hour.

Feb. 28.—Edwin Pullen won fifth international Grand Prix automobile race at Santa Monica, Cal.

May 23.—Lawrence Jenkins of Scotland won British amateur golf championship.

May 28.—Francis Ouimet of Boston won amateur golf championship of France.

May 30.—Rene Thomas, driving a Delage car for France, won 500-mile race at Indianapolis in 6:03:45.99, an average of 82.47 miles an hour, breaking the record of the speedway.

June 13.—British team won first of the international polo matches at Meadowbrook.

June 16.—British polo team won second match and international cup.

June 19.—Yale defeated Harvard by four feet in annual boat race.

Harry Vardon won British open golf championship for sixth time.

June 26.—Columbia University won intercollegiate regatta at Poughkeepsie.

June 27.—Jack Johnson retained heavyweight championship by defeating Frank Moran in twenty-round fight in Paris.

July 4.—Harvard crew won the Henley regatta.

July 7.—Freddie Welsh of Wales won the lightweight championship by defeating Willie Ritchie of America in London.

July 16.—Georges Carpentier of France, receiving the decision over "Gunboat" Smith of America on a foul, in London, won the white heavyweight championship.

Aug. 1.—Charles Evans, Jr., of Chicago won the western amateur golf championship.

Aug. 21.—Walter C. Hagen, professional, of the Country club of Rochester, N. Y., won the open golf championship of the United States.

Aug. 26.—J. M. Barnes of Philadelphia won the national tennis championship.

Sept. 5.—Francis Ouimet won the American amateur golf championship.

Sept. 19.—Mrs. H. Arnold Jackson of Boston won the national woman's golf championship.

Oct. 13.—Boston National team won world's championship from Philadelphia American league team.

Nov. 21.—Harvard won eastern football championship by beating Yale, and Illinois won the Western Conference title when it defeated Wisconsin.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879

We understand that the incoming legislature will attempt to revise the game laws of the state and in such revision will attempt to prevent the killing of female deer at any time. Unless some provision is made to clothe the doe with red blankets we should like to inquire as to how some of the fool city hunters who cannot now distinguish a man from a deer, can determine as to the gender of the animal. T. R. Falls News-Press.

Thief River Falls merchants claim a big falling off in business this year, from what it was last year at this time, and they lay the blame to the building of the electric line east, into this locality. The only business that this line would have any effect on, is the hotel and livery business in that city. The main cause for the falling off of business is not due to local conditions, but is general throughout the United States, and business men of Thief River Falls are not the only ones that feel the gradual pressure that is coming on.

We hope to see that project of putting in a dam at the outlet of Red Lake to raise the level of Red Lake laid to rest and allowed to remain there. If that dam is ever put in, our state ditches to drain the water off from the low lying lands in eastern Pennington county will have been dug in vain, and the farmers may as well move out first as last. It does not take an engineer to see that if the Red Lake River was raised to three feet above its present level that it would flood the entire country and destroy all crops, the same as farmers living on the Clearwater River had their crops destroyed by a mismanaged dam at Clearwater Lake last summer. If they put a dam in at that outlet and raise the level of Red Lake, the first heavy rains that we have will be likely to burst the dam, and let that whole three feet head of water onto us, the same as the Clearwater county farmers got it last summer.

To deny that the money market is gradually closing down is like whistling to keep your courage up. There is only one good feature about it, and that is, that it did not happen with a sudden drop, but has gradually come, and is like a boil that will keep on growing until a year from next November, when the people will tap Mr. boil and the wave of prosperity will again sweep over the land. There has been a little too much prosperity in the money market for the past few years for the good of a large number of the people, as it has been so easy to make loans that a certain per cent. of the people have acquired the habit of making their living by borrowing money, to pay all bills. Or to make it more plain some of the farmers who made loans on their farms, instead of going to work and using the money to improve their farms and preparing to pay the interest on their loans, simply sit down and lived on the loan money until it was gone, and then made another loan with a second mortgage, until they find themselves in the position to-day, of not being able to borrow another dollar, and all of the interest past due on the money that they have already borrowed, which will make it very hard times for them for the next two years, as the loan day is past and the pay day is upon us.

During the hard times of 1895 nature favored us with the best crop that we ever had in Northern Minnesota, although the price was very low. The prospects are that all kinds of farm produce will bring high prices next year, and the only way for the farmers to prosper is to raise the produce to sell. Prepare to put in a good big crop, instead of depending on getting an additional loan on your farm.

STOP THE CHILD'S COLDS THEY OFTEN RESULT SERIOUSLY.

Cold's, Croup and Whooping Cough are children's ailments which need immediate attention. The after-affects are often most serious. Don't take the risk—you don't have to. Dr. King's New Discovery checks the Cold, soothes the cough, allays the Inflammation, kills the Germs and allows Nature to do her healing work. 50c. at your Druggist. Buy a bottle to-day.—adv.

MANY DISORDERS COME FROM THE LIVER

ARE YOU JUST AT ODDS WITH YOURSELF?

DO YOU REGULATE LIVING?

Are you sometimes at odds with yourself and with the world? Do you wonder what ails you? True you may be eating regularly and sleeping well. Yet something is the matter! Constipation, Headache, Nervousness and Bilious Spells indicate a Sluggish Liver. The tried remedy is Dr. King's New Life Pills. Only 25c. at your Druggist. Bucklen's Arnica Salve for Skin Eruptions.—adv.

TRY THIS FOR NEURALGIA.

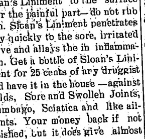
Thousands of people keep on suffering with Neuralgia because they do not know what to do for it. Neuralgia is a pain in the nerves. What you want to do is to soothe the nerve itself. Apply Sloan's Liniment to the surface over the painful part—do not rub it in. Sloan's Liniment penetrates very quickly to the sore, irritated nerve and allays the in inflammation. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25 cents of any druggist and have it in the house—against Colds, Sore and Swollen Joints, Lumbago, Sciatica and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief.—adv.

CHILDREN'S COUGHS—CHILDREN'S COLDS BOTH ARE SERIOUS

When one of your little ones shows symptoms of an approaching Cold, give it Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey at once. It acts quickly, and prevents the Cold growing worse. Very healing—soothes the Lungs, loosens the mucous, strengthens the system. It's guaranteed. Only 25c. at your Druggist. Buy a bottle to-day. Bucklen's Arnica Salve for Sores. —adv.

Subscribe for THE SUNBEAM.

The Morning After.



"Oh, I do wish you were here to dinner every day. Then there won't be anything cold to eat tomorrow."—Pittsburgh Press.

A Reminder.

Dearborn—What have you got that string tied about your finger for? Wabash—Oh, I've been getting married, and my wife doesn't want me to forget it.—Boston Herald.

Its Sort.

"Did Jerry ever tell you the time when he made his opponents bottle up their wrath?"

"Yes; it's a corking story."—Baltimore American.

WE HAVE $150,000.00 TO LOAN ON FARMS IN PENNINGTON COUNTY

Write Or Call on Us At FIRST NATIONAL BANK

THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN.

FARMERS & MERCHANTS STATE BANK

Oklee Minn.

The rapid growth of this bank is the best evidence that its policy and methods meet with the approval of the people in our community.

You will find this bank as liberal in its dealings as is consistent with sound banking.

We are at all times prepared to discuss your requirements with you and invite consultation.

Pay your bills with checks on this bank.

Farm Loans At Lowest Rates And On Easy Terms.

Six per cent interest paid on time deposits.

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS— — — — — — — — —$14,500.00

J. A. C. Torgerson, V. P. W. B. Torgerson, Cashier.

DO YOUR BANKING WITH FARMERS STATE BANK

GOODRIDGE MINNESOTA

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS $12, 000.

5 per cent paid on time deposits

Fire and Tornado Insurance Written in Responsible Companies.

FARM LOANS A SPECIALITY

J. M. BISHOP, President JAY PAYNE Vice-President.

NICK BUNDHUND, Cashier

We have for sale one of the best quarter sections of land in the town of Highlanding, located one mile south of Highlanding, Creamery. This farm will be sold cheap as the owner is a non resident and desires to use the money invested in other business. For terms and full particulars call on W. G. Hunt, Sunbeam, Minn.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Jan 1st. 1914

Department of the Interior U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Dec. 28th 1911.

Notice is hereby given that Matt Bakken, of Rhoda, Minn. who on April 8th, 1909, made Homestead Application Serial No. 04712, for N. ½ N. W. ¼ & S. E. ¼ N. W. ¼, Sec. 9, and who on April 16th, 1909 made additional Homestead Application, Serial No. 04735, for S. W. ¼ N. W. ¼, Sec. 9, Township 153 N. Range 40 West Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make Commutation Proof to establish claim to the land above described, before N. W. Tarrant Municipal Judge for the city of Thief River Falls, Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 2d. day of February, 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses.

Edward Singer, M. E. Hyland, Ole Skrieland, of Rhoda, Minn. Stephen Singer of Kratka, Minn.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register.

W. G. Hunt
Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

FOR SALE: 120 acres in Section 14, Hickory Township, Pennington County, Minn. Price $1,800.

Nels Fore, Roland, Minn.

HIGHLANDING BLACKSMITH SHOP

A. Tharaldson, blacksmith of Highlanding will have a full line of buggy and wagon repairs on hand, and will be glad to oblige.

A. Tharaldson

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The sunbeam Dec. 11th 1914.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land office at Crookston December 3rd, 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Christoffer Nisson of Erie Minn. who on March 15th, 1912 made Homestead Application Serial No 0748 for S. ½ S. W. ¼, Section 21 Township 153 N. Range 39 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Micheler U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 21st. day of January 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Liot Sigurdson, Nels Graue, Andrew Ellingson, Lars C. Fevig, all of Erie Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register.

U. S. Mail,

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 1.05 p. m., on Tuesday Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.55 p.m

Wm. G. Hunt, p.m.

FIRST STATE BANK,
Of Plummer Minnesota.

GIVE THE BURGLAR THE "HA, HA!" BANK YOUR CASH WITH US

SOME people extend invitations to the THIEF AND HOLDUP MAN. They carry on their persons or in their homes large sums of money. A CHECK BOOK is of no use to the professional thief. Still, a check is AS GOOD AS CASH to the tradesman or for the immediate household wants. If you haven't a bank account

OPEN ONE TODAY.

J. A. DUFFY President, Henry Enderlie, Cashier

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Dec. 18th 1914

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. December 9th 1914.

Notice is hereby given that James Davis, of Erie, Minnesota., who on July 26th 1911, made Homestead Entry Serial No. 05432, for N.W.¼ S.E.¼ Section 3, Township 152, N. Range 39 W. 5th. Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before N. W. Tarrant, Municipal Judge for the City of Thief River Falls. at Thief River Falls, Minnesota, on the 19th day of January, 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Edward Cotton, Edward Iverson, Rasmus Martinson, Otto Anderson, all of Erie, Minnesota.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register.

Corrected.

Teacher—Earl, did you whisper today? Earl—Yes; wunst. Teacher—Clarence, should Earl have said "wunst?" Clarence—No; he should have said "twicet."—Everybody's.

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Nov. 27th 1914.

Department of the Interior. U.S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Nov. 23rd 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Thomas G. Rome of Rhoda, Minn., who on February 8th, 1912 made Homestead Application Serial No. 07282 for Lots 5 and 6, Section 6 Township 152 N. Range 40 W. 5th. Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Commutatition Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Micheler, U. S. Commissioner, for District of Minn. at Thief River Falls, Minn. on the 5th day of January, 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Sam B. Swenson, Ole G. Skreland, of Rhoda, Minn; Andrew Feland, and William G. Hunt, of Sunbeam, Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register

MONEY TO LOAN ON FARM LAND

MACKEY J. THOMPSON
FARM MORTGAGES
ST. PAUL, MINNESOTA

CONTRACTS, FIRST AND SECOND MORTGAGES BOUGHT

PANAMA-PACIFIC
INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION
1915

CALIFORNIA CALLS YOU

Do You Want to Go to the
Panama-Pacific Exposition
At San Francisco
As a Guest of

Farm, Stock & Home

The Northwest's Foremost Farm Paper.

If you do, fill out the coupon below and mail it and find out all about it.

WRITE TODAY. DO NOT DELAY.

The trip is undoubtedly the most interesting, enjoyable and profitable that can be found anywhere in the world. The mere journey itself will be a succession of beautiful, ever-changing scenes, replete with romantic and historical associations. And besides that beautiful journey, there is California and the greatest Exposition the world has known! To mention in detail all that will be seen would be to print a guide book of the West and combine it with a comprehensive catalog of human achievement. For the Panama-Pacific Exposition will be nothing less than an exhibit of the accomplishments of civilization, shown under the very best conditions, in surroundings as beautiful as art and money can make them.

FARM, STOCK & HOME,
80 Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

Please mail at once full particulars concerning trip to Panama Pacific Exposition.

Name ....

Postoffice ....

Rural Route.......... State..........

THE LOCAL NEWS

A Happy New Year to our subscribers.

The Ellingson store at Highlanding have done a good holiday business.

H. Halverson, of Polk county is up in this locality buying up young stock this week.

Mr. Causin, a brother of Wm. Causin, is visiting him this week. Mr. Causin says it is as cold in North Dakota as it is here.

P. C. Wold has bought a first class feed mill, and is using his tractor engine for power, and can grind out a load of feed in a hurry.

Remember that we are not sending out statements to our subscribers for the fun of it, but because we must have the money.

M. E. Hyland has the rollers to his feed mill at St. Paul being sharpened, to get ready for the large amount of feed grinding which he expects to do this winter.

Any subscriber to the THE SUNBEAM, who remits the amount of his subscription to this paper, as per bill sent him, will receive the Farm, Stock and Home one year absolutely free.

The Prison Mirror published at the Stillwater prison got out a neat Christmas number, but there is a wail of sadness about the writings in it, as about all of the editors are anxious to quit the job.

STRAYED: From my farm, on section 35, town of Kratka, about October 1st, one two year old light roan heifer, with horns. Any information that will lead to her recovery will be rewarded.

Wm. H. Quirk,
Sunbeam, Minn.

There is now very little driving done with teams between here and Thief River Falls, as the farmers prefer to take the electric line when they have business at the county seat. There are now three trains a day each way, which furnishes first class accommodations for passengers.

W. F. Hunt the additional townsite promoter, of Goodridge was transacting business in this locality last Friday. Mr. Hunt is contemplating making extensive improvements of his Goodridge property this spring, so as to make town lots worth $100 per front foot.

The Railroad and Warehouse Commission ordered the Great Northern Railway to resume the running of their Sunday train from Grand Forks to Duluth. The company stopped running this train on November 22nd, owing to lack of trade to make it pay.

The Detroit saloon keepers got the impression that the government was only joking about closing their saloons and kept their back doors open, with a sightless swine swine inside. Last week government agents visited them and dumped all their stock of intoxicating liquors into the gutter, and closed the saloons in fact as well as in name.

The First Assistant Post Master General has made a ruling that 4th class post masters should not hold Township office. This will make it rather bad for the Kratka post master, who holds the office of Township Treasurer of that town, as he will not be able to get work done on the public highway and pay in "store pay." Of course he being a privleged character he may be allowed to hold township office, for if he should resign as post master, we don't know how the department could run business without him, as his rulings as P. M. General has put the mail service of eastern Pennington county on the "bum," except what goes by way of Kratka and Rhoda post-offices.

The ice is frozen nearly two feet thick on the Red Lake River, something unusal for this season of the year.

Albert Nelson from Trail, Polk County, was visiting old Polk county friends in this locality this week. Mr. Nelson has seen the homestead that he took at Gully develop into a town site, where the hustling little city of Trail is now located.

Cash For Hides and Furs.

If you have Hides or Furs for sale, bring them to the Oklee meat market and get the highest market price in cash.

Meat Market,
Oklee, Minn.

6 Per Cent MONEY 6 Per Cent MONEY 6 Per Cent

Loans may be obtained for any purpose on acceptable Real Estate security; liberal privileges; correspondence solicited.

A. C. Agency Company,
758 Gas & Electric Bldg.,
Denver Colorado.
and 446 Pierce Bldg.
St. Louis.

EAT

When you are AT GOODRIDGE, Call at the Goodridg Restaurant and get A cup of HOT COFFEE, or a good warm dinner for 25 cents. Don't forget the sigh of

EAT

BARBER SHOP IN CONNECTION

STEPHENSON BROS. Prop.

MINNESOTA NORTHWESTERN ELECTRIC RAILWAY.
TIME TABLE.

Trains going west leave Goodridge at 8:45 A.M and at 1:45 P.M

Arrive at Thief River Falls at 10:00 A. M. and at 3:30 P. M.

Leave Thief River Falls at 7:15 A. M. and at 10:00 A. M.

Arrive at Goodridge at 8:30 A. M. and at 12:10 P. M.

OUR EARLY PATHFINDERS.

Pioneer Work of La Verendrye and His Gallant Band.

The first white man to reach the "western sea" by crossing the North American continent was Sieur Pierre Gaultier de Varennes de la Verendrye, whose expedition left Montreal June 8, 1731. With half a hundred companions, including his three young sons, the daring Frenchman set out from the fort at Montreal and plunged into the wilderness, intent upon discovering that narrow sea which was supposed to separate America and China.

During the months and years that followed La Verendrye and his gallant boys triumphed over a multitude of obstacles. Some of his men were massacred by hostile Indians, others fell victims to disease, exposure and accident, and mutinies were frequent. After many hardships Lake Winnipeg was reached, but La Verendrye was disappointed in finding it a large body of fresh water, instead of the fabled western sea.

After thirteen years of effort the expedition was turned back by the impenetrable mountain fastnesses. But, although the main mission failed, La Verendrye was the first white man to reach the banks of the upper Missouri and Saskatchewan rivers and to traverse what are now the prosperous provinces of Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

It was not until 1793 that Alexander Mackenzie, a Scotchman, penetrated the Rockies and reached the shores of the Pacific.—New York World.

Some Jar.

Jones—What was the worst fall you ever had?

Aviator—The time I fell in love and broke every bone I had in the bank.—Chicago News.

LUMBER AND BUILDING MATERIALS.

When you get ready to build, come in and let us figure your bill and show you our stock of lumber and building materials.

Complete stocks at Thief River Falls, Mavie and Goodridge, Minn.

WINTON-NICHOLS LUMBER COMPANY.

Go to S. P. Johnson, at Oklee

"The Right Place"

Boys Suits from $1.25, to $4.50 per suit. Mens suits, former price $25.00, Now selling for $16.00. $15.00 suits now selling for $8.50

$8.50 suits now selling for $4.50.

Men's shoes from $1.25 to $3.50. Former price $4.00 now $3.25.

Ladies shoes $1.50 to $3.00.

Prints 5 cents per yard. Gingham 8 cents to 10 cents per yard. All Dry Goods at cost. Men's Caps goes at any price. Sugar for this week is $6.00 per 100 lbs. Good coffee for 18 cents to 30 cents a pound. Bargains in all kind of goods.

S. P. JOHNSON, Oklee, Minn.

CITATION FOR HEARING ON FINAL ACCOUNT AND FOR DISTRIBUTION.

ESTATE OF Mrs. Salve Myrum

STATE OF MINNESOTA, COUNTY OF Pennington IN PROBATE COURT.

In the Matter of the Estate of Mrs. SALVE MYRUM Decedent:

THE STATE OF MINNESOTA TO Salve Myrum, and Gunhild Thompson, also known as Nellie Reiersgaard, and all persons interested in the final account and distribution of the estate of said decedent: The representative of the above named decedent, having filed in this Court his final account of the administration of the estate of said decedent, together with his petition praying for the adjustment and allowance of said final account and for distribution of the residue of said estate to the persons thereunto entitled; THEREFORE, YOU, AND EACH OF YOU, are hereby cited and required to show cause, if any you have, before this Court at the Probate Court Rooms in the Court House, in the city of Thief River Falls in the County of Pennington State of Minnesota, on the 19th day of January 1915, at 10 o'clock A. M., why said petition should not be granted.

WITNESS, the Judge of said Court, and the Seal of said Court, this 16th day of December 1914.

[COURT SEAL] WILHELM MICHELET,
Probate Judge.
H. O. KJOMME,
Attorney for Petitioner.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists. Price 75c per bottle.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Bats and Fans.

The ordinary folding fan was invented in the seventh century by a Japanese artist, who derived the idea from watching a bat closing its wings.

The Kind.

Jail Visitor—You say that a love for books brought you here, my poor man?

Prisoner—Yes, sir; pocketbooks.—Philadelphia Press.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Dec. 25th 1914.

Department of the Interior., U. S. Land office at Crookston Minn. Dec. 21st, 1914. Notice is hereby given that Harry Stoey, of Hilda Minn. who on October, 3rd 1912, made Homestead Application Serial No 08491, for W ½ N W ¼ Sec. 33, and N E ¼ N E ¼, Section 32 Township 152 N Range 39 West Fifth Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U.S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls, Minnesota on the 26th day of January 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:
Chas. L. Stoey, Fred Stoey, of Erie, Minn William Lueck, Gilbert G. Hanson, of Hilda, Minn.

Proof made under act of June 6, 1912.

Peter M. Ringdal.
Register.

CITATION FOR HEARING ON FINAL ACCOUNT AND FOR DISTRIBUTION.

ESTATE OF Hayes Wade

STATE OF MINNESOTA, COUNTY OF Pennington IN PROBATE COURT.

In the Matter of the Estate of Hayes Wade Decedent:

THE STATE OF MINNESOTA TO Giles Wade and Melvina Wade all persons interested in the final account and distribution of the estate of said decedent: The representative of the above named decedent, having filed in this Court his final account of the administration of the estate of said decedent, together with his petition praying for the adjustment and allowance of said final account and for distribution of the residue of said estate to the persons thereunto entitled; THEREFORE, YOU, AND EACH OF YOU, are hereby cited and required to show cause, if any you have, before this Court at the Probate Court Rooms in the Court House, in the city of Thief River Falls in the County of Pennington State of Minnesota, on the 22nd. day of January 1915, at 10:00 o'clock A. M., why said petition should not be granted.

WITNESS, the Judge of said Court, and the Seal of said Court, this 15th. day of December, 1914.

[COURT SEAL] WILHELM MICHELET
Probate Judge.
J. M. Bishop,
Attorney for Petitioner.

Dr. Humphreys'

Specifics cure by acting directly upon the disease, without exciting disorder in any other part of the system.

No.	CURES.	PRICES.
1	Fevers, Congestions, Inflammations.	.25
2	Worms, Worm Fever, Worm Colic	.25
3	Teething, Colic, Crying, Wakefulness	.25
4	Diarrhea, of Children or Adults	.25
7	Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis	.25
8	Neuralgia, Toothache, Faceache	.25
9	Headache, Sick Headache, Vertigo	.25
10	Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Weak Stomach	.25
11	Suppressed or Painful Periods	.25
12	Whites, Too Profuse Periods	.25
13	Croup, Laryngitis, Hoarseness	.25
14	Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Eruptions	.25
15	Rheumatism, Rheumatic Pains	.25
16	Malaria, Chills, Fever and Ague	.25
19	Catarrh, Influenza, Cold in the Head	.25
20	Whooping Cough	.25
27	Kidney Diseases	.25
28	Nervous Debility	1.00
30	Urinary Weakness, Wetting Bed	.25
77	Grip, Hay Fever	.25

Dr. Humphreys' Manual of all Diseases at your Druggists or Mailed Free.

Sold by druggists, or sent on receipt of price Humphreys' Med. Co., Cor. William & John Sts. New York.

FIRST STATE BANK,

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS $11000,00

not merely name:--But a fixed policy.

The men who founded and organized the First State had a definate policy in mind, namely: To organize and conduct a bank that would give to all its patrons the best possible service and the most liberal returns on money deposited that can safely be given by a strong, conservative institution.

FIRST STATE BANK,
OKLEE minn.

A. P. Tourin, President John Petterson, Cashier.
Ole Sannes, Asst Cashier.

THE PRICHARD Co.
Thief River Falls Minn.

DEALERS IN LUMBER AND FARM MACHIERY.

Located west of the new Soo Depot. Give us a call, and look over our stock of Lumber and Farm Machinery.

H. O. KJOMME
Attorney and Counselor at Law
COUNTY ATTORNEY
Mcginn Block
Thief River Falls, - - Minn.

Wilhelm Michelet
U. S. COMMISSIONER
COURT HOUSE
THIEF RIVER FALLS,
MINN.

... and immortality.

The Sneeze.

People say "God bless me" after sneezing, from the fact that in the days of the plague this terrible malady began with violent sneezing and other indications of cold. The exclamation was thus originally a prayer to be delivered from the plague.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Jan. 1st. 1915.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minnesota Dec. 29th 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Charles O. Asp of Kratka, Minn. who on August 24th 1908 made Homestead Entry No, 0474, for S, E. ¼ Section 32, Townshi 153 N. Range 41 W. Fifth, Principa Meridian has filed notice of intention to mak final Commutation proof, to establish clai to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, at Thie River Falls Minn. on the 13th day of February 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:
Ole S. Breiland, Ole A. Hoidahl, Kette Brekke, Drong O. Roisland, all of Kratka Minn.

Proof made according to law under whic entry was made.

PETER M. RINGDAL,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam Nov. 27th 191

Department of the Interior. U. S. Lan Office, at Crookston Minn. Nov. 21st 191 Notice is hereby given, that Clarence E. Pet erson, of Kratka, Minn., who on Jun 3rd, 1911, made Homestead Entry No 06259, for Lots 1.&2, E.½ N.W.¼, Section 1 Township 153 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principa Meridian, has filed notice of intention to mak Commutation proof to establish clai to the land above described, before N. W Tarrant, Municipal Judge for the City of Thief River Falls, Minn. at Thief River Fall Minnesota, on the 30th day of December 191

Claimant names as witnesses
Stephen Singer, Ole Nelson, Carl Klemetson, Peter C. Wold, Jack Dunn, all of Kratka, Minn. Roy Hoffman, of Erie, Minn

Proof made according to law under whic entry was made.

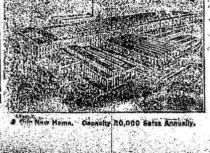
Peter M. Ringdal.
Register.

Cuts, Burns,
Bruises, Sores, Wounds and Piles quickly healed with Arnica Salve. It prevents infection, is antiseptic, soothing, healing. Try it once. Money Back If It Fails. The Original and Genuine.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve
Heals the Hurt
All Druggists and Dealers, 25c.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH - - THAT'S
$50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day

Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 200-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were putting them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing talking points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Why don't YOU be the first to apply from your vicinity before someone else gets the territory. We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.



Our New Home. Capacity 20,000 Safes Annually.

The 25th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide awake men who received our special selling inducement rendered it necessary to double our output. We are spending many thousands of dollars enlarging our sales organization but to learn all particulars it will cost you only the price of a postal card.

Ask for Catalogue 16 T.

THE VICTOR SAFE & LOCK CO
CINCINNATI, OHIO

DEFECTIVE PAGE

The Ambition of Mark Truitt

By
HENRY RUSSELL MILLER

Author of
"THE MAN HIGHER UP," "HIS RISE TO POWER," Etc.

(Copyright, 1913, by The Bobbs-Merrill Company)

CHAPTER XXVI—Continued.

He became conscious of Simon's curious gaze and turned sharply on him.

"Old man, you seem to know a surprising lot about making steel. Look down the valley—there, on those hills. Do you see anything that isn't there?"

Simon looked and nodded. "I've be'n seein' it more'n forty years."

Henley stared. "Humph! An epidemic. There's magic in these hills." His thoughtful glance swept them once more. "But d——d alluring magic."

• • • • • • •

The gentle, sometimes plaintive voice of the preacher had no power to distract from thought. His wistful message could not reach the man for whom it had been prepared in the hope that it would come to him with healing in its wings.

The benediction had been said. Mark went quietly from his rear pew out of the church and limped slowly along the dusty, weed-flanked pike until he came to a minor crest. There he dropped on the roadside and turned his eyes to the valley.

The murmurous quiet of noonday was about him.

Up the rise, village bound, creaked a battered old top-buggy, bearing a passenger whose grizzled beard and lined face, too, showed the marks of time's battering.

The buggy drew up beside him.

"Did he find you?"

"Who?"

The doctor chuckled. "Guess he didn't, or you wouldn't have to ask. He's a vigorous party that doesn't understand the joy of talk. I took him from Number Four to your place."

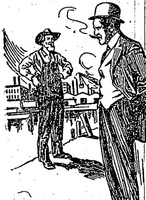
"Short and stout—"

"And not much for looks," Hedges concluded the portrait. "That's him. Has a way with him, though. And the habit of taking what he wants, I guess, without waiting."

"Sunday traffic," the doctor drawled, "is getting pretty heavy. Number Four brought a woman, too. Expecting any baggage of that kind?"

Mark shook his head absently.

"No? That's too bad. She's a new kind for Bethel—a right pleasant kind, too, though I'm not sure how our women'd take her." The doctor grinned, but his pleasantry won no answering smile from Mark. "Well, I must be moseying along. Better ride into town. The vigorous party'll be near to apoplexy by now, waiting for you."



"There's Magic in These Hills."

Mark got in and the buggy resumed its creaking journey. The doctor rambled on.

"A good many new sorts come to Bethel nowadays. Good thing for us, too—gives us a peep into the world. We've you to thank for that. I came across a queer one yesterday. I was up on the Hill—I go there sometimes even since the fire. I found him camped out in the old tool shed—about the only thing the fire missed. He's a half-starved little rat, with a straggly brown beard and a club foot. I asked him how he got there and he didn't seem to know. Said he'd just walked and walked and walked till he found the shed. I wanted to bring him back to town, but he wouldn't come. His mind's more than half gone, I should judge. You'd better send some one out to look after him."

"I will."

"And he says," the doctor concluded his heralding of fate, "his name is Peter Anderson."

CHAPTER XXVII.

Cities Unbuilt.

Henley was pleased to be facetious.

"The great Utopian—in his modest cottage—living in democratic simplicity among his village neighbors. Very pretty! I suppose you do the chores, too."

"Sometimes—what we have."

"Very pretty! The Sunday papers would like that. But it's a little too theatrical, don't you think?"

"Not conspicuously so. The place was here, and it served my purpose very well. I don't need much room, you know. I'm not a Wall street hero."

"Humph!" grunted Henley, still a skeptic.

"What," Mark asked, "did you come here for?"

Henley grunted again. "Cordial, I must say! I came to restore your sanity." He rose, mopping his red face with a silk handkerchief. "Take me out of this sun and I'll begin. I hear you're pretty far gone."

Mark led him into a cool office-like room—pleasant enough—and made him comfortable with a cigar and a chair by a window from which a view of the valley was to be had.

"Not sybaritic," Henley grudgingly admitted, "but good enough for a man—who has no women. Now tell me what you're trying to do here."

And Mark began, simply, without enthusiasm or sentimentalizing, to set forth his idea.

The explanation came to an end. Mark awaited his auditor's comment.

"Of course, you know," Henley said, with an easiness that was outward only, "you won't put it through."

"I do not know that," Mark answered quietly. "This valley is well situated with respect to the market. Its transportation facilities are good. Our fuel is here, and I can get ore here cheaper than Quinby or MacGregor. I can make steel cheaper than anybody in America, and there's no plant of its size that can equal mine in capacity. In ten years, with a fair field—"

"With a fair field. Exactly!"

"You mean I won't have it?"

"You won't have it."

"Why?"

"For one thing—profits."

"I'll make money here."

"It isn't a question of your profits nor of profits alone, but the size of profits. No," Henley shook his head vigorously, "you can't have it. I'm here to tell you that."

"Well?"

"I have no objection to your safety appliances. They're practical. They'll save twice their cost in damages every year."

"That's obvious."

"I'll agree to the baths. If the men want to clean up after work—why, I regard bathing as a very proper habit."

Mark smiled. "The man will be grateful."

"I'm not joking," Henley reminded him sternly. "I'll go as far as to agree to their eight-hour shift—as an experiment. I'd like to see it tried out."

"Yes?"

"Your company stores, company gardens and company homes are well enough. They can be made profitable—properly handled. But your profit-sharing plan is all wrong and"—Henley leaned forward and rapped on the arm of his chair to emphasize each word—"and you can't have it. I wouldn't care if you gave them only a nominal share. It would be useful—at first—to get good men up here. Afterward you could cut it out. But why, in God's name, give them half?"

"Because I'll need the other half for some things I'm planning."

"I'm not joking," Henley repeated. "Why give them half?"

"Oh, that's an approximation. It seems to me a pretty fair division of the spoils. I don't insist on its accuracy. However, that's not the point." Mark straightened up in his seat by the desk, facing Henley squarely. "Have you forgotten that my money and mine only is invested in this plant? I can quote good authority, yourself, that a man ought to be allowed to run his own business to suit himself."

"As long as he hurts no one else."

Mark smiled again at that. "You said you weren't joking. I suppose you aren't. That's the joke of it. However, the point is, you forbid me to conduct my own business in my own way. And your authority?"

"The power," answered Henley quietly, "to smash you—and the will. We've got labor where we want it in this business and we propose to keep it there. What you propose would be a dangerous precedent. If we let you succeed, we'd have the men all over the country yammering for the same freak conditions. Therefore, we won't let you succeed."

"I see. And you?"

"I? I made you—have you forgotten that?—and I'm responsible for you. I helped to put labor where it is, at some risk to myself, and I don't propose to have a man of my own making undo the biggest thing I've ever done. Therefore, I won't let you succeed."

"You are quite sure you can do it—smash me?"

"Truitt, every steel company in the country will make it its business to put you out."

"And you won't stand aside and let me fight it out with the rest of them?"

"No." Henley seemed astonished at the question. "Certainly not. What did you expect?"

"I had hoped," Mark answered slowly, "that you'd stay out of it. I realize I had no reason to hope that."

Henley stirred restlessly, turned to look out upon the valley, upon the city that had not yet arisen. An uneasy qualm moved his heart, continued with a sharpness that was almost akin to pain. He found himself resisting an absurd, an incredible impulse—a tenderness such as he had used to know, stealthily and unadmittedly, for a young half invalid with the habit of triumphing where robust men fell, multiplied now for this man.

"Truitt, I—" Henley stopped, an embarrassment as unwonted as the impulse upon him, and turned again to the window.

"Truitt," he began again, very gruffly, eyes still fixed on the city the magic of the hills revealed to him, "I—well, I like you. I've always counted you my friend. I don't want to have to fight you. I don't think you want to fight me. There is—there may be another alternative." He turned to face Mark. "Take me in with you."

Mark looked his astonishment.

"I say," Henley went on, "I might do it. I've seen something this morning—something you've been seeing. The city out there. It's big—big! And if the figures you've given me are correct, it's possible. This place was intended for a city. And with us working together, it could be ten times bigger—epic—stupendous!"

He got to his feet, and shooting up the shade, stood looking thoughtfully out of the window.

"We'd make it," Henley seemed almost to be thinking aloud, "a city from the beginning. We'd get the government to make the river navigable to the mouth and ship our coal by boat to the gulf. I can think of a dozen concerns I could get to move their plants here and contractors who'd undertake to house the people. In five years we'd have fifty thousand here, and coming as fast as we could put roofs over them. But we'd build on steel. We'd quadruple your plant at once—for a start. We'd make this the steel center and this overgrown trust with its graft and favoritism and slipshod methods would have us to reckon with. We'd leave Quinby and that Scotch bagpipe, grown fat on other men's brains, in the shade. By God!" Henley's voice was ringing, as he wheeled on Mark again. "It would be the big thing of the century—making a city to order. And I guess for that you'd be willing to give up your little two-by-four paternalism."

"That would be stipulated?"

"Certainly! We'll—" Henley seemed unconscious of the change of mood and tense. "We'll leave fads to the cranks. We'll build this city on a rock—on a sound financial foundation—and use the profits for extensions."

"I think you don't understand what I—"

"Understand? Of course I understand. That's why the idea grips. You're a born battler; things were coming too easy for you. You need obstacles, to have to extend yourself. I need that. I've got a hold in Wall street. I can tighten my hold. But I'm out of place there. I'm a builder, not a money-grubber. I've got to see things growing under my hand. What I'm at now is just a game. This would be a work, the kind I need. Will you consider it?"

"Are you offering it?"

"I'm offering it as a possible alternative to putting you out of business. There may be magic in these hills, but if the thing works out on study as I believe now it will, I'll do it. What do you say?"

"And you say," Mark insisted, "it's the only possible alternative to fighting you?"

"To being," Henley corrected grimly, "put out of business."

It was Mark's turn to go to the window. He stood there silent, for many minutes, looking not upon the city that might be but upon the little village that was.

"What do you say?" Henley demanded impatiently.

"It doesn't tempt." Mark faced him steadily. "You were mistaken. I don't want battle. I don't want obstacles. But I do want to put that through." He nodded toward the village and the mills.

"Humph! You'll find plenty of obstacles and battles over there."

"Yes. But there would be—compensations."

"I would give you compensations. Do you mean," Henley demanded, "you choose to hobble along with a little one-horse plant and philanthropy when you might go with me into something really big? Compensations! You'll end in losing all you have."

"All the money I have," Mark corrected. "That is possible. But I'm not worrying about the poor farm. I expect, when that happens, I can find a good job somewhere."

"Then," Henley fired his last gun, gruffly, "then you choose those people over there against me—who made you?"

"They helped to make me—to make you, too.—You," Mark answered quietly, "don't tempt.

"I'd like you to understand," he continued after a little pause, "since you've mentioned friendship, I don't like to think of you as an enemy. But this plan, this idea, is worth a good deal to me, even though the chance of success is small. It came to me before the strike. And at first it was only the shallow sentimentality you think it. Then it became a refuge. I came here because there was a thing"—Henley saw the shadow that passed over his face—"a thing I wanted to forget, something I needed to earn. But now it's grown beyond that. It has a value of its own. It's my niche, the thing I must do. You've helped me to make that clear.

"You ought to understand it, for you had it. It's what saved you from being like the other money grubbers. You came close to being one of them. Why, once when Quinby cracked his whip you — you — cringed like a whipped dog before the old blatherskite because you loved your money. You remember that, don't you? And then you ran afoul of him again, over the strike, when the same threat hung over you, and you didn't cringe. You beat him down. Why?"

"I couldn't let—"

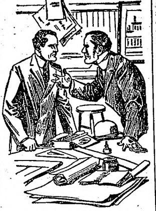
"No, you couldn't. You believed opposing him would cost you much. The strike you forced did take hundreds of thousands from the value of your stock. But you didn't think of that then. And now—you've claimed my friendship. How much does it mean to you?"

"A good deal, Truitt," Henley answered slowly. "It's the only friendship I ever wanted. It was my reason for making you what you are."

"Friendship means obligation—you've just reminded me of that. Would it add to your obligation if I told you that you got away whole from Quinby because of me?"

"What! What's this? You never told me—"

"It wasn't I who did it but—a woman." Henley saw the shadow again. "But she did it for me. I took for you an advantage I wouldn't take for myself. Does that square what you did for me?"



"I'm Offering It as a Possible Alternative to Putting You Out of Business!"

"Yes. I don't understand. But it does. It more than squares it."

"Then—my success here can't hurt you—will you stand aside and let me fight it out with the others?"

"You're asking me to let you undo the best thing I've ever done!"

There was a long silence in the little room. Henley sat stiffly, staring at the man who had passed out of reach of his influence. And the pain was unmistakable now.

"I see," he said at last, as if reluctantly. "I guess I'm the only one of the money grubbers who could understand. It seems to be your idea against mine. I'm sorry."

"It seems so. I'm sorry, too."

"My city—I guess it was just the magic of the hills, after all. I don't want to do it without you—I'm sorry."

There was a heavy pause. Then Henley drew a long breath that was almost a sigh, glanced at the clock and rose.

"I'll take another cigar," he said, grimly facetious, "if you don't mind giving aid and comfort to the enemy. Then I'll go back to my money grubbing."

When they were standing on the station platform he asked abruptly, "Can you tell me about that woman business?"

"I'd rather not."

Henley scrutinized him keenly. From around a curve came the crescendo whistle of the approaching train.

"You'd better," he said as he stopped for his grip, "get her up here. You'll need her. And when you're down and out, come to me and I'll give you a job."

Mark watched the train, regretfully, until it was caught out of his sight. Then he let his gaze dwell lingeringly on the mills and village across the river. A wave of protectiveness swept over him, of tenderness as for a deeply loved one.

And quick upon that wave, ere it ebbed, surged another, as though under the shock of the first contact with opposition a dam had fallen, loosing a torrent that flooded his soul, lifting him high, filling his need. Consciousness, distinct, definite, thrilling, filled him—of a new power and mettle, of the vitality of his purpose, of an ultimate purpose into which his fitted. A weight fell like the pilgrim's pack from his shoulders. His spirit stood erect, steady. He lifted his eyes to the hills.

"I can put it through. I will. . . . I have faith."

CHAPTER XXVIII.

White Water.

The woman who alighted with Henley from the train had come with an errand. Sundry inquiries from the station and at the new hotel—so hideously garish amid the gray tones of its surroundings—convinced her that she would need Mark Truitt's help. But she had overheard her fellow passenger's questions to the doctor and guessed that Mark would be with him for most of that day.

She stayed in her little hotel room until dinner time. After that meal, eaten in a noisy dining-room filled with still homeless men who had come to build or work in the Bethel experiment, she went out and wandered about through the old village, of which years before, hearing of it from an unappreciative young adventurer, she had used to think as a sort of anteroom to heaven. There had even been a period in that far-off, innocent girlhood when she had thought of it as a beautiful restful haven, to which, some day when he should have tired of the greedy city and its grind, her lover might bring her. Always, it seemed, she had needed and wanted a haven. If only he had brought her then, what might have been saved!

"What might have been saved! But I mustn't think of that."

From down a narrow lane she caught a glimpse of the river, smiling in the sunlight. It beckoned to her and she obeyed, turning her steps upstream. A thick grove of oaks and chestnuts shut her off from the village and she was alone with the river and forest. River and forest held many memories for her.

Hours passed. A few fleecy, tumbling clouds floated over her. Heavier and less silvery masses appeared over the western horizon. The wind freshened. She did not notice. . . . And suddenly she knew that she was not alone.

She turned and saw him standing near, staring, bewildered yet strangely eager, toward her. Her lips parted, her bosom lifted in a sharp intake of breath, as their eyes met. Then she got slowly to her feet, trying to look away that she might regain a lost self-control.

He started toward her, with the peculiar halting step she never could see without a tender maternal impulse. Scarcely two yards away he stopped.

"Kazia—you!"

"Yes."

"But I," he stammered, "I don't understand."

Self-control was coming back. "I came to get Piotr."

"To get Piotr," he repeated mechanically. But he did not comprehend.

He passed a hand over his eyes. The apparition did not fade. Gradually he realized—with a dazing jumble of gladness and pain and reluctance—that it was indeed she, in the flesh.

"I can hardly realize it," he said at last. "I was just thinking of you. Often I am thinking of you. A hundred times I've been on the point of going to see you, to find out—"

"To find out?"

"How badly I hurt you."

"I told you I haven't blamed you."

"But that isn't true—it can't be true. It wouldn't be human not to resent me, what I've brought you. You do resent, don't you?"

"Why do you press me with what is ended? I don't want to think of it—or to be unjust. I—" She turned sharply to face him. "Yes, if you must know it, I do resent."

"You have every right to resent," he answered sadly.

She started swiftly along the bank toward the village. He followed, trying to keep up with her, and with a real effort managed it. A quarter of a mile was thus traversed, neither speaking, she keeping always one pace ahead so that he could not see her face. Then she observed his heavy breathing and slackened her pace.

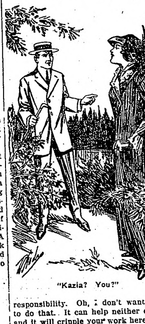
"I didn't realize I was walking so fast." Her voice was quiet again.

"I don't mind it." He assayed a laugh, a poor, mirthless attempt. "I need a counter-irritant just now."

"And I didn't mean what I said back there. I haven't felt that way—often, at least. I have no resentment against you—only against myself. It was in me to keep clean and I deliberately—it is all so clear now—chose the worst thing."

"That is true of all of us."

"I don't know. I only know it's true of me. And so you needn't go on torturing yourself with thoughts of your responsibility. Oh, I don't want you to do that. It can help neither of us and it will cripple your work here."



"Kazia? You?"

"It isn't facing the truth that can hurt, but the truth itself. Kazia, why did you come here?"

"I told you—to get Piotr."

"Piotr? I had forgotten him. I heard this morning he was here."

"Then he is here? I asked at the station and hotel, but no one had seen or heard of him."

"But why is he here? And why have you come?"

"He came back to us a few weeks ago, the forlornest waif I've ever seen. I don't know how he had been living—we'd no trace of him since Uncle Roman died. He was starving and his mind was clearly gone. I suppose he wouldn't have come to me otherwise. I ought to have put him away somewhere, but he was harmless and it seemed so cruel. He just sat around poring over books as he used to when he was a boy. He seemed to have forgotten all that's happened since then. And then three days ago he awoke. He asked me for some money—said something about a debt he had to pay. It was little enough—and he's had so little of everything, poor Piotr!"

"So very little."

"He went out and didn't come back. And yesterday—I'd seen she was worrying, but thought it was because he hadn't appeared again—the Matka told me she thought from something he'd said that he might have come up here to try to harm you in some way. Do you know where he is?"

"The doctor here, who told me about him, said he's camping out in an old shed over there in the hills."

"If you'll help me to him, or send some one—"

"I will go myself."

They had reached the lane that led to the main street and the hotel. She would have turned there, but he put out a hand and stayed her.

"Kazia, was it only on Piotr's account you came?"

Her glance wavered, sought wistfully and sadly the hills across the valley, came back to his. "You mean, did I think of meeting you again? I—why should I deny it? I wanted to see your work I had been hearing about—and you again. But it doesn't mean I wanted to change anything. Please believe that. And I didn't want to trouble you—"

"You haven't troubled me."

"Will you please leave me now and bring Piotr to the hotel? I must leave with him tonight."

When she had passed out of his sight, he started quickly villageward. At the cottage he harnessed his horse to a buggy, drove across the bridge and took the road that led to Hedges' Hill.

CHAPTER XXIX.

The Miracle.

"I shall know it," he had thought, "when it comes."

And as he drove there came to him the knowledge of his miracle. It came not with the lazy luxuriousness of youth drifting, ignorant and caring not for wisdom, toward a mate, nor yet with the ecstatic feverish excitement of the passionate man, but with a deep, solemn, all-pervading joy. Peace followed it—the peace of certitude, for he knew that in the woman who had sinned he had found the one who fitted into him as a member into its body, completed him, with him formed the perfect unity—of content, for he knew that from its infinite preciousness neither trial nor failure, disappointment nor misstep could subtract.

"She must know," he thought. "She must be made to know—that nothing else counts—that we are to begin over again together."

He remembered his mission.

There was a rumble of thunder. He glanced overhead and saw the blackened sky, heard the rushing wind. A few scattered drops fell. He urged the horse forward.

He was miles away from the village and near the foot of a hill that towered well above its neighbors. He smiled as he saw a trace of an old road, almost obliterated by weeds, that led zigzagging up the eminence. It was Hedges' Hill and near the crest, he remembered, was the outhouse that sheltered the unhappy Piotr.

The storm overtook him before he was half-way up the hill. When he reached the clearing on the edge of which stood the shed, he made his horse fast to a tree, and drenched to the skin by the pelting rain, entered the shelter.

At first, in the shadows of the windowless shed, he saw no signs of Piotr. He stood in the doorway, watching the storm.

He had been there several minutes when a queer choking sound came from behind him. He turned quickly, and as his eyes became used to the darkness, made out the figure crouching half hidden behind a bench in the far corner.

"Hello! Is that you, Piotr? What are you doing over there?"

The noise came again.

"Is something wrong with you?" Mark went closer to him. "I'm Mark Truitt. Don't you know me, Piotr?"

"Y-yes," quavered Piotr.

"What's the matter—sick?"

"I'm a-afraid," came the whimpering reply. "It's the storm."

Mark smiled pityingly. So this poor nerve-broken creature, who cowered before a little wind and rain and lightning, was he who had set out to harm him.

"He's in a bad way," he thought. "There, now," he said, gently, "I'm not going to hurt you, Piotr."

Piotr was in his corner, half crouching, staring fixedly at Mark. His eyes made tiny points of light in the deep shadow.

"D-did you come here to get me?"

"Of course I did. I heard you were hereabouts and I wasn't going to let you stay up here and starve to death."

"Wh-what are you g-going to do with me now?"

"For one thing," Mark answered gravely, "when this rain lets up I'm going to take you back to town and get you in the habit of eating three square meals a day. I think it's beginning to let up a little now."

"Who," came Piotr's quavering voice, "who told you I was here?"

"The doctor who found you yesterday—and Kazia."

"Kazia! She—she is here?"

"Yes. She came to get you."

"She knows?"

"She guessed—she and the Matka guessed—you were up to some mischief. You frightened the Matka with your wild talk. But we'll discuss that later. Come, we'll make a start now."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

BANKERS DISCUSS LEGISLATIVE WORK

OVER SIX HUNDRED ATTEND STATE GATHERING HELD IN ST. PAUL.

CONSIDER RESERVE SYSTEM

Not One, However, Is Willing to Go on Record as to Proposed Association With Federal Body —Outline Campaign.

St. Paul.—The largest gathering of state bankers ever assembled in Minnesota discussed proposed legislation at The Saint Paul, told the resolution committee what it wanted, adopted the committee's report when it was returned, and outlined a campaign to be waged before the state legislature this winter in behalf of its recommendations.

Most of the 600 bankers assembled had something to say concerning the proposed association with the Federal reserve system, but when a ballot was taken regarding their sentiment toward the proposed affiliation every one elected not to go on record, but rather to seek the opportunity to affiliate with the Federal plan according to his own discretion.

The question as to who should represent the assemblage and its interests before the state legislature was discussed and it was decided to exert every possible influence as a committee of the whole, with special responsibility resting with the resolutions committee, which is to hold over. Kelsey S. Chase, president of the People's bank, St. Paul, is the chairman.

The first resolution adopted by the convention petitions the state legislature to enact such legislation at the coming session that will enable state banks to take membership in the Federal reserve association, should they so desire, and should they take such membership be permitted to hold stock in the Federal reserve bank.

Taking cognizance of the alleged fact that banks now are being organized in communities where they are not required, and that under the present laws the superintendent of banks has no discretion in the matter but to grant charters when the capital has been paid in, the convention petitioned the legislature to authorize the bank superintendent to exercise his discretion in granting such charters, withholding them if, in his opinion, the organization would be detrimental to the best interests of the state and its people.

Bankers Prepare Bills.

St. Paul.—Bills covering the subjects contained in the resolutions adopted by the state bankers at their convention here will be prepared at once and will be ready to submit to the legislature when it convenes, according to a statement by Kelsey S. Chase, president of the People's bank of St. Paul, and chairman of the committee which will urge the passage of the proposed laws. "The resolutions committee of the convention," said Mr. Chase, was delegated to do this work and to act as a sort of a steering committee in obtaining favorable legislative action on the bills to be submitted in behalf of the bankers.

Claims Color Line Drawn.

Brainerd. — An interesting case, heard in chambers by Judge W. S. McClenahan, concerns the alleged drawing of the color line in an Aitkin Sunday school. Mary C. Marshall, colored, by her guardian ad litem, Frank A. Marshall, has sued A. L. Richardson, J. M. Tucker, Frances Osterhout and Myrtle Tucker for $1,000 damages, alleging she was discriminated against in the Sunday school of which the defendants were officers, in that she was forced to sit apart from all white persons. She says that for nine years she has been an active member of the Aitkin Methodist Sunday school. A temporary order prohibiting discrimination against her was granted by Judge McClenahan, who has taken the case under advisement.

Ninety Candles on Birthday Cake.

Minneapolis.—William Rolfing, 415 Sinnen street, St. Paul, had a birthday cake at his anniversary dinner, and on it were 90 candles aglow in celebration of his 90 years. The dinner was served at noon at the home of his grandson, Hubert Korfhage, 597 Forest street, 30 relatives and old friends being invited.

Hog Vaccination Succeeds.

Farmington.—Alex Empey of Dakota county vaccinated 300 hogs with the double treatment about the first of September. Because of the use of poor serum 215 of 300 died. Empey did not lose faith in vaccination. On Nov. 10 he purchased 149 hogs and vaccinated them with the double treatment and placed them in the lots where the 215 had died. The lots were not disinfected and up to the present time he has not lost one of the 149.

GROCER CAPTURES BANDIT

After Being Covered With Gun, E. Bellis Drives Two Robbers From Store With Poker.

St. Paul.—Armed with a stove poker, E. Bellis, 43 years old, drove two bandits from his grocery store at 253 Norris street and captured Frank Roy, who a moment before had covered him with a gun while his accomplice attempted to remove a wallet from Bellis' pocket.

Roy and his companion entered the store through the front door at about 8:30 p. m. Bellis was the only one in the store and Roy covered him with a gun. At that moment Bellis could see no way to prevent them from rifling his cash register and as he had most of his money in a wallet in his pocket he allowed the robbers to take the few dollars in change which was in the till.

The bandits were not satisfied with the amount they gained from the till and Roy suggested that his partner go through Bellis's pockets. Although covered with a gun, which was afterwards found to be loaded, Bellis seized a convenient poker and assailed Roy.

He landed one blow on Roy's head and his aggressiveness was too much for the bandits, who began a retreat. As they went out the door Bellis landed another blow on Roy's head which felled him.

Following this advantage, Bellis deserted his useful weapon and grasping the hand which held the gun forced it into the snow. At the same time he prevented the other bandit from assisting Roy by kicking him vigorously wherever he came within range.

A passerby frightened the reserve bandit away, and Bellis asked for assistance. According to Bellis, he did not receive it. When the Samaritan approached Bellis advised him to be careful as Roy's gun still was in his hand. The pedestrian left at once with the remark that Bellis could fight it out alone.

After holding Roy's hand in the snow several minutes, Bellis made Roy drop the gun. Then he took his captive into the store and telephoned for the police. Detective Patrick Smith and Joseph Beaubine answered the call in the squad wagon and relieved Bellis of his prisoner.

Later Edward Hike, who lives next door to Bellis' store, found the gun, which he turned over to the police.

The only mark of the battle which Bellis had to show was a lacerated left hand, which had been bitten by one of the bandits during the battle.

WANTS TERMINALS EXTENDED

James J. Hill Tells of Needs in Minneapolis—Asks Fair Opportunity for Railroads.

Minneapolis, Dec. 23.—The importance of making adequate provision for the extension of freight terminals, and preventing obstructions or petty ambitions to retard growth, was emphasized by James J. Hill in a talk to Minneapolis business men.

Mr. Hill asked the co-operation of business men in seeing to it that the railroads were given fair opportunity to extend their freight terminals He intimated that any obstruction would, in time, tend to drive freight traffic away from the city.

The "Empire Builder" compared this city to a seaport. He said any obstruction to the harbor would be vigorously opposed by business men generally. Minneapolis has a harbor for freight coming in by rail now, he said, and any obstruction to that harbor should be as vigorously opposed.

"The present terminals are only fairly adequate for the volume of business passing through them," said Mr. Hill. "They soon will become congested. Congestion means delays. If there are these delays purchasers of goods naturally will turn elsewhere."

Need New School Buildings.

Minneapolis.—Building needs for 1915 will be considered at a special meeting of the board of education Dec. 28. The board has $500,000 of grade school bonds authorized in 1913 that may be sold to provide grade school structures to relieve congestion. The board has three new grade school buildings in course of erection, but with 1,432 pupils on half sessions and enrollment gaining, it is considered other schools are needed.

Indicted on Robbery Charge.

St. Paul.—Alden Phillips, who, with George Hurin, was indicted by the grand jury, charged with highway robbery, has been released on $1,000 bail by Judge Orr. Phillips and Hurin are accused of holding up Charles Winstead as he entered his boarding house, 1024 Payne avenue, several months ago.

Represented in Legislature.

Brainerd.—Brainerd Council No. 545, United Commercial Travelers of America, is the only council in the state which has a representative to the legislature on its membership roll. The lodge voted favorably on the transfer card of Edward R. Syverson of Ironton, representative-elect of Crow Wing county from his council membership at Fargo, N. D. From the location of the first house on the townsite of Ironton in 1910 Syverson has taken part in building up and improving Ironton.

WINS SUIT AGAINST HUDSON

MRS. CAROLINE KING TO HAVE FORTUNE RESTORED.

Aged Woman Has $100,000 Christmas Present—Court Calls Defendant a Blackmailer.

Minneapolis, Dec. 26.—In the form of a court decree awarding to her property valued at more than $100,000, Mrs. Caroline M. King, aged plaintiff against Carleton Hudson in a suit to recover a large part of her husband's fortune, received the most handsome Christmas present of any woman in the city.

Judge Amidon of the Federal court gave an oral decree at the close of attorneys' arguments, which cancelled all deeds executed by Mrs. King and all notes given by her to Hudson during the eleven years Hudson acted as her business agent.

Hudson Called Blackmailer.

Judge Amidon's oral decree was one of the most scathing rebukes ever heard in a court room in this county. Hudson was characterized as "a minister of darkness who exhibited all the qualities of a confidence man, a blackmailer and a loan shark." He declared that Louis C. Ehle was "a tool," and that "the two co-conspirators had worked upon the credulity of the aged woman to rob her of her property."

The court decree cancels four deeds to the Heywood property at Fifth and Washington avenues north, and sets aside notes amounting to $36,000 held by Ehle, and notes held by the Moody church and A. E. Davis. Other notes held by Mrs. Ella K. Johnson, amounting to $5,000, while not included in the award, are adjudged by the decree to be worthless so far as being secured by property held by Mrs. King.

Declares Notes Obtained by Fraud.

In a sweeping statement the court declared all the outstanding notes were obtained by fraud, force and blackmail and that none of the holders was an innocent purchaser. The relationship of Hudson and Mrs. King as attorney and client, was the basic principle upon which the court made decisions. Judge Amidon said that Hudson introduced himself to the woman as her attorney, because of his relations to her husband before his death; that he held out to her hopes of obtaining large property interests in Chicago as a means of obtaining her confidence and then began a system of "kiting notes and checks," and "padding expense accounts," until he had the aged woman in his power and robbed her of everything but a roof over her head.

"With a woman's instinct she clung to her home," said the court. "If she had died several years ago this paper case would have given Hudson practically all the estate. Had she sold her home to reduce interest charges, as Hudson advised, she would now be a penniless old woman. This disgraceful story shows an unfolding conspiracy by Hudson and a tragedy for Mrs King."

DANGER OF BUBONIC PLAGUE

St. Paul Authorities Warned of Sending of Cars From New Orleans Without Inspection.

St. Paul.—Dr. G. M. Caput, in charge of the United States health department, gives warning of the danger of the bubonic plague. Dr. Caput wrote that some of the railways were sending cars in interstate traffic out of New Orleans without submitting to inspection by the federal health service. Therefore, these cars are not certified as free from rats.

Alleged Kidnaper Asks Hearing.

Brainerd.—W. J. Sullivan, charged with kidnaping Theodore Sjogren on the Cuyuna range at the time of the miners' strike in Crosby, has filed a petition with the state supreme court for a rehearing of his case. George C. Payne, also convicted of kidnaping, has had his stay extended to December 30. In the meantime he is making application for a new trial, the motion to be heard by Judge C. W Stanton.

Autoing Replaces Sleighing.

Le Sueur Center.—Rural mail carriers and others say that the days of good sleighing in the winter over the public highways are rapidly passing. Not that the winters are becoming milder, but the modern system of building the highways gives chance for but little snow to remain. When all the roads are well rounded up within the next few years, all-winter autoing will take the place of sleighing.

Aged Man Dies of Injuries.

Welch.—Ole Johnson, aged about 75 years, and one of the well-known settlers of Welch township, passed away at his home, following an illness caused by a runaway accident on Thanksgiving day. Mr. Johnson suffered a fractured leg and was evidently internally injured, as he grew gradually weaker day by day since the accident, until death ended his suffering. He is survived by his wife and two sons, Benjamin Johnson of Minneapolis and Betcher Johnson of Welch.

New Institute of Arts at Minneapolis Opens Jan. 7

Minneapolis.—On January 7th, Minneapolis will formally open its magnificent new Institute of Arts with a public exhibition of art treasures, rivaling in extent and value any similar display ever presented in the West. Among the notable loan collections, which will be included in the initial exhibition, will be a select number of the treasures of the late J. P. Morgan and practically the entire collection of James J. Hill. Patrons of art from all parts of the country, artists, art critics and directors of other art museums will be among the visitors during the week of the opening, and it is expected that a large number of visitors will come from Minnesota and the states near by.

Marks Steps of Progress.

The opening of the Minneapolis Institute of Arts will mark a distinct step of progress not only for Minneapolis, but for the entire Northwest. In its building as well as in providing the arrangements of the objects of art, which will grace the structure, Minneapolis has had the advantage of study of all the institutions that have preceded it. The museum has been erected at a cost of about $540,000. It consists of three stories and a sub-basement. It is of white Hardwick granite, classical in design and eminently successful in its beauty of proportions and dignified simplicity. While its interior is rich and attractive, it is characterized with restraint in the use of ornaments in order that the works of art themselves and not the settings shall first attract attention.

Offers Ten-Acre Plot.

Few public art museums have enjoyed a more promising start than that of the Minneapolis Institute of Arts. Although the Minneapolis Society of Fine Arts at the time of its incorporation in 1883 announced that it was its purpose eventually to establish a permanent museum of fine arts, it was not until 1911, that the beautiful institute of today became a definite project. On January 10, 1911, announcement was made that Mr. Clinton Morrison stood ready to offer as a gift a ten-acre plot of ground on 24th Street between Stevens and Third Avenues South. Immediately following this announcement a letter was read from William H. Dunwoody, agreeing to contribute $100,000 toward a building fund, provided $500,000 could be raised. At a meeting of business men the sum of $365,000 was pledged in one hour besides the gift of the building site, which is valued at approximately $250,000. Within a few days the entire project had been financed, and in the fall of 1911 a selected group of architects was invited to compete for the plans. The complete plan calls for a building which will involve an expenditure of about $3,000,000, embracing not only accommodations for the museum and art school, but also a large auditorium for the use of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra. For present needs only the central or main part of the building has been erected, at a cost of about $540,000.

Has Notable Collection.

The Minneapolis Institute of Arts will house a notable collection of paintings and sculpture, but it will not confine itself merely to these major arts, including also notable examples of the decorative art. The Minneapolis Society of Fine Arts is anxious to emphasize the broad scope of the institute because of its value to the great body of people. It is calculated not only to please the person versed in art, but also to afford inspiration and instruction to those who design and execute the familiar objects of daily life.

The Minneapolis Institute will not be a "Prison of Arts"; it will be a practical and useful gallery, as well as one of beauty, extending no less cordial a welcome to the humbler amateur than to the "carriage folk." The new idea of museum installation will be adhered to rigorously, and there will be an orderly and systematic arrangement of material. The old-time jumble, which confused the casual visitor and irritated the student will be absent. For instance, all the rooms devoted to Oriental art will form a separate unit of the building and in the same way there will be shown together other related groups. Wall decorations will be in keeping with the treasures shown. Several rooms in the institute will be devoted to permanent collections of art, including those of the late Martin B. Koon and John S. Bradstreet.

Works Must Be Beautiful.

The only rule which will be imposed regarding the acquisition of works of art will be that they must be beautiful and the best examples of the work they represent. Quality not quantity will be sought. This is the only limitation of its scope. In general, probably more than half the material exhibited will be contemporary art, and an effort will be made to have illustrated in about equal proportions contemporary art of this country and of Europe. However, there will be an effort to present in this museum the entire history of art from the remote past to the present. Small but carefully chosen collections will include examples of Oriental art, of Egyptian and classical art and the art of the early Christian, Gothic, Renaissance, and later periods, which lead up to that of the present.

Large Endowment Fund.

There will be available for the maintenance of the new Institute of Arts a tax of ⅛ of a mill. Other expenses will be met by the Society of Fine Arts. For the purchase of works of art there is available the income derived from an endowment of $1,000,000, provided in the will of the Society's late president, William Hood Dunwoody.

Minneapolis is tendering an invitation to the entire Northwest to unite with it in the celebration of the opening of this magnificent new structure.

Food Prices Advance.

London, Dec. 28.—Average change in retail food prices in London between Aug. 1 and Dec. 1 was an advance of about 17 per cent, according to the board of trade's official figures. In Berlin, according to Prussian official statistche correspondence, the advance for the same period was 16.4 per cent. The most marked advances in London were in eggs, tea and fish, which in the past month rose 13, 12 and 6 per cent respectively. Sugar and eggs now average about 65 per cent above the level of Aug. 1. Potatoes are cheaper than in July.

Russia Plans Naval Base.

London, Dec. 26.—Berlin reports say that Russia is planning to establish a naval base on the Aland islands. The Gulf of Finland is now frozen over in parts, but the Aland ports remain free from ice. While the states bordering the Baltic have objected violently to the construction of fortifications on the islands, it is understood that Russian warcraft, including some large vessels, have arrived there, and that provisions and ammunition have been [illegible] in great quantity.

Not to Increase Army.

Tokio, Dec. 26.—Parliament has rejected the request of the cabinet for appropriations to enable the government to maintain a larger army. As a result it is expected that the cabinet will dissolve parliament shortly and trust to a popular election to gain the support of the country. Members of parliament fear the country cannot bear the additional financial burden. Many also fear that the government intends to send troops to Europe to aid the allies.

SYRUP OF FIGS FOR A CHILD'S BOWELS

It is cruel to force nauseating, harsh physic into a sick child.

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on — castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well-founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and that a teaspoonful given today saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Adv.

MR. BUSBY AS A HUMORIST

Of Course It Doesn't Often Happen, But on This Occasion He Failed to Score.

Busby—I see th' Turks have been kicking up th' sand around the Suez canal.

Mrs. B. (faintly interested)—Some religious ceremony?

Busby—No-o-o. It's war. They're fighting. The report from Berlin says they've licked th' British army to a frazzle. It looks as if the canal would fall into th' Turks' hands.

Mrs. B. (calmly)—I can't see what good it would do them.

Busby (leading up to his climax)—Why, they'd loot it.

Mrs. B. (innocently)—Of what?

Busby (triumphantly)—Of the hardware. They'd take the locks, of course. Ha, ha, ha!"

Mrs. Busby (sweetly)—But there are no locks in the Suez canal.

And it wasn't any consolation to Busby to remember that he had no one but himself to blame.

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS IF BACK HURTS

Says Too Much Meat Forms Uric Acid Which Clogs the Kidneys and Irritates the Bladder.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.—Adv.

His Own Fault.

"Sir, your daughter has promised to become my wife."

"Well, don't come to me for sympathy; you might know something would happen to you, hanging around here five nights a week."—Houston Post.

Constipation Vanishes Forever

Prompt Relief—Permanent Cure

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS never fail. Purely vegetable — act surely but gently on the liver. Stop after dinner distress—cure indigestion, improve the complexion, brighten the eyes.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM

A toilet preparation of merit. Helps to eradicate dandruff. For Restoring Color and Beauty to Gray or Faded Hair. 50c. and $1.00 at Druggists.

Highest Cash Prices Paid For CHICKENS, VEAL, CREAM

WRITE FOR SPECIAL PRICE LIST.

THE R. E. COBB CO., 14. 3rd Street, St. Paul, Minn.

In the Absence of the Agent

A Business Adventure of Emma McChesney

By EDNA FERBER

Author of "Dawn O'Hara," "Buttered Side Down," etc.

Copyright by Frederick A. Stokes Company

This is a love story. But it is a love story with a logical ending. Which means that in the last paragraph no one has any one else in his arms. Since logic and love have long been at loggerheads, the story may end badly. Still, what love passages there are shall be left intact.

Since 8 a. m., when she had unlocked her office door, Mrs. Emma McChesney had been working in bunches of six. Thus, from twelve to one she had dictated six letters, looked up memoranda, passed on samples of petticoat silk, fired the office boy, wired Spalding out in Nebraska, and eaten her lunch. Emma McChesney was engaged in that nerve-racking process known as getting things out of the way. When Emma McChesney aimed to get things out of the way she did not use a shovel; she used a road-drag.

Now, at three-thirty, she shut the last desk drawer with a bang, locked it, pushed back the desk-phone, discovered under it the inevitable mislaid memorandum, scanned it hastily, tossed the scrap of paper into the brimming waste-basket, and, yawning, raised her arms high above her head. The yawn ended, her arms relaxed, came down heavily, and landed her hands in her lap with a thud. It had been a whirlwind day. At that moment most of the lines in Emma McChesney's face slanted downward.

But only for that moment. The next found her smiling. Up went the corners of her eyes. She was still dimpling like an anticipatory child when she had got her wraps from the tiny closet, and was standing before the mirror, adjusting her hat.

The hat was one of those tiny, pert, head-hugging trifles that only a very pretty woman can wear. A merciless little hat, that gives no quarter to a blotched skin, a too large nose, colorless eyes. Emma McChesney stood before the mirror, the cruel little hat perched atop her hair, ready to give it the final and critical bash which should bring it down about her ears where it belonged.

It was at this critical moment that the office door opened, and there entered T. A. Buck, president of the T. A. Buck Featherloom Petticoat and Lingerie company.

"Hello!" said T. A. Buck. "Whither?" and laid a sheaf of businesslike-looking papers on the top of Mrs McChesney's well cleared desk.

Mrs. McChesney, without turning, performed the cramming process successfully, so that her hat left only a sub-halo of fluffy bright hair peeping out from the brim.

Then, "Playing hooky," she said. "Go 'way."

T. A. Buck picked up the sheaf of papers and stowed them into an inside coat pocket. "As president of this large and growing concern," he said, "I want to announce that I'm going along."

Emma McChesney adjusted her furs. "As secretary of said firm I rise to state that you're not invited."

T. A. Buck, hands in pockets, stood surveying the bright-eyed woman before him.

"If the secretary of the above-mentioned company has the cheek to play hooky at 3:30 p. m. in the middle of November, I fancy the president can demand to know where she's going, and then go too."

Mrs. McChesney unconcernedly fastened the clasp of her smart English glove.

"Didn't you take two hours for lunch? Had mine off the top of my desk. Ham sandwich and a glass of milk. Dictated six letters between bites and swallows."

A frown of annoyance appeared between T. A. Buck's remarkably fine eyes. He came over to Mrs. McChesney and looked down at her.

"Look here, you'll kill yourself. It's all very well to be interested in one's business, but I draw the line at ruining my digestion for it. Why in Sam Hill don't you take a decent hour at least?"

"Only bricklayers can take an hour for lunch," retorted Emma McChesney. "When you get to be a lady captain of finance you can't afford it."

She crossed to her desk and placed her fingers on the electric switch. The desk light cast a warm golden glow on the smart little figure in the trim tailored suit, the pert hat, the shining furs.

T. A. Buck drew a long breath as he looked at her.

"Those are devastating clothes," he remarked. "D'you know, until now I always had an idea that furs weren't becoming to women. Make most of 'em look stuffy. But you—"

Emma McChesney glanced down at the shining skins of muff and scarf. She stroked them gently and lovingly with her gloved hand.

"M-m-m-m! These semi-precious furs are rather satisfactory—until you see a woman in sealskin and sables. Then you want to use 'em for a hall rug."

T. A. Buck stepped within the radius of the yellow light, so that its glow lighted up his already luminous eyes—eyes that had a trick of translucence under excitement.

"Sables and sealskin," repeated T. A. Buck, his voice vibrant. "If it's those you want, you can—"

Snap! went the electric switch under Emma McChesney's fingers. It was as decisive as a blow in the face. She walked to the door. The little room was dim.

"I'm sending my boy through college with my sealskin-and-sable fund," she said crisply; "and I'm to meet him at 4:30."

"Oh, that's your appointment!" Relief was evident in T. A. Buck's tone.

Emma McChesney shook a despairing head. "For impudent and unquenchable inquisitiveness commend me to a man! Here! If you must know, though I intended it as a surprise when it was finished and furnished—I'm going to rent a flat, a regular six-room, plenty-of-closets flat, after ten years of miserable hotel existence. Jock's running over for two days to approve it. I ought to have waited until the holidays, so he wouldn't miss classes; but I couldn't bear to. I've spent ten Thanksgivings, and ten Christmases, and ten New Years in hotels. Hell has no terrors for me."

They were walking down the corridor together.

"Take me along—please!" pleaded T. A. Buck, like a boy. "I know all about flats, and gas stoves, and meters, and plumbing, and everything!"

"You!" scoffed Emma McChesney, "with your five-story house and your summer home in the mountains!"

"Mother won't hear of giving up the house. I hate it myself. Bathrooms in those darned old barracks are so cold that a hot tub is an icy plunge before you get to it." They had reached the elevator. A stubborn look appeared about T. A. Buck's jaw. "I'm going!" he announced, and scudded down the hall to his office door. Emma McChesney pressed the elevator button. Before the ascending car showed a glow of light in the shaft T. A. Buck appeared with hat, gloves, stick.

"I think the car's down stairs. We'll run up in it. What's the address? Seventies, I suppose?"

Emma McChesney stepped out of the elevator and turned. "Car! Not I! If you're bound to come with me you'll take the subway. They're asking enough for that apartment as it is. I don't intend to drive up in a five-thousand-dollar motor and have the agent tack on an extra twenty dollars a month."

T. A. Buck smiled with engaging agreeableness. "Subway it is," he said. "Your presence would turn even a Bronx train into a rose garden."

Twelve minutes later the new apartment building with its cream tile and red brick Louis Something facade, and tan brick and plaster Michael-Dougherty-contractor back, loomed before them, soaring even above its lofty neighbors. On the door step stood a maple-colored giant in a splendor of scarlet, and gold braid, and glittering buttons. The great entrance door was opened for them by a half-portion duplicate of the giant outside. In the foyer was splendor to grace a palace hall. There were great carved chairs. There was a massive oaken table. There were rugs, there were hangings, there were dim-shaded lamps casting a soft glow upon tapestry and velours.

There approached them the agent, smiling, urbane, pleasing as to manner—but not too pleasing; urbanity mixed, so to speak, with the leaven of caution.

"Ah, yes! Mrs.—er—McChesney, wasn't it? I can't tell you how many parties have been teasing me for that apartment since you looked at it. I've had to—well—make myself positively unpleasant in order to hold it for you. You said you wished your son to—"

The glittering little jewel box of an elevator was taking them higher and higher. The agent stared hard at T. A. Buck.

Mrs. McChesney followed his gaze. "My business associate, Mr. T. A. Buck," she said grimly.

The agent discarded caution; he was all urbanity. Their floor attained, he unlocked the apartment door and threw it open with a gesture which was a miraculous mixture of royalty and generosity.

"He knows you!" hissed Emma McChesney, entering with T. A. "Another ten on the rent." The agent pulled up a shade, switched on a light, straightened an electric globe. T. A. Buck looked about at the bare white walls, at the bare polished floor, at the severe fireplace.

"I knew it couldn't last," he said.

"If it did," replied Emma McChesney good-naturedly, "I couldn't afford to live here," and disappeared into the kitchen followed by the agent, who babbled ever and anon of views, of Hudsons, of express trains, of parks, as is the way of agents from Fiftieth street to One Hundred and 'Umpty-ninth.

T. A. Buck, feet spread wide, hands behind him, was left standing in the center of the empty living room. He was leaning on his stick and gazing fixedly upward at the ornate chandelier. It was a handsome fixture, and boasted some of the most advanced ideas in modern lighting equipment. Yet it scarcely seemed to warrant the passionate scrutiny which T. A. Buck was bestowing upon it. So rapt was his gaze that when the telephone bell shrilled unexpectedly in the hallway he started so that his stick slipped on the polished floor, and as Emma McChesney and the still voluble agent emerged from the kitchen the dignified head of the firm of T. A. Buck and company presented an animated picture, one leg in the air, arms waving wildly, expression at once amazed and hurt.

Emma McChesney surveyed him wide-eyed. The agent, unruffled, continued to talk on his way to the telephone.

"It only looks small to you," he was saying. "Fact, is, more people think it's too large. They object to a big kitchen. Too much work." He gave his attention to the telephone.

Emma McChesney looked troubled. She stood in the doorway, head on one side, as one who conjures up a mental picture.

"Come here," she commanded suddenly, addressing the startled T. A. "You nagged until I had to take you along. Here's a chance to justify your coming. I want your opinion on the kitchen."

"Kitchens," announced T. A. Buck of the English clothes and the gardenia, "are my specialty," and entered the domain of the gas range and the sink.

Emma McChesney swept the infinitesimal room with a large gesture.

"Considering it as a kitchen, not as a locker, does it strike you as being adequate?"

T. A. Buck, standing in the center of the room, touched all four walls with his stick.

"I've heard," he ventured, "that they're—ah—using 'em small this year."

Emma McChesney's eyes took on a certain wistful expression. "Maybe. But whenever I've dreamed of a home, which was whenever I got lonesome on the road, which was every evening for ten years, I'd start to plan a kitchen. A kitchen where you could put up preserves, and a keg of dill pickles, and get a full-sized dinner without getting things more than just comfortably cluttered."

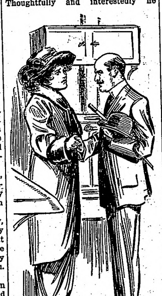
T. A. Buck reflected. He flapped his arms as one who feels pressed for room. "With two people occupying the room, as at present, the presence of one dill pickle would sort of crowd things, not to speak of a keg of 'em, and the full-sized dinner, and the—er—preserves. Still—"

"As for a turkey," wailed Emma McChesney, one would have to go out on the fire escape to baste it."

The swinging door opened to admit the agent. "Would you excuse me? A party downstairs—lease—be back in no time. Just look about—any questions—glad to answer later—"

"Quite all right," Mrs. McChesney assured him. Her expression was one of relief as the hall door closed behind him. "Good! There's a spot in the mirror over the mantel. I've been dying to find out if it was a flaw in the glass or only a smudge."

She made for the living room. T. A. Buck followed thoughtfully. Thoughtfully and interestedly he watched her as she stood on tiptoe, breathed stormily upon the mirror's surface, and rubbed the moist place with her handkerchief. She stood back a pace, eyes narrowed critically.



"Emma," He Said, "Will You Marry Me?"

"It's gone, isn't it?" she asked.

T. A. Buck advanced to where she stood and cocked his head too, judicially, and in the opposite direction to which Emma McChesney's head was cocked. So that the two heads were very close together.

"It's a poor piece of glass," he announced at last.

A simple enough remark. Perhaps it was made with an object in view, but certainly it was not meant to bring forth the storm of protest that came from Emma McChesney's lips. She turned on him, lips quivering, eyes wrathful.

"You shouldn't have come!" she cried. "You're as much out of place in a six-room flat as a truffle would be in a boiled New England dinner. Do you think I don't see its shortcomings? Every normal woman, no matter what sort of bungalow, palace, ranch-house, cave, cottage, or tenement she may be living in, has in her mind's eye a picture of the sort of apartment she'd live in if she could afford it. I've had mine mapped out from the wallpaper in the front hall to the laundry tubs in the basement, and it doesn't even bear a family resemblance to this."

"I'm sorry," stammered T. A. Buck. "You asked my opinion and I—"

"Opinion! If every one had so little tact as to give their true opinion when it was asked this would be a miserable world. I asked you because I wanted you to lie. I expected it of you. I needed bolstering up. I realize that the rent I'm paying and the flat I'm getting form a geometrical problem where X equals the unknown quantity and only the agent knows the answer. But it's going to be a home for Jock and me. It's going to be a place where he can bring his friends; where he can have his books, and his 'baccy, and his college junk. It will be the first real home that youngster has known in all his miserable boarding-house, hotel, boys' school, and college existence. Sometimes when I think of what he's missed, of the loneliness and the neglect when I was on the road, of the barrenness of his boyhood, I—"

T. A. Buck started forward as one who had made up his mind about something long considered. Then he gulped, retreated, paced excitedly to the door and back again. On the return trip he found smiling and repentant Emma McChesney regarding him.

"Now aren't you sorry you insisted on coming along? Letting yourself in for a ragging like that? I think I'm a wee bit taut in the nerves at the prospect of seeing Jock—and planning things with him—I—"

T. A. Buck paused in his pacing. "Don't!" he said. "I had it coming to me. I did it deliberately. I wanted to know how you really felt about it."

T. A. Buck was regarding the head of his walking stick with a gaze as intent as that which he previously had bestowed upon the chandelier.

Mrs. McChesney had wandered into the dining room. She peered out of windows. She poked into butler's pantry. She inspected wall lights. And still T. A. Buck stared at his stick.

"It's really robbery," came Emma McChesney's voice from the next room. "Only a New York agent could have the nerve to do it. I've a friend who lives in Chicago—Mary Cutting. You've heard me speak of her. Has a flat on the North side there, just next door to the lake. The rent is ridiculous; and—would you believe it?—the flat is equipped with bookcases, and gorgeous mantel shelves, and buffet, and bathroom fixtures, and china closets, and hall tree—"

Her voice trailed into nothingness as she disappeared into the kitchen.

T. A. Buck did not look up. But, "Oh, Chicago!" he might have been heard to murmur, as only a New Yorker can breathe those two words.

"Don't 'Oh, Chicago!' like that," mimicked Emma McChesney. "I've lain awake nights dreaming of a home I once saw there, with the lake in the back yard, and a couple of miles of veranda, and a darling vegetable garden, and the whole place simply honeycombed with bathrooms, and sleeping porches, and sun parlors, and linen closets, and—gracious, I wonder what's keeping Jock!"

T. A. Buck wrenched his eyes from his stick. All previous remarks descriptive of his eyes under excitement paled at the glow which lighted them now. They glowed straight into Emma McChesney's eyes and held them, startled.

"Emma," said T. A. Buck quite calmly, "will you marry me? I want to give you all those things, beginning with the lake in the back yard and ending with the linen closets and the sun parlor."

And Emma McChesney, standing there in the middle of the dining room floor, stared long at T. A. Buck, standing there in the center of the living room floor. And if any human face, in the space of seventeen seconds, could be capable of expressing relief, and regret, and alarm, and dismay, and tenderness, and wonder, and a great womanly sympathy, Emma McChesney's countenance might be said to have expressed all those emotions—and more. The last two were uppermost as she slowly came toward him.

"T. A.," she said, and her voice had in it a marvelous quality. "I'm thirty-nine years old. You know I was married when I was eighteen and got my divorce after eight years. Those eight years would have left any woman who had endured them with one of two determinations: to take up life again and bring it out into the sunshine until it was sound, and sweet, and clean, and whole once more, or to hide the hurt and brood over it, and cover it with bitterness, and hate until it destroyed by its very foulness. I had Jock, and chose the sun, thank God! I said then that marriage was a thing tried and abandoned forever, for me. And now—"

There was something almost fine in the lines of T. A. Buck's too feminine mouth and chin; but not fine enough.

"Now, Emma," he repeated, "will you marry me?"

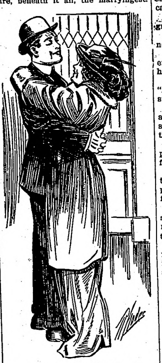
Emma McChesney's eyes were a wonderful thing to see, so full of pain were they, so wide with unshed tears.

"As long as—he—lived," she went on, "the thought of marriage was repulsive to me. Then, that day seven months ago out in Iowa, when I picked up that paper and saw it staring out at me in print that seemed to waver and dance"—she covered her eyes with her hand for a moment—"'McChesney—Stuart McChesney, March 7, aged forty-seven years. Funeral today from Howland Brothers' chapel. Aberdeen and Edinburgh papers please copy!'"

T. A. Buck took the hand that covered her eyes and brought it gently down.

"Emma," he said, "will you marry me?"

"T. A., I don't love you. Wait! Don't say it! I'm thirty-nine, but I'm brave and foolish enough to say that all these years of work, and disappointment, and struggle, and bitter experience haven't convinced me that love does not exist. People have said about me, seeing me in business, that I'm not a marrying woman. There is no such thing as that. Every woman is a marrying woman, and sometimes the light-heartedest, and the scoffingest, and the most self-sufficient of us are, beneath it all, the marryingest.



Welcome Home! She Cried.

Perhaps I'm making a mistake. Perhaps ten years from now I'll be ready to call myself a fool for having let slip what the wise ones would call a 'chance.' But I don't think so, T. A."

"You know me too well," argued T. A. Buck rather miserably. "But at least you know the worst of me as well as the best. You'd be taking no risks."

Emma McChesney walked to the window. There was a little silence. Then she finished it with one clean stroke. "We've been good business chums, you and I. I hope we always shall be. I can imagine nothing more beautiful on this earth for a woman than being married to a man she cares for and who cares for her. But, T. A., you're not the man."

And then there were quick steps in the corridor, a hand at the door-knob, a slim, tall figure in the doorway. Emma McChesney seemed to waft across the rooms and into the embrace of the slim, tall figure.

"Welcome—home!" she cried. "Sketch in the furniture to suit yourself."

"This is going to be great—great!" announced Jock. "What do you know about the Oriental potentate downstairs! I guess Otis Skinner has nothing on him when it comes—Why, hello, Mr. Buck!"

He rattled on like a pleased boy. He strode over to shake hands with Buck. Emma McChesney, cheeks glowing, eyed him adoringly. Then she gave a little suppressed cry.

"Jock, what's happened?"

Jock whirled around like a cat. "Where? When? What?"

Emma McChesney pointed at him with one shaking finger. "You! You're thin! You're—you're emaciated. Your shoulders, where are they? Your—your legs—"

Jock looked down at himself. His glance was pride. "Clothes," he said.

"Clothes?" faltered his mother.

"You're losing your punch, mother? You used to be up on men's rigging. All the boys look like their own shadows these days. English cut. No padding. No heels. Incurve at the waist. Watch me walk." He flapped across the room, chest concave, shoulders limp, feet wide apart, chin thrust forward.

"Do you mean to tell me that's your present form of locomotion?" demanded his mother.

"I hope so. Been practicing it for weeks. They call it the juvenile jump, and all our best leading men have it. I trailed Douglas Fairbanks for days before I really got it."

And the tension between T. A. Buck and Emma McChesney snapped with a jerk, and they both laughed, and laughed again, at Jock's air of offended dignity. They laughed until the rancor in the heart of the man and the hurt and pity in the heart of the woman melted into a bond of lasting understanding.

"Go on—laugh!" said Jock. "Say, mother, is there a shower in the bathroom, h'm?" And was off to investigate.

The laughter trailed away into nothingness. "Jock," called his mother, "do you want your bedroom done in plain or stripes?"

"Plain," came from the regions beyond. "Got a lot of pennants and everything."

T. A. Buck picked up his stick from the corner in which it stood.

"I'll run along," he said. "You two will want to talk things over together." He raised his voice to reach the boy in the other room. "I'm off, Jock."

Jock's protest sounded down the hall. "Don't leave me alone with her. She'll blarney me into consenting to blue-and-pink rosebud paper in my bedroom."

At the door Buck turned, came back a step or two. "I—I think, if you don't mind, I'll play hooky this time and run over to Atlantic City for a couple of days. You'll find things slowing up, now that the holidays are so near."

"Fine idea—fine!" agreed Emma McChesney; but her eyes still wore the troubled look.

"Good-by," said T. A. Buck abruptly.

"Good—" and then she stopped. "I've a brand-new idea. Give you something to worry about on your vacation."

"I'm supplied," answered T. A. Buck grimly.

"Nonsense! A real worry. A business worry. A surprise."

Jock had joined them, and was towering over his mother, her hand in his.

T. A. Buck regarded them moodily. "After your pajama and knickerbocker stunt I'm braced for anything."

"Nothing theatrical this time," she assured him. "Don't expect a show such as you got when I touched off the last fuse."

An eager, expectant look was replacing the gloom that had clouded his face. "Spring it."

Emma McChesney waited a moment; then, "I think the time has come to put in another line—a staple. It's—flannel nightgowns."

"Flannel nightgowns!" Disgust shivered through Buck's voice. "Flannel nightgowns! They quit wearing those when Broadway was a cowpath."

"Did, eh?" retorted Emma McChesney. "That's the New Yorker speaking. Just because the French near-actresses at the Winter Garden wear silk lace and sea-foam nighties in their imported boudoir skits, and just because they display only those frilly, beribboned handmade affairs in the Fifth avenue shop windows, don't you ever think that they're a national vice. Let me tell you," she went on as T. A. Buck's demeanor grew more bristlingly antagonistic, "there are thousands and thousands of women up in Minnesota, and Wisconsin, and Michigan, and Oregon, and Alaska, and Nebraska, and Dakota who are thankful to retire every night protected by one long, thick, serviceable flannel nightie, and one practical hot-water bag. Up in those countries retiring isn't a social rite: it's a feat of hardihood. I'm keen for a line of plain, full, roomy old-fashioned flannel nightgowns of the improved T. A. Buck featherloom products variety. They'll be wearing 'em long after knickerbockers have been cut up for patchwork."

"Well," Buck said grudgingly, "if you were to advise making up a line of the latest models in deep-sea divers' uniforms, I suppose I'd give in. But flannel nightgowns! In the twentieth century—flannel night—"

"Think it over," laughed Emma McChesney as he opened the door. "We'll have it out, tooth and nail, when you get back."

The door closed upon him. Emma McChesney and her son were left alone in their new home to be.

"Turn out the light, son," said Emma McChesney, "and come to the window. There's a view! Worth the money, alone."

Jock switched off the light. "D' you know, Blonde, I shouldn't wonder if old T. A.'s sweetish on you," he said as he came over to the window.

"Old!"

"He's forty or over, isn't he?"

"Son, do you realize your charming mother's thirty-nine?"

"Oh, you! That's different. You look a kid. You're young in all the spots where other women of thirty-nine look old. Around the eyes, and under the chin, and your hands, and the corners of your mouth."

In the twilight Emma McChesney turned to stare at her son. "Just where did you learn all that, young 'un? At college?"

And, "Some view, isn't it, mother?" parried Jock. The two stood there, side by side, looking out across the great city that glittered and swam in the soft haze of the November afternoon. There are few lovelier sights than New York seen at night, from a window eyrie with a mauve haze softening all, as a beautiful but experienced woman is softened by an artfully draped scarf of chiffon.

"Mother," said Jock haltingly, painfully, "I came mighty near coming home—for—good—this time."

His mother turned and searched his face in the dim light.

"What was it, Jock?" she asked, quite without fuss.

The slim young figure in the jumping juvenile clothes stirred and tried to speak, tried again, formed the two words: "A—girl."

Emma McChesney waited a second, until the icy, cruel, relentless hand that clutched her very heart should have relaxed ever so little. Then, "Tell me, sonny boy," she said.

"My mother—that girl—" There was an agony of bitterness and of disillusioned youth in his voice.

Emma McChesney came very close, so that her head, in the pert little close-fitting hat, rested on the boy's shoulder. She linked her arm through his, snug and warm.

"That girl—" she echoed encouragingly.

And, "That girl," went on Jock, taking up the thread of his grief, "why, mother, that—girl—"

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

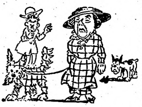
THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. XIV. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, JANUARY 8, 1915. NO. 43.

HAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

New York Dogs Dyed to Match Gowns of Milady

NEW YORK.—When a sober resident of this city, a few days ago, saw a sky-blue Skye terrier, he wailed for help. The blue dog—the Latin is "mutt ultra marinus"—was walking down Third avenue and he had a man along. He was a frail, ethereal blue—about the color of baby ribbon. The citizen, backed up by a police sergeant who saw the same thing, approached the man with the dog and requested an explanation. And, as usual, the fair sex was found to be the motive.



In the first place, the man said, the blue dog was only a sample. He has 'em pink, and he has 'em green and he has 'em lavender. Drop around to his place of business, he invited, and they would see some rare things in multichromatic "mutts." Select your shade and pick your dog, and the order will be filled while you wait.

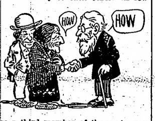
And is there a demand for them? Well, rather, opined the man with the blue dog. The women, that's the answer. The women—and inexorable fashion. Blue dogs match blue dresses, pink dogs match pink dresses, and so on. All he needed was a cutting of the dress goods, and the thing was done.

For example, said the dog dyer, the blue dog was on its way to the Plaza hotel, where dwelt a woman who had ordered it. Think you she would go walking on the avenue in a blue dress and with a black dog in her arms? Not by several shades.

While they stuck to plain colors, explained the dyer, it was a simple matter. But some one had told him that polka dots are coming into fashion again, and it looks like a busy winter. Making even the smallest dog match a polka dotted dress is no sinecure. And if plaids ever come in! Whew!

General Dodge and Ute Queen Renew Old Pledge

GLENWOOD SPRINGS, COLO.—Fifty years ago Gen. Granville M. Dodge of Council Bluffs, Iowa, and Ouray, the great peace chief of the Ute Indians in western Colorado, swore eternal friendship to each other. A few weeks ago this vow of friendship was renewed between the general, now past eighty years of age, and Chipeta, widow of Ouray and queen of the Ute tribe, when the two met here by accident beside the same spring where the original friendship oath was sworn by the Indian and the white soldier.

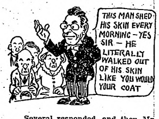


Chipeta is now ninety-three years old and except for a rheumatic pain now and then she looks as young as any other Indian squaw who has arrived at the fifty-year mark. At the time of the making of the original pledge a third member of the party was Chief McCook, Chipeta's brother and brother-in-law of Ouray. And old McCook, wearing moccasins, a white man's shirt and suit of clothes, a collar, a derby hat and with hair hanging to his waist, was with his sister when she and General Dodge renewed their friendship.

General Dodge, who is commander for life of the Army of the Tennessee, is the only major general of the Civil war yet alive and is the only Civil war corps commander living in this country. Chipeta is one of the oldest Indian women in the country and she and her brother constitute the only link between the Utes of frontier days and the present half-civilized tribe of red men.

Apyrtrophers of Chicago Hear Wonderful Story

CHICAGO.—Apyrtrophers of Chicago held an experience meeting the other night. It probably will be a long time before they hold another one or before some apyrtropher can be found to beat the wondrous tale of the man with the changeable skin. An apyrtropher is a person who doesn't believe in eating cooked food.



THIS MAN SHED HIS SKIN EVERY MORNING—YES SIR—HE LITERALLY WALKED OUT OF HIS SKIN LIKE YOU WOULD YOUR COAT

Persons of this persuasion in Chicago belong to the Apyrtropher society, founded by George J. Drews. He sent out circulars announcing an experience meeting.

"Now, I want you all to relate what apyrtrophy—the eating of unfired food—has done for you or your friends," said Mr. Drews. "Arise and speak—don't be bashful."

Several responded, and then Mr. Drews stalked to the platform.

"Recently I met a man who for some time had suffered from a peculiar skin disease," he said. "Every morning when he arose from bed he literally walked out of his skin, just as you would step out of an overcoat and a pair of rubber boots.

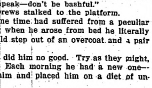
"He went to several hospitals, but it did him no good. Try as they might, the doctors couldn't keep his skin on. Each morning he had a new one—until after I became acquainted with him and placed him on a diet of uncooked food.

"Well, two months after that he was cured completely. He kept the same skin right along without a bit of trouble.

"Now he is a confirmed apyrtropher and wouldn't eat fired food for anything in the world."

Statehouse Sod at Indianapolis Is Well "Salted"

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Walter Montgomery, a statehouse janitor, was pickin' around in the statehouse lawn, where they were planning to level and grade a bit. Walter had a real pick, too, and he swung it with genuine abandon for a time. Then he took an unusually hard swing for some reason or other and the pick stuck, deep in the sod. He gave it a twist, and with the earth that flew up came three silver dollars and two half dollars. Walter gazed at the money for a moment, then saw several of his brother "pickers" casually loafing toward the spot.



So he just picked it up again.

Opinion was divided on the question of how it got there. One janitor believed a pickpocket had been lounging around the statehouse yard at night to pick up a victim or two, when he saw the Indianapolis police force approaching—or part of it—bent on picking up somebody. He then, according to this janitor's theory, scooped out a hole in the lawn, buried the money and resodded the spot, putting up a plantain leaf to show where he had buried it. The police probably had tramped down the plantain leaf in their eagerness to find the pickpocket, the janitor said.

Still another said he believed the find was accidental and that, should it become known, Montgomery would be compelled to pay it into the hands of a representative of the Democratic state committee, since it had been found on state property. Montgomery said he had examined the money closely and could not believe it ever had been a campaign contribution.

SIAMESE PRINCE VISITS US

Copyright, Underwood & Underwood

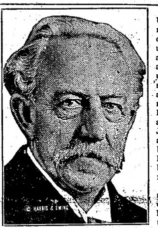
Prince Kampengpetch, brother of the king of Siam, fell ill and the court physician prescribed a tour of the world. Consequently the United States has been having the honor of entertaining that royal personage, together with the princess and Capt. S. Yoo, military aide. Landing in New York with 25 trunks and two Siamese dachshunds, the party visited the chief cities of the country and then crossed the continent for a somewhat prolonged stay in the Yellowstone National park and the Yosemite valley.

"The princess and I plan to cover the entire world on our tour before returning to Siam next February," said the prince. "We have been traveling over a year now and have covered most of central Europe. From this country we will go to Japan and China.

"This trip is much more wonderful for the princess than for me, because I spent ten years on the continent, after I finished my course at Cambridge. The princess, however, has never been far away from Siam."

Though the prince is not much more than five feet tall, several years' service in the Siamese army has given him a military bearing. His manner resembles the English far more than it does the Oriental. On each arm he wore a heavy gold bracelet, one of them bearing a watch. His fingers were well supplied with rings.

DOCTOR JORDAN, PEACE ADVOCATE



© HARRIS & EWING

Among the peace advocates of the United States, place in the front rank must be accorded Dr. David Starr Jordan, chancellor of Leland Stanford university, because of his consistency and persistency. Everywhere and at all times he spreads the doctrine of universal peace and disarmament. No sooner did Representative Gardner and others begin their campaign for more adequate national defenses than Doctor Jordan sprang into the arena and hurried East on a lecture tour. Japan, he declares, is financially unable to carry on a war against us, and by the time the present war is over, lasting international peace will have been assured by the pacifist movement.

"Politicians start all this war scare and war talk," he says. "They do it to bring themselves into the limelight. Every naval officer knows that the outlay of millions for armaments is not for efficiency, but waste. Every military officer knows the same thing. Soldiers are police. They only become soldiers when they are above the law, when martial law is proclaimed. This nation has not one thing in a million to do but sit tight.

"We should not tolerate any tirade against the so-called inefficiency of the army or the navy, and we should protest against an agitation for more armament at a time when the nations of the earth are crumbling each other because simply of their perfect equipment."

DOCTOR MUNROE, EXPLOSIVE EXPERT

When dispatches came from the war zone telling of the wonderful lethal gases thrown off by the exploding turpinite shells and of how those gases destroy instantly all life over a considerable area, the Washington correspondents turned at once to Dr. Charles Edward Munroe, who pronounced the stories to be "bunk."

What Doctor Munroe has to say about explosives is interesting always. He knows his subject. He is, perhaps, Uncle Sam's most distinguished expert on explosives. Now sixty-five years old, from his youth he has experimented with and investigated materials that explode. His publications on the subject, totaling some one hundred volumes, are standard.

Heredity and environment made Doctor Munroe a student, for he was born at Cambridge, Mass., of a scholarly family. He was, of course, educated at Harvard, from which institution he was graduated with the degree of bachelor of science in 1871. For three years he was an assistant professor of chemistry at Harvard. Chemistry is a broad field and he acquired a familiarity with every portion of it, but especially was he attracted by that portion in which he later specialized. The things that "went off" had a fascination for him.

Then for 12 years he was professor of chemistry at Annapolis, and since 1886 he has been in the employ of the government at Washington.

MEANS TO LIVE TO BE 120

Prof. Frederick Starr of the University of Chicago, a scientist with a score of foreign decorations, is certain he will live to be one hundred and twenty years old. He said so recently on his arrival in Los Angeles, where he spent the first vacation he has had in 30 years. Professor Starr is fifty-six years old.

"Another man who feels sure of great longevity," said Professor Starr, "is Count Okuma, premier of Japan. The count is absolutely certain he will reach one hundred and twenty-five years.

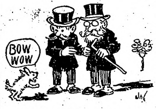
"The count and I are old friends," said the professor. "He seems just as sure that he is going to beat me by five years as he is that he is alive today. We have agreed that, if he is still alive when I reach one hundred and twenty years, he gets a present. If I am still alive when he gets to be one hundred and twenty-five years, I get a present. How's that for a wager?"

Professor Starr said the secret of a long life is always to smile, never to get angry, and to keep working all the time.

NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

Small Dog Bars Dignitaries From White House

WASHINGTON.—Miss Bones, the cousin of the president, had released her small, shaggy, little dog, with hair hanging in his eyes, but with a proud and important swagger, befitting his position. He was cavorting about the north door of the White House and slipped out into the open, when the guards of the executive mansion were otherwise engaged.

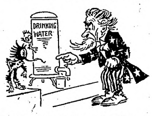


Thus it happened that two officials, walking arm in arm up the White House driveway, unmindful of anything except the heavy importance of the national business on hand, were suddenly surprised by something or other that flew into their path, and made it impossible for them to go any farther.

For the small dog barked and barked, and ran at them, and flew around them, and showed his teeth, which are small and sharp, and very white. The two men stood still, and looked at the dog; and each inquired of the other if he minded having his trousers torn or his ankles bitten, and the small dog had all but exhausted himself in his enthusiasm as the nation's safeguard, when a large policeman took him by the nape of the neck, and dropped him inside the White House door.

How Uncle Sam Sets Drinking Water Standard

NOW that Uncle Sam, through the United States public health service, has set a standard of purity for all drinking water furnished on common carriers entering into interstate traffic, many inquiries have begun to pour into Surgeon General Rupert Blue's office about the manner and method used by the government's chemists and physicians in setting this new water standard.



Just how this standard is reached was described in nontechnical and understandable English by an officer of the public health service, as follows:

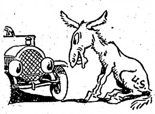
About fifteen drops of water are taken from the sample in the laboratory, and this small quantity of water is spread upon the surface of a thin film of agar, a sort of gelatin, poured into a flat glass dish, after the dish and all instruments used, including the agar, have been thoroughly sterilized to kill such germs as are ordinarily present. This dish of gelatin, or culture media, as it is termed, containing the water, is placed in an incubator and kept at a temperature of 98.6 degrees Fahrenheit for 24 hours.

After this period has elapsed, the plate is taken out and very small spots are noticed dotted over its surface. Each one of these spots represents a colony of germs which has developed; each colony from a separate germ contained in the original sample of water. The colonies are counted by means of a disk ruled into squares, which fits under the thin glass dish. If the number of colonies found in the amount of water planted on the agar (15 drops) exceeds one hundred, the water is to be rejected as unsatisfactory. Any count less than 100 colonies per plate is considered a safe limit of permissible bacteriological impurity.

There are other tests to which the water is subjected, using larger quantities and different materials as culture media.

American Mule Still Holds His Own in Our Army

THE American army mule need have no fear for his laurels because of the great part gasoline motors have played in transportation problems of European armies in the present war. Until American roads generally are brought up to the high standard of the roads of Germany, France, Belgium and other European countries, the army mule will determine, through his capacity for hauling, the limitation of operations for American military forces.

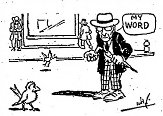


Only one branch of the United States army is giving serious attention to motor traction. In the quartermaster's department experiments are being made, particularly along the Texas border, with handling supplies in motor trucks. Motor trucks are in general use, of course, about army posts and wherever good roads are available; but when maneuvers take the columns into the field and the sandy or muddy country roads, where mere wheel tracks across the country are the only highways, the six-mule team is still master of the transportation situation.

A few years ago it was determined to experiment with motor transportation as a means to increase the radius of field artillery. General Crozier, chief of the army ordnance bureau, designed a motor battery wagon, which was tried out in maneuvers. It proved a flat failure, for it was so heavy that it broke through bridges, sunk to the hubs in soft roads and generally hampered the battery to which it was attached. The experiment was abandoned and the ordnance bureau is now content to await the results of the experiments of the quartermaster's department in self-propelled army transportation units. Mules and horses are good enough for American artillerymen as yet.

Albino Sparrow Returns to the National Capital

THE albino sparrow that has for a number of years made its home in some cranny in a building on the east side of Eleventh street between the Avenue and E street, has returned to its accustomed haunts, after an absence of several months. Many persons who had become familiar with this "off color" and oddly marked member of the sparrow tribe by reason of seeing him flitting about in the street or flying up to the nest the bird has successfully hidden for years, had begun to think the little albino had passed to the happy hunting grounds, or had changed its abiding place. The return of the bird to its usual haunts a few days ago, however, indicates that it was merely away on a vacation.



Many persons, seeing the albino sparrow, have believed it was a stray canary, or at least a cross between a regular sparrow and a canary. Such, however, is not the case. The bird is a real albino, although it has some dark feathers in its wings and tail. The body plumage and most of the wing and tail feathers are white—that is, as white as the feathers of a bird that lives the life of an English sparrow can be.

Those who have noticed the albino sparrow year after year as it busied itself hustling for a living about the block on Eleventh street declare the bird must be at least twelve years old. Whether this is true or not, it would be difficult to determine. At any rate, the bird has haunted that particular block for at least seven years.

EUROPE'S WORST WINTER IN YEARS HALTS STRUGGLES

FLOODS PREVENT ANY OPERATIONS ON LARGE SCALE ON WESTERN AND EASTERN BATTLE FRONTS.

RUSSIANS CAPTURE AUSTRIAN POSITIONS

Seizure Near Nzook Pass Should Open Another Entrance for Czar's Troops Through Carpathians Into Hungary—Turks Cross Border in Caucasus.

London, Jan. 5.—The extremely rainy winter, the worst Europe has experienced in years, causing floods in the river valleys of the continent as well as those of England, has prevented any operations on a large scale on the western battle front and has interfered seriously with those in the east.

There have been heavy artillery engagements from the sea to the Swiss border and occasional attacks by the infantry of the opposing armies, which when not repulsed have added a few yards to the territory in the possession of the attacking force, but always have proved costly ventures.

French Gain Near Albert.

The French have gained a little ground between Albert and Roye, just north of the point where the line turns eastward and to the east of Rheims and southwest of Verdun, where the attempts to make the German positions at St. Mihiel on the Meuse untenable, are proceeding slowly. They have also made some advances in Alsace, but have suffered a repulse to the northwest of St. Menehould.

In the east the Germans have captured the important Russian position at Borjimow, but elsewhere they have been unable to make any headway against the Russians, who, as defenders of well fortified positions, are aided by the wet weather and muddy roads, which hinder the German movements.

The Austrians claim to have checked the Russian advance near Gorlice, on the South Galician railway, west of Jaslo, but apparently the battle here has not yet been concluded.

Russians Take Austrian Position.

The Russians, on the other hand, have taken the Austrian positions near Nzook Pass, which should open another entrance for them through the Carpathians into Hungary, while the Austrian retreat in Bukowina is described by the Russians as a rout.

The Turks have crossed the Russian border in the Caucasus, and according to their own account have defeated the Russian garrison at Ardahan. They are, however, displaying anxiety for their remaining possessions in Europe by feverishly fortifying the whole coast line. What they fear is not disclosed, for it is considered hardly possible for the allies to land a sufficient force to prove a menace to them. It is possible that they expect an invasion from another source.

Balkan States May Fight.

Indications point to the possibility of the Balkan States, which are now neutral, taking a hand in the war.

The Greek Minister of Finance has declared that Greece is making preparations to maintain the new territories which she gained in the Balkan wars from Turkey and Bulgaria, but that she has more to fear from Bulgaria than Turkey.

It is not thought that Roumania can look on calmly while the Russians are advancing toward Transylvania, and it is expected that she will join with Russia and try to get the much-coveted Eastern Province of Austria-Hungary.

Throughout the British Empire and in the British churches in foreign countries intercession services were held for the success of the allies' arms. Many of the sermons embodied exhortations to the young men to join the army. King George attended services in the village church at Sandringham.

British Statesman Dies.

London, Jan. 4.—Percy Holden Illingworth, chief Liberal whip in the House of Commons, and parliamentary secretary to the Treasury, died of typhoid fever. He was born at Bradford in 1869. Mr. Illingworth served in the South African war with the Yorkshire yeomanry. In August, 1912, he was appointed chief Liberal whip, succeeding Lord Murray of Elibank.

U. S. Minister to Argentina Arrives.

Buenos Aires, Jan. 4.—American Ambassador to Argentina, Frederic J. Stimson, arrived here and was welcomed by representatives of the republic, the ministers of foreign affairs, and others.

New York Welcomes New Year.

New York, Jan. 2.—New York City welcomed the New Year in traditional manner, the celebration proving one of the most demonstrative on record here.

The uptown streets where the celebrators usually gather were jammed with laughing, singing crowds, unusually large, even for this event of events in the city's calendar. The tens of thousands were so orderly in their merry-making, however, that the police reserves found little to do except to keep the throngs moving.

KAISER ENCOURAGES ARMY

URGES SOLDIERS AND SAILORS TO KEEP UP FIGHT.

Asks Them to Face New Year Unflinchingly and Look Forward to New Victories.

Berlin, via London, Jan. 4.—Emperor William, in a New Year's message to the army and navy, asks them to face the new year unflinchingly and look forward to new deeds and new victories for the beloved fatherland. The message, which was made public at main headquarters here, follows:

"After five long months of heavy and hot fighting we enter the new year.

"Brilliant victories have been gained and great successes achieved by the German army almost everywhere on the territory of the enemy. While repeated attempts of our opponents to swarm on German territory have failed.

"My ships have covered themselves with glory on sea and the crews have proved not only that they know how to fight victoriously, but to die like heroes when overwhelmed by superior forces.

"Behind the army and the fleet the entire nation stands in unexampled harmony, prepared to sacrifice its heart's blood for the sacred domestic hearth which we are defending against outrageous invasion. Although the times may be serious and the task before us a heavy one we look forward into the future with the firmest confidence.

"Next to God's wise guidance, I trust to the matchless bravery of the army and navy and know myself to be as one with the entire German nation. Therefore let us face the new year unflinchingly, looking forward to new deeds and new victories for our beloved fatherland.

(Signed) "Wilhelm."

CALLS ENGLAND FRIENDLY

Page Says Reply to American Note Is Promised Within a Few Days.

Washington, Jan. 4.—Ambassador Walter Hines Page, in a long report from London, following his conference with high officials there, described the general attitude of the British government and the people toward the American note of protest concerning shipping as entirely friendly. He said a reply had been promised within a few days.

The ambassador detailed the British press criticism, whose tone he regarded as on the whole reasonable and amicable. In some quarters, not among officials, he found a disposition to search for a motive behind the American note, some Englishmen suggesting that the Washington administration had been compelled to yield to pressure from members of congress representing constituencies vitally affected by the interruption of trade. This portion of English public opinon seemed to think the American note was intended to some extent for home consumption.

M'ADOO OPENS EXPOSITION

Secretary of Treasury Formally Dedicates Panama-California Show at San Diego.

San Diego, Cal., Jan. 4.—The Panama-California exposition opened to the world by the touching of an electric button by President Wilson in Washington, was formally dedicated by the president's personal representative, Secretary of the Treasury William McAdoo.

Lyman J. Gage, former secretary of the treasury, presided at the ceremonies, and the list of speakers included Mr. McAdoo, President Davidson of the exposition, Count Del Valle de Salazar, representing the king of Spain; John Barrett, of the Pan-American Union, and Charles C. Moore, president of the Panama-Pacific exposition of San Francisco. The governors of nine states were present.

Foreigners Quit Constantinople.

Athens, via London, Jan. 4.—According to Constantinople advices which have reached here the Austrian and German embassies in the Turkish capital are transferring their archives to Asia Minor, fearing that action is imminent by the British and French fleets against the Dardanelles and the capital. Foreigners, it is stated, also are preparing to quit the capital for the interior.

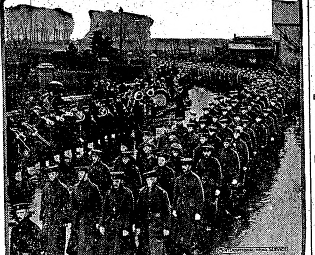
To Employ More Men.

Reno, Nev., Jan. 4.—The Southern Pacific shops at Sparks, Nev., will resume operations with a full force. For six weeks the shops have been operated by a force of 125 men, and with the increased operations the men employed will total over 600. This announcement was made by John P. Jones, master mechanic of the Sparks plant.

Zionists Start Meetings.

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4.—With delegates from almost every state in the Union in attendance, the eighteenth annual convention of the Knights of Zion was opened here. Nathan D. Kaplan of Chicago presided. The business included the president's report, the appointment of committees and the reports of standing committees. Louis D. Brandeis of Boston will address the convention on Sunday. The aim of the Zionist movement is to reestablish Palestine as the

FUNERAL OF BULWARK'S VICTIMS



Marines in the funeral procession of the victims of the sinking of the British battleship Bulwark entering the cemetery at Gillingham, England.

BRITISH WARSHIP FORMIDABLE SUNK; 700 MEN ARE LOST

VESSEL IS STRUCK IN ENGLISH CHANNEL BY EITHER A MINE OR A SUBMARINE BOAT.

SEVENTY-ONE SURVIVORS PICKED UP BY CRUISER

Battleship Was Acting As a Flagship at the Time of Her Destruction—Vessel Was Sister Ship to The Irresistible and the Implacible.

London, Jan. 4.—Great Britain has lost another of its second line battleships. The Formidable, sister ship of the Bulwark, which was destroyed on Thanksgiving day, was blown up in the English channel.

It is feared that about 700 members of the crew of 780 have been lost. The admiralty says that 71 survivors are known to have been picked up by a British light cruiser. Hope is held out that at least a few others may have been saved, but it is of the slightest.

Although the official announcement said it is not known yet whether the accident was due to a submarine or a mine, it is generally believed that the submarines have again scored.

Activity of Germans.

The German undersea craft have been very active in the channel, and along the Belgian coast for the last month, and it has required the utmost precaution on the part of the British naval commanders to keep their ships out of danger.

While the loss of the battleship itself is minimized in official circles, inasmuch as it was not considered of the first line strength, the loss of the trained officers and men who manned it is most serious.

Just what other warships were in company with the Formidable when it was destroyed is not permitted to become known. That they made for safety immediately, abandoning the Formidable to its fate, in accordance with the admiralty rules, is certain, and to this is due the heavy casualty list. The water of the channel is so cold at present that the sailors had practically no chance for life.

Pick Up 71 Survivors.

The text of the official announcement follows:

"The battleship Formidable was sunk in the channel, but whether by a mine or a submarine is not yet certain.

"Seventy-one survivors have been picked up by a British light cruiser and it is possible that others may have been rescued by other vessels."

The Formidable cost a little more than $5,000,000 to construct. It has been used for coast guard duty and to assist in the fighting along the Belgian coast since the German raid on the British coast.

The Formidable had assigned to it according to the British navy list for December, various fleet officers, and undoubtedly was acting as a flagship at the time of its destruction. Its captain was Arthur N. Loxley and its commander Charles F. Ballard.

Captain John C. Deed was in command of the marines on board, while the fleet surgeon was Godfrey Taylor and the fleet paymaster P. J. Ling. The chaplain is given as the Rev. George B. Robinson. On board the Formidable also were 16 midshipmen.

Open Coal Lands of Alaska.

Washington, Jan. 4.—Secretary Lane has issued regulations under which settlers may take for two-year periods ten-acre tracts of Alaska coal lands for local and domestic fuel needs. He announced that on account of legal complications caused by existing claims and the fact that there are no settlers in the immediate vicinity, the Bering river and Matanuska fields would not be opened for the present. Consideration is being given now to leasing regulations to cover the general mining of coal in Alaska.

IMPORTANT EVENTS OF 1914

These are the seven most important world events of 1914, according to Professor James A. James of the Northwestern University.

April 21.—Seizure of the Mexican Custom House at Vera Cruz, Mexico, by Admiral Fletcher, in command of the Atlantic squadron.

July 28.—Official declaration of war in European outbreak, Austria declaring war on Servia.

August 4.—Federal Reserve Act amendment adopted by United States Legislature.

August 15.—Panama Canal formally opened for world traffic.

August 20.—Sale of intoxicating liquors stopped in Russia.

Sept. 18.—King George signs Irish Home Rule Bill.

November 2.—Rich man's wealth feeds starving nation. Rockefeller Foundation goes to Belgium's relief.

LITERACY TEST FOR ALIENS

IMMIGRATION BILL WITH EDUCATIONAL CLAUSE PASSES.

Receives Majority Although President Wilson Indicates That He Will Veto Measure.

Washington, Jan. 5.—The immigration bill containing the restrictive literacy test for admission of aliens which has been the obstacle in immigration reform legislation for the greater part of two national administrations, passed the Senate by a vote of 50 to 7.

The overwhelming majority was recorded despite the fact that President Wilson had indicated he would veto the measure, as former President Taft had actually done, if it should come to him with the educational test included.

The vote in the Senate indicated that the veto would be overruled by more than two-thirds majority should the president reject the measure. The following senators voted against the measure: Brandegee, McCumber, Martine, O'Gorman, Ransdell, Reed and Wash.

The bill passed the House Feb 4 last by a vote of 241 to 146.

Although the Senate amended the House bill in several particulars, the literacy test was unaltered, save for an additional exemption to Belgian subjects which was adopted after prolonged debate. House leaders probably will ask for a conference on Senate amendments, but administration leaders were confident the Senate amendment would be accepted and the bill sent to the president by the middle of this week.

Among Senate amendments which House leaders have said, probably would be accepted is one to exclude from the United States all persons of the African race or of negro blood Another strengthens the phraseology of the prohibition of polygamists.

Closing hours of the debate were devoted to an amendment by Senator Lodge to exempt Belgian farmers from the literacy test and from the provisions which prohibit Americans from soliciting or inducing immigration. Already several immigration organizations are endeavoring to induce Belgian refugees to settle in this country.

Von Hindenburg Expresses Thanks.

Headquarters of the East, Poland, via Berlin to London, Jan. 4.—Field Marshal von Hindenburg, commander of the German army in Poland, requests the press to give expression to his heartiest thanks for the good wishes for the New Year transmitted to him by so many friends in Europe and America, as he is wholly unable to answer them personally.

United States Note Pleases Italy.

Rome, Jan. 4.—The American note to Great Britain providing against interference with American merchantmen has produced an excellent impression here, not only because it may tend to avert exactly the same difficulties encountered by Italian commerce, but also because it is hoped that it may lead to a more concrete set of international rules protecting the commerce of neutrals in their rights while still safeguarding the rights of belligerents.

PROSPERITY NOW WITHIN GRASP OF U. S. MERCHANTS

BUSINESS OUTLOOK FOR NEW YEAR IS ROSEATE ACCORDING TO SECRETARY REDFIELD.

COUNTRY SLOWS DOWN BUT IT NEVER STOPS

Federal Official Declares Nothing is the Matter With a Grouch Except An Absentee Heart and Missing Nerve—War's Over Yonder.

Washington, Jan. 2.—Heartened by months of close study of the business outlook of the nation Secretary Redfield of the Commerce Department wrote a New Year's greeting to the merchants and manufacturers of the country, bidding them in characteristic language to reach out for the prosperity he sees within their grasp.

There is no warrant, Mr. Redfield declares, for gloom or despair. The ill effects of the European warfare on American enterprise are passing and new vistas ofr commercial ventures are opening with each new day. His message follows:

To Bring Prosperity Now.

"If you want prosperity do your own share to bring it and do it now. Get that addition to your shop going; it will cost you less today than six months hence. Is trade a bit dull in the works? Get those improvements begun. Prices are low and likely to rise. You've been thinking of that contract work, better start it yourself before things get the start of you.

"This country slows down a bit now and then, but it never stops growing and it always moves up and not down. We don't know what it means in most of the United States to have real general distress. Think of Belgium and Poland, O, man with a grouch, and slink into your hole and pull it in after you. There think of your sins and your blessings and come out with your courage in working order.

"There are lots of good American examples of pluck. Do you remember San Francisco and Galveston and Chicago—Boston, Charleston, Baltimore and Dayton and many others like them? Remember Thomas A. Edison and lots of others of your fellow citizens who showed pluck when things went hard?

Quit Talking Misery.

"Nothing is the matter with the man with a grouch except an absentee heart and missing nerve. Cheer up, go to work, do your level best, quit talking misery. The war's over yonder, not here—men are slaughtered yonder, they are living here. All clouds there, all clear day here. Get out and sell some goods. Plant some more acres, do more work than you planned. Talk cheerful talk and you'll find this country of ours a pretty good place after all."

To support the secretary's hopeful views are the figures gathered by his department as to American foreign commerce since the outbreak of the great war. Since August, when the monthly trade balance of the nation showed a deficit of imports over exports, the situation has been completely changed. For December alone it is estimated the export excess will reach $100,000,000 or more, with one exception the highest mark of the last two years.

CUTS JOHN DIETZ' LIFE TERM

Governor McGovern Commutes Sentence to Twenty Years—Release in Four Years.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 1.—The life term of John F. Dietz, the outlaw of Cameron Dam, convicted in 1911 of murdering Oscar Harp, a deputy sheriff of Sawyer county, has been commuted to 20 years by Governor McGovern. Under the parole law, Dietz may now be released in four years. Petitions have been coming from every state asking for his pardon.

Dietz shot Harp when defending himself against arrest by a posse of deputies sent to his cabin on the Thornapple river to arrest him. The dam, he alleged, was the property of Mrs. Dietz, by virtue of a deed to the land surrounding it. The courts did not uphold this contention.

Seizes American Copper.

Copenhagen, Denmark, via London, Jan. 2.—A large cargo of copper, which is said to have been shipped to Denmark by a German-American, in an attempt to smuggle it through this country to Germany, by means of a false bill of lading, was seized by Danish authorities.

Kentucky Counties Go Dry.

Lexington, Ky., Jan. 4.—Nine counties in Kentucky have become "dry," liquor having been voted out last September with licenses expiring now. Only fifteen counties out of 120 in Kentucky are now in the so-called "wet" column.

Chancellor's Son Slain.

Berlin, Jan. 4.—The Lokal Anziger says it has learned that the eldest son of Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the imperial chancellor, was killed in action in Poland on Dec. 9.

STOP EATING MEAT IF KIDNEYS OR BACK HURT

Take a Glass of Salts to Clean Kidneys if Bladder Bothers You—Meat Forms Uric Acid.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.—Adv.

MONEY MOST WISELY SPENT

Millions Expended in the Campaign Against Tuberculosis Will Surely Have Its Effect.

More than $20,500,000 was spent last year in the campaign against tuberculosis in the United States. Of this sum 66.8 per cent was derived from public funds, either federal, state, county or municipal, and the remainder was contributed by private philanthrophy. These are some of the interesting figures contained in the annual statistical statement of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, made public recently. The statement is based largely on actual reports received from antituberculosis agencies located throughout the country, but where reports are not available, the figures have been estimated.

Institutional care and treatment of consumptives in hospitals and sanatoria makes up the largest share of the total expenditure. More than $17,300,000 was spent for this purpose, with an additional $925,000 for special treatment of tuberculosis insane and prisoners. These figures include not only the cost of maintenance, but in some instances the cost of construction of institutions. Antituberculosis associations spent the next largest sum, amounting to a little over $900,000. Care of patients in dispensaries and by visiting nurses cost almost as much, approximately $860,000. The growth of the open-air-school movement is shown in the fact that last year more than $300,000 was spent for this purpose, as against $10,000 expended five years ago. State and city boards of health spent $200,000 directly on tuberculosis work.

Comparative Liberty.

"Do you believe the poet's saying that 'Stone walls do not a prison make, nor iron bars a cage'?" asked Mr. Twobble.

"I don't know," said Mr. Meekson, thoughtfully, "but I dare say that stone walls and prison bars seem rather insubstantial things to a man who has been hedged about for 20 years by the glances of a watchful wife."

Two of a Kind.

"Bald heads remind me of kind words."

"Why so?"

"They can never dye, you know."

STICK TO IT

Until Coffee Hits You Hard.

It is about as well to advise people to stick to coffee until they get hit hard enough so that they will never forget their experience.

A woman writes and her letter is condensed to give the facts in a short space:

"I was a coffee slave and stuck to it like a toper to his 'cups,' notwithstanding I frequently had severe attacks of sick headache; then I used more coffee to relieve the headache, and this was well enough until the coffee effect wore off.

"Finally attacks of rheumatism began to appear, and ultimately the whole nervous system began to break down and I was fast becoming a wreck.

"After a time I was induced to quit coffee and take up Postum. This was half a year ago. The result has been most satisfactory.

"The rheumatism is gone entirely, nerves practically well and steady, digestion almost perfect, never have any more sick headaches and am gaining steadily in weight and strength."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum — must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum — is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

The cost per cup of both kinds is about the same.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

—sold by Grocers.

The Ambition of Mark Truitt

By
HENRY RUSSELL MILLER

Author of
"THE MAN HIGHER UP," "HIS RISE TO POWER," Etc.

(Copyright, 1913, by The Bobbs-Merrill Company)

CHAPTER XXIX—Continued.

Piotr did not move from his corner. "Ah!" It was almost a sob. "They're still for you against everybody, against me. It was always so. Everybody was for you. You had everything. It came easy to you. It came hard to me, so hard I could never do anything or get anything. It—"

"Yes, yes, Piotr, I know. But we're going to change that now. Come along—the rain's stopped and I must hurry."

"To get back to her, I suppose?" Piotr sighed.

"I must get back to her. Come on."

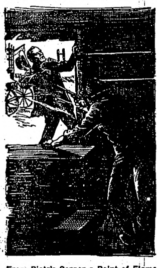
"I don't think I—" Piotr's words came between gasps. Something seemed to be choking him. "In a minute. I—I must get—some things."

Mark looked quickly back over his shoulder, caught by an odd change in the plaintive voice. Dusk was gathering rapidly, deepening the shadows in the shed, and he could barely see the figure fumbling about in his corner. There was a pause—Piotr's search seemed to have been successful—then a metallic click. Mark whirled sharply on him.

"Piotr—!"

"Ah!" It was not a sob now, but a low gutteral growl, throbbing with hate and triumph.

Piotr, too, whirled. From his corner a point of flame leaped out toward Mark, another—another—until six shots had rung out. At the last Mark's head drooped forward, his body swayed slowly and fell in a crumpled heap across the doorway. . . .



From Piotr's Corner a Point of Flame Leaped Out Toward Mark.

When he awoke he was being dragged by his wounded shoulder in such fashion that his head scraped along the floor. He did not realize so much, merely that his pain had increased a hundredfold. He tried to cry out, but could only lie limp and silent. Then he felt a hand passing over his face and a voice that seemed very far away muttering fretfully.

"I wonder if you're dying or shamming. It would be like you to sham. I didn't mean to shoot then. I didn't want you to die until you knew the mills were gone. But I had to—when you looked at me that way, I had to."

Mark heard, but the words meant nothing to him. The voice muttered on; detached sentences came to him.

"It isn't so easy as I thought. . . . I'd better go now, while I can. . . . I'm afraid. I never drove a horse. . . . Twice, coming here, I fell. I thought I was dead, but it didn't go off—I don't know why. . . . I'd like to tell you about Kazia's doctor. I saw them one night and followed them. You wouldn't believe it of her, would you? It nearly killed me. . . . It was your fault. You ran away from her. . . . It would be easy to drive off the road and fall in the dark. . . . I'm tired, and I tremble. Seeing you makes it worse. . . . I keep wondering what they'll do to me. . . . When the mills are gone, I'm coming back to you. I guess you'll stay. . . Maybe I'd better finish you now—you're so lucky always."

Mark felt the hand again, now at his throat, pressing hard. He tried to protest: "That is quite superfluous," but the pressure would not let him. When blackness was closing in on him once more, the grip relaxed.

But he did not quite lose consciousness this time. He heard the other move about, still muttering, then pass out. The sound of wheels and the horse's tramping through the tall weeds died away in the distance.

At first Mark lay inert. A mortal weakness held him. He could realize only the pain. He wanted nothing but to lie prone and motionless. . . . A disturbing thought began to tug at his brain. He ought not to be there. There was a thing he must do, some one he must see. What was it?

"Kazia!" The name gave him a thrilling shock that sharpened the pain but cleared his mind a little.

And the mills! The mills! Kazia and the mills! The two thoughts were inextricably mingled.

With a rush came realization of his plight. Piotr, the puny whimpering madman who cringed before a squall, had shot him and was on his way to blow up the mills. Piotr must be forestalled. With an effort he forced his eyes open and held them so until the first giddiness passed. He raised his head; it fell back with a thud.

"I can't do it," he groaned.

But the mills—and Kazia!

"I've got to do it. I must stop him. I must get to her."

Then began a fight to sit up, to stand, to beat off the invisible hands trying to drag him back into the blackness. How long the struggle lasted, by what degrees he progressed, he did not know; but when it was over he was leaning weakly against the door jamb. His brain was reeling; he breathed sobbingly, but by bracing himself desperately with the cane, recovered in the struggle to stand, he managed to hold what he had won.

His brain cleared again, a little steadiness came to the trembling limbs. Summoning all his will, he passed with uncertain dragging steps out of the shed. A cold damp wind breathed refreshingly upon him. He gripped his cane more tightly and started slowly down the weedy road.

He reached the foot of the hill and sank down in a little rain pool, rested pantingly and laved his hot face a few minutes, then staggered to his feet and limped on until weakness overcame him once more and he fell. . . .

More than an hour later he was still lurching along the road. Kazia and the mills! They were in danger, they were being taken from him; he must save them.

So he beat his way slowly along moonlit stretches of rough road, through darkened ravines where only instinct found a path, until at last, rounding a curve, he saw the furnace looming huge before him.

As hours passed and Mark did not return, a sense of an approaching crisis, of a danger, came to Kazia. The squall died away, full darkness fell, the train she was to have taken with Piotr rolled to a stop at the station and out again, and still he had not returned. The sense grew heavier, passive waiting unbearable. To escape her foreboding she went out into the night and walked about again in the place she had once thought of as a haven. But she quickly left the rambling old village, seen for the first time, yet holding so many memories of which she must not think, and went over to the new Bethel with its wide paved streets and rows of pretty little cottages. Many of the cottages were dark and untenanted as yet, but she saw them as they would be when they were the homes of a happy folk who toiled without exhaustion or fear, with kindness in their hearts one for another.

She left the cluster of homes-to-be and retraced her steps over the street that led past the mills to the bridge, started to cross. But at the entrance she stopped. Everywhere it was the same, a redolence of him. After all, to her Bethel, the haven, was just Mark Truitt.

All her fine resolutions and philosophy had become insufficient. The sight of the river, the woods in their autumnal glory, the song of the rapids had revivified the scenes of her one happiness.

She did not think that there might be some to see. She was weeping, head bowed on the bridge rail.

"Oh, I shouldn't have come. I want him—him. And I have no right to have him. It would be the cruelest thing I could do to him—even if he cared. I was wrong to come."

Thus she told hope—the immortal!—it must not live. . . .

Old Simon had no skill for it and hence no part in the building of the mills. But he spent his days watching them grow. Often at night, when Bethel was sleeping, he would slip across the river to realize again that after so many years his dreams were coming magnificently true.

That night he left his seat on the stoop, where he had been wonderingly but patiently awaiting the absent Mark, and trudged down to the river and across the bridge. He saw the figure leaning on the rail at the farther end, but not until he was close did he see it was that of a weeping woman. He would have turned aside, but he perceived that she had heard him and lifted her head.

He stopped short, staring in astonishment at the woman, a sort that had never before come within his ken.

After a moment's hesitation he went to her.

"Is anything wrong, ma'am?"

She shook her head.

"Is there anything I kin do fur ye?"

Again the silent gesture.

"If there is," he persisted: "I'd like to do it fur ye."

She found her voice. "It is nothing." She tried to smile. "Sometimes women cry for nothing, about little things."

"Some women do," Simon answered gravely. "I guess ye're a stranger here, ain't ye? I'm Simon Truitt."

She started. "You're his father?"

Simon noted the unconscious use of the pronoun. "Mark's, ye mean? Yes, ma'am. Did ye know him, back there in the city?"

She nodded, not trusting herself to speak, and turned her face from the moonlight. She seemed to be struggling again with a rising sob.

Simon found himself peering, closely and unintentionally, into her eyes. He stepped hastily back and heard himself speaking with a boldness he did not recognize.

"Mebby it was fur him ye were—But I hadn't oughter ask that. Mebby it's fur ye he's be'n grievin'?"

"It couldn't be that."

"I've wondered. Often I've come on him when he thought he was alone, jest settin' and lookin' at nothin'—an' grievin', I know." Simon's face, too, sought the shadow. "I know."

"It might be because of me but not—not for me."

"Not because he wants ye, ye mean? But it could be that. 'Tain't likely he'd find two such women as ye, even in the city. An' 'tain't likely he'd trouble so much, if there wasn't a woman in it. I wish ye could give him what he needs."

"What he needs is to have his life made over from the beginning. He can't have that."

"If he's jest wantin' some one, there's a way he could have it."

"You don't understand," she said wearily.

"No, I don't understand. That's the trouble. I'd like to help him, to give him what he needs. But I don't know how. There's nothin' I can give him."

He turned his face away from her, looking up at the furnace, big and menacing, outlined against the sky. There was silence among the mills. From the old village behind them came faint vague sounds of life—a distant tinkle of laughter, a crying child, a neighing horse. From the new town beyond the mills came no sound but a single voice in song, a wild eery chant that had been brought from another land. The song was finished. Kazia and Simon stirred, as though they had been waiting for its close to bring their strange encounter to an end.

"What's that?"

Both started. From somewhere near them had come a sudden muffled cackle of mirthless uncanny laughter.

"Sounds 's if it come from the furnace. There hadn't oughter be anybody 'round here. But I guess it's just the watchman in the power house. The still night makes it sound like that."

But even as he spoke they saw the figure of a man crawling from behind the furnace. He scrambled to his feet and began to run, with an awkward hobbling gait, up the tracks toward the bridge. The moonlight fell full on his face.

"Piotr!"

As the cry, in a voice he knew, reached him, the man stopped suddenly, stared wildly about and saw the two figures advancing on him. He raised his hands in a frantic gesture.

"Kazia! Go back—go back!"

She did not heed his warning. "Piotr! What are you doing?"

"Go back!" he screamed. "You'll be killed. It's dynamite!"

Instantly the others guessed what impended. Kazia heard a low moan beside her, saw Simon run, as fast as his age-stiffened limbs allowed, toward the furnace, as if he thought to avert the imminent destruction.

"You mustn't!" she cried. "Come back!"

If the old man heard, he did not obey. She fled after him, in instinctive purpose to drag him back out of danger.

They reached Piotr, passed him. He stood bewildered, glancing uncertainly toward the refuge of the woods. Then, with a low whimpering cry, he, too, joined in that moonlight race. He could not have overtaken her, had she not tripped and fallen over a switch. He flung himself upon her, moaning shudderingly.

"Kazia, I didn't want to hurt you."

Simon sped on.

That was what Mark Truitt, crouching where he had last fallen, saw just before the explosion came. There was a hoarse deafening roar. The great furnace seemed to reel, then toppled and fell.

They found him weakly trying to remove the debris from a place near the edge of the ruin. They drew him aside and a hundred strong hands took up his task. Soon they found the dead Piotr and under him Kazia, still breathing. It was not until daybreak that they came to Simon.

Kazia was carried to the village and laid in Doctor Hedges' own house. All through the night and in the morning, until the great surgeon from the city came, he fought off death. Then the surgeon took up the fight with a knowledge and skill the old doctor did not possess. For two days they did not sleep but watched and battled.

In the adjoining room a man, himself the object of the doctor's care, passed through his Gethsemane. The dead, his own pain and weakness, all else, were forgotten in his agony for the one who, it seemed, could not live. Sometimes he would rise from the couch where they had laid him and creep into the other room to join the watchers there until the sight of the still, bandaged form became more than he could bear. Then he would let them lead him back to his couch. His lips moved constantly, in what words he did not know. Their burden was the cry of all Gethsemanes.

"Let this cup pass from me."

So the miracle was made perfect.

Toward the last of that watch his weakness began to overcome him. The doctors supposed he slept and said: "It is best." He did not sleep. He had lost sense of his surroundings but his brain was alive. He was fighting, struggling supremely, to hold her back from the precipice over which she was slowly falling. Once she seemed to be slipping from his clasp. He heard her piteous cry to him.

He rose with a start and tottered into her room.

"She called me," he whispered.

Hedges thought it was delirium and would have led him back to his couch. But Mark resisted.

"I tell you, she called me. I must see her."

"Let him," said the surgeon. "Probably it's his last chance."

Hedges released him and Mark went over to her. He dropped to his knees by the bedside and kissed, very gently, the arm outlined under the sheet.

"Kazia," he whispered. "My wife, my love, don't leave me! Can't you hear, dear?—the miracle has come!"

He thought that she sighed, as does a tired child when it sinks to sleep, and that a little smile touched the pale lips.

The others did not see, but then they had not heard her call.

CHAPTER XXX.

The Ultimate Purpose.

It was an Indian summer day, when the sun paused to smile genially back over his shoulder at the earth he was leaving to winter's cold mercy, and a warm wind blew softly. Toward noon Kazia, leaning on the doctor and his buxom wife, was helped to the front porch, where the Matka was waiting with cushions and shawls. In a big rocking chair the convalescent was made comfortable, with cushions at head and feet and the shawls tucked carefully around her.

"You're sure you're warm enough?" queried Mrs. Hedges, with needless anxiety.

"Quite sure. You all spoil me with kindness."

Mrs. Hedges gave a last pat to the cushion behind Kazia's head. "You take a deal of spoiling, I think, dearie."

Kazia sighed. "I'll hate to leave you." Tears, for some reason, were treacherously ready that morning.

"Then," drawled the doctor, "you're thinking of leaving us?"

"I must—soon." But under the doctor's twinkling gaze a girlish flush sprang into view—perhaps to keep the tears company.

"Too much color," chuckled the doctor. "Let me feel your pulse."

The crimson deepened and as instantly vanished.

"I've a cake in the oven," Mrs. Hedges suddenly remembered. "Doctor, I'll need you."

"Need me?" The doctor started. "Am I a—"

"At once, Doctor," came a stern command from the hall.

"Eh? Oh—!" A light broke in upon him and he chuckled again. "Coming, my dear, coming!"

The Matka, too, would have left her, but Kazia stayed her. "Don't go," she said in the Matka's tongue.

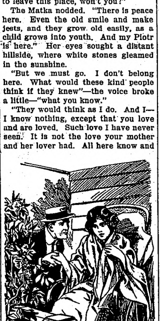
The old woman halted, irresolute. "He, your lover, will be coming soon." Timidly she laid a thin knotted hand on the scarf enshrouding Kazia's hair.

Kazia ignored that. "You will hate to leave this place, won't you?"

The Matka nodded. "There is peace here. Even the old smile and make jests, and they grow old easily, as a child grows into youth. And my Piotr is here." Her eyes sought a distant hillside, where white stones gleamed in the sunshine.

"But we must go. I don't belong here. What would these kind people think if they knew"—the voice broke a little—"what you know."

"They would think as I do. And I—I know nothing, except that you love and are loved. Such love I have never seen. It is not the love your mother and her lover had. All here know and are glad of it. I do not think you can go and leave him unhappy." And the Matka stole away.



"This is the First Time Since the Accident That I've Seen You Alone."

"It came too late."

Kazia's lips said that and the waiting tears overflowed, lingering gemlike on the fringe of closed lashes. A thousand times she had repeated the words to herself since the first hour of consciousness when she had seen him bending over her. She thought she believed it. But her fast-beating heart, as she awaited her lover's coming, sounded another answer.

The heavy throbbing ceased, began again, keeping time with a trampling of hoofs from down the street. Her closed eyes did not open even when the trampling ceased and she heard his step, punctuated by the ring of cane on gravel, until his step, too, ceased and she felt him near her, his gaze upon her. She dreaded to meet that gaze.

Slowly the reluctant lids opened and dread took wings like a night bird that had seen the first light. And the light in his eyes, transfiguring him for her, thrilling her with its summons, was not to be mistaken for the fire that had flamed there at other times, or for the pity of one seeing his cruelties working out.

"It is not too late," her heart was crying, and she tried in vain to stifle its song.

But he did not press her then with impetuous wooing.

"Do you realize," he said gravely, "this is the first time since the accident I've seen you alone?"

"Yes, I—" she began stammeringly. "The others have just gone in. If you call them, they will come."

"Then," he smiled reassuringly, "I will call them at once, for I have many things to show you today, and the doctor sets an absurd limit to our drive."

He rapped on the door and the doctor appeared, and behind him the Matka. Then, while the Matka piled the cushions in the seat, Mark and the doctor helped Kazia over the little walk and into the buggy.

"And mind you," the doctor adjured them, as Mark got in and the horse started, "two hours at the most—if you can keep track of the time!"

Then he gently led the Matka back into the house. For she, who had forgotten how to weep for sorrow, was weeping now for the joy awaiting Kazia.

First Mark drove, very slowly and carefully, through the old village and across the bridge until he came to its middle point. There he stopped.

The mills were no longer lifeless and silent. A row of giant stacks spouted clouds of heavy black smoke that fluttered lazily away in the breeze in long wavering pennons. Through the power house windows the watchers caught a glimpse of great flywheels whirling and bright pistons plunging. From the rolling mills beyond came a low monitory rumble of engines stirring tentatively, testing their sinews as they waited to pounce upon and torture the coming steel. And before them towered the rebuilt furnace, alive now and discordantly vocal with its first labor. Thither Mark pointed.

"Watch now! We're just in time. Our first tap!"

As he spoke, the shriek of the checked blast rose, drowning all other sounds, and the crew of men working at the furnace mouth sprang back. Out of a circle of darting fires forth leaped a molten deadly flood. A channel in the sloping sand-bed received it and bore it swiftly, in a dozen branches, to the waiting ladles. Little gaseous flames played impishly over the golden surface. The stench of burning sulphur arose. As the cascading flood filled the ladles, drops splashed out upon the ground and burst in a thousand tiny points of light.

Almost before Kazia realized it, the flood had subsided and the full ladles were moving away.

He drove on and took the long winding road that led past Hedges' Hill—though he did not remind her of his meeting with Piotr—and after many miles circled back to the village. They talked little, and perhaps that little was hardly worthy of a record. Kazia lay back in her cushions, her eyes following his hand as he pointed out some new beauty to her.

"How could you leave it?" she murmured, as often she had exclaimed when she had heard of it from the adventuring youth.

"But if I hadn't left it, I shouldn't have found you. So—I'm glad I went."

She made no answer to that.

Farther on they came to a branch road that once he had known. He followed it a while until there came to them a delicious spring-like fragrance. He stopped the horse again.

"I thought I could find it. See!"

He pointed to an old tree that stood, a mass of fresh green leaves and snowy blossoms, a little away from the roadside.

"What is it?"

"A pear tree."

"But it's autumn and I thought—" She glanced up at him wonderingly.

"Every fall that tree puts out a new set of leaves and blossoms. You see, there is new life even after spring has gone."

She looked long and earnestly at the blossoming tree. "But winter will come and the blossoms will wither—fruitless."

No longer could he refuse words to his longing.

"Ah! my dear," he cried, "let us forget signs and symbols. There is such a thing as new birth. And it's always spring where there is love. You will forgive me," he laughed unsteadily, "if I talk like a very young poet, for I am very, very happy today."

A touch of the old ready color was glowing faintly in her wan cheeks.

"Have you looked enough?" he smiled. "For, if you have, we must go. It will be getting chilly soon. And besides, they are waiting for us."

"Waiting—?"

"Yes. Didn't you know? Doctor Courtney is to marry us tonight."

The color vanished and she shrank back from him, lifting piteous pleading eyes to his.

"Oh, Mark, don't ask me that. I can't—I can't. Couldn't you let me have this day—"

"Did you think I'd let you go again? Did you think you could? Only one thing in the world could make me let you go—if you can say you don't love me. And you can't say that."

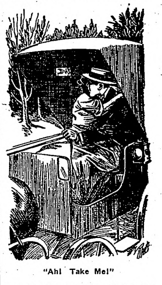
"No, I can't—say that. But don't ask me. Don't you see, it would be cruel to you—it would be worse for me. You forget now—but some day you would remember—that I— Ah! don't force me to say it!"

Her thin wasted hands went to her face, but he drew them away that she might see he had not flinched.

"Kazia, just this once we'll speak of the past, and then we'll put it forever away where the past belongs. One sin is much like another. And for every scar you have I can show many. I ask you to forgive, you have forgiven much. Can't you trust me to forget a little? And, dear, all that—all the sins and shadows—were part of a man and woman we have left behind."

She seemed so weak and fragile, lying there, this wraith of the old Kazia, torn by love and fear! A sudden mist shut her from his sight. An unspeakable tenderness welled up within him, lending to his husky broken phrases a supreme eloquence she needed to hear.

"But this love—the Kazia that called it to life—are part of the new life. It began those days when we thought you couldn't live and I learned what love is and what it would mean to lose you. It will never end. Is it I you doubt? Dear, I know—I know. And I need you. Can't you understand, I need you? You won't, you can't, fail me now?"



"Ah! Take Me!"

"You don't know what you ask," she whispered. "But I can't fight against it any longer—I want you so. Only promise me—when you remember—you won't let me know."

"I promise. Kazia—!"

"Ah! Take me."

A sob shook her and she swayed toward him. He caught her and drew her very gently to him. . . . After a little she smiled through her tears.

It was evening and the others had gone, leaving them alone again.

There was no light but the glow of embers on the hearth in the little cottage that was to be their home for a while. But it was enough for them, in whose hearts the unquenchable torch was glowing, revealing beauties and glories they never had known. They sat very close, watching—and listening.

For the silence of the hills was ended forever. Throughout that day, as the iron they had seen flowing advanced toward its destiny, the new creature that had come into the valley had been awakening to full life. Section after section had received the lifegiving power, until now all the huge mechanism was in motion, driving, whirling, pounding at top speed. The earth quivered in answer to its pulsation. Crunching metal, raging blasts, fires such as served at the creation, lifted their voices in chorus—an ode of the elements to man the master, the song of steel. A terrible song whose beauty only the understanding might discern—singing madly of power and passion and purpose, of struggle and death, of birth and life, of triumph and steadfast strength.

To the lovers, rich in the knowledge that comes only after sin and payment and release, the song came not in vain.

"Ought you to be there?" she whispered.

"Not tonight, dear."

"Could we see it from here?"

He helped her to a chair by the south window and stood at her side while she saw.

The night sketched the drama of steel for her. Again the great furnace was setting free its lambent flood. Under open sheds were gleaming the sun-bright mouths of other furnaces where the iron boiled and boiled and became steel.

"Ah!" Wonderment and adoration were in her cry. "And it is yours—it is you!"

"Not I, not mine! I don't know how many generations of men gave themselves that we might have that. I know it was not for me, for any man. For all who suffer and toil."

His face was set sternly toward the mills. For a long time he was silent.

"What is it?" And she broke the silence with a whisper. "What do you see out there?"

Sternness melted into tenderness.

"A parable," he smiled down on her, "of our lives—of life. Desire and disillusionment, battle and toil, conquest and failure, evil and shame—the fires and pressures that burn us and shape us." His hand rested on her hair. "And the purpose in which the real life begins."

"Ah! I wouldn't have you different. But to me—to me life isn't a parable—it is you. . . . This peace, this content—I can't believe yet that they are true, that they always will be true. Ah! Teach me, teach me!" . . ."

THE END.

Winthrop's Toast.

Our Country—whether bounded by the St. John's and the Sabine, or however otherwise bounded or described, and be the measures more or less—still, Our Country, to be cherished in all our hearts, to be defended by all our hands.—Robert C. Winthrop, July 4, 1845.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 3d 905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3,1879

The Thief River Falls Council chose an able man to fill the place of Dan Shaw on that county board, when they appointed Robert McGinn.

One of our ex county officials takes his defeat to heart so bad that he can not forget that election is over, and that the people have chosen their servants for the next two and four years. We were not a candidate for any office but we had our opinion as to the fitness of all candidates the same as other people, and while our criticism of some of our county officials was perhaps severe, yet the figures are in the county auditor's office to prove that we only told facts.

A farmer rushed into the Gazette office the other day and asked to see a copy of the paper of a recent date. He wanted to read an ad that was in the paper.

He read the ad and then exclaimed:

Yes. sir, these are my calves I've been driving every day for three weeks, looking for them." His long journey was at an end—or nearly at an end—and he went his way rejoicing.

Yes that's the point, dear reader. This farmer was not a subscriber—there are a few of them who are not—and that's why he was on the road every day for three weeks looking for the lost calves.

Finally some subscriber remembered about the ad and told him. Had he been a subscriber he would have recognized the description of his property at once.

A little ad in the paper will travel farther in one day and meet more people than any man can—even if he drives a six-cylinder car- in three weeks.

Yes, this is an advertisement, perhaps,-but it's a good story, too, isn't it? And it's a true story. The print shop force will vouch for that, for they appreciate the joke.

It is probably true, as some one has been kind enough to say, that at least once a year, if not oftener, one finds in the home paper some bit of information that in itself is worth the price of a year's subscription.

The income from the cash value of a man's time for three weeks, placing a very low valuation on the time would pay the subscription for all time. -R. L. Falls Gazette.

Peacock Superstitions.

According to Mohammedan tradition, the peacock opened the wicket of paradise to admit the prince of darkness and received a share of his punishment. The feathers, gorgeous in their hellish dye, reflect the glamour of the evil eye; hence the origin of the superstition that peacocks' feathers are unlucky, though the superstition is sometimes said to have its origin in the fable of Argus, whom Juno set to watch Io, one of her husband's mistresses. Argus was beguiled by Mercury and lulled to sleep by his playing, thus allowing Io to escape. Juno, to punish Argus, placed his many eyes in the tail of her peacock, who thenceforth proudly displayed them. Thus a peacock's feather became the symbol of watchful and vindictive jealousy. There was an old superstition that peacocks ruffled their feathers at the sight of poison.

Couldn't Beat Her.

Ellanora had been the negro maid at Mrs. Hopson's for several years and left to get married. She moved to another city, and nothing had been seen of her for a couple of years, when one day she called on her former mistress.

"And so you have a little son, Ellanora?" said Mrs. Hopson.

"Yas'um," smiled the woman—"a nice little boy."

"And what did you name him?" queried Mrs. Hopson.

"Well, we calls him Eggnog," replied the colored woman.

"Eggnog!" said the other. "That's a funny name for a boy."

"Well, yo' see, missus," explained Ellanora, "det cullud woman what lives nex' doah to me named her twins Tom and Jerry, an' I didn't want to be outdone by her."—Delineator.

STOP THE CHILD'S COLDS THEY OFTEN RESULT SERIOUSLY.

Cold's, Croup and Whooping Cough are children's ailments which need immediate attention. The after-affects are often most serious. Don't take the risk—you don't have to. Dr. King's New Discovery checks the Cold, soothes the cough, allays the Inflammation, kills the Germs and allows Nature to do her healing work. 50c. at your Druggist. Buy a bottle to-day.—adv.

MANY DISORDERS COME FROM THE LIVER

ARE YOU JUST AT ODDS WITH YOURSELF?

DO YOU REGULATE LIVING?

Are you sometimes at odds with yourself and with the world? Do you wonder what ails you? True you may be eating regularly and sleeping well. Yet something is the matter! Constipation, Headache, Nervousness and Bilious Spells indicate a Sluggish Liver. The tried remedy is Dr. King's New Life Pills. Only 25c. at your Druggist. Bucklen's Arnica Salve for Skin Eruptions.—adv.

TRY THIS FOR NEURALGIA.

Thousands of people keep on suffering with Neuralgia because they do not know what to do for it. Neuralgia is a pain in the nerves. What you want to do is to soothe the nerve itself. Apply Sloan's Liniment to the surface over the painful part—do not rub it in. Sloan's Liniment penetrates very quickly to the sore, irritated nerve and allays the in inflammation. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25 cents of any druggist and have it in the house—against Colds, Sore and Swollen Joints, Lumbago, Sciatica and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief.—adv.

CHILDREN'S COUGHS—CHILDREN'S COLDS BOTH ARE SERIOUS

When one of your little ones shows symptoms of an approaching Cold, give it Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey at once. It acts quickly, and prevents the Cold growing worse. Very healing—soothes the Lungs, loosens the mucous, strengthens the system. It's guaranteed. Only 25c. at your Druggist. Buy a bottle to-day. Bucklen's Arnica Salve for Sores. —adv.

Subscribe for THE SUNBEAM.

Notice For Publication.

First pub. in The Sunbeam Jan. 8th, 1915.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Jan. 6th, 1915.

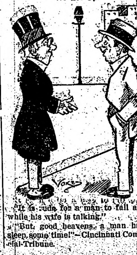
Notice is hereby given that Thomas G. Rome, of Rhoda, Minnesota, who on February 8th, 1912, made Homestead Application, Serial No. 07282, for Lots 5 and 6 Section 6 Township 152 N. Range 40 W 5th principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make Five Year proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls, Minn., on the 16th day of February 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:
Sam B. Swanson, Ole G. Skreland, of Rhoda, Minn., Andrew Feland, William G. Hunt, of Sunbeam. Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

PETER M. RINGDAL,
Register.

No Let Up.



"It is rude for a man to fall asleep while his wife is talking."

"But, good heavens, a man has to sleep some time!"—Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune.

WE HAVE

$150,000.00

TO LOAN ON FARMS IN

PENNINGTON COUNTY

Write Or Call on Us At FIRST NATIONAL BANK

THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN.

FARMERS & MERCHANTS STATE BANK

Oklee Minn.

The rapid growth of this bank is the best evidence that its policy and methods meet with the approval of the people in our community.

You will find this bank as liberal in its dealings as is consistent with sound banking.

We are at all times prepared to discuss your requirements with you and invite consultation.

Pay your bills with checks on this bank.
Farm Loans At Lowest Rates And On Easy Terms.
Six per cent interest paid on time deposits.

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS—————$14,500.00

J. A. C. Torgerson, V. P. W. B. Torgerson, Cashier.

DO YOUR BANKING WITH FARMERS STATE BANK

GOODRIDGE - - MINNESOTA

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS $12,000.

5 per cent paid on time deposits

Fire and Tornado Insurance Written in Responsible Companies.

FARM LOANS A SPECIALITY

J. M. BISHOP, President JAY PAYNE Vice-President

NICK BUNDHUND, Cashier

We have for sale one of the best quarter sections of land in the town of Highlanding, located one mile south of Highlanding Creamery. This farm will be sold cheap as the owner is a non resident and desires to use the money invested in other business. For terms and full particulars call on W. G. Hunt, Sunbeam, Minn.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Jan 1st, 1914

Department of the Interior U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Dec. 28th 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Matt Bakken, of Rhoda, Minn. who on April 8th, 1909, made Homestead Application Serial No. 04712, for N. ½ N. W. ¼ & S. E. ¼ N. W. ¼ Sec. 9, and who on April 10th, 1909, made additional Homestead Application, Serial No. 04735, for S. W. ¼ N. W. ¼ Sec. 9, Township 152 N. Range 40 West Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make Commutation Proof to establish claim to the land above described before N. W. Tarrant Municipal Judge for the city of Thief River Falls, Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 2d. day of February, 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses
Edward Singer, M. E. Hyland, Ole Skrieland, of Rhoda, Minn. Stephen Singer of Kratka, Minn.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register.

W. G. Hunt

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

FOR SALE: 120 acres in Section 14, Hickory Township, Pennington County, Minn. Price $1,800.

Nels Fore, Rolard, Minn.

HIGHLANDING BLACKSMITH SHOP

A Tharaldson, blacksmith of Highlanding will have a full line of buggy and wagon repairs on hand, and will be glad to oblige

A. Tharaldson

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Dec. 11th 1914

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land office at Crookston December 3rd. 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Christoffer Nisson of Erie Minn. who on March 18th, 1912 made Homestead Application Serial No 0748. for S ½ S. W. ¼, Section 21 Township 153 N. Range 39 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 21st, day of January 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:
Eliot Sigurdson, Nels Graue, Andrew Ellingson, Lars C. Zevig, all of Erie Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register.

U. S. Mail,

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 1.05 p. m., on Tuesday, Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.55 p.m

Wm. G. Hunt, p.m.

FIRST STATE BANK,

Of Plummer Minnesota.

GIVE THE BURGLAR THE "HA, HA!" BANK YOUR CASH WITH US

SOME people extend invitations to the THIEF AND HOLDUP MAN. They carry on their persons or in their homes large sums of money. A CHECK BOOK is of no use to the professional thief. Still, a check is AS GOOD AS CASH to the tradesman or for the immediate household wants. If you haven't a bank account

OPEN ONE TODAY.

J.A.DUFFY President, Henry Enderlie, Cashier

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Dec. 18th 1914

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. December 9th, 1914.

Notice is hereby given that James Davis, of Erie, Minnesota, who on July 20th 1911, made Homestead Entry Serial No. 06432, for N.W.¼ S.E.¼ Section 8, Township 152, N. Range 39 W. 5th. Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before N. W. Tarrant, Municipal Judge for the City of Thief River Falls, at Thief River Falls, Minnesota, on the 19th day of January, 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:
Edward Cottont, Edward Iverson, Resmus Martinson, Otto Anderson, all of Erie, Minnesota.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register.

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Jan. 8th 1915.

Department of the Interior. U.S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Dec. 31st, 1914.

Notice is hereby given that George T. Christofferson, of Erie, Minn. who on May 3rd, 1912 made Homestead Application Serial No. 07908, for S. W. ¼ Section 25 Township 153 N. Range 39 W. 5th. Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Commutatition Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for District of Minn. at Thief River Falls, Minn. on the 18th day of February, 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:
Hilmer C. Iverson, Anders H. Vake. Ole K. Lien, Generius Christofferson, all of Erie, Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register

Corrected.

Teacher—Earl, did you whisper today? Earl — Yes; wunst. Teacher—Clarence, should Earl have said "wunst?" Clarence — No; he should have said "twicet."—Everybody's.

MONEY TO LOAN ON FARM LAND

MACKEY J. THOMPSON FARM MORTGAGES ST. PAUL, MINNESOTA

CONTRACTS, FIRST AND SECOND MORTGAGES BOUGHT

PANAMA PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION
PANAMA PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION
1915

CALIFORNIA CALLS YOU

Do You Want to Go to the Panama-Pacific Exposition At San Francisco As a Guest of Farm, Stock & Home

The Northwest's Foremost Farm Paper.

If you do, fill out the coupon below and mail it and find out all about it.

WRITE TODAY. DO NOT DELAY.

The trip is undoubtedly the most interesting, enjoyable and profitable that can be found anywhere in the world. The mere journey itself will be a succession of beautiful, ever-changing scenes, replete with romantic and historical associations. And besides that beautiful journey, there is California and the greatest Exposition the world has known. To mention in detail all that will be seen would be to print a guide book of the West and combine it with a comprehensive catalog of human achievement. For the Panama-Pacific Exposition will be nothing less than an exhibit of the accomplishments of civilization, shown under the very best conditions, in surroundings as beautiful as art and money can make them.

FARM, STOCK & HOME,
[illegible] Minneapolis, Minn.
Please send at once full particulars concerning trip to Panama Pacific Exposition.

Name..

Postoffice..

Rural Route............ State..............................

THE LOCAL NEWS

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Clark, visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. K. M. Kratzer yesterday.

Miss Ella Causin returned to the Thief River Falls High School Monday, after the holiday vacation with her parents.

Dr. Heiber made a professional call in the town of Silverton Monday, returning home by the Electric Line.

Thomas G. Rome was down to Thief River Falls Tuesday, making final proof on his additional eighty acres of land. William G. Hunt and Ole Skreland accompanied him as witnesses.

There will be Mission Church Service in the English language, at the Goodridge Hall, on next Sunday afternoon, at 2 o'clock. P. M. All are cordially invited to attend.

Any subscriber to the THE SUNBEAM, who remits the amount of his subscription to this paper, as per bill sent him, will receive the Farm, Stock and Home one year absolutely free.

R. R. Johnson is putting in a first class meat market at Goodridge. Owing to there neither being good sleighing or wheeling he had to order his ice from Thief River Falls, and have it shipped up on the railroad.

Edward Singer has been so seriously ill at Rhoda this week that he called a physician out from Thief River Falls. At last accounts the doctor had not decided whether it was to be a serious attack of typhoid fever or not.

Edward Kolski made a business trip to Red Lake Falls Monday. He took the Electric Line Road from Goodridge, as they arrive in Thief River Falls in time to connect with the Great Northern afternoon train going south.

Monday seems to be the chosen day for all the farmers to go to town, which makes all lines of business overcrowded on that date. Why not a certain per cent of you go some other day, then you will not have to wait so long at the elevators before you can unload your grain.

That the Hanson and Barzen Elevator Company had confidence in the country and the amount of grain to be handled at Goodridge is evidenced by the large and up to date elevator that they built, at that place, and yet there has been days that teams had to wait quite a while to unload.

STRAYED: From my farm, on section 35, town of Kratka, about October 1st, one two year old light roan heifer, with horns. Any information that will lead to her recovery will be rewarded.

Wm. H. Quirk,
Sunbeam, Minn.

Any patron of Sunbeam post office can get envelopes with their return card on printed at a low rate by applying at this office. People who use government envelopes should fill in their name in the place provided on the envelope for that purpose. If you do this you are sure that the letter will be returned to you if it cannot be delivered.

It is a pleasure to note that the new Electric Line is so well patronized as it is, and the management is certainly rendering first class service on the road, with three trains each way daily. As soon as the mail routes are established over this line, the people of eastern Pennington County will soon forget the pioneer hardships of the past ten years. The freight patronage of this line will more than double in the next year as the people now fully realize that they have got a railroad and a sure market for their farm produce.

Cash For Hides and Furs.

If you have Hides or Furs for sale, bring them to the Oklee meat market and get the highest market price in cash.

Meat Market,
Oklee, Minn.

6 Per Cent MONEY 6 Per Cent MONEY 6 Per Cent

Loans may be obtained for any purpose on acceptable Real Estate security: liberal privileges; correspondence solicited.

A. C. Agency Company,
758 Gas & Electric Bldg.,
Denver Colorado.
and 446 Pierce Bldg.
St. Louis.

EAT

When you are AT GOODRIDGE, Call at the Goodridg Restaurant and get A cup of HOT COFFEE, or a good warm dinner for 25 cents. Don't forget the sign of

EAT

BARBER SHOP IN CONNECTION

STEPHENSON BROS. Prop.

MINNESOTA NORTHWESTERN ELECTRIC RAILWAY. TIME TABLE.

Trains going west leave Goodridge at 8:45 A.M and at 1:45 P.M

Arrive at Thief River Falls at 10:00 A. M. and at 3:30 P. M.

Leave Thief River Falls at 7:15 A. M. and at 10:00 A. M.

Arrive at Goodridge at 8:30 A. M. and at 12:10 P. M.

LIKE GOOD HORSE SENSE.

(Rushmore Enterprise.)

The Enterprise is in receipt of a formal announcement of the candidacy of Samuel G. Iverson for the Republican nomination for governor of the state of Minnesota. Now that sounds like good horse sense. Mr. Iverson, who is our present state auditor, is thoroughly familiar with the duties of the office of governor, and if there is a man capable of handling the job in a way that will be of benefit to the common people of the state it most surely is our friend Sam. He is in a position to know that the voters have no use for Eberhart and his brewery backing (or rather his brewery dictators), and if we elect him, which we surely can, he ought to make one of the best governors the state ever had. There is no reason why he cannot get into the good graces of the people as did Governor Johnson. Mr. Iverson is a man whom the people can trust, and who will stand for what he deems right, no matter what the brewery interests say or threaten. The press of the country are howling loudly and justly for a good man for that important office, so let's have Iverson.

Pigs and a Palace.

King Charles of Roumania made many changes in his Balkan kingdom since he arrived there in 1866 after an adventurous journey in disguise from Germany. Notable among them are the changes in the capital and the royal palace. When he made his triumphal entry as the country's new prince the carriage reached a house before which a guard of honor was stationed. "What house is that?" he asked. "That is the palace," replied General Goleski. The prince, thinking he had misunderstood him, said, "Where is the palace?" And the general was so embarrassed that he could only point silently to the one storied building. The principal feature of the view from the windows on one side was a gypsy encampment, with swine wallowing in the main road before the palace.

Great Expectations.

"I expect to be rich some day."

"That so? Somebody likely to leave you money?"

"That's it exactly. You don't suppose I expect to earn a fortune, do you?"—Detroit Free Press.

Didn't Wait the Attack.

At Boulogne during a royal reception some years ago a number of English ladies in their anxiety to see everything pressed with such force against the soldiers who were keeping the line that the soldiers were forced to give way and generally were, as policemen say, "hindered in the execution of their duty." The officer in command, observing the state of affairs, called out: "One roll of the drum! If they don't stand back kiss them all!" After the first sound of the drum the ladies took to flight.

"If they had been French," said a Parisian journal, "they would have remained to a woman."

LUMBER AND BUILDING MATERIALS.

When you get ready to build, come in and let us figure your bill and show you our stock of lumber and building materials.

Complete stocks at Thief River Falls, Mavie and Goodridge, Minn.

WINTON-NICHOLS LUMBER COMPANY.

Go to S. P. Johnson, at Oklee

"The Right Place"

Boys Suits from $1.25, to $4.50 per suit. Mens suits, former price $25.00, Now selling for $16.00. $15.00 suits now selling for $8.50

$8.50 suits now selling for $4.50.

Men's shoes from $1.25 to $3.50. Former price $4.00 now $3.25.

Ladies shoes $1.50 to $3.00.

Prints 5 cents per yard. Gingham 8 cents to 10 cents per yard. All Dry Goods at cost. Men's Caps goes at any price. Sugar for this week is $6.00 per 100 lbs. Good coffee for 18 cents to 30 cents a pound. Bargains in all kind of goods.

S. P. JOHNSON, Oklee, Minn.

CITATION FOR HEARING ON FINAL ACCOUNT AND FOR DISTRIBUTION.

ESTATE OF Mrs. Salve Myrum

STATE OF MINNESOTA, COUNTY OF Pennington IN PROBATE COURT.

In the Matter of the Estate of Mrs. SALVE MYRUM Decedent:

THE STATE OF MINNESOTA TO Salve Myrum, and Gunhild Thompson, also known as Nellie Reiersgaard, and all persons interested in the final account and distribution of the estate of said decedent: The representative of the above named decedent, having filed in this Court his final account of the administration of the estate of said decedent, together with his petition praying for the adjustment and allowance of said final account and for distribution of the residue of said estate to the persons thereunto entitled; THEREFORE, YOU, AND EACH OF YOU, are hereby cited and required to show cause, if any you have, before this Court at the Probate Court Rooms in the Court House, in the city of Thief River Falls in the County of Pennington State of Minnesota, on the 19th day of January 1915, at 10 o'clock A. M., why said petition should not be granted.

WITNESS, the Judge of said Court, and the Seal of said Court, this 16th day of December 1914.

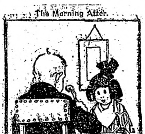
[COURT SEAL] WILHELM MICHELET,
Probate Judge.
H. O. KJOMME,
Attorney for Petitioner.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists. Price 75c per bottle.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

The Morning After.



"Oh, I do wish you were here to dinner every day. Then there won't be anything cold to eat tomorrow."—Pittsburgh Press.

Drawing the Line.

"Before we were married you said you would die for me!"

"I know I did, and I would, but wearing that necktie you selected out on the street is different. I won't do that."—Houston Post.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Dec. 25th 1914.

Department of the Interior., U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Dec. 21st. 1914. Notice is hereby given that Harry Stuey, of Hilda Minn. who on October, 3rd 1912, made Homestead Application Serial No 03401, for W ½ N W ¼ Sec. 33, and N E ¼ N E ¼, Section 32 Township 153 N Range 39 West Fifth Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U.S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls, Minnesota on the 26th day of January 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Chas. L. Stuey, Fred Stuey, of Erie, Minn William Lueck, Gilbert G. Hanson, of Hilda, Minn.

Proof made under act of June 6, 1912.

Peter M. Ringdal.
Register.

CITATION FOR HEARING ON FINAL ACCOUNT AND FOR DISTRIBUTION.

ESTATE OF Hayes Wade

STATE OF MINNESOTA, COUNTY OF Pennington IN PROBATE COURT.

In the Matter of the Estate of Hayes Wade Decedent:

THE STATE OF MINNESOTA TO Giles Wade and Melvina Wade all persons interested in the final account and distribution of the estate of said decedent: The representative of the above named decedent, having filed in this Court his final account of the administration of the estate of said decedent, together with his petition praying for the adjustment and allowance of said final account and for distribution of the residue of said estate to the persons thereunto, entitled; THEREFORE, YOU, AND EACH OF YOU, are hereby cited and required to show cause, if any you have, before this Court at the Probate Court Rooms in the Court House, in the city of Thief River Falls in the County of Pennington State of Minnesota, on the 22nd, day of January 1915; at 10:00 o'clock A. M., why said petition should not be granted.

WITNESS, the Judge of said Court, and the Seal of said Court, this 15th, day of December, 1914.

[COURT SEAL] WILHELM MICHELET
Probate Judge.
J. M. Bishop,
Attorney for Petitioner.

[illegible]

Specifics cure by acting directly upon the disease, without exciting disorder in any other part of the system.

No.	CURES	PRICE
1	Fevers, Congestions, Inflammations	.25
2	Worms, Worm Fever, Worm Colic	.25
3	Teething, Colic, Crying, Wakefulness	.25
4	Diarrhea, of Children or Adults	.25
7	Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis	.25
8	Neuralgia, Toothache, Faceache	.25
9	Headache, Sick Headache, Vertigo	.25
10	Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Weak Stomach	.25
11	Suppressed or Painful Periods	.25
12	Whites, Too Profuse Periods	.25
13	Croup, Laryngitis, Hoarseness	.25
14	Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Eruptions	.25
15	Rheumatism, Rheumatic Pains	.25
16	Malaria, Chills, Fever and Ague	.25
19	Catarrh, Influenza, Cold in the Head	.25
20	Whooping Cough	.25
27	Kidney Diseases	.25
28	Nervous Debility	1.00
30	Urinary Weakness, Wetting Bed	.25
77	Grip, Hay Fever	.25

Dr. Humphreys' Manual of all Diseases at your [illegible]

THE PRICHARD Co.

Thief River Falls Minn.

DEALERS IN LUMBER AND FARM MACHIERY.

Located west of the new Soo Depot. Give us a call, and look over our stock of Lumber and Farm Machinery.

H. O. KJOMME

Attorney and Counselor at Law

COUNTY ATTORNEY

Mcginn Block

Thief River Falls, -- Minn.

Wilhelm Michelet

U. S. COMMISSIONER

COURT HOUSE

THIEF RIVER FALLS,

MINN.

[illegible] and immortality.

The Sneeze.

People say "God bless me" after sneezing, from the fact that in the days of the plague this terrible malady began with violent sneezing and other indications of cold. The exclamation was thus originally a prayer to be delivered from the plague.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Jan. 1st.1915.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minnesota Dec. 29th 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Charles O. Asp, of Kratka, Minn. who on August 24th 1908, made Homestead Entry No, 0474, for S. E. ¼ Section 33, Township 153 N. Range 41 W. Fifth, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, at Thief River Falls Minn., on the 13th day of February 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Ole S. Breiland, Ole A. Holdahl, Kettel Brekke, Dreng O. Roisland, all of Kratka, Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

PETER M. RINGDAL,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Nov. 27th 1914.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office, at Crookston Minn. Nov. 21st 1914. Notice is hereby given, that Clarence E. Peterson, of Kratka, Minn., who on June 3rd, 1911, made Homestead Entry No, 06250, for Lots 1.&2. E ½ N.W ¼. Section 18 Township 153 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before N. W. Tarrant, Municipal Judge for the City of Thief River Falls, Minn. at Thief River Falls Minnesota, on the 30th day of December 1914

Claimant names as witnesses

Stephen Singer, Ole Nelson, Carl Klemmetson, Peter C. Wold, Jack Dunn, all of Kratka, Minn. Roy Hoffman, of Erie, Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal.
Register.

Cuts, Burns,

Bruises, Sores, Wounds and Piles quickly healed with Arnica Salve. It prevents infection, is antiseptic, soothing, healing. Try it once. Money Back If It Fails. The Original and Genuine.

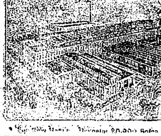
Bucklen's Arnica Salve

Heals the Hurt

All Druggists and Dealers, 25c.

WHY NOT MAKE $200.00 A MONTH -- That's $50.00 a Week, almost $10.00 a Day

Selling Victor Safes and fire-proof boxes to merchants, doctors, lawyers, dentists and well-to-do farmers, all of whom realize the need of a safe, but do not know how easy it is to own one. Salesmen declare our proposition one of the best, clean-cut money-making opportunities ever received. Without previous experience YOU can duplicate the success of others. Our handsomely illustrated 200-page catalog will enable you to present the subject to customers in as interesting a manner as though you were putting them through our factory. Men appointed as salesmen receive advice and instructions for selling safes, giving convincing talking points which it is impossible for a prospective customer to deny. Why don't YOU be the first to apply from your vicinity before someone else gets the territory. We can favor only one salesman out of each locality.



The 25th anniversary of our company was celebrated by erecting the most modern safe factory in the world. Wide-awake men who received our special selling inducement, rendered it necessary to double our output. We are spending many thousands of dollars enlarging our sales organization, but to learn all particulars it will cost you only the price of a postal card.

Ask for Catalogue 16 T.

THE VICTOR SAFE & LOCK CO.

CINCINNATI, OHIO

10 Great Serials

Full of life and action, filled with the life of fine inspiration and followed by 250 short stories of adventure, will make

The YOUTH'S COMPANION

Better Than Ever in 1915

Then the Family Page, a rare Editorial Page, Boys' Page, Girls' Page, Doctor's Advice, and "a ton of fun," Articles of Travel, Science, Education. From the best minds to the best minds, the best the world can produce for you and everyone in the home. There is no age limit to enthusiasm for The Youth's Companion.

52 Times a Year — not 12.

CUT THIS OUT and send it (or name of this paper) with $2.00 for The COMPANION for 1915, and we will send

FREE All the issues of THE COMPANION for the remaining weeks of 1914.

FREE THE COMPANION HOME CALENDAR for 1915.

THEN The 52 Weekly Issues of THE COMPANION for 1915.

Send to-day to The Youth's Companion, Boston, Mass., for

THREE CURRENT ISSUES—FREE

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED AT THIS OFFICE

FRUIT LAXATIVE FOR SICK CHILD

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm tender stomach, liver and bowels.

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs" that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish, or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleaning" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Adv.

Boarding House Statistics.

It was dinner time at Mrs. Meaneleigh's high-class boarding establishment.

"Well," said the statistical boarder, leaning back in his chair, "we have at this meal the representatives of two widely separated generations."

"How is that?" asked the inquisitive boarder, rising to the occasion.

"Why, the hen we have been trying to eat up was, in all probability, the great-great-grandmother of this omelet!"

Then there fell a palpable silence.—Judge.

CARE FOR YOUR HAIR

By Frequent Shampoos With Cuticura Soap. Trial Free.

Precede shampoos by touches of Cuticura Ointment if needed to spots of dandruff, itching and irritation of the scalp. Nothing better for the complexion, hair, hands or skin than these fragrant supercreamy emollients. Also as preparations for the toilet.

Sample each free by mail with Book. Address postcard, Cuticura, Dept. XY, Boston. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

Safety Appliance Lacking.

"Didn't you say," demanded the young man of the captain, "that this ship was equipped with all appliances for human safety?"

"I did."

"Then how does it happen that I now find myself engaged to a lady I did not know when the vessel left her pier?"—Judge.

YOUR OWN DRUGGIST WILL TELL YOU Try Murine Eye Remedy for Red, Weak, Watery Eyes and Granulated Eyelids; No Smarting—Just Eye comfort. Write for Book of the Eye by mail Free. Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago.

The only time we notice an impediment in the speech of some people is when an occasion arises to praise others

Backache Warns You

Backache is one of Nature's warnings of kidney weakness. Kidney disease kills thousands every year.

Don't neglect a bad back. If your back is lame—if it hurts to stoop or lift—if there is irregularity of the secretions—suspect your kidneys. If you suffer headaches, dizziness and are tired, nervous and worn-out, you have further proof.

Use Doan's Kidney Pills, a fine medicine for bad backs and weak kidneys.

A Wisconsin Case

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

Mrs. George Haimmerl, 509 38th St., Milwaukee, Wis., says: "My back was so bad that when I sat down I could get up only by taking hold of a chair and gradually pulling myself up. In order to stoop, I had to put my hands to my sides and bend over gradually. My housework was a burden and I was in great pain all the time. I couldn't rest well and mornings my back was terribly lame and sore. Doan's Kidney Pills corrected all these ailments, giving me a complete cure."

Get Doan's at Any Store, 50c a Box

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

FOSTER-MILBURN CO., BUFFALO, N. Y.

Your Liver Is Clogged Up

That's Why You're Tired—Out of Sorts—Have No Appetite.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS will put you right in a few days.

They do their duty.

Cure Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion and Sick Headache

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

BLACK LEG LOSSES SURELY PREVENTED by Cutter's Blackleg Pills. Low-priced, fresh, reliable; preferred by Western stockmen, because they protect where other vaccines fail. Write for booklet and testimonials. 10-dose pkge. Blackleg Pills $1.00 50-dose pkge. Blackleg Pills 4.00 Use any injector, but Cutter's best. The superiority of Cutter products is due to over 15 years of specializing in vaccines and serums only. Insist on Cutter's. If unobtainable, order direct. The Cutter Laboratory, Berkeley, Cal., or Chicago, Ill.

HAMMOND ASSERTS SOLONS SHOULD BE AS NON-PARTISANS

GOVERNOR, IN FIRST MESSAGE TO LEGISLATURE, DECLARES STATUTE IS ENTITLED TO FAIR TRIAL.

WOULD LIMIT AMOUNT OF STATE APPROPRIATIONS

Recommends Expenditures Not Greater Than Those of 1911—Favors Revision of Election Laws and Measure That Will Make for Temperance.

St. Paul, Jan. 6.—Governor Winfield Scott Hammond, in his first message to the Legislature, declared that the statute providing for the election of the members of both House and Senate as non-partisans should be given a fair trial.

There should be no change in the primary election law, unless it be to cure some of the defects in the present law or some unfortunate conditions that the statute permits, he said.

Governor Hammond recommended that a proposed constitutional amendment, empowering the Legislature to enact legislation establishing the initiative and referendum, be submitted.

The building of good roads, the acquiring of cheap non-agricultural land by the state, adequate appropriations for the prevention of forest fires, the promotion of temperance, and economy in state expenditures were urged by the new executive.

Governor Hammond's address in full was as follows:

Gentlemen of the Senate and House of Representatives:

The last legislature in its wisdom saw fit to enact legislation providing for the election of the members of both House and Senate as non-partisans. There is considerable difference of opinion as to the expediency of this departure from a well established practice in Minnesota, but the statute has been enacted, and in the recent election the voters selected their representatives in this legislative body regardless of their political beliefs. As a citizen of the State, one may be a Democrat, a Republican, a Socialist, a Prohibitionist, a Progressive or a member of the Industrial Labor party, but as a legislator he should be a non-partisan. The statute is entitled to a fair trial, and the work of this body may determine whether or not the present plan shall be continued. Indeed, each member of this body owes it to his constituency and to the State to conduct himself in matters coming before him as he would if he were affiliated with no political party, and his failure so to do can not be considered indifference on his part, not only to provisions of existing law, but to the conditions under which he was chosen and his obligations to the electors of his district. It is to be hoped that political partisanship will not appear in the discussions or the actions of either body of the present Legislature, but that all members will enter upon their high and important duties with but one purpose—that being a purpose to serve the State to the best of their ability for the promotion of the common good. This high and lofty purpose, if adhered to as it should be, will result in effective and wholesome legislation in the highest degree beneficial to Minnesota, and in an equal degree, creditable to themselves. In your efforts to meet in a fair, broad and open-minded way the responsibilities with which you are confronted, you will have the sympathy, the support and the hearty co-operation of the Executive of this State.

The people believe in primaries. They realize that there are defects in the primary election system, but they prefer that system as it is to a return to the old convention plan, and unless it be to cure some defects in the present law or some unfortunate conditions that the statute permits, there should be no change in our primary election law.

Select Men Best Fitted for Office.

It is a matter of common knowledge that many Democrats vote in Republican primaries and help nominate Republican candidates. Undoubtedly many Republicans likewise vote in Democratic primaries, and members of other political parties assist in nominating candidates for whom they do not intend to vote. Perhaps on the whole no great harm is done by this kind of voting, but the spirit of the law is violated. It was intended that each political party should hold its own primary; should nominate its own candidates, and that only members of that political party shold participate in their selection. Heretofore in many portions of the State the minority parties presented no candidates for county and legislative offices, in the general election the members of those parties voted for men others had nominated. They could then qualify under the law and many felt justified in voting in the primaries, where a choice of candidates was offered because in the general election there was no opportunity for selection. It may be that at times they supported a candidate for the nomination because they belived him to be more likely than another to be defeated in the general election by one of their own party; but the number who indulged in that practice is comparatively few, and to repeat what was said a moment ago, there is probably no great harm done by the voters of one party going into the primaries of another. Many times because of their participation in the selection men best fitted for the offices they sought were chosen and became the party nominees. Now if a large number of Republicans are voting in Democratic primaries, why would it not be well to allow all Republicans to vote in them? If a large number of Democrats are voting in Republican primaries, why not let all Democrats vote in them. Suppose the Progressives do take part in nominating the candidates of the Prohibition party, and the Socialists assist in making the selections of other parties, the nominees for public office would probably be as good men and as good party men, as they are now. If such voting were permitted by law none would refrain from exercising the privilege that others take. The judgment of men who are unwilling to violate the spirit of law ought to be of value, not only in the selection of public officers, but in the selection of candidates for public office. Should the Legislature see fit to amend the primary law so as to permit all electors to participate in each primary, considerable criticism of the system would be avoided; no harm would be done, and on the whole probably better nominations would be made. In the Republican primaries, of course, the only candidates to be voted for would be Republicans, and in the Socialist primaries only Socialists would be considered, but all voters irrespective of party, would select all the nominees.

While no material change need be made in our election laws, it is very desirable that their provisions be rearranged in a more orderly manner, and that many passages difficult to understand be re-written. It is quite necessary, in my judgment, that there be a thorough going over of these laws and the perplexities and apparent inconsistencies now found in them removed. If this is done, I am confident it will meet the approval of our citizens, especially our election officers and the judges of our courts.

Direct Legislation by the People.

The first proposed amendment providing for direct legislation by the people of the State through the initiative and referendum was defeated, although it received a greater number of votes than any one of the other ten amendments save only the 9th, which was approved, and there were less votes against it than were cast in opposition to the one that carried. If in view of the non-partisan character of the Legislature or for any other reason the people of the State deemed it unnecessary to have direct legislation in Minnesota, the amendment should not soon again be presented, but it is probable that there were many voters in Minnesota who believed in direct legislation by the people and who would have supported the first proposed amendment, were it not for the manner in which it came before them. The details of the plan were incorporated in the amendment. It was proposed that the law itself should be a part of the constitution. This, in my judgment, was ill-advised. Experience teaches us that laws after they are written and passed and put in practice need to be amended frequently to meet changed conditions and to remedy administrative defects overlooked in their preparation. If the entire law is a part of the constitution then there can be no amendment without the cumbersome and difficult process of amending the constitution itself. While I think this particular amendment should not be submitted at the next election to the people, I do recommend that a proposed constitutional amendment empowering the Legislature to enact legislation establishing the initiative and referendum be submitted. Such an amendment should be short, easily understood. Then there would be no doubt after the vote was canvassed as to the opinion of the people of the State concerning direct legislation.

The Legislature in 1911 established the Minnesota Board of Commissioners for the promotion of uniformity of legislation in the United States. In 1913 the uniform negotiable instruments law and the uniform warehouse receipts law were enacted. The Commission will make recommendations this year, to which the Legislature will undoubtedly give most earnest consideration. The work of this Commission is of great value and should be encouraged. Uniformity of legislation throughout the United States is very desirable from every view point, and this State ought to be well to the front in promoting such uniformity. I recommend that the small appropriation for the Commission be continued, and that its suggestions and report be given special attention.

Urges Building of Good Roads.

There must be no backward step taken in the construction and maintenance of good roads throughout the commonwealth, and in the development of a conservative forestry policy. The so-called Dunn law, in my judgment a well-balanced enactment, may perhaps be made better by some minor changes, but on the whole it is working well. The amount of money expended for roads increased more than 200 per cent in the six years ending in 1913, and so large an expenditure directs the attention of the people to the work accomplished and the methods pursued. Care must be taken lest criticism develop into antagonism, and it would be well to leave with the local authorities as much control and direction of road-work as is compatible with uniform improvement of the highways throughout the State. This matter, too, I am confident will receive you attention.

Now that the 9th proposed amendment to the State constitution has been carried, permit me to repeat what I took occasion to say recently in a public address:

State Should Acquire Lands.

"Within the boundaries of the State there are approximately 50 million acres of land, 33 million acres of these were originally forest lands, and 28 million acres (including cut-over and burnt-over areas) are forest land today. A large part of this area is suitable for agriculture and ultimately will be devoted to that purpose. The other part is non-agricultural land and can be put to no better use than forest culture. Some of this land is the property of the State, some of it is in private ownership, and except for the timber now standing upon it, of little value. If the State should adopt the policy of acquiring as rapidly as possible while it is cheap this non-agricultural land now owned by individuals and would conserve its own lands of this character, planting each year some portion of in trees, in years to come the Commonwealth would be possessed of magnificent State forests. Spruce develops very rapidly here, and there is great demand for it for pulpwood. Minnesota may be called the home of the white pine, and its value for lumber is well known. Birch, poplar and other trees do well. If we had a great area forested and belonging to the State, it would yield a large annual income as well as provide a splendid playground for health and recreation seekers; to say nothing of the satisfaction of making good use of what would otherwise be waste land and making beautiful and attractive what would otherwise be a cheerless uniformity. This cannot be done in one generation, but we owe it to ourselves and to those who will come after us to proceed along economic lines to the accomplishment of this result.

For Forest Fire Prevention

"The great enemy of the forest is fire, and there should be adequate appropriations each year for fire prevention. Last year we lost through these forest fires $98,000.

"Next, each year some portion of the non-agricultural land not owned by the State should be acquired and made a part of our public domain, and no year should pass but that a considerable portion of such land should be planted to trees. We may well be proud of our position as an agricultural State, —third in the production of wheat, third in the production of oats, and first in the production of barley. But this is not all; our iron ranges are now yielding more iron ore than is produced in all the rest of the States together—five-eighths (better than 62 per cent) of the total of the United States in 1913; Minnesota alone producing more iron than any foriegn nation in the world except Germany. Nor is this all. It is the greatest lumber producing State east of the Rocky mountains. Thousands of our citizens find employment in its lumber camps, on the rivers, in the mills and in the manufactories handling this product. Possibilities for development appear now to be without limit, and it is the part of wisdom to take advantage of our opportunities. We receive from the federal government $10,000 a year to aid in this work. Our State should stand first in forest conservation and forest culture."

Make Waste Land Productive.

There is in the State a great body of land which ought to be productive, but which is now little better than a waste. This land, fertile and capable of producing crops and furnishing homes for settlers, needs improvement. Some of it must be cleared; some of it must be drained; some of it is inaccessible and roads must be built so that it can be reached. There are many settlers attracted by its fertility who would like to purchase it and make homes upon it, but they are without the means needed to purchase and improve it and to await its development. They must find land that will yield quick returns. It seems to me the State can well afford to develop this waste land, and when it is ready for settlement; that is, when settlers can go upon it and by industry and good judgment secure an early return for their effort, sell it to actual settlers on easy terms. This land ought to be upon our tax rolls. It ought to bear its burden of State, county and school district expenditures. It is economically wrong to let it remain useless and idle, and this rich State can well afford to begin its development and to encourage its early settlement. In this connection let me say that before any land is sold by the State it ought either to be most carefully examined by competent persons to determine what, if any, minerals there may be in it, or if there is no such examination, sold with all mineral rights reserved by the State. We should seek to put agriculturalists and farmers on this land and to give them every encouragement to farm, but we should preserve to the State all mineral rights.

For Promotion of Temperance.

In the last election there was much controversy over temperance legislation, and practically every Representative and Senator elected have come here either opposed to a change from local option to county option or in favor of such a change; very likely each member desires an opportunity to express his own opinion and to give voice to the prevailing sentiment in the district he represents. There are numerous plans for the promotion of temperance, and every one is in favor of temperance legislation or claims to be in favor of it. Some of our citizens would prohibit the sale, the manufacture and the use of intoxicating liquors of all kinds within the State. Others would prohibit their manufacture and sale, but not their use. Others would distinguish between spiritous liquors and malt and vinous beverages. The majority, however, apparently favor the licensing of the sale of intoxicating liquors either by the counties or by lesser political units, and while I am convinced that sooner or later the people of this State will pass upon some kind of a prohibition measure, just now the question is, Shall there be county option in place of existing local option? I hope this question may be taken up at once and disposed of at the earliest possible date, so that other matters of great importance may receive the attention of members. It is very advisable that this be done because of the intense feeling and bitterness which frequently accompanies consideration of this matter, a bitterness entirely unwarranted by its importance from a temperance standpoint or from any other standpoint. The existence of such feeling, however, does not make for the calm and deliberate consideration of measures and such consideration is much needed, especially at this session. Since nearly every member knows now what his vote will be, it does not seem that a discussion of the matter at any length is either desirable or necessary. Whatever determination you may reach upon county option, I trust that all other proposals tending to promote temperance among the people of this State will receive your attention, and that you may be able to place upon the statute books some measures that will make for temperance. Economic questions are of great importance. Social and moral questions are of even greater importance, and in your treatment of them they ought not to be relegated to a secondary place.

To Reorganize Civil Administration.

A matter of great concern and of far-reaching consequence will come before you at this session. For many years students of public affairs and those concerned in the activities of the State have believed the civil administration should be reorganized. We have now a number of offices, departments and commissions acting independently and unrelated to each other. There is lack of co-ordination and lack of supervision. Necessarily there is duplication of work and that means unnecessary work. The information acquired by one commission may be needed by another or in one of the State offices, but either because of lack of knowledge in one place that the information has been obtained in another or because of a difference of nomenclature or in classification, it is not available for the purpose desired and must be secured again from original sources. The duplication of work necessitates a large number of employes. If one man can perform the services required in two departments, it is a waste to employ two men. If the men are in the field, the State must pay not only double wages but double traveling expenses.

To Secure Greater Efficiency.

But there is a matter of still greater importance. These commissions, boards, departments and offices, working along different lines and ofttimes at cross purposes, make effort for good government far less effective than if directed by one chief supervisor and toward a definite goal. Efficiency is the highest type of economy. The purpose of reorganizing the civil administration of Minnesota is to secure economy through greater efficiency. The Governor of this State in October, 1913, appointed the Minnesota Efficiency and Economy Commission. It was made up of thirty citizens of the State, representing all parts of it geographically. The commission organized and selected its statistician and its secretary. It has performed a notable work. Several months ago it published its preliminary report and announced that its final report would be ready for the Legislature of 1915. That report has been prepared and will be brought to your attention. It proposes three things: First, a reorganization of the civil administration of this State. Second, the inauguration of the merit system for the selection of State employes. Third, the establishment of a budget for use in connection with appropriations. Now, its third recommendation, the establishment of a budget, will encounter no serious opposition, that is, direct opposition. Every one will pronounce it a good thing. Something toward its establishment might be done even if the other recommendations were unapproved, but the work would be done much better, much more effectively, and be of greater value, if the proposed reorganization is accomplished. Each commission, department or office for which appropriation is made or which has the expenditure of money, would some time previous to the meeting of the Legislature make its estimate of the amount of money required for its operation for two years following, and the amounts of money necessary to meet any expenditures which it may have been directed to make. These estimates, after an examination by the Governor and the heads of the various commissions, departments and offices, and their approval, would constitute one part of the budget. Similar estimates of all revenues of the State from its many sources of income would constitute the other part of the budget. The Legislature in making its appropriations would have before it fairly accurate knowledge of the State's needs and its means. This of course would be of great value. I hope whatever you may decide to do in reference to this matter, to place before the next Legislature something like a budget. It so happens that no time elapses between the inauguration of the Governor and the meeting of the Legislature, so estimates must necessarily be made under the supervision of the Governor whose term is ending.

"To Victors Belong the Spoils."

But there will be opposition, and very pronounced opposition, to the first and second recommendations of the commission. There is much sentiment for the doctrine "To the victors belong the spoils." It is urged that those who are active in political campaigns, who give of their time and their means for the success of party candidates, deserve recognition at the hands of those candidates when successful, and that practical recognition is the bestowal of public office. It has been the practice to reward fidelity to party and campaign activity with appointment to administrative place. In the main we have good and efficient officials under that policy and especially is this true in the more conspicuous of the appointive offices. But in many of the less important places toward which the scrutiny of the public is not directed the strongest and most efficient men have not been selected, and often men who have developed into excellent officers have been removed, to the detriment of the public service, for no other reason than their political opinions. It is only fair to say in passing that there have been fewer partisan appointments to office and partisan removals from office in Minnesota than in many other states. It is proposed that, except the heads of departments and a few other officers, those who desire to enter the service of the State shall be examined by an non-partisan board, and their qualifications for public service determined by that board. Those found to possess the necessary qualifications shall be entitled to a place on a list of eligibles, the place upon such list to be determined by the ratings received in the examination. Whenever vacancies occur this non-partisan board will nominate from the eligible list candidates, and the heads of departments select from them to fill vacancies. The appointments will no longer be dependent upont party service nor upon political opinion. This will tend to bring to the service of the State efficient and well qualified employes who will feel that they cannot rely upon influence or favoritism to hold their positions, but must depend upon their industry, efficiency and worth.

Anticipates Opposition to Proposal.

The proposal will meet opposition; first, from those who believe that party service should be rewarded by public place, and, secondly, from those who believe it unwise to establish an office-holding class. To the objection of the first, it can only be said that it is an effort to promote the interest of the State rather than the interest of a political organization. But to the objection of the second, a further answer should be made. The merit system has been adopted by the Federal government, and appointments to the civil service of the United States are now made in the manner in which it is proposed to make them in Minnesota. Those in the Federal classified service are inclined to feel that, once appointed, they have such an interest in their positions that they cannot be separated from them without their consent. Many when by reason of old age or physical infirmity they are no longer able to render effective service, feel that since in case of removal they cannot secure remunerative and suitable employment, they should either be retired on partial pay, pensioned or permitted to hold their places and render such service as they are capable of performing. Where there is no provision for retirement on pay or for pensions many thoroughly inefficient employes are retained in the service, to the detriment of the work and the discipline of the administrative corps. I think, if the merit system is established, the term of those appointed should not be indefinite but should be made for fixed periods, say, for six years, the efficient and worthy to be eligible for reappointment.

Office Holders Against Plan.

However, the first recommendation of the commission will encounter the greatest opposition, for in the reorganization of the civil administration a great many offices are abolished, and we cannot expect that those who now hold such offices will favor the plan. Many of these places are held by men of the highest integrity and of great ability. From their standpoint and from that of their friends, the reorganization is not desirable. It would not be fair to say that their opposition is based upon selfishness, and yet the personal element enters largely into it. But, gentlemen, there can be no reorganization without the abolition of many official positions. This is not a plan to be added to the present system. It is to take the place of it. We cannot keep what we have and have this also. The commission cannot be charged with having done any other than a patriotic duty. Its members have served without compensation. They neither seek nor expect any reward whatsoever for their work other than the consciousness of public duty well performed. The proposed reorganization has their unanimous support. It has not only the approval of thousands of representative citizens, but it has been commended by the press and from the platform. It cannot be disregarded. It must have your best thought and your most careful consideration. In the report is included a form of bill for an act making effective the recommendations of the commission. The parts are so related one to another that it must receive your sanction or your disapproval as a whole. While it may be bettered perhaps by some amendments—indeed I think it would be better to have members of the Railroad and Warehouse Commission appointed as other boards and commissions are instead of elected, and the term of civil service employes limited instead of indefinite—nevertheless the plan must stand or fall as a whole. To mangle it is to defeat it, and it should not be adopted in part. If I may be permitted to make a suggestion as to the method of dealing with this report: I believe it is worthy of the study of a special committee in the House and a special committee in the Senate; that the bill when introduced should be referred to those committees and they hold joint public hearings upon it, in which members of the Efficiency and Economy Commission should be invited to take part; and that after the hearings such communication and joint action as your rules will permit should be had by the committees, to the end that the reports in House and Senate conform as nearly as practicable to each other. I recommend this report to your consideration. I believe if you enact its provisions into law, you will do the State a great service.

State Expenditures Increase.

It appears from a chart in the final report of the commission that the State expenditures in 1905 were between eight and nine millions of dollars; five years later, in 1910, they were between eleven and twelve million dollars, an increase of approximately three million dollars. In 1912, two years later, they were between fourteen and fifteen millions, another increase of three millions, and in 1913, eighteen and a half millions, about the same increase. The expenditures of the State for the decade between 1903 and 1913 increased approximately 125 per cent, while the population of the State during the same interval increased about 17 per cent.

In 1913 there were six states whose governmental cost payments or expenses were less than $2 per capita; twenty from $2 to $4; eleven from $4 to $6; ten from $6 to $10, and one over $10 per capita. Minnesota is one of the ten states whose governmental cost payments or expenses were from $6 to $10 per capita.

It is true that large expenditures do not always mean extravagance or waste. If there were a plague destroying the people of the State, and by a large outlay of money its ravages were checked and thousands of lives saved, there is no one who would say the money was ill spent, and yet the burden upon the State might be so heavy that taxes would be many times multiplied. The work of some of our boards and commissions may have been extremely beneficial to the people of the State, may have saved them from large payments of money. The cost of maintenance of the boards and commissions may have been trifling compared with the results obtained. The mere fact, then, that our governmental expenses have been increasing does not warrant one in charging the State with extravagance.

Urges Economy in Appropriations.

Nevertheless, we find our expenditures growing very much faster than our population, and our State among the number having the greatest per capita governmental expenses. There is complaint over taxes and the people expect this Legislature to move in the direction of economy. Of course a small portion of the taxpayer's burden is due to State taxes. I hope that in reviewing the work of this session it may be said there is a substantial reduction in the amounts appropriated, and if the municipalities of the State would do proportionately as well taxes would be substantially lightened. The appropriations of the Legislature of the year 1913 were $1,275,130.90 more than the appropriations for the year 1911. I recommend that in making up the appropriations you do not permit the aggregate amount to exceed the appropriations of 1911. This I am quite sure can be accomplished without injury to the State or any of its institutions or activities.

The question, "Is insanity in the United States on the increase?" has received the attention of many students and investigators. In six years from 1904 to 1910 the number of insane reported in institutions increased 25 per cent, while during the same period the population of the United States increased but 12 per cent. In 1904 one person out of every 543 was confined in an institution for the insane, and in 1910 one person out of every 490. These figures are startling, but it should be noted that an increase in the number of insane persons in institutions does not necessarily mean an increase in the number of insane persons in the country. Formerly there was dread of confinement in an insane asylum, and people were reluctant to send to them relatives and friends. But that feeling of dread has largely passed away, and the well managed institution is now recognized as the best place for the mentally afflicted. The demands made upon our State asylums for the insane are very great. Whatever is needed for the care or comfort of those confined in these institutions should be provided, and for them I bespeak the most generous treatment.

Proud of State Institutions.

I shall not refer to the penal, educational and other institutions of the State other than to commend to you the reports of the officers having them in charge, and to express the hope that you will so provide that they will continue to rank among the best in the United States. Minnesotans are especially proud of their public schools, their normal schools and their university, and desire that they be furnished with everything needed for their development.

Gentlemen, in conclusion, I wish to say that it is my hope our relations will be most cordial. I desire to feel that I may approach you freely for counsel and support, and likewise I hope you will feel free at any time to call upon me. We all desire to make a good record, a praiseworthy ambition for every one. Let us co-operate to the end that at the close of this session we may deserve the commendation of the people we are here to serve.

Finest tobaccos, skillfully blended—that's the source of that rare flavor which has made FATIMA CIGARETTES famous.

Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

20 for 15¢

FATIMA
TURKISH BLEND CIGARETTES
Cameron & Cameron Co.
RICHMOND, VA.
LIGGETT & MYERS TOBACCO CO. SUCCESSOR
NO GOLD TIPS
BUT FINEST QUALITY

A New Course.

In a Philadelphia family recently the engagement of a daughter was announced. A friend calling was met at the door by the colored maid, who announced:

"No'm; Miss Alice ain't at home dis aft'noon—she's gone down to de class."

"What class?" inquired the visitor.

"You know, Miss Alice is gwine to be ma'ied in de fall," explained the maid, "an' she's takin' a cou'se in domestic silence."—Life.

Revelation.

"Is Miss Bingle's hair natural?"

"Of course, it is; so natural you can't tell it from the real thing."

For interior finishing of your house use

Rock Board

An improved wall board, in the place of lath and plaster.

If your dealer does not have it write to us and we will have our agent nearest to your home call on or write you.

Rockford Paper Box Board Co.
ROCKFORD, ILL.

Useful Artificial Arms

Write for free catalog "B 10."

Carnes Artificial Limb Company
904 EAST 12th STREET, KANSAS CITY, MO

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Washington, D.C. Books free. Highest references. Best results.

Minnesota Directory

Highest Cash Prices Paid For CHICKENS, VEAL, CREAM WRITE FOR SPECIAL PRICE LIST. THE R. E. COBB CO., 14, 3rd Street, St. Paul, Minn.

BANGS & WALSH LIVE STOCK DEALERS

CATTLE BOUGHT ON ORDERS. 331 New Exchange Building, South St. Paul, Minn.

SHIP YOUR LIVE STOCK TO Rogers & Rogers S. St. Paul, Minn. 27 yrs. experience in commission business. Ref. any mercantile agency or business house in St. Paul. Orders filled for stock cattle. Satisfaction guaranteed.

STOVE REPAIRS

Send us the name and number of your stove and we can furnish you the parts at small cost. Great Western Stove & Repair Co., 312 Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis

EYES EXAMINED FREE

ARTIFICIAL EYES

JAMES E. LEE, Optician 528 Nicollet Ave., Minneapolis

J. N. JOHNSON & CO., 915 Nicollet Ave., Minneapolis Jobbers-Dealers Rubber Tires Accessories, Fire Department Equipment. Write for catalog and Special Discounts.

LADIES' AND GENTS' FURS

Made to order and in stock. Remodelling. Latest Styles and reasonable prices. Any information cheerfully given. Bischoff, Johnson & Lundgren, 93 E. 5th St., St. Paul, Minn., Dept. C.

SHIP YOUR WOOL Hides, Pelts, Furs, etc. to McMillan Fur & Wool Co. Minneapolis, Minn. Write for Circular.

SHIP TO THUET BROS.

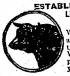
ESTABLISHED 1887



Live Stock Commission Firm, South St. Paul

We guarantee best results and we also make a specialty of filling country orders. Write us for market reports. Our service deserves your patronage.

HUDSON & THURBER CO.

MODOC DRY CELLS
VERMIL HARD OIL
STANDARD LITTER CARRIERS
CARTON THRESHER BELTS
Only Complete Stock of Implement Supplies
MINNEAPOLIS and OMAHA

"CASCARETS" ACT ON LIVER; BOWELS

No sick headache, biliousness, bad taste or constipation by morning.

Get a 10-cent box.

Are you keeping your bowels, liver, and stomach clean, pure and fresh with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passageway every few days with Salts, Cathartic Pills, Castor Oil or Purgative Waters?

Stop having a bowel wash-day. Let Cascarets thoroughly cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour and fermenting food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken or cause any inconvenience, and cost only 10 cents a box from your store. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have Headache, Biliousness, Coated Tongue, Indigestion, Sour Stomach or Constipation. Adv.

Very Likely He Could.

A man walked into a barber shop and removed his hat and coat. He was evidently in a hurry.

"Can you shave me if I do not remove my collar?" he asked impatiently.

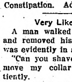
"Yes, sir," said the obliging barber.

The man took his seat in the chair, and the barber prepared for business. As he surveyed his customer he noted that the hair had all gone from the top of his head and that his hirsute adornment was limited to a fringe of hair above the neck. Then the barber spoke, as he drew the cloth around his customer's neck and fastened it at the back:

"And I think I could cut your hair if you did not remove your hat."—Columbus Dispatch.

OVERWORK and KIDNEY TROUBLE

Mr. James McDaniel, Oakley, Ky., writes: "I overworked and strained myself, which brought on Kidney and Bladder Disease. My symptoms were Backache and burning in the stem of the Bladder, which was sore and had a constant hurting all the time—broken sleep, tired feeling, nervousness, puffed and swollen eyes, shortness of breath and Rheumatic pains. I suffered ten months. I was treated by a physician, but found no relief until I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills, I now feel that I am permanently cured by the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills."



J. McDaniel.

Dodd's Kidney Pills, 50c. per box at your dealer or Dodd's Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Write for Household Hints, also music of National Anthem (English and German words) and recipes for dainty dishes. All 3 sent free.—Adv.

The "Don't You Know" Man.

His account of an incident at the Metropolitan museum would be somewhat like this: "I stood before the sea picture by that Spanish artist, don't you know, and I declare I could almost feel the warmth of the sun on that beach—don't you know? It—well it, don't you know, sort of reached out of the canvas, and I actually felt as if I were standing in its glow—don't you know?" This man is purely and simply too lazy to express himself exactly. His incessant "Don't you know?" appealing to his listener's intuition enables him to escape specification. He is a mental sloven. His shoestrings are flying. — Pittsburgh Press.

IF HAIR IS TURNING GRAY, USE SAGE TEA

Don't Look Old! Try Grandmother's Recipe to Darken and Beautify Gray Faded, Lifeless Hair.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant. Adv.

Reverse Irish.

Mrs. Maloney—Thin yez think thot all min are deceiving?

Mrs. Casey—Oi do. They are a most contrary lot. Look at my Moike. Before we were married he was always kissin' me on the bean, an' since thin he's been beanin' me on the kisser.—Puck.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

STATE NOW HAS 66,000 AUTOS

Number of Licensed Machines Has Increased by Nearly 20,000 During Last Year.

St. Paul.—The number of licensed automobiles in Minnesota has increased by nearly 20,000 in the last year, according to the biennial report of Julius A. Schmahl, secretary of state. The number of licensed Dec. 31, 1913, was 45,314, and it is now close to 65,000. In the three-year registration period just closed, Mr. Schmahl says, automobile license receipts have been about $100,000. Nearly $18,000 has been realized from motorcycle licenses and $15,000 from chauffeurs' licenses. In the next three-year period he predicts that a registration of 120,000 will be reached. An extra staff of clerks will be needed for the registration work in the next few months, and the legislature will be asked to make an emergency appropriation for this purpose. The new tags have been contracted for at 28 cents each, those of three years ago costing 42 cents.

Mr. Schmahl recommends that the board of examiners of chaffeurs be given authority to enforce the law, as many chauffeurs neglect to take out licenses and no one is in a position to check them up.

A card index system for corporations has been installed at small cost, in place of the old corporation books. Receipts for the last two years, outside of the automobile department, have been: Candidates' filing fees, $5,020; corporation filing fees, $197,305; other sources, $20,619.

Mr. Schmahl calls attention to the coming state census, and urges that an adequate appropriation be made by the legislature early, so the work of organizing for the census can be started.

RAILWAY GIVES PENSIONS

Twin City Lines Announce Plan for Retiring Employes at 65 on Half Pay.

Minneapolis.—The Twin City Rapid Transit company, in a New Year announcement affecting 3,000 employes and their families, stated that a pension plan providing retirement for employes at the age of 65 has been worked, out, together with plans for accident, sickness and death benefits.

Although the company has been at work for months on the plan, not a word was imparted to the employes. The announcement, coming as a great surprise, was a welcome New Year gift to the employes.

The pension plan is calculated on a 2 per cent per year of service basis. So far as is known no other street car pension plan in the country provides for greater than a 1 per cent basis.

From this year forward every employe may work with assurance that in the event of accident or illness, $7 to $12.50 a week may be drawn for as long a period as 52 weeks if necessary that sick benefits will be paid at the same rate, and that death from any cause will mean the prompt payment to the family of the deceased of $300 to $600.

At 65 years every employe will be able to retire on a pension practically equal to 50 per cent of the wages drawn at the time of retirement.

The company will itself provide and pay the pensions.

GAS KILLS MAN; CAT LIVES

Minneapolis Man Asphyxiated While Cat Is Found Asleep in Same Room, Unhurt.

Minneapolis.—William Crossmand, 50 years old, was found dead from gas poisoning at his home, 1506 Upton avenue, and indications are that life had been extinct three days.

Beneath the bed on which the body was found a cat asleep. The cat was easily roused, and Deputy Coroner C. A. Hobbs believes it must have been in the home for three days at least.

No opening was found through which the cat might have made its entrance.

Gas still was escaping from the kitchen range, and the dishes in the dining room showed that Crossmand must have been overcome while preparing a meal.

City Left Without Gas.

East Grand Forks.—Monday's fire, causing a $90,000 loss and destroying a portion of the De Mers avenue bridge between East Grand Forks and Grand Forks, has left this city without a gas supply. The mains from the Red River Power company, located in Grand Forks, were carried across the river beneath the bridge. Hundreds of East Grand Forks housekeepers have been compelled to resort to unusual methods of getting their meals.

Indorse Minneapolis Man.

Duluth, Dec. 30.—Earl W. Byer, chief clerk of the West Hotel, Minneapolis, will be the next president of the Greeters of America, the national organization of hotel clerks, if the undivided support of the Minnesota-Dakota Hotel Clerks' Association, which convened at the Spalding Hotel for a two days' session, can effect his election to the office. The delegates, 130 strong, in a formal resolution unanimously pledged themselves to further the candidacy of the popular Minneapolis man.

IS SECRETARY TO GOVERNOR

CHARLES M. ANDRIST,

Charles M. Andrist has been appointed secretary to Governor-elect Winfield S. Hammond. The new secretary is well known politically. Two years ago he sought the democratic nomination for governor, being defeated by Peter M. Ringdal. In the last campaign he was the party nominee for lieutenant governor and accompanied Mr. Hammond on most of his trips.

RAIL ACCIDENTS DECREASE

"Safety First" Measures Prove Worth, Judging From Report of Railroad Commissioner.

St. Paul, Jan. 2.—"Safety first" measures are already beginning to prove their worth, judging from the annual report of the Minnesota Railroad and Warehouse Commission. The effect of the precautionary rules which have been taken up by the railroads is forcefully indicated in the "Accidents" section of the report.

The number of lives lost resulting from the movement of trains during the year ending June 30, 1914, was sixteen less than for the previous years. Accidents also seem to have been lessened as the result of the "Safety first" teaching, the table showing a decrease of fifty-one during the year.

Along with the decrease in accidents and casualties the operating income of the Minnesota railroads took a drop of a little more than $6,000,000. But while the operating income was smaller, and the interest charges were higher, the dividends paid during the year show a decrease only a little over $2,000,000. Following is a summary of the commission's report:

"The total mileage of main line of railroads operating in the state of Minnesota on June 30, 1914, was 9,002.27, exclusive of terminal and transfer railways, an increase for the year 1914 of 54.56 miles.

"The total mileage of terminal and switching roads for 1914, was 121.90, an increase for 1914 of 7.55 miles.

"The gross increase in the railroad mileage of Minnesota, exclusive of terminal and switching roads, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, is 67.04 miles, with a decrease of 12.48 miles, making a net increase of 54.56 miles.

"The amount of capital stock outstanding for railroads reporting to this commission for their entire lines for the year ending June 30, 1914, was $1,453,951,121, and of funded debt $2,325,241,349, making a total of capital stock and funded debt of $3,779,192,470, an increase for the year of $134,696,891.

"The number of accidents to persons in the state of Minnesota resulting from the movement of trains and engines for the year ending June 30, 1914, as compared with the year ending June 30, 1913, show a decrease of sixteen killed and fifty-one injured The number of persons killed and injured from other causes other than from the movement of trains and engines show a decrease of four killed for the year 1914, as compared with 1913 and an increase of seventy injured for the year 1914, as compared with the previous year."

HAMMOND PRAISES WILSON

Minneapolis.—President Wilson was praised as the nation's bulwark against current world troubles, in a short talk Governor elect W. S. Hammond to the Minneapolis Rotary club at the Hotel Radisson. Mr. Hammond was the club's guest at luncheon, and was voted to honorary membership on motion of W. D. Gordon, who praised Mr. Hammond and wished him not only a successful career as governor, but later "at Washington."

The Coldest December.

Minneapolis.—The month just ended was the coldest December of 25 years' record in the Minneapolis weather bureau, according to a statement issued by Director U. G. Pursell. The temperature was below zero at some time during each of 14 days and the mean for the month was 2.1 above. The snow fall was 8.4 inches, but all light and dry. The coldest day in December was last Saturday, when the mercury dropped to 20 below and the warmest day was the first with 44 above recorded.

SCHOOL DESTROYED BY FIRE

Main Building at Stanley Hall Almost Total Wreck—Loss Is About $50,000.

Minneapolis.—Fire at Stanley hall, a school for girls, Pleasant avenue and Twenty-second street, almost totally destroyed the main school building. The loss is estimated at $50,000, fully insured. The third floor of the burned building was devoted to a dormitory, but the occupants are away for the holiday vacation.

Crackling of flames on the areaway just outside her window on the third floor of the home building led to the discovery of the fire by Mrs. Cleo Montanyee, housekeeper. Mrs. Montanye telephoned the fire department. Residents of the district are thought to have seen the fire before this time, but to have taken it for granted that an alarm had been turned in. Residents declare there was a long delay in the arrival of the companies. Fire department records show that a 1-11 alarm was turned in by District Chief E. F. Caldwell five minutes after the department was notified.

The blaze illuminated the district for blocks around. A general alarm was sent in soon after the arival of the first companies and as many as 20 lines of hose were laid in the fight to keep the fire from communicating to adjacent buildings.

The brick walls of the building are standing, but the roof is fallen and the building is practically in ruins. Fire burned off the third floor, devoted to the dormitory, and the second story, given to classrooms and the art museum. The first floor and basement dining room were heavily damaged by water. Five pianos were ruined by fire and water.

Miss Olive Evers, principal of the school, is making a holiday visit in Los Angeles and is expected to return next week. Miss Estelle Holbrook, assistant principal, in charge during Miss Evers' absence, lives directly across from the school. When the flames broke out Miss Holbrook and her niece, Dorothy Holbrook, and Miss Ruby Settle, attempted to get into the office on the first floor to save records, but were kept back by the firemen. Miss Holbrook said that ample quarters in which the 75 girls enrolled may continue their work will be provided and that classes will resume as scheduled on Jan. 5.

Defective electric wiring was the cause of the fire in the opinion of Thomas Flanders, janitor. He said there was no fire in the building after that in a small heater was extinguished about 8 a. m.

Going to the fire the engine of Company No. 9 swerved on the car tracks and threw two firemen to the frozen ground. Hugh McLeod, engineer, suffered a bad bruise on his leg and was taken home in an assistant chief's car. James Craigie, driver, also received painful bruises.

ASK REPEAL OF 2-CENT RATE

Railroads to Make Concerted Effort to Raise Passenger Rate to 2½ Cents a Mile.

Minneapolis, Dec. 31.—A concerted effort to raise the railway passenger rate to 2½ cents a mile will be made soon. Minnesota roads will present to the legislature a bill repealing the 2-cent law. All roads doing an interstate business will file notice of an increase to 2½ cents with the Interstate Commerce Commission about March 1.

This action, rail men declare, is the only means by which the railroads can be placed upon a sound operating basis. Decreased freight shipments resulting from general business depression over the whole country is said to have cut heavily into rail incomes and nearly all lines are declared to be losing money.

CONVENTION FOR ROCHESTER

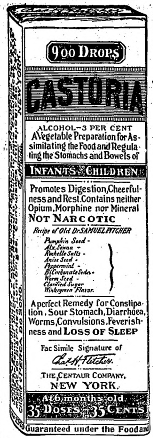
Hotel Clerks' Association Selects 1915 Meeting Place and Chooses New Officers.

Duluth.—C. A. Hine of Duluth, was unanimously elected president of the Minnesota-Dakota Hotel Clerks' association for the ensuing year. George Crocker of Minneapolis, was elected first vice president; James T. Rice of Minneapolis, second vice president; Roy Watson of Rochester, Minn., third vice president, and John Egan of Sioux Falls, fourth vice president. Earl W. Byer of Minneapolis, unanimously was re-elected secretary-treasurer. F. A. Sears of Rochester, was elected chairman of the board of governors of the association. Rochester landed the 1915 convention of the association.

St. Paul.—With a record of 3,077 marriage licenses issued, Ramsey county's wedding list exceeded that of any previous year by 209.

Governor at Charity Ball.

Winona.—With Governor and Mrs. A. O. Eberhart in attendance, Winona society danced for charity at the most brilliant party ever held here. The guests included many persons from different cities in the northwest. Walter J. Smith, state treasurer, and Mrs. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Boalt, and daughter Margaret, and Prentiss Bailey of St. Paul, and Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Crangle of Minneapolis, were among the guests. The ball was held at Masonic temple.



900 DROPS
CASTORIA
ALCOHOL—3 PER CENT
A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of
INFANTS CHILDREN
Promotes Digestion, Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral
NOT NARCOTIC
Recipe of Old Dr SAMUEL PITCHER
Pumpkin Seed
Alx. Senna
Rochelle Salts
Anise Seed
Peppermint
Bi Carbonate Soda
Worm Seed
Clarified Sugar
Wintergreen Flavor
A perfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP
Fac Simile Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.
THE CENTAUR COMPANY,
NEW YORK.
At 6 months old
35 DOSES 35 CENTS
Guaranteed under the Food and

Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of

Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over Thirty Years

CASTORIA

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

SPOHN'S DISTEMPER CURE

WORMS.

"Wormy", that's what's the matter of 'em. Stomach and intestinal worms. Nearly as bad as distemper. Cost you too much to feed 'em. Look bad—are bad. Don't physic 'em to death. Spohn's Cure will remove the worms, improve the appetite, and tone 'em up all round, and don't "physic." Acts on glands and blood. Full directions with each bottle, and sold by all druggists.

SPOHN MEDICAL CO., Chemists. Goshen, Ind., U. S. A.

Her Only Alternative.

"What! Is Helen sick?"

"Oh, no. Her skirts are so narrow she can't walk, her shoes are so narrow she can't stand, her corset so tight she can't sit, so she is lying down."—Humoristick Listy (Prague).

Ain't It the Truth?

"What kind of ships do we encounter on the voyage of life?" asked the propounder of silly questions.

"Hardships, mostly," replied the pessimistic person.

Cause of the Chill.

"But Captain Hawley," said the handsome Miss Plute coquettishly, "will you love me when I grow old and ugly?"

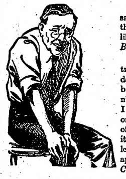
"My dear Miss Plute," answered the captain gallantly, "you may grow older, but you will never grow uglier."

And he wondered why their friendship ceased so suddenly.

What has become of the old-fashioned man who used to say there would never be any more big wars?

Rheumatism Sprains Lumbago Sciatica

Why grin and bear all these ills when Sloan's Liniment kills pain?



"I have used your Liniment and can say it is fine. I have used it for sore throat, strained shoulder, and it acted like a charm."—Allen Dunn, Route 1, Box 88, Pine Valley, Miss.

"I am a painter and paperhanger by trade, consequently up and down ladders. About two years ago my left knee became lame and sore. It pained me at nights at times till I could not rest, and I was contemplating giving up my trade on account of it when I chanced to think of Sloan's Liniment. I had never tried it before, and I am glad to state that less than one 25c. bottle fixed me up apparently as good as ever."—Charles C. Campbell, Florence, Texas.

SLOAN'S LINIMENT

All Dealers 25c.

Send four cents in stamps for a free TRIAL BOTTLE.

DR. EARL S. SLOAN, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa. Dept. B

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Canada is Calling You to her Rich Wheat Lands

—She extends to Americans a hearty invitation to settle on her FREE Homestead lands of 160 acres each or secure some of the low priced lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

This year wheat is higher but Canadian land just as cheap, so the opportunity is more attractive than ever. Canada wants you to help to feed the world by tilling some of her soil—land similar to that which during many years has averaged 20 to 45 bushels of wheat to the acre. Think what you can make with wheat around $1 a bushel and land so easy to get. Wonderful yields also of Oats, Barley and Flax. Mixed farming is fully as profitable an industry as grain growing.

The Government this year is asking farmers to put increased acreage into grain. Military service is not compulsory in Canada but there is a great demand for farm labor to replace the many young men who have volunteered for service. The climate is healthful and agreeable, railway facilities excellent, good schools and churches convenient. Write for literature and particulars as to reduced railway rates to Superintendent Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or to

R. A. GARRETT
311 Jackson Street, St. Paul, Minn.

Canadian Government Agent

"Good-By, Jack!"

By

Jack London

(Copyright by McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

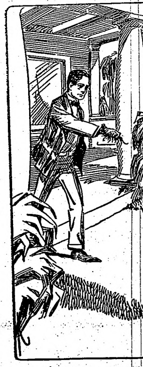
Hawaii is a queer place. Everything socially is what I may call topsy-turvy. Not but what things are correct. They are almost too much so. But still things are sort of upside down. The most ultraexclusive set there is the "Missionary Crowd." It comes with rather a shock to learn that in Hawaii the obscure, marytrdom-seeking missionary sits at the head of the table of the moneyed aristocracy. But it is true. The humble New Englanders who came out in the third decade of the nineteenth century, came for the lofty purpose of teaching the Kanakas the true religion, the worship of the only one genuine and undeniable God. So well did they succeed in this, and also in civilizing the Kanaka, that by the second or third generation he was practically extinct. This being the fruit of the seed of the Gospel, the fruit of the seed of the missionaries (the sons of the grandsons) was the possession of the islands themselves, of the land, the ports, the town sites, and the sugar plantations. The missionary who came to give the Bread of Life remained to gobble up the whole heathen feast.

But that is not the Hawaiian queerness I started out to tell. Only one cannot speak of things Hawaiian without mentioning the missionaries. There is Jack Kersdale, the man I wanted to tell about; he came of missionary stock. That is, on his grandfather's side. His grandfather was old Isaac Kersdale, a Yankee trader, who got his start for a million in the old days by selling cheap whisky and square-faced gin. There's another queer thing. The old missionaries and old traders were mortal enemies. You see, their interests conflicted. But their children made it up by intermarrying and dividing the islands between them.

Life in Hawaii is a song. That's the way Stoddard puts it in his "Hawaii Nei:"

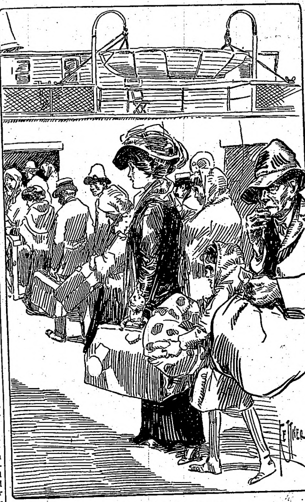
> Thy life is music—Fate the notes prolong!
> Each isle a stanza, and the whole a song.

And he was right. Flesh is golden there. The native women are sun-ripe Junos, the native men bronzed Apollos. They sing, and dance, and all are flower bejeweled and flower crowned. And, outside the rigid "Missionary Crown," the white men yield to the climate and the sun, and no matter how busy they may be, are prone to dance and sing and wear flowers behind their ears and in their hair. Jack Kersdale was one of these fellows. He was one of the busiest men I ever met. He was several times a millionaire. He was a sugar king, a coffee planter, a rubber pioneer, a cattle rancher, and a promoter of three out of every four new enterprises launched in the islands. He was a society man, a clubman, a yachtsman, a bachelor and withal as handsome a man as was ever doted upon by mammas with marriageable daughters. Incidentally, he had finished his education at Yale, and his head was crammed fuller with vital statistics and scholarly information concerning Hawaii Nei than any other islander I ever encountered. He turned off an immense amount of work, and he sang and danced and put flowers in his hair as immensely as any of the idlers.



"It Bit Him Twice—I Saw It."

He had grit, and had fought two duels—both political—when he was no more than a raw youth essaying his first adventures in politics. In fact, he played a most creditable and courageous part in the last revolution, when the native dynasty was overthrown; and he could not have been over sixteen at the time. I am pointing out that he was no coward in order that you may appreciate what happens later on. I've seen him in the breaking yard at the Haleakala ranch, conquering a four-year-old brute that for two years had defied the pick of Vcn Tempsky's cowboys. And I must tell of one other thing. It was down in Kona—or up, rather, for the Kona people scorn to live at less than a thousand feet elevation. We were on the lanai of Doctor Goodhue's bungalow. I was talking with Dottie Fairchild when it happened. A big centipede—it was seven inches, for we measured it afterward—fell from the rafters overhead squarely into her coiffure. I confess, the hideousness of it paralyzed me. I couldn't move. My mind refused to work. There, within two feet of me, the ugly venomous thing was writhing in her hair. It threatened at any moment to fall down upon her exposed shoulders—we had just come out from dinner.



It Was the Funeral Procession.

"What is it?" she asked, starting to raise her hand to her head.

"Don't!" I cried. "Don't!"

"But what is it?" she insisted, growing frightened by the fright she read in my eyes and on my stammering lips.

My exclamation attracted Kersdale's attention. He glanced our way carelessly, but in that glance took in everything. He came over to us, but without haste.

"Please don't move, Dottie," he said quietly.

He never hesitated, nor did he hurry and make a bungle of it.

"Allow me," he said.

And with one hand he caught her scarf and drew it tightly around her shoulders so that the centipede could not fall inside her bodice. With the other hand—the right—he reached into her hair, caught the repulsive abomination as near as he was able by the nape of the neck, and held it tightly between thumb and forefinger as he drew it from her hair. It was as horrible and heroic a sight as man could wish to see. It made my flesh crawl. The centipede, seven inches of squirming legs, writhed and twisted and dashed itself about his hand, the body turning around the fingers and the legs digging into the skin and scratching as the beast endeavored to free itself. It bit him twice—I saw it—though he assured the ladies that he was not harmed, as he dropped it upon the walk and stamped it into the gravel. But I saw him in the surgery five minutes afterward, with Doctor Goodhue scarifying the wounds and injecting permaganate of potash. The next morning Kersdale's arm was as big as a barrel, and it was three weeks before the swelling went down.

All of which has nothing to do with my story, but which I could not avoid giving in order to show that Jack Kersdale was anything but a coward. It was the cleanest exhibition of grit I have ever seen. He never turned a hair. The smile never left his lips. And he dived with thumb and forefinger into Dottie Fairchild's hair as gayly as if it had been a box of salted almonds. Yet that was the man I was destined to see stricken with fear a thousand times more hideous even than the fear that was mine when I saw the writhing abomination in Dottie Fairchild's hair, dangling over her eyes and the trap of her bodice.

I was interested in leprosy, and upon that, as upon every other island object, Kersdale had encyclopedic knowledge. In fact, leprosy was one of his hobbies. He was an ardent defender of the settlement at Molokai, where all the island lepers were segregated. There was much talk and feeling among the natives, fanned by the demagogues, concerning the cruelties of Molokai, where men and women, not alone banished from friends and family, were compelled to live in perpetual imprisonment until they died. There were no reprieves, no commutations of sentences. "Abandon hope" was written over the portal of Molokai.

"I'll tell you they are happy there," Kersdale insisted. "And they are infinitely better off than their friends and relatives who have nothing the matter with them. The horrors of Molokai are all poppycock. I can take you through any hospital or any slum in any of the great cities of the world and show you a thousand times worse horrors. The living death! The creatures that once were men! Bosh! You ought to see those living deaths racing horses on the Fourth of July. Some of them own boats. One has a gasoline launch. They have nothing to do but have a good time. Food, shelter, clothes, medical attendance, everything is theirs. They are wards of the territory. They have a much finer climate than Honolulu, and the scenery is magnificent. I shouldn't mind going down there myself for the rest of my days. It is a lovely spot."

So Kersdale on the joyous leper. He was not afraid of leprosy. He said so himself, and that there wasn't one chance in a million for him or any other white man to catch it, though he confessed afterward that one of his school chums, Alfred Staarter, had contracted it, gone to Molokai, and there died.

"You know, in the old days," Kersdale explained, "there was no certain test for leprosy. Anything unusual or abnormal was sufficient to send a fellow to Molokai. The result was that dozens were sent who were no more lepers than you or I. But they don't make that mistake now. The board of health tests are infallible. The funny thing is that when the test was discovered they immediately went down to Molokai and applied it, and they found a number who were not lepers. These were immediately deported. Happy to get away? They wailed harder at leaving the settlement than when they left Honolulu to go to it. Some refused to leave, and really had to be forced out. One of them even married a leper woman in the last stages and then wrote pathetic letters to the board of health, protesting against his expulsion on the ground that no one was so well able as he to take care of his poor wife."

"What is this infallible test?" I demanded.

"The bacteriological test. There is no getting away from it. Dr. Hervey—he's our expert, you know—was the first man to apply it here. He is a wizard. He knows more about leprosy than any living man, and if a cure is ever discovered, he'll be that discoverer. As for the test, it is very simple. They have succeeded in isolating the bacillus leprae and studying it. They know it now when they see it. All they do is to snip a bit of skin from the suspect and subject it to the bacteriological test. A man without any visible symptoms may be full of the leprosy bacilli."

"Then you or I, for all we know," I suggested, "may be full of it now."

Kersdale shrugged his shoulders and laughed.

"Who can say? It takes seven years for it to incubate. If you have any doubts go and see Doctor Hervey. He'll just snip out a piece of your skin and let you know in a jiffy."

Later on he introduced me to Doctor Hervey, who loaded me down with board of health reports and pamphlets on the subject, and took me out to Kalihi, the Honolulu receiving station, where suspects were examined and confirmed lepers were held for deportation to Molokai. These deportations occurred about once a month, when, the last good-bys said, the lepers were marched on board the little steamer, the Noeau, and carried down to the settlement.

One afternoon, writing letters at the club, Jack Kersdale dropped in on me.

"Just the man I want to see," was his greeting. "I'll show you the saddest aspect of the whole situation—the lepers wailing as they depart for Molokai. The Noeau will be taking them on board in a few minutes. But let me warn you not to let your feelings be harrowed. Real as their grief is, they'd wail a whole sight harder a year hence if the board of health tried to take them from Molokai. We've just time for a whisky and soda. I've a carriage outside. It won't take up five minutes to get down to the wharf."

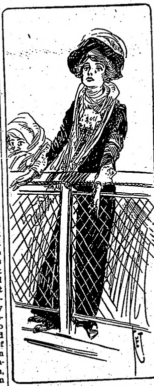
To the wharf we drove. Some forty sad wretches, amid their mats, blankets and luggage of various sorts, were squatting on the stringer piece. The Noeau had just arrived, and was making fast to a lighter that lay between her and the wharf. A Mr. McVeigh, the superintendent of the settlement, was overseeing the embarkation, and to him I was introduced, also to Doctor Georges, one of the board of health physicians whom I had already met at Kalihi. The lepers were a woebegone lot. But here and there I noticed fairly good-looking persons, with no apparent signs of the fell disease upon them. One, I noticed, a little white girl, not more than twelve, with blue eyes and golden hair. One cheek, however, showed the sign. On my remarking upon the sadness of her alien situation among the brown-skinned afflicted ones, Doctor Georges replied:

"Oh, I don't know. It's a happy day in her life. She comes from Kauai. Her father is a brute. And now that she has developed the disease, she is going to join her mother at the settlement. Her mother was sent down there three years ago—a very bad case."

"You can't always tell from appearances," Mr. McVeigh explained. "That man there, that big chap, who looks the pink of condition with nothing the matter with him, I happen to know, has a mark on his foot and another on his shoulder blade. Then there are others—there, see that girl's hand, the one who is smoking the cigarette. See her twisted fingers. That's the anesthetic form. It attacks the nerves. You could cut her fingers off with a dull knife, or rub them off on a nutmeg grater and she would not experience the slightest sensation."

"Yes, but that fine-looking woman, there," I persisted; "surely, there can't be anything the matter with her. She is too glorious and gorgeous altogether."

"A sad case," Mr. McVeigh answered over his shoulder, already turning away to walk down the wharf with Kersdale.



"Good-by, Jack! Good-by!"

She was a beautiful woman, and she was pure Polynesian. From my meager knowledge of the race and its types I could not but conclude that she had descended from old chief stock. She could not have been more than twenty-three or twenty-four. Her lines and proportions were magnificent, and she was just beginning to show the amplitude of the women of her race.

"It was a blow to all of us," Doctor Georges volunteered. "She gave herself up voluntarily, too. No one suspected. But somehow she had contracted the disease. It broke us all up, I assure you. We've kept it out of the papers, though. Nobody but ourselves and her family knows what has become of her. In fact, if you were to ask any man in Honolulu, he'd tell you it was his impression that she was somewhere in Europe. It was at her request that we've been so quiet about it."

"But who is she?" I asked. "Certainly, from the way you talk about her, she must be somebody."

"Did you ever hear of Lucy Mokunui?"

"Lucy Mokunui?" I repeated, haunted by some familiar association. I shook my head. "It seems to me I've heard the name, but I've forgotten it."

"Never heard of Lucy Mokunui! The Hawaiian nightingale! I beg pardon. Of course you are a malahini (newcomer) and could not be expected to know. Well, Lucy Mokunui was the best beloved of Honolulu—of all Hawaii, for that matter."

"You say 'was,'" I interrupted.

"And I mean it. She is finished." He shrugged his shoulders pityingly. "A dozen haoles—I beg your pardon, white men—have lost their hearts to her at one time or another. And I'm not counting in the ruck. The dozen I refer to were haoles of position and prominence.

"She could have married the son of the chief justice if she'd wanted to. You think she's beautiful, eh? But you should hear her sing. Finest native woman singer in Hawaii Nei. Her throat is pure silver and melted sunshine. We adored her. She toured America first with the Royal Hawaiian band. After that she made two more trips on her own account—concert work."

"Oh!" I cried. "I remember now. I heard her two years ago at the Boston Symphony. So that is she. I recognize her now."

I was oppressed by a heavy sadness. Life was a futile thing at best. A short two years and this magnificent creature at the summit of her magnificent success was one of the leper squad awaiting deportation to Molokai.

I recoiled from my own future. If this awful fate fell to Lucy Mokunui what might not my lot be—or anybody's lot? I was thoroughly aware that in life we are in the midst of death—but to be in the midst of a living death, to die and not be dead, to be one of that draft of creatures that once were men, aye, and women, like Lucy Mokunui, the epitome of all Polynesian charms, an artist as well, and well beloved of men—

I am afraid I must have betrayed my perturbation, for Dr. Georges hastened to assure me that they were very happy down in the settlement.

It was all too inconceivably monstrous. I could not bear to look at her. A short distance away, behind a stretched rope guarded by a policeman, were the lepers' relatives and friends. They were not allowed to come near. There were no last embraces, no kisses of farewell. They called back and forth to one another—last messages, last words of love, last reiterated instructions. And those behind the rope looked with terrible intensity. It was the last time they would behold the faces of their loved ones, for they were the living dead, being carted away in the funeral ship to the graveyard of Molokai.

Doctor Georges gave the command, and the unhappy wretches dragged themselves to their feet and under their burdens of luggage began to stagger across the lighter and aboard the steamer. It was the funeral procession. At once the wailing started from those behind the rope. It was blood curdling; it was heartrending. I never heard such woe, and I hope never to again. Kersdale and McVeigh were still at the other end of the wharf, talking earnestly; politics, of course, for both were head over heels in that particular game. When Lucy Mokunui passed me, I stole a look at her. She was beautiful. She was beautiful by our standards, as well—one of those rare blossoms that occur but once in generations. And she, of all women, was doomed to Molokai. She walked like a queen, across the lighter, straight on board, and aft on the open deck where the lepers huddled by the rail, wailing, now, to their dear ones on shore.

The lines were cast off, and the Noeau began to move away from the wharf. The wailing increased. Such grief and despair! I was just resolving that never again would I be a witness to the sailing of the Noeau, when McVeigh and Kersdale returned. The latter's eyes were sparkling, and his lips could not quite hide the smile of delight that was his. Evidently the politics they had talked had been satisfactory. The rope had been flung aside, and the lamenting relatives now crossed the stringer piece on either side of us.

"That's her mother," Dr. Georges whispered, indicating an old woman next to me, who was rocking back and forth and gazing at the steamer rail out of tear-blinded eyes. I noticed also that Lucy Mokunui was also wailing. She stopped abruptly and gazed at Kersdale. Then she stretched forth her arms in that adorable, sensuous way that was her very own. And with arms outspread, she cried:

"Good-by, Jack! Good-by!"

He heard the cry, and looked. Never was a man overtaken by more crushing fear. He reeled on the stringer piece, his face went white to the roots of his hair, and he seemed to shrink and wither inside his clothes. He threw up his hands and groaned, "My God! My God!" Then he controlled himself by a great effort.

"Good-by, Lucy! Good-by!" he called.

And he stood there on the wharf, waving his hands to her till the Noeau was clear away and the faces lining her afterrail were vague and indistinct.

"I thought you knew," said McVeigh, who had been regarding him curiously. "You, of all men, should have known. I thought that was why you were here."

"I know now," Kersdale answered with immense gravity. "Where's the carriage?"

He walked rapidly—half ran—to it. I had to half run myself to keep up with him.

"Drive to Doctor Hervey," he told the driver. "Drive as fast as you can."

He sank down in the seat, panting and gasping. The pallor of his face had increased. His lips were compressed and the sweat was standing out on his forehead and upper lip. He seemed in some horrible agony.

"For God's sake, Martin, make those horses go!" he broke out suddenly.

The Faces Lining Her Afterrail Were Vague and Indistinct.

"Lay the whip into them! Do you hear? Lay the whip into them!"

"They'll break, sir," the driver remonstrated.

"Let them break," Kersdale answered. "I'll pay your fine and square you with the police. Put it to them. That's right. Faster! Faster!

"And I never knew, I never knew," he muttered, sinking back in the seat and with trembling hands wiping the sweat away.

The carriage was bouncing, swaying and lurching around corners at such a wild pace as to make conversation impossible. Besides, there was nothing to say. But I could hear him muttering over and over:

"And I never knew! I never knew!"

SUBJECT SOON DISPOSED OF

Young Girl's Terse Comment on Youth Short and Very Much to the Point.

They were young and happy and well dressed. When they climbed on the car, two men rose to give them seats. They had a great deal to talk about, and their conversation was very interesting in its absolute disregard of things serious and important, and its apparent satisfaction with itself, the Indianapolis News remarks. Very few conversations are entirely satisfactory to themselves. There may be a lack of understanding or symptoms of being bored on the one side, or limitation of expression or tiresome garrulity on the other side. There was perfect understanding, no limitation of expression and nothing to be bored about in this particular conversation. And it was very easy to understand. Perhaps it would not be fair to tell about everything they said, and it was nobody's business anyway. It really was what they did not say that was important and worth telling. The one in the midnight blue suit trimmed in monkey fur was talking about somebody, very properly a young man.

"He writes the craziest letters," she said, "all about war and politics." And the other one, who had on a plum colored broadcloth—plum is a very expensive color this year and therefore very popular—the other one sniffed and took out her vanity box and mirror to see that she had sniffed none of the powder off her nose.

"Oh, well," she replied, "he's just as happy as if he had good sense."

Truly, it was a marvelous way of disposing of things like politics and wars, and so reasonable and satisfactory a method to them that it made the rest of us, who were reading the papers and wondering what on earth we were going to do about everything, feel very much ashamed of the young man who wrote the crazy letters and a little foolish and ashamed of ourselves.

Easy.

"I would like to go on the stump this campaign," said the candidate, "I wish I could acquire a flow of language."

"Why don't you try stepping on a tack?" advised the friend.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. XIV. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, JANUARY 15, 1915 NO. 44.

THE LOCAL NEWS

Andrew Feland is running a portable harness shop now days, repairing farm harnesses.

Several of the Mayfield farmers are hauling out their summer's supply of fire wood from the banks of Red Lake River this week.

Some of the ox driving farmers are exchanging their oxen for horses this winter, so as to do a little faster farming next year.

We extend thanks to a number of our subscribers for subscription paid the last week, and we hope to hear from more next week, as we need the money to pay our bills.

A large sized timber wolf leisurely passed by this way yesterday, and stopped to play with dogs along the road. So tame was he that he was mistaken for a dog that got astray, until he was out of gun shot distance.

STRAYED: From my farm, on section 35, town of Kratka, about October 1st, one two year old light roan heifer, with horns. Any information that will lead to her recovery will be rewarded.

Wm. H. Quirk,
Sunbeam, Minn

We sent in a list of names to the Farm, Stock and Home yesterday, of paying subscribers to THE SUNBEAM, to be placed on their mailing list with one years subscription paid. Remember that you get that paper and this one for the price of $1.00 a year. Look up the statement sent you, and remit the amount due to this office, and you receive Farm, Stock and Home one year absolutely free.

There is to be a meeting at the Erie Hall next Wednesday to talk about the consolidation of schools. The meeting is to be addressed by Rural School Inspector, C. J. Swain of St. Paul, and C. G. Selvig, of the University of Crookston. There is not much use to talk about consolidation of schools in this end of the county until we can get bridges across Red Lake River, and the first step to take is to get the river declared unnavigable.

There seems to be an effort being made by some of the people of Thief River Falls to prevent the Electric Railroad from continuing to enter that city by way of Davis Avenue. We have often heard of streets being vacated to make terminals for railroads, but we never heard of a street being vacated by a railroad for the benefit of the public. There is undoubtedly two sides to this question, but from the outside, that is up this way, we would like to continue to go into our county seat by rail, and arrive just opposite of the Soo depot.

Sheriff Fellman, of Red Lake county made a visit to the La Counte home in Mayfield township, on Wednesday, and arrested Joseph La Counte for some offense committed in Red Lake county. Joe seems to have a habit of getting into the clutches of the law quite often, but it appears that he goes outside of his own county to commit his offenses, as the Pennington county officials have not been called upon to make any expense for the tax payers of this county so far. However there is a woman in delicate condition, and six young children that will have to be looked after by the town of Mayfield, during the absence of Joe.

Fine weather this!

Mrs. Gunder Asbjonson visited with Mrs. Grunde Austad Sunday.

Bosses of Mail Service.

When the farmers of Mayfield township attempted to get a little better mail service last winter, the postmaster at Rheda bitterly opposed it, giving as a reason that it would cause his mail to lay over at Sunbeam post office. The main reason for his opposition was that it would cut off the revenue of "my son Stephen" at Kratka post office, and by careful manipulation and deception they got the proposed improvement in mail service turned down, and the people side tracked of the town of Mayfield onto a stub line with mail service only twice a week, while the people of Deer Park township and Hickory township got a daily mail service, with the routes so arranged, as to throw nearly all the cancellation into the Rhoda post office, where the worthy sire of the worthy son at Kratka post office would get all the cancellation.

But right, honor and integrity usually triumphs over trickery, lying and deceit, and the "gang" begin to discover that the lines of justice and equality are beginning to be drawn around them. Now what do they want to do?

They see that the people of Mayfield and southern Highlanding townships are justly entitled to as good mail service as the people in the towns above mentioned, so they propose a mail service to run through Mayfield township from Sunbeam to Rhoda, this would leave all the people's mail on this route lay over at Sunbeam post office, and the worthy sire at Rhoda would get the cancellation that the worthy son at Kratka lost.

If the people of Mayfield township would accept that kind of service, "I would have mine boy Stephen write them about it. De post-office department does just vat my boy Stephen says, you know."

But where would be their petition from the people for such a route? None at all would come from any man that got any mail over that route, as it would make all their mail lay over at Sunbeam post office.

NEW SCHOOL DISTRICT.

T. G. Rome, and others are petitioning for a new school district to be composed of parts of the Swanson district with some from the Mayfield district, and some from this, the Highlanding district. There are nineteen children of school age in the district, that have no other school within reasonable distance, and particulary those of this district who have to cross Red Lake River to get to school. We do not know as yet what opposition there will be to it, but as for us, who are a tax payer we would not go on record as trying to deprive the farmer's children of schools in order to save a few dollars taxes.

EAT

When you are

AT GOODRIDGE, Call at the Goodridg Restaurant and get A cup of HOT COFFEE, or a good warm dinner for 25 cents. Don't forget the sign of

EAT

BARBER SHOP IN CONNECTION

STEPHENSON ECS. Prop.

LUMBER AND BUILDING MATERIALS.

When you get ready to build, come in and let us figure your bill and show you our stock of lumber and building materials.

Complete stocks at Thief River Falls, Mavie and Goodridge, Minn.

WINTON NICHOLS LUMBER COMPANY.

Go to S. P. Johnson, at Oklee

"The Right Place"

Boys Suits from $1.25, to $4.50 per suit. Mens suits, former price $25 00, Now selling for $16.00. $15.00 suits now selling for $8.50

$8.50 suits now selling for $4.50.

Men's shoes from $1.25 to $3.50. Former price $4 00 now $3.25.

Ladies shoes $1.50 to $3.00.

Prints 5 cents per yard. Gingham 8 cents to 10 cents per yard. All Dry Goods at cost. Men's Caps goes at any price. Sugar for this week is $6.00 per 100 lbs. Good coffee for 18 cents to 30 cents a pound. Bargains in all kind of goods.

S. P. JOHNSON, Oklee, Minn.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Three Hundred Ninety Five, and 73—100 ($395.73) Dollars, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by Manuel Niemi and Ida Niemi, his wife, mortgagors, to the Merchants State Bank of Red Lake Falls, mortgagee, bearing date the 15th. day of March 1913, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Pennington, and State of Minnesota on the 26th day of April 1913 at 9:00 o'clock A. M, in Book 1 of mortgages on page 475.

NOW THEREFORE, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, VIZ:

The North West quarter of South East quarter (N W ¼ of S E ¼) and East half of South East quarter (E ½ of S E ¼) of Section thirty-four (34) and North West quarter of South West quarter (N W ¼ of S W ¼) of Section thirty five (35) in Township one hundred fifty two (152) North, of Range thirty nine (39) West of the 5th. Principal Meridian in Pennington County, and the State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Pennington County at the front door of the court house in the City of Thief River Falls in said County and State on the 27th day of February A. D. 1915 at 10:00 o'clock A. M. of that day at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt of Three Hundred Ninety Five and 73—100 [$395.73] Dollars and the taxes, if any, on said premises and Twenty Five [$25.00] Dollars attorney's fees as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law:

Dated January 9th. 1915

John C. Mathews,
Attorney for Mortgagee,
Red Lake Falls, Minn.

Merchants State Bank of
Red Lake Falls
J. A. Duffy,
Cashier

Pleasant Rehearsal.

Fair Amateur. The curtain will rise in a few minutes. Are you quite sure you know your words? Hero—Yes: all except the part where I kiss you. We'd better rehearse that again.

Tommy's Question.

Tommy—Papa, when a thing is bought it goes to the buyer, doesn't it? Tommy's Papa—Yes, my son. Tommy—Then how is it that when you buy coal it goes to the cellar?

THE PRICHARD Co.

Thief River Falls Minn.

DEALERS IN LUMBER AND FARM MACHIERY.

Located west of the new Soo Depot. Give us a call, and look over our stock of Lumber and Farm Machinery.

H. O. KJOMME
Attorney and Counselor at Law
COUNTY ATTORNEY
Mcginn Block
Thief River Falls, — — Minn.

Wilhelm Michelet
U. S. COMMISSIONER
COURT HOUSE
THIEF RIVER FALLS,
MINN.

Corrected.

Teacher—Earl, did you whisper today? Earl—Yes; wunst. Teacher—Clarence, should Earl have said "wunst?" Clarence—No; he should have said "twicet."—Everybody's.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Jan. 1st, 1915.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minnesota Dec. 29th 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Charles O. Asp. of Kratka, Minn. who on August 24th 1908, made Homestead Entry No, 0474, for S. E. ¼ Section 33, Township 153 N. Range 41 W. Fifth, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 13th day of February 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses: Ole S. Breiland, Ole A. Hoidahl, Kettel Brekke, Dreng O. Roisland, all of Kratka, Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

PETER M RINGDAL,
Register.

Cuts, Burns,

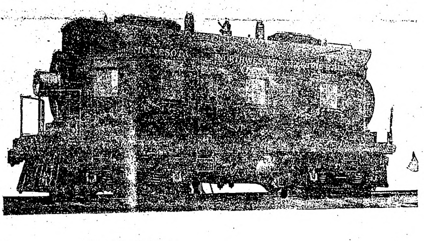
Bruises, Sores, Wounds and Piles quickly healed with Arnica Salve. It prevents infection, is antiseptic, soothing, healing. Try it once. Money Back If It Fails. The Original and Genuine.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve

Heals the Hurt

All Druggists and Dealers, 25c.

Minnesota Northwestern Electric Railway Co.



TIME TABLE

Going East

Train No. 1.

LEAVE—Thief River Falls at 7:15 A. M.
Silverton at 7:40 A. M.
Mavie at 8:05 A. M.
ARRIVE—Goodridge at 8:30 A. M.

Train No. 5.

LEAVE—Thief River Falls at 10:00 A. M.
Silverton at 11:10 A. M.
Mavie at 11:40 A. M.
ARRIVE-Goodridge at 12:10 A. M.

Train No. 3.

LEAVE-Thief River Falls at 3:45 P. M.
Silverton at 4:10 P. M.
Mavie at 4:35 P. M.
ARRIVE-Goodridge at 5:00 P. M.

Going West

To Thief River Falls

Train No. 2

LEAVE--Goodridge at 8:45 A. M.
Mavie at 9:10 A. M.
Silverton at 9:35 A. M
ARRIVE--Thief River Falls at 10:00 A. M.

Train No. 6.

LEAVE--Goodridge at 1:45 P. M
Mavie at 2:15 P. M.
Silverton at 2:45 P. M.
ARRIVE--Thief River Falls at 3:30 P. M.

Train No. 4.

LEAVE--Goodridge at 5:15 P. M.
Mavie at 5:40 P. M.
Silverton at 6:05 P. M.
ARRIVE--Thief River Falls at 6:30 P. M.

Cash For Hides and Furs.

If you have Hides or Furs for sale, bring them to the Oklee meat market and get the highest market price in cash.

Meat Market,
Oklee, Minn.

Great Expectations.

"I expect to be rich some day."

"That so? Somebody likely to leave you money?"

"That's it exactly. You don't suppose I expect to earn a fortune, do you?"—Detroit Free Press.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

A fool's heart is in his tongue, but a wise man's tongue is in his heart.—Quarles.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists. Price 75c per bottle.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Salzer's White Bonanza Oats.

Made C. J. Johnson of Lincoln Co., Minn., famous in growing 243 bushels from 2½ bushels sown last spring. Can you beat that in 1915? Wont you try?

This great Oat has taken more prizes and given bigger and larger yields throughout the United States than any Oat known. It's enormously prolific. Just the Oat for Iowa, Minn., Wis., Ill., Ind., Mich., Ohio, Neb., Pa., N. Y., Kansas and Missouri.

We are America's headquarters for
Alfalfa and Potatoes
Timothy, Clovers and Farm Seeds.

For 10c in Postage

We gladly mail our Catalog and sample package of Ten Famous Farm Seeds, including Speltz, "The Cereal Wonder;" Rejuvenated White Bonanza Oats, "The Prize Winner;" Billion Dollar Grass; Teosinte, the Silo Filler, etc., etc.

Or Send 12c

And we will mail you our big Catalog and six generous packages of Early Cabbage, Carrot, Cucumber, Lettuce, Radish, Onion—furnishing lots and lots of juicy delicious Vegetables during the early Spring and Summer.

Or send to John A. Salzer Seed Co., Box 717, La Crosse, Wis., twenty cents and receive both above collections and their big catalog.

LITTLE PARABLE OF LIFE

Aptly Compared to Journey Through Comfortable Passage Leading to One Small Room.

I will tell you a little parable. Each life is like a wonderful castle, with hundreds of mysterious rooms. Through the whole expanse of that castle runs a broad, comfortable passage—ultimately leading to the small room that contains an honored and peaceful deathbed. . . .

If you would be safe, you must stay in this passage. You must pass by without opening them the hundreds of alluring doors. You must pass without following them the secret winding stairs leading up or down to unknown places—

You will never know all you really own. You will never see the festive hall with its brilliant revels, nor the taper-lit chapel with its mystic ecstasies—you will never find the hidden chamber with its lotus joys, nor the romantic balcony with its bizarre assemblage—you will never reach the tiny tower room with its view across land and sea and up into the skies . . . And you will never see the dark cells where weird things are kept—nor the ghastly dungeon deep down below the ground, where one lies sobbing and bleeding and broken, and whence there is no returning.

I have opened many a door in my castle—said Christine—and I fear I shall never find my way back to the broad, comfortable passage.—Smart Set.

Came Natural.

Bacon—They say that president of the bank who got away with a lot of the money began his career as janitor of the institution.

Egbort—Never forgot his early training to clean out the bank, evidently.

Very Likely.

"I wonder why it is that the man who marries in haste is usually supposed to repent at leisure?"

"Because that kind of man wouldn't have brains enough to do it all at once, of course."

The Meat of Wheat

The average yearly consumption of wheat in the United States is nearly six bushels for every man, woman and child.

But—

Much of the nutriment of the wheat is lost because the vital mineral salts stored by Nature under the bran-coat are thrown out to make flour white.

In making

Grape-Nuts FOOD

of choice wheat and malted barley, all the nutriment of the grains, including the mineral values necessary for building sturdy brain, nerve and muscle, is retained.

Everywhere Grape-Nuts food has proven a wonderful energizer of brain and brawn, and you may be sure

"There's a Reason"

GERMANS MAKE FURIOUS NIGHT ATTACK ON FOE

ENDEAVOR TO BREAK THE FRONT OF ADVANCING FRENCH LEGIONS ALONG THE AISNE RIVER.

TEUTONS LOSE 2,000 IN BATTLE IN SINGLE DAY

Battles of Greatest Savagery Are Now Raging for Possession of Two Towns of Highly Strategic Value — Steinbach and Burnhaupt in Alsace.

London, Jan. 12.—A dispatch to the Daily Express from Boulogne asserts that confirmation has been obtained of the rumors that the Germans have evacuated Lille and that the city is now virtually in the possession of the British.

Paris, Jan. 12.—Spirited night attacks by the Germans, interspersed with terrific cannonades, in an effort to break the front of the advancing French legions in the most furious fighting of the entire line, along the Aisne, in Champagne and in the Argonnes were recorded in the official statement just issued by the French war office.

Surrender by the Germans of a field fort to the north of La Ferte de Beausejour, in Champagne, with the capture by the French of a line of trenches from which the Germans were routed in a violent engagement to the west of the fort, was the most important success reported in the statement.

Germans Lose 2,000.

The Echo de Paris states that General von Heeringen, commanding the German center, lost 2,000 in killed, wounded and prisoners in the battle of Perthes les Hurlus in one day. Since then the German counter attacks have been equally furious and it is believed their losses by this time may have reached double that number.

The Germans continue their efforts to regain their lost ground on the Plateau of Vregny, to the north of Soissons, along the Aisne, but their counter attacks were futile. They repeated their bombardment of the town of Soissons when driven back from the entrenched positions.

Attempts during the night to drive the French back from their advanced positions in front of Perthes and to the north of Le Ferte Beasusejour were repulsed, while in the Argonne region the kaiser's troops made a drive at Fontaine Madame and at St. Hubert, but both efforts were repulsed in this same region the German gunboats bombarded Le Four de Paris, but the reply of the French was doubly effective. Not only were the German guns silenced but a blockhouse occupied by their sharp shooters was demolished.

Stop Counter Attacks.

Counter attacks delivered by the Germans against Hill Number 263 to the west of Boureuilles have ceased so far as active operations of their infantry is concerned, but a lively cannonade was maintained throughout the night, not only against the height but also against the canal of Meurissons upon the banks of which the French maintain strong defensive works.

Artillery activity is still pronounced in Belgium and the northeastern corner of France, but the rains and the floods due to the breaking of the Lys from its banks have made impossible any extensive operations of foot troops. Near Rheims in the Argonne, on the heights of the Meuse and in the forests of Apremont artillery duels continue with the advantage generally on the side of the French Creusot guns.

Savage Battle in Alsace.

Alsace still holds attention as the source of greatest interest in the operations on this front. Any gains here arouse the greatest enthusiasm among the population of Paris which is watching with keen anxiety the progress of General Pau in reclaiming the "Lost Province."

Battles of the greatest savagery are now raging for the possession of two towns of highly strategic value—Steinbach and Burnhaupt. Both towns have been won and lost several times and reinforcements have now been brought up by both commanders for the supreme effort which shall determine the mastery of this difficult situation.

Former Steel Magnate Dies.

Johnstown, Pa., Jan. 11.—Charles S. Price, 62, former president of the Cambria Steel company, died at his home here.

Celebrate Peace Centenary.

New Orleans, Jan. 11.—The unveiling on Chalmette battlefield, the scene of the last encounter between the United States and Great Britain, of a monument to General Andrew Jackson, was the climax of the first day's celebration here of the centenary of peace between English speaking nations. Andrew J. Peters, assistant secretary of the treasury and personal representative of President Wilson, and H. T. Hunt-Carew, British consul here, representing King George, participated in the ceremonies.

BELGIANS BEG U. S. FOR FOOD

DECLARE AMERICA SAVED THEM FROM STARVING.

Inhabitants Will Pay Back in Industry After the War, Asserts Louvain Burgomaster.

Brussels, via London, Jan. 9.—"If the United States had not come to our aid it would have meant starvation for most of us," said Alfred Nerincx, provisional burgomaster of Louvain.

"We are willing to work, but we cannot when the doors are closed to exports. We cannot buy food, even if we have the money, when the doors are closed to imports. It is no fault of ours if we starve. Feed us now and we will pay you back in industry when the war is over.

Bread Americanizes Belgians.

"We are paying back now in gratitude for the lives America has saved—gratitude which will endure as proof that human affection is stronger than any treaty alliance.

"Here in the midst of the ruins of my town I do not lose heart. I know we shall rebuild all, if only we can have food to keep us alive. The most powerful army in the world cannot Teutonize Belgium; but America, armed with bread, is Americanizing Belgium. My worst fear is that there will be bread riots if the relief stops."

M. Nerincx said the population of Louvain was only 3,000 less than before the German occupation. The people whose homes had been burned are living with their neighbors. The burgomaster said he was giving work to the idle by having them clean the streets and repair houses which can be made habitable.

MEETS MEXICAN OFFICIALS

General Hugh L. Scott Confers With Villa and Maytorena on Border Situation.

El Paso, Texas, Jan. 11.—General Hugh L. Scott, General Francisco Villa and Governor Maytorena of Sonora met in a conference preliminary to a series of conferences, planned in an effort to reach a solution of the problem of protecting residents of American border towns from the bullets of belligerents on the Mexican side.

The United States army chief of staff and the Mexican leaders met in the United States immigration station at the American end of one of the international bridges spanning the Rio Grande between El Paso and Juarez. No official statement was given out except that the first meeting was "cordial," and that it would be continued soon.

Villa was accompanied to El Paso by his entire staff and Scott by his chief of staff, Lieutenant Colonel R. E. L. Michie; George C. Carothers, representing the state department, acting as interpreter.

General Villa and Scott chatted for less than an hour. The meeting was accomplished as secretly as possible.

ROADS PLAN IMPROVEMENTS

Railways to Spend $10,000,000 for Locomotives and Cars, as Result of Rate Increase.

Chicago, Jan. 9.—Equipment plans embracing orders placed or pending for seventy-two locomotives, 195,000 tons of steel, and 8,500 cars of various types have been announced by three railroads. The estimated expenditure is approximately $10,000,000.

It is said that the proposed improvements are the direct result of the recent freight rate increase allowed by the Interstate Commerce Commission and that other orders for new equipment will follow shortly.

The Baltimore & Ohio the Pennsylvania, and the Chicago, St. Louis & New Orleans, are the roads now placing orders or receiving bids.

The Baltimore & Ohio has placed contracts for 2,000 freight cars, involving an expenditure of between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000. Options have been taken on an additional 2,000 freight cars and the road is said to be in the market for 25,000 tons of steel.

Forts Face Italian Frontier.

Geneva, Switzerland, via Paris, Jan. 11.—A dispatch from Innsbruck says a German army corps has arrived at Salzburg and that Austria had begun to fortify the line of Brixon-Meran-Bozen-Trente, facing the Italian frontier. A number of batteries have been brought from Innsbruck and cement platforms are being laid down and roads re-made under the supervision of German and Austrian army officers.

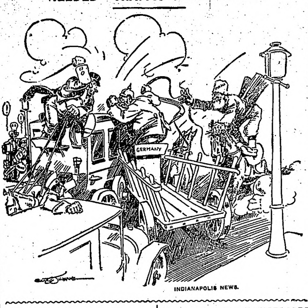
Sends Protest to Italy.

Milan, via London, Jan. 11.—The Secolo asserts that Count Leopold von Berchtold, Austrian minister of foreign affairs, has sent a note to Italy protesting against the Italian occupation of Avlona, Albania, and that Baron Sydney Sonnini, Italian minister of foreign affairs, has sent a firm reply.

Women Elect Saloonkeeper.

Chicago, Jan. 11.—Members of the Women's Democratic club of the Second ward, who recently advertised in newspapers for an aldermanic candidate of "constructive ability, a clean, respectable citizen, a friend of woman suffrage, a leader, not a follower, and a possessor of horse sense," have elected a saloonkeeper as their choice. Albert Russell, the candidate awarded the support of the club, already had received the indorsement of the men's Democratic organization of the ward

NEEDED—TRAFFIC REGULATION



INDIANAPOLIS NEWS.

GREAT BRITAIN TO INTERFERE ONLY WHEN NECESSARY

FRIENDLY NOTE IS STRUCK IN PRELIMINARY REPLY TO COMMUNICATION FROM UNITED STATES.

DOCUMENT MADE PUBLIC BY MUTUAL AGREEMENT

Officials of Washington Government Construe Statement as Conceding Principles Expressed by American Note Were Upheld by International Law.

Washington, Jan. 12.—Great Britain's reply to the note from the United States government requesting an improvement in the treatment of American commerce by the British fleet, has been made public here and in London by mutual agreement between the State Department and the British Foreign Office. The communication concurs in the view of the United States that commerce between neutral nations should be interfered with only when imperatively necessary.

United States Principles Upheld.

Officials of the Washington government construe this statement as conceding that the principles expressed by the American note were just and upheld by the previously accepted usages of international law. The only formal comment made was contained in a brief statement issued by Secretary Bryan. He said:

"This answer being preliminary and not intended as a complete reply, we will postpone comment until the full answer is received."

England to Make Redress.

Briefly, the British note, while conceding the principles of the American government's contentions, points out difficulties in actual practice, refers to alleged fraudulent practices by shippers, and cites statistics showing an increase rather than a decrease in certain neutral commerce in support of Great Britan's suspicion that Germany and Austria have been indirectly obtaining contraband through neutral countries.

The note promises that Great Britain will make redress whenever the action of the British fleet "may unintentionally exceed the limits" of international law.

HOLDS SOLDIERS FOR MURDER

Canadian Authorities Arrest Militiamen in Connection With Shooting of American Hunters.

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 11.—A provincial constable, a corporal and two privates have been arrested at Fort Erie on warrants issued at the instance of the attorney general of the Province of Ontario, charging them with manslaughter in connection with the death of Walter Smith and the wounding of Charles Dorsch, American citizens at Fort Erie, on Dec. 2 last. The men were held without bail.

Honor Liege Defenders.

Paris, Jan. 11.—A bust of General Leman, the defender of Liege, who is now a prisoner of the Germans, was crowned with a wreath of laurel in the presense of representatives of the French and Belgian government and 5,000 spectators in the Trocadero.

Bread Prices May Go Up.

Washington, Jan. 11.—Department of Justice officials have expressed interest in reports that the price of a loaf of bread was about to jump from 5 to 6 cents in New York and other large cities. No complaints had reached the department, however, and no action is in immediate prospect. Attorney General Gregory has kept a close watch upon any efforts to raise the cost of living through combinations in any line, and it is considered certain that a rise in bread would be looked into at once.

U. S. PROSPERITY INCREASES

WAR PROVIDES CASH MARKET AT HIGHEST PRICES.

Hopeful Feature of Situation is Placing of Heavy Shipment Orders by Railroads.

Chicago, Jan. 12.—The Chicago Herald prints the following:

Signs continue to multiply that business and industrial activity in the United States is steadily mounting on a material basis. The European war, of course, is the principal cause, in that it provides a cash market, at highest prices, for everything, except luxuries, that the United States has to sell.

Aside from this steady and growing demand for foodstuffs, clothing, all forms of leather, steel, copper, horses and mules, the most hopeful feature of the situation is the placing of heavy equipment orders by the railroads Since the Eastern rate increase was granted, orders for rolling stock, rails and other supplies aggregating $6,670,000 have been placed and bids are in the market for approximately $10,000,000 additional. In connection with this sign of business revival, comes the announcement from various directions of the re-employment of more than 40,000 men in steel mills, railroad shops and kindred industries.

Cotton Exports Increase.

Lumber and cotton, the two industries which suffered severely during the depression, have also shown marked improvement. Sales of the former for export amounting to more than $2,000,000 are reported in Kansas City. Exports of cotton are increasing and the fact that the $100,000,000 loan fund has been called upon to do duty only in the most insignificant proportions would indicate that the South is rapidly solving its own financial problems.

Exportations of grain and other food stuffs keep up to the recent high levels and the call for war supplies continues large, despite the fact that many things have been added to the list of contraband

The trade balance with Europe is growing rapidly in favor of this country, all pressing foreign indebtedness has been liquidated and gold is at our command for the asking.

All Sections Gain in Confidence.

Letters received from various sections of the country last week tell of gaining confidence and gradual growth of business, although the element of caution predominates in practically all of these communications.

Throughout the great West where farmers have derived huge returns from bountiful crops and high prices, there is unprecedented cheerfulness, and this sentiment is beginning to permeate the spots where less optimism has prevailed.

Money is abundant and growing cheaper all over the country. Credits at the banks are open to the business men and their limitations are wide, while the reserve system allays all fear of monetary stringency in the future.

The Pennsylvania Railroad company has arranged to bring out a $100,000,000 bond issue in March. The St. Paul railroad offering of $29,141,300 bonds reflects a substantial program of new construction.

Pittsburg steel found no difficulty in selling $5,000,000 bonds, which is another indication of easier finances.

Robbers Kill Policeman.

St. Louis, Jan. 11.—Michael Gibbons, a policeman, was shot and killed by two men whom he interrupted robbing the interurban station of the Wabash railroad station. The robbers blew open the safe and escaped with $4.

Rout Villa Forces.

Laredo, Texas, Jan. 9.—In a battle near Victoria, capital of Tamaulipas, Villa forces were put to flight, leaving many dead and wounded on the field, according to Constitutionalist advices from Neuvo Laredo, Mex.

Spain Has Big Deficit.

Madrid, via Paris, Jan. 9.—The financial statement of the government for 1914 shows a deficit of 157,000,000 pesetas ($31,400,000). The deficit is due to the shrinkage of revenue during the five months of the war.

"CASCARETS" FOR SLUGGISH BOWELS

No sick headache, sour stomach, biliousness or constipation by morning.

Get a 10-cent box now.

Turn the rascals out—the headache, biliousness, indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and foul gases—turn them out to-night and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse your stomach; remove the sour, fermenting food; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret to-night straightens you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head, sweet stomach and clean, healthy liver and bowel action for months. Children love Cascarets because they never gripe or sicken. Adv.

Why Men Swear.

Georgia Wood Pangborn, writing a story in the Woman's Home Companion, says of one of her characters: "He's a man, and can't cry, so he has to say damn."

LOOK YOUR BEST

As to Your Hair and Skin, Cuticura Will Help You. Trial Free.

The Soap to cleanse and purify, the Ointment to soothe and heal. These fragrant super-creamy emollients preserve the natural purity and beauty of the skin under conditions which, if neglected, tend to produce a state of irritation and disfigurement.

Free sample each by mail with Book. Address postcard, Cuticura, Dept. XY, Boston. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

Next Gentleman, Please!

Said He—Mrs. Threetimes is a widow, is she not?

Said She—Yes, temporarily.

FATIMA
TURKISH BLEND CIGARETTES
Cameron & Cameron Co. RICHMOND, VA.
NO GOLD TIPS
FINEST QUALITY

What Do YOU Pay? Some men, thinking to economize, pay 5 cents for cigarettes. They might enjoy real quality, if they realized that 20 FATIMAS would cost them only 15 cents.

Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

20 for 15¢

KOW-KURE, the great cow medicine, has such a wonderful tonic effect on the genital and digestive organs that many cow ailments commonly regarded as serious can be prevented or promptly relieved. Kow-Kure is invaluable in treating Abortion, Retained Afterbirth, Barrenness, Milk Fever, Scouring and Lost Appetite. Sold by feed dealers and druggists; 50c and $1.00. Valuable book, "The Cow Doctor," free. DAIRY ASSOCIATION CO. Lyndonville, Vt.

KOW-KURE

For Testing Our named varieties of HARDY Better Root Apple Grafts make vigorous, early bearing, heavily yielding, clean hearted, long lived trees. To prove their worth, we offer 6 Grafts (rooted) for testing, if you will send 10c to help cover cost and mailing expense. They will bear [illegible] in a few years' time. Catalog telling of [illegible] STRAWBERRIES, etc., FREE. Write today. The Gardner Nursery Co., Box 503 Osage, Ia.

POTATO LOW PRICES

Salzer's Pedigree Potatoes helped put Wisconsin way on the top with its enormous potato yield. We can do same for you. BIG SEED CATALOG FREE. John A. Salzer Seed Co., Box 717, La Crosse, Wis.

Highest Cash Prices Paid For CHICKENS, VEAL, CREAM

WRITE FOR SPECIAL PRICE LIST.

THE S. E. COBB CO., 14, 3rd Street, So. Paul, Minn.

IS CHILD CROSS, FEVERISH, SICK

Look, Mother! If tongue is coated, give "California Syrup of Figs."

Children love this "fruit laxative," and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver and bowels so nicely.

A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels, and the result is they become tightly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sours, then your little one becomes cross, half-sick, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomach-ache or diarrhoea. Listen, Mother! See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well child again.

Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs" because it is perfectly harmless; children love it, and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Adv.

Of More Importance.

Mr. Arthur H. Engelbach, in his collection of anecdotes of the British bench, tells this story about Lord Braxfield, who was among the last of the Scotch judges who rigidly adhered to the broad Scotch dialect.

"Hae ye ony counsel mon?" he said to Maurice Margot, when placed at the bar.

"No," was the reply.

"Do ye want to hae ony appointit?" continued the judge.

"No," said Margot; "I only want an interpreter to make me understand what your lordship says."

SALTS IF BACKACHY OR KIDNEYS TROUBLE YOU

Eat Less Meat If Your Kidneys Aren't Acting Right or If Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.—Adv.

Impressionistic.

Rankin—I understand our friend Daubensplatter won first prize at the cubist art exhibition.

Phyle—Yes, he won a thousand dollars.

"But I did not know he belonged to that school."

"He doesn't, but the committee got his picture upside down by mistake and the judges thought it was a masterpiece.—Youngstown Telegram.

SAGE TEA DARKENS GRAY HAIR TO ANY SHADE. TRY IT!

Keep Your Locks Youthful, Dark, Glossy and Thick With Garden Sage and Sulphur.

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use tonic called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look years younger. Adv.

A man hasn't a very good religion when he regards Sunday as the longest and dreariest day in the week.

Why is it that the average man will economize on his luxuries rather than on his necessities?

FOURTEEN BILLS INTRODUCED; ONE ON COUNTY OPTION

SENATE SETTLES DOWN TO ITS WORKADAY STRIDE AND ACCOMPLISHES DAY'S WORK.

NOLAN BILL APPEARS IN DISGUISED FORM

Calls for Regulation of State and Local Public Service Corporations —Census Measure Would Provide Employment for Men Who Are Idle.

IN THE HOUSE.

Met at 11 a. m.

Passed resolution authorizing speaker to appoint committees.

Speaker appointed committees on legislative expense and mileage.

Passed resolutions of sympathy for the death of two former members.

Representative Lewis C. Spooner spoke on resolution proposing joint committee of house and senate to hold hearings on efficiency and economy bill.

First introduction of bills of session.

Adjourned at 11:45 a. m. until 8 p. m. Monday.

IN THE SENATE.

Met 10:30 a. m.

First introduction of bills of session.

Adoption of report of rules committee providing for abolishment or merger of number of standing committees.

Senator F. H. Peterson spoke against adjournment until Monday.

Rules committee leaders held first informal conference.

Adjourned at 12 noon until 8 p. m. Monday.

St. Paul, Jan. 8.—With the introduction of fourteen bills, one of which called for county option, though not recognized as the "official" county option bill, and the presentation of the report of the rules committee, the senate settled down to its workaday stride and accomplished a day's work.

Explaining that his bill was not the "official" bill providing for county option, Senator F. H. Peterson of Moorhead introduced a measure which called for an election on county option on the petition of 25 per cent of the voters of any county. He said he came from a town where the "wets" predominated and the bill was introduced entirely on his own responsibility.

To Vote When Not at Home.

Endorsed in his action by commercial travelers' associations. Senator William A. Campbell of Minneapolis introduced as the first senate bill of the present session a measure which if pased will allow more than 25,000 traveling men in this state the power to vote while away from home. The bill provides for registration and voting at the primaries on the same day and for the issuance of a statewide certificate for voting at the elections. Three other bills were introduced by the Minneapolis senator.

The Nolen bill vetoed by former Governor Eberhart appeared in a new guise, sponsored by Senator Campbell. It calls for the regulation of state and local public service corporations and delegates to local councils of the different cities the power to regulate public service corporations whose franchise has expired.

Senator J. G. Callahan, in introducing a bill for the taking of the sixth decennial census in the state, drew attention to the fact that his measure would provide for the employment of a number of men at present unemployed and would make the labor commissioner superintendent of the census. In the cities, he said, the labor commissioner was closely in touch with the unemployed. Preference would be given to old soldiers and men out of employment.

The bill provides for the taking of the census in February of this year.

Representative Lewis C. Spooner of Morris introduced in the house a resolution proposing that a committee of nine members of the house and five members of the senate be appointed to "Receive, consider and hold public hearings on" the efficiency and economy commission bill, which will be introduced in the near future.

After speaking at length regarding the resolution, Representative Spooner made a motion that the resolution be laid on the table until Monday, that members of the house and of the senate might confer on the matter. The motion was passed.

The resolution proposed that the committee have "power to compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of documents.

Both houses adjourned to 8 p. m. Monday.

Charged With Threatening Wilson.

Cleveland, Ohio, Jan. 8.—James Spana of Youngstown, Ohio, who, Captain John E. Washer, United States secret service operator, charged wrote a threatening letter to President Wilson demanding money, has been brought to Cleveland and placed in the county jail. Spana denies the charge. He was arrested in Youngstown. Captain Washer said he could not reveal the contents of the letter. Spana will be given a hearing in a few days before a United States commissioner.

UNITE ON REORGANIZATION

Members of House Declare They Will Support Economy and Efficiency Program.

St. Paul, Jan. 9.—Members of the house of representatives say they will unite in supporting the economy and efficiency program which was dwelt upon by retiring Governor Adolph O. Eberhart and incoming Governor Winfield Scott Hammond before the joint session of the legislature.

Although many members of the house are uncertain as to the exact meaning of a number of points incident to the reorganization, it seemed the opinion that there would be no vigorous opposition to the general plan when it is brought forward to be voted upon and after it has been thoroughly thrashed out on the floor.

"I believe I express the opinion of a majority of the house members when I say that the general plan for efficiency and economy has met with almost unanimous favor in the house," said Iver J. Lee of Glenwood. "While there are many details that will require close study before the plan could be approved the program as a whole has been favorably received."

Several other members expressed similar views.

"I am in favor of the economy and efficiency plan as, I believe, is every other member of the house," said P. H. Frye of Willmar. "Of course the details of the plan will have to be gone over very thoroughly. It will require the extended services of an expert accountant to ascertain exactly whether there will be a material saving by reducing the number of officials."

Discussion of the economy and efficiency program was heard on every hand. The possibility of opposition to the plan was said to be so slight that it is being given little consideration at this time. Leaders in the Gordon ranks, as well as those who were active in the speakership campaign in behalf of Mr. Flowers, are strong advocates of the plan.

Views as to harmony were expressed by many members, all of whom declared that the line between the Gordon and Flowers adherents which became so tightened the last few days preceding the election of a speaker, had been almost entirely eliminated and that the house had forgotten politics and settled down to the vast amount of work which it must accomplish in the remaining eighty-odd days of the session.

Rules Committee Slated.

St. Paul, Jan. 8.—Shortly before the gavel fell at 11 o'clock Speaker Flowers announced that the two additional members of the rules committee would not be made known until next week. Those already slated are:

Thomas H. Girling, Robbinsdale.
L. A. Lydiard, Minneapolis.
George C. Sudheimer, St. Paul.
H. J. Miner, International Falls.
H. W. Haislet, Butterfield.
Levi M. Davis, Long Prairie.
Carl G. Malmberg, Forest Lake.

A resolution authorizing the appointment of a rules committee by the speaker was passed.

Lewis C. Spooner of Morris then introduced his efficiency and economy resolution and requested that it be laid on the table until next week, that members of the senate and of the house might confer on the matter.

Resolutions of condolence for the death of M. J. Sullivan, member of the lower house of the legislature in 1909-11-13, and the death of William H. Thielen, from the Thirty-eighth district in 1913, were adopted.

A motion that all bills be laid on the table until the rules committee has been appointed was passed. Then adjournment until Monday night at 8 o'clock was taken.

Hammond Is Kept Busy.

St. Paul, Jan. 9.—Governor Hammond is not finding the position of chief executive of the state altogether a bed of roses. A stream of office seekers kept vigil in the gold room and were received by the governor in order. Each man or delegation was given a card and they were disposed of in this fashion. "Since coming to St. Paul for my inauguration," said Governor Hammond, "the only time I have been alone is when I retire for the night. They have even invaded my room when I was dressing in the morning." Relative to appointments, Governor Hammond said that what he had to give out in the way of plums would be done after due consideration of the situation.

Plan for Fish Breeding.

Minneapolis, Jan. 8.—The legislature will be asked by a strong representation of Hennepin delegates to appropriate sufficient funds to defray the cost of installation of an aquarium surrounded by fish breeding lagoons, same to be located somewhere in that narrow strip of land which separates Lakes Calhoun and Harriet.

The original idea is that of Eben Cobb, superintendent of state fish hatcheries, who says the location is geographically ideal. The task of obtaining the appropriation necessary is in the hands of Chairman L. A. Lydiard of the Hennepin delegation.

Minneapolis Art Institute Opens.

Minneapolis, Jan. 8.—A dream of years, one that the city has cherished since early days, will be realized in the dedication of the Minneapolis Institute of Arts. From near and far men widely known in the field of fine arts, will come to rejoice with Minneapolis. Dedicatory exercises will be held at the Auditorium. In the evening there will be a reception at the museum and an exhibition valued at more than $3,000,000 will be opened to the general public.

STATE BREVITIES

St. Cloud.—Mrs. P. R. Schaefer, for 41 years a resident of St. Cloud, is dead. She is survived by her husband and eight children.

Owatonna.—Mrs. G. F. Albertus, one of Owatonna's pioneer residents and widow of G. F. Albertus, one of Owatonna's first business men, died.

Wells.—Stephen Turner, who conducted the Park hotel here for 30 years, is dead. He was well known to the traveling public throughout the state.

Faribault.—New buildings were erected and other improvements made in Faribault in 1914 of an aggregate value of $500,000. Many new residences were erected.

Winona.—The receipts of the Winona post office for 1914 show a gain of $5,000 over those of the preceding year, amounting to $102,223.43, compared with $97,218.89 in 1913.

Hastings.—St. Luke's church celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of the first service held in Hastings with a sermon by Rev. Arthur Chard, rector. In honor of the event the parish served a banquet in the evening.

Brainerd.—The regular meeting of the Upper Mississippi Valley Medical society will be held in Brainerd Jan. 12. The program includes papers by Drs. Alex Colvin, J. A. Thabes of Brainerd, C. H. Pierce of Wadena, and F. H. Allen of Staples.

Faribault.—Howard Strong, secretary of the Minneapolis Civic and Commerce association, addressed the Faribault Commercial club Wednesday. He told what an organization in a city like Faribault ought to be. It should represent all classes, he said, and be truly democratic.

Winona.—The calendar for the January general term of the district court, which opens Monday, has been completed. There are 18 cases, five being for divorce. Some of the prisoners in the county jail will voluntarily go before Judge Snow and plead guilty to the charges against them.

St. Cloud.—At the first meeting of the commissioners of Stearns county, at which three new members were sworn into office, P. N. Lahr was selected chairman and Jacob Webber vice chairman. Bids for the county printing were opened and the St. Cloud Times was made the official paper.

Winona.—The bathhouse board of Winona is offering a reward for information that will lead to the arrest and conviction of persons who visited the public baths on Latsch island and committed wanton destruction there. Tracks in the snow indicate that the raids were committed by fully grown men.

Bemidji.—Bemidji is to have a visiting nurse for a month, according to Mrs. H. L. Wilcox, chairman of the Christmas seal committee of the Bemidji Women's Study club, which sold $117.60 in Red Cross Christmas seals. The club will endeavor to bring the nurse to Bemidji in April so that she may give advice regarding a general "clean-up" campaign.

St. Cloud.—An application has been made by Edward Carmody, who on May 9, 1908, was committed to the state penitentiary for 18 years for shooting Patrolman Henry Becker, for a commutation of sentence or pardon and a hearing will be held on Jan. 11. There is some opposition to any commutation of Carmody's sentence owing to Becker's popularity.

Breckenridge.—The King Land & Loan company of Breckenridge has completed one of the largest deals in west central Minnesota for some time, selling 1,600 acres to a syndicate of Des Moines capitalists for $140,000. The purchasers expect to put a substantial set of improvements on each half section and to stock the farms with thoroughbred cattle.

Cass Lake.—The board of education has elected A. A. Seipt of Kansas City, Kan., as superintendent of the high school. Professor Seipt is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania and for four years has been a professor in the University of Kansas. Professor E. T. Fitch, who has been superintendent of the school three years, has reached the age limit and will retire to his farm at Kettle River, Minn. He is eligible for a pension under the teachers' pension act

Granite Falls.—Citizens of Granite Falls are proud of the growth of the city the last year. Many new residences have been erected; also several brick buildings on Main street, while much improvement in the way of repairing has been done. The most imposing structure erected was a large garage by A. W. Winter. It is 125 by 150 feet, with a workshop 50 by 20, is steam heated and absolutely fireproof, and is without question one of the finest in the state. The outlook for new buildings this season is also good. The government has called for a new building for the postoffice, and as no better location than the present one can be found, the old frame building has been sold to persons who will remove it in the spring and put up a brick building.

Slayton.—The university agricultural extension division is conducting a farmers' short course here this week. The women of the village are taking unusual interest in the home economics course. The attendance is satisfactory. An attempt will be made to have a like course here yearly hereafter.

St. Paul.—Governor Hammond is announced as the speaker at the annual banquet of the Spanish war veterans on the evening of Maine day, February 15, at the Emporium tea rooms. Many out-of-town veterans are expected.

TALK ON WESTERN CANADA.

You Don't Have to Lie About Canada—The Simple Truth Is Enough.

The natural resources of the country are so vast that they cannot be told in mere figures Man can only tell of what tiny portions have done. He can only say, "I am more prosperous than I ever expected to be." And yet if a farmer expects to succeed on land that he has been forced to pay $50 to $100 an acre for he ought to feel assured of attaining prosperity when he finds the richest prairie soil at his disposal absolutely free. If he has a little capital, let him invest it all in live stock and farm implements —he will find himself ten years ahead of the game. Some day such a chance will not be found anywhere on the face of the globe. But now the same opportunities await you as awaited the pioneer and not one hundredth part of the difficulties he encountered and overcame. Success in Canada is made up of two things, natural resources and human labor. Canada has the one and you the other. A postal card stands between you and the Canadian government agent. If you don't hold these two forces and enjoy the fruits of the result it is your own fault.

Debt and Canada Will Not Stand Hitched.

You want a cozy home, a free life, and sufficient income. You want education for your children, and some pleasure for your wife. You want independence. Your burden has been heavy, and your farm hasn't paid. You work hard and are discouraged.

You require a change. There is a goal within sight, where your children will have advantages. You can get a home in Western Canada, freedom, where your ambitions can be fulfilled. If the Prairie Provinces of Canada are full of Successful Farmers why should you prove the exception? Haven't you got brains, experience, courage? Then prove what these are capable of when put on trial. It is encouraging to know that there is one country in the world where poverty is no barrier to wealth; own your own car; own yourself; be somebody.

For facts write to any Canadian government agent. Advertisement.

Lost.

"Does your husband ever lose his temper?"

"Not any more. He lost it permanently about two years after our marriage."

YOUR OWN DRUGGIST WILL TELL YOU
Try Murine Eye Remedy for Red, Weak, Watery Eyes and Granulated Eyelids; No Smarting—just Eye comfort. Write for Book of the Eye by mail Free. Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago.

Gossip generally means taking two and two and making three.

Good Cause for Alarm

Deaths from kidney diseases have increased 72% in twenty years. People overdo nowadays in so many ways that the constant filtering of poisoned blood weakens the kidneys.

Beware of fatal Bright's disease. When backache or urinary ills suggest weak kidneys, use a tested kidney medicine.

Doan's Kidney Pills command confidence, for no other remedy is so widely used or so generally successful.

A Minnesota Case

C. Heinz, Luverne, Minn., says: "I had backache all the time, with pain across my loins that made me almost helpless. Whenever I moved, sharp twinges darted through me and it felt as though my back was broken. I took doctors' medicine, but steadily got worse, until I used Doan's Kidney Pills. They removed the pains and I was able to go back to work. I haven't had a sign of kidney trouble since."

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

Get Doan's at Any Store, 50c a Box
DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS
FOSTER-MILBURN CO., BUFFALO, N. Y.

Couldn't Be Blamed for Running.

"He would tackle his weight in wildcats when sober, but when he is drunk he will run away from them."

"That is consistent. If he met his weight in wildcats when drunk he would see twice his weight in wildcats."

Important to Mothers
Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it
Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.
In Use For Over 30 Years.
Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

It won't do to take much stock in the fellow who always watches the clock.

The Wretchedness of Constipation
Can quickly be overcome by
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.
Purely vegetable —act surely and gently on the liver. Cure Biliousness, Headache, Dizziness, and Indigestion. They do their duty.
SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.
Genuine must bear Signature
Brent Good

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER
PILLS.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM
A toilet preparation of merit.
Helps to eradicate dandruff.
For Restoring Color and Beauty to Gray or Faded Hair.
50c. and $1.00 at Druggists.

WANTED to hear from owner of good farm for sale. Send description and price. Northwestern Business Agency, Dept. A, Minneapolis, Minn.

Women Everywhere

Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Women from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from all sections of this great country, no city so large, no village so small but that some woman has written words of thanks for health restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. No woman who is suffering from the ills peculiar to her sex should rest until she has given this famous remedy a trial. Is it not reasonable to believe that what it did for these women it will do for any sick woman?

Wonderful Case of Mrs. Crusen, of Bushnell, Ill.

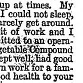
Bushnell, Ill.—"I think all the trouble I have had since my marriage was caused by exposure when a young girl. My work has been housework of all kinds, and I have done milking in the cold and snow when I was too young to realize that it would hurt me. I have suffered very much with bearing down pains in my back and such miserable pains across me, and was very nervous and generally run down in health, but since I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound my back never hurts me, my nerves are stronger, and I am gaining in health every day. I thank you for the great help I have received from your medicine, and if my letter will benefit suffering women I will be glad for you to print it."—Mrs. James Crusen, Bushnell, Illinois.

A Grateful Atlantic Coast Woman.

Hodgdon, Me.—"I feel it a duty I owe to all suffering women to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. One year ago I found myself a terrible sufferer. I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached, I had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep, then I would be so tired mornings that I could scarcely get around. It seemed almost impossible to move or do a bit of work and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation. I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman. I had no pains, slept well, had good appetite and was fat and could do almost all my own work for a family of four. I shall always feel that I owe my good health to your medicine."—Mrs. Hayward Sowers, Hodgdon, Maine.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No one sick with woman's ailments does justice to herself if she does not try this famous medicine made from roots and herbs, it has restored so many suffering women to health.

Write to LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO. (CONFIDENTIAL) LYNN, MASS., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.



THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3,1879

We are changing our method of printing THE SUNBEAM this week, and will in the future print the front page at home. We hope this change will be agreeable to our subscribers, and more satisfactory to our advertisers.

Taxes and Facts.

Editor of The Sunbeam:

I understand that Mr. Singer in his last campaign used some scientific arguments, and how "green" he thought the farmers were.

What did he tell some farmers in Kratka and other townships? "Your valuation of the land was raised a certain percent by the County Board, and the commissioners were to blame for it."

What did the County Board do if one township was assessed $4, and one $5, and another $6 an acre. They equalize those townships and get them at $5 each. Still a post master, merchant and "candidate for attorney general" had to go away down in his "boots" to find such arguments.

I understand that Mr. Singer wrote to the Tax Commission at St. Paul, and told them that the land in Kratka township was too lowly assessed, and he further told that he knew one quarter of land that was assessed only $2500, and the owner would not sell for less than $5000. And he further tried all he could to get the valuation raised in Pennington County. The County Board got a copy of his letter. Did the Tax Commission raise the valuation of the land? No! No! The opinion of the "candidate for attorney general" was again over ruled.

Well Mr. farmer, anyone can see what Mr. Singer wanted. Too bad he is not a member of the tax commission so you get the full capacity of taxes to pay.

What is it anyhow? Ignorance and dirt combined, or would it mean a raise of the salary for what they call the Fire Warden in this district? Respectfully, —X.

After careful investigation of all opinions regarding getting the Red Lake River declared unnavigable above Thief River Falls, we size up the matter as follows; Those who oppose it, claim that there is yet a prospect to get a government appropriation to improve the river.

This we consider an utter impossibility, for the reason, that as soon as it was mentioned the opposition to putting in any dam at the outlet to Red Lake was bitterly opposed by the people of Beltrami County in which nearly all the lake is located.

When seeking an appropriation from the government for a public improvement, it does not take but a very little opposition to it to firmly convince them that it is not for the best interest of the public to make the appropriation, and the people of Beltrami County have made the case plain to Congress that any raise of the level of Red Lake would flood out the farmers on its banks. This being the case, that dam proposition might as well be laid to rest first as last, and we are of the opinion from the tone of Congressman Steenerson's recent letters that he is of the same opinion, although he does not say so.

Then why allow this government fence to run through the country when we can get this river declared unnavigable so we can build bridges across it, the same as there are across the Clear water River?

STOP THE CHILD'S COLDS THEY OFTEN RESULT SERIOUSLY.

Cold's, Croup and Whooping Cough are children's ailments which need immediate attention. The after-affects are often most serious. Don't take the risk—you don't have to. Dr. King's New Discovery checks the Cold, soothes the cough, allays the Inflammation, kills the Germs and allows Nature to do her healing work. 50c. at your Druggist. Buy a bottle to-day.—adv.

MANY DISORDERS COME FROM THE LIVER

ARE YOU JUST AT ODDS WITH YOURSELF?

DO YOU REGULATE LIVING?

Are you sometimes at odds with yourself and with the world? Do you wonder what ails you? True you may be eating regularly and sleeping well. Yet something is the matter! Constipation, Headache, Nervousness and Bilious Spells indicate a Sluggish Liver. The tried remedy is Dr. King's New Life Pills. Only 25c. at your Druggist. Bucklen's Arnica Salve for Skin Eruptions.—adv,

TRY THIS FOR NEURALGIA.

Thousands of people keep on suffering with Neuralgia because they do not know what to do for it. Neuralgia is a pain in the nerves. What you want to do is to soothe the nerve itself. Apply Sloan's Liniment to the surface over the painful part—do not rub it in. Sloan's Liniment penetrates very quickly to the sore, irritated nerve and allays the in inflammation. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25 cents of any druggist and have it in the house—against Colds, Sore and Swollen Joints, Lumbago, Sciatica and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief.—adv.

CHILDREN'S COUGHS—CHILDREN'S COLDS BOTH ARE SERIOUS

When one of your little ones shows symptons of an approaching Cold, give it Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey at once. It acts quickly, and prevents the Cold growing worse. Very healing—soothes the Lungs, loosens the mucous, strengthens the system. It's guaranteed. Only 25c. at your Druggist. Buy a bottle to-day. Bucklen's Arnica Salve for Sores. —adv.

Subscribe for THE SUNBEAM.

Notice For Publication.

First pub. In The Sunbeam Jan. 8th. 1915.
Department of the Interior.. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Jan. 6th. 1915.

Notice is hereby given that Thomas G. Rome, of Rhoda, Minnesota, who on February 8th 1912, made Homestead Application, Serial No. 07282, for Lots 5 and 6, Section 6 Township 152 N. Range 40 W 5th principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make Five Year proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls, Minn. on the 16th. day of February 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:
Sam B. Swanson, Ole G. Skreland, of Rhoda, Minn., Andrew Feland, William G. Hunt, of Sunbeam, Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

PETER M. RINGDAL,
Register.

W. G. Hunt

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

Special attention given to Pro bate Court work.

A Confidential Communication.

"Who painted that wonderful old picture?" asked the visitor.

"Let me tell you a secret," replied Mr. Cumrox. "If I had spent my life learning to pronounce the names of all these great artists I'd never have made money enough to buy their pictures."
—Washington Star.

WE HAVE
$150,000.00
TO LOAN ON FARMS IN
PENNINGTON COUNTY
Write Or Call on Us At FIRST NATIONAL BANK
THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN.

FARMERS & MERCHANTS STATE BANK
Oklee Minn.

The rapid growth of this bank is the best evidence that its policy and methods meet with the approval of the people in our community.
You will find this bank as liberal in its dealings as is consistent with sound banking.
We are at all times prepared to discuss your requirements with you and invite consultation.
Pay your bills with checks on this bank.
Farm Loans At Lowest Rates And On Easy Terms.
Six per cent interest paid on time deposits.
CAPITAL AND SURPLUS——————$14,500.00
J. A. C. Torgerson, V. P. W. B. Torgerson, Cashier.

DO YOUR BANKING WITH
FARMERS STATE BANK
GOODRIDGE - - MINNESOTA
CAPITAL AND SURPLUS $12,000.
5 per cent paid on time deposits
Fire and Torrado Insurance Written in Responsible Companies.
FARM LOANS A SPECIALITY
J. M. BISHOP, President JAY PAYNE Vice-President
NICK BUNDHUND, Cashier

He is often the wisest man who is not wise at all. Wordsworth.

We have for sale one of the best quarter sections of land in the town of Highlanding, located one mile south of Highlanding, Creamery. This farm will be sold cheap as the owner is a non resident and desires to use the money invested in other business. For terms and full particulars call on W. G. Hunt, Sunbeam, Minn.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Jan 1st. 1914
Department of the Interior U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Dec. 28th 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Matt Bakken, of Rhoda, Minn. who on April 8th, 1909, made Homestead Application Serial No. 04712, for N. ½ N. W. ¼ & S. E. ¼ N. W. ¼, Sec. 9, and who on April 15th, 1909 made additional Homestead Application Serial No. 04735, for S. W. ¼ N. W. ¼. Sec. 9, Township 152 N. Range 40 West Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make Commutation Proof to establish claim to the land above described before N. W. Tarrant Municipal Judge for the city of Thief River Falls, Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 2d. day of February, 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:
Edward Singer, M. E. Hyland, Ole Skreland, of Rhoda, Minn. Stephen Singer of Kratka, Minn.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register.

U. S. Mail.

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 1.05 p. m., on Tuesday Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.55 p.m

Wm. G. Hunt, p.m.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Dec. 11th 1914.
Department of the Interior. U. S. Land office at Crookston December 3rd. 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Christoffer Nisson of Erie Minn. who on March 15th, 1912 made Homestead Application Serial No 0748: for S.½ S. W. ¼, Section 21 Township 15: N. Range 39 W. 5th. Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet U. S Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 21st, day of January 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:
Ljot Sigurdson. Nels Graue, Andrew Ellingson, Lars C. Fevig, all of Erie Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. In The Sunbeam Dec. 25th 1914
Department of the Interior., U. S. Land office at Crookston Minn. Dec. 21st, 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Harry Stucy, of Hilda Minn. who on October, 3rd 1912, made Homestead Application Serial No 05491. for W ½ N W ¼ Sec. 33. and N E ¼ N E ¼, Section 32 Township 153 N. Range 39 West Fifth Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof, to establish claim to the land above described before Wilhelm Michelet, U.S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls. Minnesota on the 26th day of January 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:
Chas. L. Stucy, Fred Stucy, of Erie; Minn William Lueck, Gilbert G. Hanson, of Hilda, Minn.

Proof made under act of June 6. 1912.

Peter M. Ringdal.
Register.

Singing Pigeons.

The queer Chinese change pigeons into song birds by fastening whistles to their breasts. The wind of their flight then causes a weird and plaintive music that is seldom silenced in the pigeon haunted cities of Peking and Canton.

FIRST STATE BANK,
Of Plummer Minnesota.
GIVE THE BURGLAR THE "HA, HA!"
BANK YOUR CASH WITH US

SOME people extend invitations to the THIEF AND HOLDUP MAN. They carry on their persons or in their homes large sums of money. A CHECK BOOK is of no use to the professional thief. Still, a check is AS GOOD AS CASH to the tradesman or for the immediate household wants. If you haven't a bank account

OPEN ONE TODAY.

J. A. DUFFY President, Henry Enderlie, Cashier

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. In The Sunbeam Dec. 18th 1914
Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. December 9th, 1914.

Notice is hereby given that James Davis, of Erie. Minnesota.. Who on July 26th 1911, made Homestead Entry Serial No. 06432, for N.W.¼ S.E.¼ Section 8, Township 152, N. Range 39 W. 5th. Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before N W. Tarrant, Municipal Judge for the City of Thief River Falls. at Thief River Falls, Minnesota, on the 19th day of January, 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:
Edward Cottom, Edward Iverson, Rasmus Martinson, Otto Anderson, all of Erie, Minnesota.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register.

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. In The Sunbeam Jan. 8th 1915.
Department of the Interior. U.S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Dec. 31st, 1914.

Notice is hereby given that George T. Christofferson, of Erie, Minn. who on May 3rd 1913 made Homestead Application Serial No. 07008, for S. W. ¼ Section 25 Township 153 N. Range 39 W. 5th Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Commutation Proof, to establish claim to the land above described before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for District of Minn. at Thief River Falls. Minn. on the 18th day of February. 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:
Hilmer C. Iverson, Anders H. Vake, Ole K. Lien, Generius Christofferson, all of Erie Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register.

Any subscriber to the THE SUNBEAM, who remits the amount of his subscription to this paper, as per bill sent him, will receive the Farm, Stock and Home one year absolutely free.

MONEY TO LOAN ON FARM LAND

MACKEY J. THOMPSON
FARM MORTGAGES
ST. PAUL, MINNESOTA

CONTRACTS, FIRST AND SECOND MORTGAGES BOUGHT

PANAMA PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION
PANAMA-PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION
1915

CALIFORNIA CALLS YOU

Do You Want to Go to the Panama-Pacific Exposition
At San Francisco
As a Guest of
Farm, Stock & Home
The Northwest's Foremost Farm Paper.

If you do, fill out the coupon below and mail it and find out all about it.

WRITE TODAY. DO NOT DELAY.

The trip is undoubtedly the most interesting, enjoyable and profitable that can be found anywhere in the world. The mere journey itself will be a succession of beautiful, ever-changing scenes, replete with romantic and historical associations. And besides that beautiful journey, there is California and the greatest Exposition the world has known! To mention in detail all that will be seen would be to print a guide book of the West and combine it with a comprehensive catalog of human achievement. For the Panama-Pacific Exposition will be nothing less than an exhibit of the accomplishments of civilization, shown under the very best conditions, in surroundings as beautiful as art and money can make them.

FARM, STOCK & HOME,
830 Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.
Please mail at once full particulars concerning trip to Panama Pacific Exposition.

Name..

Postoffice..

Rural Route.............. State..............................

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

THE SUNBEAM

VOL. XIV. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, JANUARY 22, 1915. NO. 45.

THE LOCAL NEWS

Gunder Asbjornson of Malone was transacting business here Monday.

Abel Bost is assisting us to get up our summer's supply of fire wood this week.

There is to be a basket social at the Erie Hall on Saturday evening.

We are having the petitions prepared for signatures to declare Red Lake River a none navigable stream. Be sure to sign this petition.

The Highlanding Creamery Association held their annual meeting Wednesday, and elected a new board of Directors for the coming year.

A little more snow fell on Monday evening, which has improved the sleighing some, but two or three inches more are needed to make good sleighing.

Any subscriber to the THE SUNBEAM, who remits the amount of his subscription to this paper, as per bill sent him, will receive the Farm, Stock and Home one year absolutely free.

The Thief River Falls News-Press is to get out the financial statement of the county for the past year, this week, which about ten percent of the tax payers will get a chance to look at.

The weather has been extremely cold the past week. We do not know just how many degrees it got below zero, for we have no thermometor, so it got just as cold as it wanted to.

We have arranged for a correspondent to write news from Malone, and would like to get one from Kratka, Erie and Rudell. Let us hear from you about what is going on in your neighborhood.

Wheat thieves are reported to have been quite active down around Mavie, and quite a number of isolated buildings have been robbed. The officers are getting after the parties, and some arrests have already been made, with others to follow.

Joseph LaCounte was sentenced to ninety days in the Red Lake county jail, for visiting a Red Lake county farmer's grainary on the night of December 18th, and helping himself to a load of grain. His parther got thirty days, which will undoubtedly make them try to raise wheat from the land in the future instead of another man's grainary.

The family of Joseph LaCounne are reported to be without fire wood and the necessities of life, but we understand the Town Board of Mayfield township have been notified to attend to this at once. The wife and six small children are not to blame for the sins of the husband and father, and should not be allowed to perish with hunger or cold. Christ said, "You always have the poor with you," and the town of Mayfield have seven of them on hand now.

The personal property tax list as published shows John T. Lattimore of The Eleven Towns, has the highest and W. G. Hunt of the Sunbeam, the lowest in the township of Highlanding.—The Eleven Towns.

Now John that is not fair to call people's attention to our poverty. We are not to blame for not having much to pay taxes on in the way of personal property, but we get ours on realestate and ditch taxes, on which you are exempt.

Court is in session this week at Thief River Falls with Judge Grindland presiding.

Matt Bakken was at Thief River Falls Wednesday getting his final citizen papers.

It will soon be time of year to begin to get your seed grain cleaned up, and farm machinery ready for the spring's work.

Joseph Starecheek of Florence Wisconsin, who proved up a claim last summer in the town of Riner, died in his home at Florence, Wis., on January 8th.

Chistoffer Nisson went down to Thief River Falls Wednesday to make final proof on his homestead. Ljot Sigurdson and Lars C. Fevig accompanied him as witnesses. They went down the warmest way by the Electric Line and landed on Davis Avenue at Thief River Falls.

We extend our sincere thanks to subscribers for subscription paid the past week. We do not mention the names of paying subscribers, for the reason that we have found that some eastern publications use these names to add to their subscription list, and the farmers begin to receive a lot of papers that they do not want, and have hard work to stop it being sent to them. We certainly appreciate our paying subscribers, and do not want to give them any notoriety that they do not want.

A. M. Dunton, member of the State Farmers Institute spoke at the school house last night, to a few farmers who braved the extreme cold to hear him. He advocates the organization of farmer's clubs as a remedy for all farm evils, but it is pretty hard to get farmers to club together or unite when there is so much jealousy among them, that if one happens to have a little more money than one of his neighbors, he would be in a class by himself.

EAT

When you are

AT GOODRIDGE, Call at the Goodridg Restaurant and get A cup of HOT COFFEE, or a good warm dinner for 25 cents. Don't forget the sign of

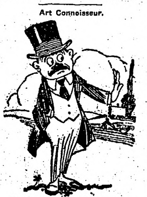
EAT

BARBER SHOP IN CONNECTION

STEPHENSON BROS. Prop.

Subscribe for THE SUNBEAM

Art Connoisseur.



No splendid picture bids him pause
Outdoors, where all the air is pure.
He gives the scene no heed because
It hasn't any signature.
—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Simple Enough.

Here is a simple catch that may bother you some:

"All 0."

Not much in it perhaps, but enough to make it troublesome.

Too hard?

And yet it's "nothing, after all."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"Pan."

"Pan" was the name of one of the Greek gods. The word means "all," or "universal." Hence "Pantheism"—the doctrine that all is God. Hence, too, "Pan-American"—that is, all that is American, all the countries of North and South America.

LUMBER AND BUILDING MATERIALS.

When you get ready to build, come in and let us figure your bill and show you our stock of lumber and building materials.

Complete stocks at Thief River Falls, Mavie and Goodridge, Minn.

WINTON-NICHOLS LUMBER COMPANY.

Go to S. P. Johnson, at Oklee

"The Right Place"

Boys Suits from $1.25, to $4.50 per suit. Mens suits, former price $25.00. Now selling for $16.00. $15.00 suits now selling for $8.50.

$8.50 suits now selling for $4.50.

Men's shoes from $1.25 to $3.50. Former price $4.00 now $3.25.

Ladies shoes $1.50 to $3.00.

Prints 5 cents per yard. Gingham 8 cents to 10 cents per yard. All Dry Goods at cost. Men's Caps goes at any price.

Sugar for this week is $6.00 per 100 lbs. Good coffee for 18 cents to 30 cents a pound. Bargains in all kind of goods.

S. P. JOHNSON, Oklee, Minn.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Three Hundred Ninety Five, and 73—100 ($395.73) Dollars, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by Manuel Niemi and Ida Niemi, his wife, mortgagors, to the Merchants State Bank of Red Lake Falls, mortgagee, bearing date the 15th day of March 1913, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Pennington, and State of Minnesota on the 26th day of April 1913 at 9:00 o'clock A. M. in Book 1 of mortgages on page 475.

NOW THEREFORE, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, VIZ:

The North West quarter of South East quarter (N W ¼ of S E ¼) and East half of South East quarter (E ½ of S E ¼) of Section thirty-four (34) and North West quarter of South West quarter (N W ¼ of S W ¼) of Section thirty five (35) in Township one hundred fifty two (152) North, of Range thirty nine (39) West of the 5th. Principal Meridian in Pennington County, and the State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Pennington County at the front door of the court house in the City of Thief River Falls in said County and State on the 27th day of February A. D. 1915 at 10:00 o'clock A. M. of that day at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt of Three Hundred Ninety Five and 73—100 [$395.73] Dollars and the taxes, if any, on said premises and Twenty Five [$25.00] Dollars attorney's fees as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law:

Dated January 9th, 1915

John C. Mathews,
Attorney for Mortgagee,
Red Lake Falls, Minn.

Merchants State Bank of
Red Lake Falls
J. A. Duffy,
Cashier

Defining a Musician.

"Pa, what is an accomplished musician?"

"One who sings songs that nobody can understand." Detroit Free Press.

Before and After.

She (pouting)—Before we were married you often used to catch me in your arms. He—Yes, and now I catch you in my pockets.

THE PRICHARD Co.

Thief River Falls Minn.

DEALERS IN LUMBER AND FARM MACHINERY.

Located west of the new Soo Depot. Give us a call, and look over our stock of Lumber and Farm Machinery.

H. O. KJOMME

Attorney and Counselor at Law

COUNTY ATTORNEY.

Mcginn Block

Thief River Falls, — — Minn.

Wilhelm Michalet

U. S. COMMISSIONER

COURT HOUSE

THIEF RIVER FALLS,

MINN.

Corrected.

Teacher—Earl, did you whisper today? Earl — Yes; wunst. Teacher—Clarence, should Earl have said "wunst?" Clarence — No; he should have said "twicet."—Everybody's.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Jan. 1st, 1915.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minnesota Dec. 29th 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Charles O. Asp, of Kratka, Minn. who on August 24th 1908, made Homestead Entry No. 0474, for S. E. ¼ Section 33, Township 153 N. Range 41 W. Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, at Thief River Falls Minn., on the 13th day of February 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses: Ole S. Brelland, Ole A. Holdahl, Kettel Brekke, Dreng O. Roisland, all of Kratka, Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

PETER M. RINGDAL,
Register.

Cuts, Burns,

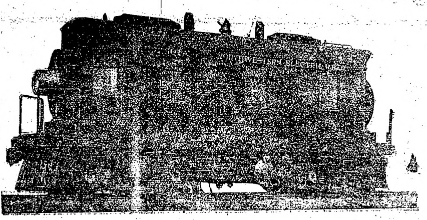
Bruises, Sores, Wounds and Piles quickly healed with Arnica Salve. It prevents infection, is antiseptic, soothing, healing. Try it once. Money Back If It Fails. The Original and Genuine.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve

Heals the Hurt

All Druggists and Dealers, 25c.

Minnesota Northwestern Electric Railway Co.



TIME TABLE

Going East

Train No. 1.

LEAVE—Thief River Falls at 7:15 A. M.

Silverton at 7:40 A. M.

Mavie at 8:05 A. M.

ARRIVE—Goodridge at 8:30 A. M.

Train No. 5.

LEAVE—Thief River Falls at 10:00 A. M.

Silverton at 11:10 A. M.

Mavie at 11:40 A. M.

ARRIVE—Goodridge at 12:10 A. M.

Train No. 3

LEAVE—Thief River Falls at 3:45 P. M.

Silverton at 4:10 P. M.

Mavie at 4:35 P. M.

ARRIVE—Goodridge at 5:00 P. M.

Going West

To Thief River Falls

Train No. 2

LEAVE—Goodridge at 8:45 A. M.

Mavie at 9:10 A. M.

Silverton [illegible] M.

ARRIVE—Thief River Falls at 10:00 A. M.

Train No. 6.

LEAVE—Goodridge at 1:45 P. M.

Mavie at 2:15 P. M.

Silverton at 2:45 P. M.

ARRIVE—Thief River Falls at 3:30 P. M.

Train No. 4.

LEAVE—Goodridge at 5:15 P. M.

Mavie at 5:40 P. M.

Silverton at 6:05 P. M.

ARRIVE—Thief River Falls at 6:30 P. M.

Cash For Hides and Furs.

If you have Hides or Furs for sale, bring them to the Oklee meat market and get the highest market price in cash.

Meat Market,
Oklee, Minn.

Its Drawback.

"Don't go into the well digging business."

"Why not?"

"Because it's sure to get you in a hole." Baltimore American.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Love of the brother we see will help us to the love of the Father we do not see.—William Watson.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists. Price 75c per bottle.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Alfalfa PUREST ON EARTH

More than 30 years ago Salzer's Catalog boomed Alfalfa, years before other seedsmen thought of its value. Today Salzer excels! His Alfalfa strains include Grimm, (Montana Liscom, Agr. College inspected). Salzer's Dakota Registered No. 30—all hardy as oak.

For 10c in Postage

We gladly mail our Catalog and sample package of Ten Famous Farm Seeds, including Speltz, "The Cereal Wonder;" Rejuvenated White Bonanza Oats, "The Prize Winner;" Billion Dollar Grass; Teosinte, the Silo Filler, Alfalfa, etc., etc.

Or Send 12c

And we will mail you our big Catalog and six generous packages of Early Cabbage, Carrot, Cucumber, Lettuce, Radish, Onion—furnishing lots and lots of juicy delicious Vegetables during the early Spring and Summer.

Or send to John A. Salzer Seed Co., Box 717, La Crosse, Wis., twenty cents and receive both above collections and their big catalog.

And when the children are at play many are called but few answer.

THE PROFESSOR'S STATEMENT.

Prof. Aug. F. W. Schmitz, Thomas, Okla., writes: "I was troubled with Backache for about twenty-five years. When told I had Bright's Disease in its last stages, I tried Dodd's Kidney Pills. After using two boxes I was somewhat relieved and I stopped the treatment. In the spring of the next year I had another attack. I went for Dodd's Kidney Pills and they relieved me again. I used three boxes. That is now three years ago and my Backache has not returned in its severity, and by using another two boxes a little later on, the pain left altogether and I have had no trouble since. You may use my statement. I recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills when and wherever I can." Dodd's Kidney Pills, 50c. per box at your dealer or Dodd's Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

Prof. Schmitz.

The Martini Berceuse.

A young lady was dining with some friends at their home. The host had concocted some seductive cocktails and she had joined the others in drinking to his health. Before the dinner was over she was experiencing that much-talked-of wobbly feeling that is said to follow a cocktail.

While coffee was being served in the drawing room, the three-months old son of the family was brought into the room and the young guest insisted on holding him.

"I am surprised that he is so contented in your lap," her hostess told her. "He doesn't usually care for strangers."

"Well, you may not know it," was the reply, "but he is being rocked."—New York Evening Post.

The Hyphen Explained.

Mrs. Dearborn—You say that is Mrs. Burke-Martin?

Mrs. Wabash—Yes; Burke was her name and Martin was her husband's name.

Mrs. Dearborn—But why does she use the hyphen between the names?

Mrs. Wabash—To show that she is separated from her husband.

The Exception.

Payton—Are all the children bright?

Parker—No; one's level-headed.—Life.

Being sorry for yourself doesn't enlist the sympathy of your neighbors.

BAD DREAMS
Caused by Coffee.

"I have been a coffee drinker, more or less, ever since I can remember, until a few months ago I became more and more nervous and irritable, and finally I could not sleep at night for I was horribly disturbed by dreams of all sorts and a species of distressing nightmare.

"Finally, after hearing the experience of numbers of friends who had quit coffee and were drinking Postum, and learning of the great benefits they had derived, I concluded coffee must be the cause of my trouble, so I got some Postum and had it made strictly according to directions.

"I was astonished at the flavor and taste. It entirely took the place of coffee, and to my very great satisfaction, I began to sleep peacefully and sweetly. My nerves improved, and I wish I could wean every man, woman and child from the unwholesome drug-drink—coffee.

"People do not really appreciate or realize what a powerful drug it is and what terrible effect it has on the human system. If they did, hardly a pound of coffee would be sold. I would never think of going back to coffee again. I would almost as soon think of putting my hand in a fire after I had once been burned. Yours for health."

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

The cost per cup of both kinds is about the same.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

—sold by Grocers.

ITALY ALARMED BY NEW SHOCKS IN QUAKE ZONE

BUILDINGS CRACKED AND TOTTERING FROM EFFECTS OF FIRST DISTURBANCE ARE RAZED.

PEOPLE LEAVE SHELTER; TAKE REFUGE IN OPEN

Rain and Extremely Cold Weather in Some Parts of the District Hamper Badly the Work of Rescue —Many Believed Still Living Beneath Debris.

Still Alive Under Ruins.

Paris, Jan. 18.—The correspondent of the Excelsior in Rome wires that he learns officially that 35,000 persons were killed and 45,000 injured in the earthquake.

Rome, Jan. 19.—A renewal of seismic disturbances has served to add to the terror of the people in parts of the district that was visited by the heavy earthquake of last Wednesday.

Although the shocks were light, buildings which had been cracked and were tottering from the effects of the first disturbance were completely razed.

In Avezzano and Sora, the towns which suffered most from the disaster, the people left the temporary shelter in which they are living and took refuge in the open places.

Cold Hampers Rescue Work.

Rain and extremely cold weather in some parts of the district are hampering badly the work of rescue. This is particularly true of Sora, where a cold rain has been falling.

In many of the towns thrown down by the earthquake, it is feared there are still living persons beneath the debris and that unless they are extricated soon they will perish.

Reports Increase Casualties.

Latest reports received from Rome increase rather than decrease the aggregate of the casualties and the extent of the damage done. In the department of the Abruzzi alone, it is estimated that 30,000 persons met death.

The Italian government has appropriated $1,000,000 for the relief work and King Victor Emmanuel has donated $60,000 for the aid of children abandoned by their parents or made orphans by the disaster. Relief supplies are pouring into the stricken districts, and it is believed that shortly there will be sufficient food supplies everywhere to alleviate temporarily the distress of the people. Trainloads of lumber also are being dispatched to the destroyed towns for the erection of huts.

UNABLE TO REMAIN NEUTRAL

Persia Declares She Should Not Be Held Accountable for Turks' Menacing Russia.

Petrograd, via London, Jan. 18.—That Persia should not be held accountable for her inability to prevent the Turks from menacing Russia through violation of Persian neutrality, was the assertion made by Isaac Khan, Persian minister to Russia and at one time minister to Washington. He declared his country had placed her dependence upon foreign troops for protection. The minister explained th Persian situation as follows:

"We solemnly declared our neutrality and intended to adhere to that declaration. The integrity of our territory was gauaranteed to us by Great Britain and Russia. Last Monday Emperor Nicholas, reiterating this promise, said, 'I wish you to tell your government that we shall not take a single foot of your territory.'"

Germans Take 5,200 Prisoners.

Berlin, by wireless to Sayville, L. I., Jan. 18.—The German main army headquarters announces that as a result of the three days' fighting northeast of Soisoons about 5,200 prisoners, 14 guns, six machine guns and some revolver guns were captured.

"The further announcement is made that the French suffered heavy losses, from 4,000 to 5,000 dead French soldiers being found on the battlefield."

Allies Buy 50,000 Horses.

San Antonio, Texas, Jan. 18.—Fifty thousand horses are to be furnished the British and French governments within six months under a contract just signed by a local firm. The first shipment of not less than 5,000 is to be made by Feb. 1. Of the animals 40,000 are to be saddle horses, while 10,000 are to be for artillery.

Turks to Deliver Persians.

Amsterdam, Holland, via London, Jan. 16.—There has been received here an official communication given out at Constantinople, by the Turkish authorities as follows:

"Assisted by Persian troops our army is steadily advancing in Azerbaijan province, Persia, in order to deliver the country from the Russian yoke.

"We have had further notable success, occupying advanced positions of the Russians in the vicinity of Tabriz

SOLDIER HAS 50 WOUNDS.

London, Jan. 15.—As many as 1,000 injured soldiers sometimes land in Southampton in one day, declared Dr. Howard N. Beal of Worcester, Mass., chief of the hospital at Paignton, England, established by the American Women's War Relief Fund.

Dr. Beal cited the mortality in the hospitals in the vicinity of Dunkirk, where the worst cases have been taken, as 40 per cent. Among the injured recently received at the Paignton hospital, he said, was a boy of 19, who had 50 shrapnel wounds in his back and both of whose arms had been cut by fragments of shells.

AVEZZANO LIKE CEMETARY

CITY IS FILLED WITH DEAD AND WOUNDED.

Desperate Appeals for Help Are Heard From Those Under the Wrecked Buildings.

Avezzano, via Rome, Jan. 16.—Avezzano is filled with dead and wounded and wrecked houses. It is like the ruins of a cemetery. Those who escaped the destruction caused by the earthquake went heroically to work to reach those pinned under the fallen walls. They could not seem to understand the delay in dispatching aid to them from Rome and other centers, forgetting that more than 12 hours passed before knowledge of the gravity of the disaster reached the outside authorities.

Nearly all the civic officials of Avezzano perished, including the mayor, the under prefect, the judges, the commander of the caribiniers, parish priests, monks and nuns. The college, with more than a hundred girl students, collapsed. The governor of prisons, jailers and the doctors and patients in the hospitals were carried down in the wreckage. The only notable person who survived was the head of the police, Sig. Ottavi, who, though wounded, has labored since the overthrow, to give succor to the injured.

Cry Out for Help.

Desperate appeals for help are heard on all sides from those under wrecked buildings, but the efforts of Ottavi and the few hundred survivors have availed little, for they lacked the implements with which to effect a general rescue. But about fifty persons, all of them wounded, were taken out with great difficulty. They lay without shelter and without their wounds being dressed owing to a lack of medical supplies. Later doctors arrived and operated on some of the injured by the light of blazing torches.

They were taken to the station where they were made as comfortable as possible in trucks.

Assistance came at last from Arsoli and Aquila and large rescuing parties arrived from Rome and Pescara.

Thirty thousand soldiers have been distributed throughout the earthquake district and already large quantities of provisions and clothing together with wood for the construction of huts have arrived.

MILLION ALIENS COME YEARLY

Interesting Figures in the Annual Report of the Commissioner General of Immigration.

Washington, Jan. 16.—"Immigration, judged by the results of the year, has apparently reached the million mark permanently, and unless some affirmative action is taken by the federal government to restrict it, or steps are taken by European and other nations to reduce the steady stream of persons leaving the various countries of the old world, we need hardly expect that the number annually entering the United States will hereafter fall far below 1,000,000."

So says Commissioner General of Immigration Caminetti in his annual report, just made public. Of the number of aliens applying for admission, 33,041, or 2.3 per cent, were excluded, but Mr. Caminetti says many more should be shut out if the laws were reasonably enforced. The funds and men available, he asserts, are wholly insufficient to meet the situation. Arguing for more liberal appropriations, he declares: "Every penny spent for the support of the immigration service comes out of the pockets of the immigrants, and there is now accumulated in the treasury (or ought to be if it has not been used for purposes other than that for which collected) about $10,700,000, some of which should be used to bring about a proper enforcement of the law in the future."

About 48 per cent of all the aliens rejected during the year, or 15,745, were debarred because deemed likely to become public charges. The number excluded because of mental or physical deficiency was 14,582.

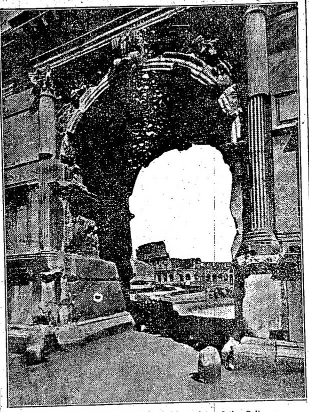
British Take African Town.

London, Jan. 18.—The forces of the Union of South Africa have occupied Swakopmund, German Southwest Africa, according to the Pretoria correspondent of Reuters' Telegram company.

England to Hold Up Letters.

London, Jan. 18.—Great Britain has decided to hold up letters destined for countries with which she is at war if they are enclosed in letters being forwarded to neutral countries unless the envelope is unsealed.

AMID ROME'S SHAKEN RUINS



The famous Arch of Titus in Rome, with a vista of the Coliseum.

WILSON ORDERS PROBE OF WHEAT AND FLOUR PRICE

DIRECTS ATTORNEY GENERAL TO INVESTIGATE WHETHER THERE HAS BEEN ANY VIOLATION OF THE LAW.

REFERS TO PETITION OF HOUSEWIVES' LEAGUE

Representative Farr Presses for Action on Food Embargo Resolution in Congress—District Attorneys Look Into Situation as Prices Increase.

Washington, Jan. 18.—President Wilson has directed Attorney General Gregory to investigate whether there had been any violation of the law in the rise of prices of wheat and flour.

The president referred to the attorney general the petition of Mrs. Julian Heath, president of the National Housewives' league, who asked drastic action, even to the point of foodstuffs embargo, to check soaring wheat and flour prices.

The department of commerce probably will be asked by the president to furnish information showing what degree of increase in exports of wheat and flour followed the outbreak of the European war.

To Stop Abnormal Rise.

Notice virtually has been served that serious punishment will follow discovery of any illegal methods in the recent advancing of wheat and flour figures. To ascertain illegality, however, the department admitted is a difficult task. Interstate trade must be involved.

Meanwhile the department of agriculture was preparing data for congress to use in connection with resolutions which seek to stop the apparently abnormal rise of prices.

In congress, Representative Farr of Pennsylvania was leading the fight against the soaring prices with little prospect of immediate action.

While he received scant encouragement from his colleagues, he was determined to press for action on a food embargo resolution, should Houston's figures of export and production prove that the quantities of wheat now going to Europe menace the United States supply. He was determined, too, that this nation's purse should not suffer solely to supply the warring nations.

United States district attorneys throughout the country have been looking itno the situation under instructions from the department which were issued by direction of President Wilson when food prices increased after the beginning of the European war.

The attorney general has received no information that illegal practices had been resorted to in connection with the federal inquiry being conducted into the wheat and flour situation in Chicago.

Condemn Germans to Death.

Casablanca, Morocco, via Paris, Jan. 18.—Two Germans, Karl Ficke and Herr Grundler, have been sentenced to death and a third German, Herr Nepekorn, to life imprisonment by a court martial sitting here. The men were accused of espionage.

May Ship Cotton to Italy.

Washington, Jan. 18.—The Italian government has informed the American embassy at Rome that cotton may be shipped "to order" with no embargo on its re-exportation.

URGE WHEAT EMBARGO.

Washington, Jan. 18.—Efforts are being made here which, if successful, may have a far-reaching influence on the northwestern wheat market. Supplemented by action in the House, New York women are endeavoring to induce President Wilson to place an embargo on wheat shipments to Europe.

A telegram addressed to President Wilson by Mrs. Julia Heath, president of the National Housewives League, claiming to represent 800,000 American families, urges the president to take drastic action.

CARRANZA IS WARNED BY U. S.

"SERIOUS CONSEQUENCES MAY FOLLOW" CONFISCATION.

Mexican Officials Already Have Practically Enforced Embargo on Exportation of Oil.

Washington, Jan. 18.—The United States government has sent a warning to General Venustiano Carranza, pointing out that "serious consequences may follow" his threatened confiscation of foreign owned oil plants in Tampico. This announcement was made by Secretary Bryan in conference with Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British ambassador, and representatives of American oil concerns.

Already the Carranza officials have practically enforced an embargo on the exportation of oil by a big English company. The British ambassador, at the suggestion of Mr. Bryan, sent an urgent telegram to the British consul at Vera Cruz, which he was instructed to show General Carranza.

The British fleet obtains much of its fuel from the Tampico oil fields, and the possibility of serious complications over the Carranza government's attitude is fully realized by the American government.

Mr. Bryan said that the foreign-owned oil companies feared confiscation of their wells by Carranza and that urgent representations had been made to forestall such action. A decree issued by the Carranza government makes it impossible for some of the foreign oil companies to operate without the consent of the Mexican authorities.

Some of the American concerns, it is said, have been forced to pay so heavy a tax that they have been practically compelled to shut down their plants.

Although there are Dutch interests at Tampico, no representations have as yet been made by the Netherlands government.

The prospects of a battle on the outskirts of Tampico between the advancing forces of General Villa and columns of Carranza under General Pablo Gonzales is expected here to develop the situation further. If the Villa forces are victorious a solution of the problem is confidently expected, because of previous assurances given by the Villa-Gutierrez officials in that district.

To Watch Wheat Combinations.

Washington, Jan. 18.—Prompt prosecutions will follow the discovery of any evidences of illegal combinations back of the recent marked increases in the cost of wheat and flour, Attorney General Gregory says. He added that the instructions sent to all United States district attorneys at the direction of President Wilson following the increase in food prices after the outbreak of the European war still stood and that the latest developments in the situation would be closely followed.

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

Stop That Backache

There's nothing more discouraging than a constant backache. You are lame when you awake. Pains pierce you when you bend or lift. It's hard to rest and next day it's the same old story.

Pain in the back is nature's warning of kidney ills. Neglect may pave the way to dropsy, gravel, or other serious kidney sickness.

Don't delay—begin using Doan's Kidney Pills—the medicine that has been curing backache and kidney trouble for over fifty years.

A Minnesota Case

Mrs. O. W. Erwin, 712 Third Ave., Little Falls, Minn., says: "I thought I would die from kidney complaint. My back was so weak I couldn't stoop and I often had to gasp for breath. My body bloated and I got so discouraged that I thought death would be a relief. After everything had failed, Doan's Kidney Pills restored me to good health. The cure has been permanent."

Get Doan's at Any Store, 50c a Box

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

FOSTER-MILBURN CO., BUFFALO, N. Y.

Her Platform.

At the Marshall home there was much discussion of woman suffrage and other political questions, and little Vera had always been a very much interested listener.

"What will you do when you can vote?" a visitor asked her.

"Help to put candy on the free list," was the unexpected reply.—Youth's Companion.

SAGE TEA AND SULPHUR DARKENS YOUR GRAY HAIR

Look Years Younger! Try Grandma's Recipe of Sage and Sulphur and Nobody Will Know.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this old, famous recipe, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. Adv.

Their Use.

"Do you see where the Futurists and Cubists have gone to Spain?"

"Maybe they use their pictures on the bulls to infuriate them in the ring."

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over 30 Years.

Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

The Soft Coal Question.

"Is she blonde or brunette?"

"I don't know; I met her in Pittsburgh."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Rheumatism
For Young and Old

The acute agonizing pain of rheumatism is soothed at once by Sloan's Liniment. Do not rub—it penetrates to the sore spot, bringing a comfort not dreamed of until tried. Get a bottle today.

RHEUMATISM

Here What Others Say:

"I highly recommend your Liniment as the best remedy for rheumatism I ever used. Before using it I spent large sums of money trying to get relief of the misery and pains in limbs and body, so I tried your Liniment both internal and external and I found quick relief, and now am well and strong again."—Geo. Curtis, 225 N. 15th St., Springfield, Ill.

Here's Proof

"I wish to write and tell you about a fall I had down fourteen steps, and bruised my neck and hip very bad. I could not sleep at all. I sent my wife for a 25 cent bottle of your Liniment and in two days' time I was on my feet again."—Charles Hyde, 1325½ Prairie Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

SLOAN'S LINIMENT

for neuralgia, sciatica, sprains and bruises.

All Druggists, 25c.

Send four cents in stamps for a TRIAL BOTTLE

Dr. Earl S. Sloan, Inc.
Dept. B. Philadelphia, Pa.

MOTHER! LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE

If cross, feverish, constipated, give "California Syrup of Figs"

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is ofttimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Adv.

Unnecessary Effort.

His Wife—This paper says an army of 100,000 men has wrecked a railroad in Belgium.

Railroad Magnate—What a waste of energy! A board of five directors could have done it just as thoroughly.—Life.

Speaking of Aunts.

"You say she is an auntie-quarian?"

"Well, that's what her fresh young nephew calls her."

YOUR OWN DRUGGIST WILL TELL YOU Try Murine Eye Remedy for Red, Weak, Watery Eyes and Granulated Eyelids; No Smarting—just Eye comfort. Write for Book of the Eye by mail Free. Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago.

The widecawake man doesn't wait for opportunity to knock at his door; he meets her at the gate.

WOMAN REFUSES OPERATION

Tells How She Was Saved by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Louisville, Ky.—"I think if more suffering women would take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound they would enjoy better health. I suffered from a female trouble, and the doctors decided I had a tumorous growth and would have to be operated upon, but I refused as I do not believe in operations. I had fainting spells, bloated, and could hardly stand the pain in my left side. My husband insisted that I try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am so thankful I did, for I am now a well woman. I sleep better, do all my housework and take long walks. I never fail to praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for my good health."—Mrs. J. M. RESCH, 1900 West Broadway, Louisville, Ky.

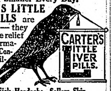
Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, is it not fair to suppose that if Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has the virtue to help these women it will help any other woman who is suffering in a like manner?

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

The Army of Constipation

Is Growing Smaller Every Day.



CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS are responsible — they not only give relief — they permanently cure Constipation. Millions use them for Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Sallow Skin.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

CANCER

Tumors, Lupus, successfully treated without knife or pain. All work guaranteed. Come, or write for Free Book. Dr. Williams, Specialist on Cancer 2900 University Av. S. E. Minneapolis.

BLACK LEG LOSSES SURELY PREVENTED by Cutter's Blackleg Pills. Low-priced, fresh, reliable; preferred by Western stockmen, because they protect where other vaccines fail. Write for booklet and testimonials. 10-dose pkge. Blackleg Pills $1.00 50-dose pkge. Blackleg Pills 4.00 Use any injector, but Cutter's best. The superiority of Cutter products is due to over 15 years of specializing in vaccines and serums only. Insist on Cutter's. If unobtainable, order direct. The Cutter Laboratory, Berkeley, Cal., or Chicago, Ill.

STATE NEWS

◆◆◆

Resume of Important Happenings of Past Few Days.

DITCH IS ALMOST COMPLETED

Drainage System Under Construction in St. Louis County Will Reclaim Large Tract of Land.

Meadowlands.—The drainage system known as St. Louis County Ditch No. 2, is in the southwestern part of St. Louis county, and mostly in the town of Meadowlands. It extends from Meadowlands southwest between the White Face and the St. Louis rivers for a distance of eight miles and on nearly every section line and some of the quarter lines. Several outlets into the rivers are provided, allowing the escape of the water without being carried a great distance in the ditches.

Since the C. A. Rood Construction company brought its walking dredge to Meadowlands it has dug all but two and one-half miles of the ditch. The work has continued night and day when possible, each crew working an eleven and one-half hour shift. In December, the exceptionally cold weather caused delay, but the men battled on against the cold and frost until they closed down for the winter on Dec. 23 in a temperature of 30 degrees below zero.

Over eight miles of road have been completed, or partially graded out of the dump. The roads in the settled portion of the community have been made passable, and bridges built on the roads that have been worked.

A portion of the territory has not been settled and is practically reclaimed by the ditches. In the vicinity of Meadowlands the country is well settled, but the cleared portions will be benefited in a large measure by the proximity of drainage ditches for outlets, which will lower the water table in the soil, thus enlarging the farms in soil depth, instead of by added surface acres.

RELATIVES LOST IN ITALY

St. Paul Italians Fear Many of Their Kinsmen Perished in Great Earthquake.

St. Paul.—Rev. H. D. Clebatone, pastor of St. Ambrose church, in Bradley street, said that he understood several members of his congregation had lost relatives through the earthquake.

"A considerable number of my people," he explained, "come from the Abruzzi district. None of them, so far as I have heard, have received direct word from their families at home.

"But the great loss of life at Avezzano and at neighboring places made several men quite certain that all of their relatives could hardly have escaped.

"I am from another part of Italy, but I have visited both Avezzano, which was destroyed and Arcola, where much damage was done. They are ancient towns, dating back to the Roman days.

"In Avezzano there were some fine antiquities, including an arch of the Emperor Constantine. Both that town and Arcola had beautiful cathedrals.

"It was at Arcola, you remember, don't you, that Napoleon with 18,000 men, defeated the Austrians with 40,000 men near the end of the eighteenth century."

CARLOS AVERY NAMED AGENT

Hutchinson Man Appointed Member of State Game and Fish Commission by Governor Hammond.

St. Paul, Jan. 16.—Carlos Avery of Hutchinson has been made a member of the state game and fish commission by Governor Hammond. In compliance with the wishes of the governor the commission elected Mr. Avery executive agent of that body. The executive agent is the only salaried member of the commission and is the directing head.

Mr. Avery was executive agent of the game and fish commission under Governor Johnson. He is the first department head of the Johnson administration who has been returned to his old office by Governor Hammond.

Brainerd. — Development in all lines will soon have its effect on the Cuyuna range, starting a period of shipping surpassing all previous records. Stockpiling on the range are the Armour No. 2 mine and the Kennedy mine of the Rogers, Brown Ore company. Both have placed timber contracts for extensive underground work.

Contract Awarded for Ditch.

Ada.—Contracts have been let for the digging and other work in connection with the judicial ditch along the line between the counties of Polk and Norman. The contract was let at the lowest price in the state for the last five years, according to J. H. Baugh, engineer in charge of the work. The ditch, including the laterals, has a length of 37 miles and roads are to be graded along the line from the dirt thrown up. It will reclaim a large area of farm land in the northern part of the county.

WANT PARDON FOR BARRETT

Detroit Business Men Ask Leniency for Fugitive Now Leading Upright Life.

St. Paul.—Lengthy petitions have been filed with the state board of pardons asking clemency for A. D. Barrett, now a fugitive from justice and located in Detroit, Mich. He escaped from the reformatory a year ago, secured employment, was married and ever since has resisted effort to return him to Minnesota.

The petition, which recites Barrett's standing in the community, and the fact that he is leading an upright life and has a family, is signed largely by members of the Detroit Y. M. C. A. and a number of business men.

Continued cases, rehearings, and new applications for pardon or commutation and advisement cases numbering sixty-eight, the smallest total in years, were to be taken up by the board of pardons in the governor's office. The only woman on the application list is Laura Ann Schmidt of Cass county, serving a life term for murder.

Twenty cases are from Hennepin county, six from Ramsey and forty-two from the rest of the state. The homicide cases are those of William Coddington, Itasca county, serving life term; Laura Ann Schmidt; Charles C. Reeves, Kittson county, another lifer; Henry W. Prolow, Goodhue county, originally sentenced to be hanged; Whitford M. Hall, sentenced for life from Blue Earth county, serving sixteen years; Phillip Mueller, serving an indeterminate sentence; Frank Sadler, a life prisoner from St. Louis county; William Billingsley, Hennepin county, sentenced to twenty years; R. Underhill, a lifer from Ramsey county, who already has served more than thirty-one years at Stillwater; James A. Godette, life prisoner from Koochiching county.

The case of Fred A. Briggs of Minneapolis, convicted of robbery in the first degree for complicity in robberies by Jerry McCarthy for years ago, also comes up. Other Hennepin county applications for pardon or other clemency are Benjamin Healy, convicted of grand larceny; Ernest Gross, attempted robbery; Fred Warner, grand larceny; Paul H. Bartlett, burglary; George Kinnard, burglary; Frank C. Wagner, forgery; Amos Flockey, robbery; Harold Francis Hawkins, forgery; Joe Poncyik, attack; Arthur Davison, grand larceny; John Smith, attack; Walter Westervelt, grand larceny; Mike Parlo, robbery; Charles George Buckley, forgery; Peter Baursk, robbery.

APPOINTMENTS BY HAMMOND

Samuel D. Works, Insurance Commissioner; J. J. Farrell, Dairy Commissioner; E. J. Lien, Librarian.

St. Paul, Jan. 15.—Governor Hammond has named heads of three state departments and hinted at more before the week is done. Most important of his appointments was that of Samuel D. Works, named insurance commissioner, which is accounted the finest post within the gift of the governor of Minnesota.

James J. Farrell of Carver, Carver county, was appointed state dairy and food commissioner, and Elias J. Lien was appointed to succeed himself as state librarian. Mr. Works and Mr. Farrell are Democrats, while Mr. Lien is a Republican, though he never played much part in politics. Mr. Farrell succeeds Joel G. Winkjer. Mr. Works succeeds J. A. O. Preus, elected state auditor last November.

TO RESTORE CONVENTIONS

Bill Devised for Minnesota Legislature Would Permit Direct Primary to Remain Supreme.

St. Paul, Jan. 14.—There has been devised for presentation to the legislature a plan for restoration of political organizations and party conventions. Possibly its most novel feature is that it permits the direct primary, the instrument of the people, to remain supreme. Those who have reviewed and studied the plan say that it would work automatically.

The party organization and the party convention would be a power just so long as said party convention remained answerable to the will of the people. The moment the party organization or the leaders thereof showed a disposition to override the wishes of the public the party organization and its conventions would find themselves automatically stripped of power.

Ask Embargo on War Supplies.

St. Paul, Jan. 14.—Six thousand St. Paul and Minneapolis citizens assembled in mass meeting at the St. Paul Auditorium adopted a resolution declaring it to be the imperative duty of congress to pass the necessary laws empowering the president to lay an embargo upon all, contraband of war, excepting foodstuffs. Similar action was taken by 500 persons attending an overflow meeting at the Saint Paul.

Adjudged Insane Twice in One Week.

St. Paul.—James Moore, taxicab driver, twice adjudged insane in one week, is "sane" again. Judge Orr stayed the order of commitment to the state asylum at St. Peter which he made after Moore had battled with five deputy sheriffs in the court room, where he had been brought for trial on a charge of highway robbery. Nels Robertson, deputy sheriff, told Judge Orr that Moore admitted to him in the county jail Monday night that he was shamming.

FARM MANURE IS VALUABLE

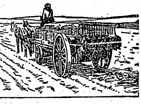
Oldest and Most Popular of Fertilizers—Immense Loss Through Careless Methods of Management.

(By E. B. HART.)

Of all fertilizers, farm fertilizers—farm manure—is the oldest and still the most popular. It consists of the liquid and solid excreta of farm stock, and the litter on which the excrement is dropped.

A well-kept manure heap may be safely taken as one of the surest indications of thrift and success in farming. Neglect of this resource causes losses, which, though little appreciated, are vast in extent. Waste of manure is both so common as to breed indifference, and so silent as to escape notice.

According to recent statistics there are in the United States in round numbers 28,300,000 horses and mules, 70,000,000 cattle, 49,000,000 hogs, and 57,500,000 sheep. Experiments indicate that if these animals were kept in stalls or pens throughout the year and the manure carefully saved, the approximate value of the fertilizing constituents of the manure produced by each horse or mule annually would be $27, by each head of cattle $20, by each hog $4, and by each sheep $2. The fertilizing value of the manure produced by the different classes of farm animals in the United States would, therefore, be for horses and mules, $764,100,000; cattle, $1,400,000,000; hogs, $198,000,000, and sheep, $115,000,000, or a total of $2,477,100,000.



Spreading Manure on the Fields.

These estimates are based on the values usually assigned to phosphoric acid, potash, and nitrogen in commercial fertilizers, and are possibly somewhat too high from a practical standpoint. On the other hand, it must be borne in mind that no account is taken of the value of manure for improving the mechanical condition and drainage of soils, a consideration fully as important as the direct fertilizing value.

It is fair to assume that at least one-third of the value of the manure is annually lost through careless methods of management; and this estimate is conservative. Even at this figure we have the tremendous sum of $825,700,000 as the annual loss in the United States. This condition is the more unfortunate, because practically all of it could be prevented.

HINTS ON POULTRY FEEDING

Quantity and Quality of Food That Would Suit One Fowl Might Do Harm to Another.

(By E. VAN BENTHUYSEN.)

There can be no set rules for feeding. Fowls, like human beings, vary in appetite. The quantity and quality of food that would keep one fowl in good condition might overfatten another.

We must approximate the amount.

The quality must be determined upon according to the object in view.

The plan adopted by the writer is to give a large spoonful of mash in the morning for every two fowls in the pen. The spoonful means about as much as one would be able to pick up in the hand.

At night, a full handful of mixed grains for every fowl in the pen is about all they can eat and that amount will carry them over in comfort until the next morning.

But when it is noticed that the fowls do not readily clean up their allowance the next day the amount should be cut down and continued so until the appetite is fully restored.

Some fowls can not only exist but be prolific on almost half what would be needed for others. When this is noticed in a pan it is advisable to cut down their allowance to meet the demand.

Sudden changes in the bill of fare very often throw fowls off their appetite. We knew of a little experience in that line a short while ago. A fellow poultryman purchased a lot of sweepings from the grain elevators. These sweepings contained wheat, corn, flaxseed, bran and middlings.

The fowls did not take kindly to the mixture and the result was there was a general decline in the egg crop. Just as soon as the old bill of fare was resumed the egg yield increased and is still keeping up a good record.

The moral is, when your fowls are doing well on your present method of feeding, do not make a change.

GREEN FEED FOR CHICKENS

Cut Clover or Alfalfa and an Occasional Feed of Sprouted Oats Are Beneficial.

Beets and mangels are of value for hens as an appetizer and bowel regulator. When the cold comes on so that the range is no longer comfortable they should have plenty of room in good, airy houses. At this time they are fed as large variety of foods as can be economically procured. Very rarely should they have wet mashes of any kind. Cut clover or ground alfalfa and an occasional feed of sprouted oats are beneficial. Sour milk also figures largely in the bill of fare.

AS IT APPEARED TO EBEN

Surely Was Something of a Miracle as Event Was Explained by The Minister.

Here is one of George W. Cable's good southern stories:

"In a town in Georgia lives an old colored fellow who is a real thorn in the side of the local ministers, for the old fellow is always asking embarrassing questions of them touching mooted theological points," says Mr. Cable.

"One day old Eben had a long and earnest discussion with his pastor in reference to just what constituted a miracle. The minister found it no easy matter to make his ideas clear to Eben.

"'I s'pose, now,' said the preacher, 'dat de greatest of all de miracles was that of de loaves and fishes. You 'member, of co'ce, dat dere was five thousand loaves and two thousand fishes which was eaten by the twelve apostles.'

"'Sho,' I 'member,' replied old Eben with a smile, 'an' it always 'peared to me dat de miracle was dat dey didn't bust!'"—The Sunday Magazine.

CARE FOR CHILDREN'S

Hair and Skin With Cuticura. Nothing Easier. Trial Free.

The Soap to cleanse and purify the skin and scalp, the Ointment to soothe and heal rashes, itchings, redness, roughness, dandruff, etc. Nothing better than these fragrant supercreamy emollients for preserving and purifying the skin, scalp and hair.

Sample each free by mail with Book. Address postcard, Cuticura, Dept. XY, Boston. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

Woman Royalties Made Army Officers.

For the first time in English history four royal women have been gazetted as colonels in chief of English regiments.

Heretofore several of them, including Queen Mary herself, have held German army titles, and Queen Victoria naturally was the head of the British army, but now Queen Mary has been appointed colonel in chief of the Eighteenth Hussars of historic fame, while the Queen Mother Alexandra is associated with the Nineteenth Hussars.

BIG EATERS HAVE BAD KIDNEYS AND BACKACHE

Take a Glass of Salts at Once If Your Back Is Hurting or Kidneys and Bladder Trouble You.

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.—Adv.

The Chances.

"Do you think the chances of the hobble skirt are promising?"

"I think they are very slim."

"CASCARETS" FOR LIVER, BOWELS

For sick headache, bad breath, Sour Stomach and constipation.

Get a 10-cent box now.

No odds how bad your liver, stomach or bowels; how much your head aches, how miserable and uncomfortable you are from constipation, indigestion, biliousness and sluggish bowels—you always get the desired results with Cascarets.

Don't let your stomach, liver and bowels make you miserable. Take Cascarets to-night; put an end to the headache, biliousness, dizziness, nervousness, sick, sour, gassy stomach, backache and all other distress; cleanse your inside organs of all the bile, gases and constipated matter which is producing the misery.

A 10-cent box means health, happiness and a clear head for months. No more days of gloom and distress if you will take a Cascaret now and then. All stores sell Cascarets. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a cleansing, too. Adv.

Proof Positive.

Visitor—The dear baby has got its grandmother's nose.

Aggrieved Papa—No, it hasn't, for she was around here this morning poking it into our business.

True Economy

Every man who is seeking to save by smoking 5c cigarettes, should see how much more satisfaction in better value he can get by paying 15c for 20 FATIMAS.

Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

20 for 15¢

FATIMA
TURKISH BLEND CIGARETTES
Cameron & Cameron Co. RICHMOND, VA.
NO GOLD TIPS BUT FINEST QUALITY

Six Blizzard Belt Apple Grafts

For Testing One named varieties of HARDY Foster Mother Root Apple Grafts make vigorous, early bearing, heavily fruiting, clean hearted, long lived trees. To prove their worth, we offer 6 Grafts (rooted) for testing, if you will send 10c to help cover cost and mailing expense. They will bear barrels upon barrels of apples in a few years' time. Catalogue telling about other Blizzard Belt fruits, EVERBEARING STRAWBERRIES, etc., FREE. Write today. The Gardner Nursery Co., Box 503 Osage, Ia.

Sudan and Billion $ Grass

Crops in 100 days from seeding! Produces enormously. Positive cure for hay shortage. BIG CATALOG FREE. John A. Salzer Seed Co., Box 717, La Crosse, Wis.

BEST MARKET for

POULTRY—VEAL—CREAM

HIDES—EGGS—BEANS

Write us for Price List and Tags.

THE R. E. COBB CO., 14 E. 3rd Street, St. Paul, Minn.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Patent Lawyer, Washington, D.C. Advice and books free. Rates reasonable. Highest references. Best services.

FINE 30,000 word Pocket Dictionary 25c postpaid. OTTOS, 2124 Coblentz Chicago, Ill.

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 4-1915.

Canadian Wheat to Feed the World

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

The war's fearful devastation of European crops has caused an unusual demand for grain from the American Continent. The people of the world must be fed and there is an unusual demand for Canadian wheat. Canada's invitation to every industrious American is therefore especially attractive. She wants farmers to make money and happy, prosperous homes for themselves while helping her to raise immense wheat crops.

You can get a Homestead of 160 acres FREE and other lands can be bought at remarkably low prices. Think of the money you can make with wheat at its present high prices, where for some time it is liable to continue. During many years Canadian wheat fields have averaged 20 bushels to the acre—many yields as high as 45 bushels to the acre. Wonderful crops also of Oats, Barley and Flax.

Mixed farming is fully as profitable an industry as grain raising. The excellent grasses, full of nutrition, are the only food required either for beef or dairy purposes. Good schools, markets convenient, climate excellent.

Military service is not compulsory in Canada, but there is an extra demand for farm labor to replace the many young men who have volunteered for the war. The Government this year is urging farmers to put extra acreage into grain.

Write for literature and particulars as to reduced railway rates to Superintendent Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or

R. A. GARRETT,
311 Jackson Street
St. Paul, Minn.
Canadian Government Agent

SPOHN'S DISTEMPER CURE

For PINK EYE DISTEMPER CATARRHAL FEVER AND ALL NOSE AND THROAT DISEASES

Cures the sick and acts as a preventive for others. Liquid given on the tongue. Safe for brood mares and all others. Best kidney remedy; 50c and $1 a bottle; $5 and $10 a dozen. Sold by all druggists and horse goods houses, or sent, express paid, by the manufacturers.

SPOHN MEDICAL CO., Chemists, GOSHEN, INDIANA

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3.1879

The Thief River Falls papers are of course rather opposed to the proposition of getting the Red Lake River declared unnavigable. And why should they not be? The river is unnavigable down there, and they can of course utilize the entire bridge fund of Pennington county in the construction of bridges, and let the farmers of the eastern part of the county get across this river any way they can. We have talked with a large number of the business men of Thief River Falls and the newspapers of that city do not voice the sentiment of the city on this proposition. Of course as soon as they mention the matter they begin to talk dam and government improvements, that we have been waiting ten years for, and there is less prospect of getting anything done by the government than there was ten years ago, for at that time there was no opposition to putting in a dam, while now there is plenty of it, and pretty powerful opposition.

The first year that this reservation was settled there was no bridge across the Clearwater river, and the people called a meeting, went down in their pockets and contributed the money and built a good substantial bridge by private subscription, and that bridge is still in use and doing good service.

If that government fence was removed, there would be a good substantial bridge across Red Lake River in the town of Highlanding in less than six months, whether the county contributed a dollar to it or not, for this river is much easier to bridge than the Clearwater river.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE.

Within a few days the legislatures of 48 states will be in session. Political heelers are swarming around the state houses, business men are demanding legislation needed for the development of state resources, office seekers are clamorous, and persons with notions and panaceas are presenting their usual visionary propositions. It is a real man's job to be a member of a state legislature.

As a whole the people of the several states do not seem very well satisfied with these bodies. Perhaps the worst trouble is that the most capable men are so reluctant to take time off their business to serve the state. There are always plenty of good and competent men in every legislature. But there are too many mere self-seekers, of very mediocre ability.

The American people have some strange notions when they get into voting booth. The writer recalls a contest in another town where a certain man was defeated who really seemed qualified. The successful candidate never made a success of anything. He had recently been ill, and it was the verdict of the community that he would be the choice, as he needed the salary. The other and better candidate was "well fixed," and did not need the money. No wonder that foolish work is done.

A legislator is very much on his honor when he gets to the state capitol. If he votes as the party leader suggests, and is present on the most important roll calls, no one seems to notice it if he dodges committee hearings, takes no time for independent study of public questions, and enjoys the session as a rest cure and sporting loaf.

It would be a good idea if some organization of citizens would undertake to watch legislators more closely, reporting absences from roll calls and committees meetings, and supplying information of such inattention to all the home constituents. —Crookston Times.

It takes a pretty strong force of government agents to hold down the lid at Bemidji, and with all their efforts the blind swine keep sticking their snoots out.

Very few actual farmers will profit by the present big price of grain, as they have sold their last season's crop. But the present high prices will encourage them to raise as much grain as possible next year.

The county optionist have six members on the temperance committee in the house of representatives, against nine who are opposed to county option. Don't you think it will take some time to get a county option measure out of that committee?

We are pleased to note that the legislative members from this district are keeping their pledges made to the people last fall. May-be that warm campaign brought some good results, but there is nothing like keeping an eye on the men, that you send down there, as some of the fellows have already fallen by the wayside.

STOP THE CHILD'S COLDS THEY OFTEN RESULT SERIOUSLY.

Cold's, Croup and Whooping Cough are children's ailments which need immediate attention. The after-affects are often most serious. Don't take the risk—you don't have to. Dr. King's New Discovery checks the Cold, soothes the cough, allays the Inflammation, kills the Germs and allows Nature to do her healing work. 50c. at your Druggist. Buy a bottle to-day.—adv.

MANY DISORDERS COME FROM THE LIVER.

ARE YOU JUST AT ODDS WITH YOURSELF?

DO YOU REGULATE LIVING?

Are you sometimes at odds with yourself and with the world? Do you wonder what ails you? True you may be eating regularly and sleeping well. Yet something is the matter! Constipation, Headache, Nervousness and Bilious Spells indicate a Sluggish Liver. The tried remedy is Dr. King's New Life Pills. Only 25c. at your Druggist. Bucklen's Arnica Salve for Skin Eruptions.—adv.

TRY THIS FOR NEURALGIA.

Thousands of people keep on suffering with Neuralgia because they do not know what to do for it. Neuralgia is a pain in the nerves. What you want to do is to soothe the nerve itself. Apply Sloan's Liniment to the surface over the painful part—do not rub it in. Sloan's Liniment penetrates very quickly to the sore, irritated nerve and allays the in inflammation. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25 cents of any druggist and have it in the house—against Colds, Sore and Swollen Joints, Lumbago, Sciatica and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief.—adv.

CHILDREN'S COUGHS—CHILDREN'S COLDS BOTH ARE SERIOUS

When one of your little ones shows symptons of an approaching Cold, give it Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey at once. It acts quickly, and prevents the Cold growing worse. Very healing—soothes the Lungs, loosens the mucous, strengthens the system. It's guaranteed. Only 25c. at your Druggist. Buy a bottle to-day. Bucklen's Arnica Salve for Sores.—adv.

WE HAVE

$150,000.00

TO LOAN ON FARMS IN

PENNINGTON COUNTY

Write Or Call on Us At FIRST NATIONAL BANK

THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN.

DO YOUR BANKING WITH

FARMERS STATE BANK

GOODRIDGE - - MINNESOTA

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS $12, 000.

5 per cent paid on time deposits

Fire and Torrado Insurance Written in Responsible Companies.

FARM LOANS A SPECIALITY

J. M. BISHOP, President JAY PAYNE Vice-President

NICK BUNDHUND. Cashier

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Jan 1st. 1914

Department of the Interior U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Dec. 28th 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Matt Bakken, of Rhoda, Minn. who on April 8th, 1909, made Homestead Application Serial No. 04712, for N. ½ N. W. ¼ & S. E. ¼ N. W. ¼, Sec. 9, and who on April 16th, 1909 made a additional Homestead Application Serial No. 04785, for S. W. ¼ N. W. ¼ Sec. 9, Township 152 N. Range 40 West Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make Commutation Proof to establish claim to the land above described before N. W. Tarrant Municipal Judge for the city of Thief River Falls, Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 2d. day of February, 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Edward Singer, M. E. Hyland, Ole Skrieland, of Rhoda, Minn. Stephen Singer of Kratka, Minn.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register.

THE RURAL PRESS

The Local Paper a Most Useful Agency on the Farm—The Press, Pulpit and School a Trinity of Influence That Must Be Utilized in Building Agriculture.

By Peter Radford
Lecturer National Farmers' Union

A broad campaign of publicity on the subject of rural life is needed in this state today to bring the problems of the farmers to the forefront. The city problems are blazoned upon the front pages of the metropolitan dailies and echoed in the country press, but the troubles of the farmers are seldom told, except by those who seek to profit by the story, and the glitter of the package ofttimes obscures the substance. A searching investigation into the needs of the farmers will reveal many inherent defects in our economic system that can be easily remedied when properly understood and illuminated by the power of the press.

The rural press, the pulpit and the school are a trinity of powerful influences that the farmer must utilize to their fullest capacity before he can occupy a commanding position in public affairs. These gigantic agencies are organized in every rural community and only await the patronage and co-operation of the farmers to fully develop their energy and usefulness. They are local forces working for the best interests of their respective communities. Their work is to build and their object is to serve. They prosper only through the development and prosperity of the community.

Every farmer in this state should subscribe for the local paper, as well as farm periodicals and such other publications as he may find profitable, but he should by all means subscribe for his local paper, and no home should be without it. The local paper is part of the community life and the editor understands the farmer's problems. It is the local press that will study the local problems and through its columns deal with subjects of most vital importance to local life of the community.

A Noble Task.

In too many instances the country papers mimic the city press by giving prominence to scandals, accidents and political agitation. The new rural civilization has placed upon the rural press renewed responsibilities, and enlarged possibilities for usefulness. It cannot perform its mission to agriculture by recording the frailties, the mishaps and inordinate ambitions of humanity, or by filling its columns with the echoes of the struggles of busy streets, or by enchanting stories of city life which lure our children from the farm.

It has a higher and nobler task. Too often the pages of the city dailies bristle with the struggle of ambitious men in their wild lust for power, and many times the flames of personal conflict sear the tender buds of new civilization and illuminate the pathway to destruction. The rural press is the governing power of public sentiment and must hold steadfast to principle and keep the ship of state in the roadstead of progress. The rural press can best serve the interests of the farmers by applying its energies to the solution of problems affecting the local community. It must stem the mighty life current that is moving from the farm to the cities, sweeping before it a thousand boys and girls per day. It has to deal with the fundamental problems of civilization at their fountain head. Its mission is to direct growth, teach efficiency and mold the intellectual life of the country, placing before the public the daily problems of the farmers and giving first attention to the legislative, co-operative, educational and social needs of the agricultural classes within its respective community.

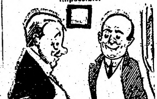
The Power of Advertising.

The influence of advertising is clearly visible in the homes and habits of the farmers, and the advertising columns of the press are making their imprint upon the lives of our people. The farmer possesses the things that are best advertised.

The farmer is entitled to all the advantages and deserves all the luxuries of life. We need more art, science and useful facilities on the farms, and many homes and farms are well balanced in this respect, but the advertiser can render a service by teaching the advantages of modern equipment throughout the columns of the rural press.

The farmers are in need of personal leadership. They have political leaders, but they need local industrial community and educational leaders.

Impossible.



"Can't he read between the lines?"
"I guess not. He's illiterate."—Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune.

FIRST STATE BANK,

Of Plummer Minnesota.

SERVICE
SECURITY
STABILITY

STOP to consider what a GOOD BANK ACCOUNT INSURES. The business man can employ the best help and insure SERVICE. Depression may come in his line, but his big CASH ON HAND means SECURITY. The fine line of credits may be drawn tight, but none will question his STABILITY. Give your business SERVICE, SECURITY and STABILITY with your bank deposits.

J.A.DUFFY President, Henry Enderlie, Cashier

FARMERS & MERCHANTS STATE BANK

Oklee Minn.

The rapid growth of this bank is the best evidence that its policy and methods meet with the approval of the people in our community.

You will find this bank as liberal in its dealings as is consistent with sound banking.

We are at all times prepared to discuss your requirements with you and invite consultation.

Pay your bills with checks on this bank.

Farm Loans At Lowest Rates And On Easy Terms.

Six per cent interest paid on time deposits.

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS——————————$14,500.00

J. A. C. Torgerson, V. P. W. B. Torgerson, Cashier.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Dec. 25th 1914.

Department of the Interior., U. S. Land office at Crookston Minn. Dec. 21st, 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Harry Stucy, of Hilda Minn. who on October, 3rd 1912; made Homestead Application Serial No 08491, for W ½ N W ¼ Sec. 33. and N E ¼ N E ¼. Section 32 Township 153 N. Range 39 West Fifth Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof, to establish claim to the land above described before Wilhelm Michelet.U.S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls. Minnesota on the 26th day of January 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Chas. L. Stucy, Fred Stucy, of Erie, Minn William Lueck, Gilbert G. Hanson, of Hilda, Minn.

Proof made under act of June 6. 1912.

Peter M. Ringdal.
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First pub. in The Sunbeam Jan. 8th, 1915.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Jan. 6th. 1915.

Notice is hereby given that Thomas G. Rome, of Rhoda, Minnesota, who on February 8th 1912, made Homestead Application, Serial No. 07282, for Lots 5 and 6.Section 6 Township 152 N. Range 40 W 5th principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make Five Year proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls, Minn. on the 16th. day of February 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Sam B. Swanson, Ole G. Skreland, of Rhoda, Minn., Andrew Feland, William G. Hunt, of Sunbeam Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

PETER M. RINGDAL,
Register.

We have for sale one of the best quarter sections of land in the town of Highlanding, located one mile south of Highlanding, Creamery. This farm will be sold cheap as the owner is a non resident and desires to use the money invested in other business. For terms and full particulars call on W. G. Hunt, Sunbeam, Minn.

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Jan. 8th 1915

Department of the Interior.U.S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Dec. 31st, 1914.

Notice is hereby given that George T. Christofferson, of Erie, Minn. who on May 3rd. 1912 made Homestead Application Serial No. 07903, for S. W. ¼ Section 25 Township 153 N. Range 39 W. 5th. Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Commutation Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for District of Minn. at Thief River Falls. Minn. on the 18th day of February, 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Hilmer C. Iverson, Anders H. Vake, Ole K. Lien, Generius Christofferson, all of Erie Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register

MONEY TO LOAN ON FARM LAND

MACKEY J. THOMPSON
FARM MORTGAGES
ST. PAUL, MINNESOTA

CONTRACTS, FIRST AND SECOND MORTGAGES BOUGHT

U. S. Mail.

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 1:05 p. m., on Tuesday Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.55 p.m

Wm.G. Hunt, p.m.

W. G. Hunt

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. XIV. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, JANUARY 29, 1915. NO. 46.

THE LOCAL NEWS

There is to be another hall built at Goodridge.

Please pay up some of that long past due subscription.

It is an easy way to raise wheat, by raising it from another man's grainary.

The weather has been extremely cold the past week, with bright sunshiny days.

Next Tuesday is ground hog day, "half your corn, and half your hay."

We understand that there will be another elevator built at Goodridge this summer.

C. L. Clark and Henry Bost made a business trip to Thief River Falls Monday, returning Tuesday.

We hear that quite a number of wheat thieves were caught down near Thief River Falls, for raising wheat from another man's grainary.

About all the farmers who visit the county seat now days, take a short cut for the Electric line, where they can get a good warm ride to town.

Advertisement is out for bids to put up the season's ice for the Highlanding Creamery Association. It is published in another column.

Jack Frost is liable to make a raid on your potato bin during this cold weather. A lighted lantern hanging in a cellar will drive back a light touch of frost.

The Catholic church, at Thief River Falls was destroyed by fire Monday morning. We did not learn the origin of the fire or the amount of insurance.

Clifford Shosten and Joe Thomson are attending court at Thief River Falls this week, where Mr. Thomson has a personal injury case.

There is to be a masquerade ball at the Wojnarowski Hall, in the town of Hickory, to-morrow night. First class music. All are invited.

The town of Mayfield are acting as a Belgium relief committee for the family of Joe LaCounte, while he is boarding at Red Lake Falls as the guest of Sheriff Fellman.

We did not learn the result of the injunction case against the Electric Line Railroad, tried at Thief River Falls this week, but hope they will get a decision to to let us land in town. We do not know anything about the merits of this case, so we cannot express any opinion.

Senator O'Neill has introduced a bill in the legislature to compel railway companies to furnish cars that do not leak for the shipment of grain. We always knew that there was a big leakage between the producer and consumer, and if Mr. O'Neill can stop some of them it will be a good thing for the farmers.

Petitions are out to the Board of County Commissioners of Pennington County to pass a resolution declaring Red Lake River a non-navigable stream. Be sure to sign one of these petitions so we can get that government fence removed, and get some bridges across this river. The only thing for you to consider about signing the petition, is whether you would like to have bridges on this river, and build up the country you live in, or let it remain as the Indians left it. The Indians used to navigate their canoes on Red Lake River, but it has grown too shallow to use for that purpose now.

Representative Sliter of Houston county has introduced a bill to cut down the term of county officers to two years, after 1918, at the end of their present terms. This would repeal that law "worked" through the legislature two years ago by county officers before the people noticed it. If a county official is honest and renders satisfactory service to the people he can easily be re-elected, and if he is dishonest the people should have a chance to fire him out after an endurance of his services for two years.

Singer's Mail Service.

Ben Kveste of Highlanding, called at this office Tuesday to square accounts the Eleven Towns Mr. Kveste is justly very much provoked at the mail service he is getting at the present time. The mail passes by him to Erie where it lays until next day for distribution and is then scattered in the boxes hap hazard.—The Eleven Towns.

We suppose that Mr. Kveste will soon begin realize the same as other people along that line do, that, that mail route is not arranged to accommodate the people, but to throw all the cancellation to the Kratka postoffice, so the "assistant postmaster general and candidate for attorney general" and post master at Kratka, can get all the cancellation. It took him some time to get it arranged that way, but he got it done at last, and now the people can take what they get in the way of mail service.

The worthy son post master at Kratka, of the worthy sire post master at Rhoda, is now assisting the Rhoda post master to get all mail routes on this side of the Red Lake River so arranged as to throw all cancellation into the Rhoda postoffice, and leave all the people's mail of the town of Mayfield lay over at Sunbeam post office the same as that on the north side of the river lays over at Erie.

But if the point of our pencil don't wear out, we will place the facts before the people as they are, and we are not going to call an old black kettle white, when we are doing it.

BIDS WANTED

Bids will be received by the Highlanding Co-operative Creamery Association up to February 3rd, 1915 at 2 P.M. for the cutting of ice for the creamery. The ice must be cut eighteen inches square. Bidder whose bid is accepted must be there to sign a contract. Board has right to accept or reject all bids.

Amanda Dunn, Sec'y

FOR SALE

One 20-35 H. P. Avery Gas Tractor. One Avery "self lift" six bottom gang with stubble and breaking bottoms. One Avery 32-54 Grain Separator. One 500 gal. Gasoline Tank. This outfit has not been used very much and is nearly as good as new. All complete goes for $2800.00. Might take land in exchange. For further information write,

Omundson Bros.
Thief River Falls, Minn.
Kratka Route.

EAT

When you are AT GOODRIDGE, Call at the Goodridg Restaurant and get A cup of HOT COFFEE, or a good warm dinner for 25 cents. Don't forget the sign of

EAT

BARBER SHOP IN CONNECTION

STEPHENSON BROS. Prop.

LUMBER AND BUILDING MATERIALS.

When you get ready to build, come in and let us figure your bill and show you our stock of lumber and building materials.

Complete stocks at Thief River Falls, Mavie and Goodridge, Minn.

WINTON-NICHOLS LUMBER COMPANY.

Go to S. P. Johnson, at Oklee

"The Right Place"

Boys Suits from $1.25, to $4.50 per suit. Mens suits, former price $25 00, Now selling for $16.00. $15.00 suits now selling for $8.50

$8.50 suits now selling for $4.50.

Men's shoes from $1.25 to $3.50. Former price $4 00 now $3.25.

Ladies shoes $1.50 to $3.00.

Prints 5 cents per yard. Gingham 8 cents to 10 cents per yard. All Dry Goods at cost. Men's Caps goes at any price.

Sugar for this week is $6 00 per 100 lbs. Good coffee for 18 cents to 30 cents a pound. Bargains in all kind of goods.

S. P. JOHNSON, Oklee, Minn.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Three Hundred Ninety Five, and 73—100 ($395.73) Dollars, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by Manuel Niemi and Ida Niemi, his wife, mortgagors, to the Merchants State Bank of Red Lake Falls, mortgagee, bearing date the 15th, day of March 1913, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Pennington, and State of Minnesota on the 26th day of April 1913 at 9:00 o'clock A. M. in Book 1 of mortgages on page 475.

NOW THEREFORE, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, VIZ:

The North West quarter of South East quarter (N W ¼ of S E ¼) and East half of South East quarter (E ½ of S E ¼) of Section thirty-four (34) and North West quarter of South West quarter (N W ¼ of S W ¼) of Section thirty five (35) in Township one hundred fifty two (152) North, of Range thirty nine (39) West of the 5th Principal Meridian in Pennington County, and the State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Pennington County at the front door of the court house in the City of Thief River Falls in said County and State on the 27th day of February A. D. 1915 at 10:00 o'clock A. M. of that day at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt of Three Hundred Ninety Five and 73—100 [$395.73] Dollars and the taxes, if any, on said premises and Twenty Five [$25.00] Dollars attorney's fees as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law:

Dated January 9th. 1915
John C. Mathews,
Attorney for Mortgagee,
Red Lake Falls, Minn.
Merchants State Bank of Red Lake Falls
J. A. Duffy,
Cashier

Three applicants for citizens papers were turned down at Thief River Falls Monday. People who want to be citizens of the United States should post up on American history, as the time is passed when you can have a neighbor do the talking for you.

THE PRICHARD Co.

Thief River Falls Minn.

DEALERS IN LUMBER AND FARM MACHINERY.

Located west of the new Soo Depot. Give us a call, and look over our stock of Lumber and Farm Machinery.

H. O. KJOMME
Attorney and Counselor at Law
COUNTY ATTORNEY
Mcginn Block
Thief River Falls, - - Minn.

Wilhelm Michelet
U. S. COMMISSIONER
COURT HOUSE
THIEF RIVER FALLS,
MINN.

WOOD FOR SALE.

I have all kinds of wood for sale, both green and dry, at reasonable prices.

L. W. Wojnarowski,
Section 8, Town of Hickory.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Jan. 1st, 1915.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minnesota Dec. 29th 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Charles O. Asp, of Kratka, Minn. who on August 24th 1908, made Homestead Entry No, 0474, for S. E. ¼ Section 33, Township 153 N. Range 41 W. Fifth, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, at Thief River Falls Minn, on the 13th day of February 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses: Ole S. Breiland. Ole A. Hoidahl, Kettel Brekke, Dreng O. Roisland, all of Kratka, Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

PETER M RINGDAL,
Register.

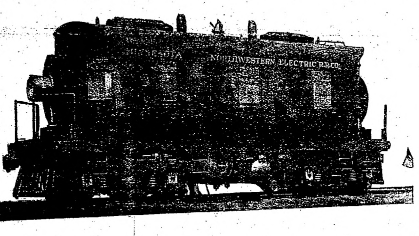
Cuts, Burns,

Bruises, Sores, Wounds and Piles quickly healed with Arnica Salve. It prevents infection, is antiseptic, soothing, healing. Try it once. Money Back If It Fails. The Original and Genuine.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve

Heals the Hurt
All Druggists and Dealers, 25c.

Minnesota Northwestern Electric Railway Co.



TIME TABLE.

Going East

Train No. 1.
LEAVE—Thief River Falls at 7:15 A. M.
Silverton at 7:40 A. M.
Mavie at 8:05 A. M.
ARRIVE—Goodridge at 8:30 A. M.

Train No. 5.
LEAVE—Thief River Falls at 10:00 A. M.
Silverton at 11:10 A. M.
Mavie at 11:40 A. M.
ARRIVE—Goodridge at 12:10 A.M.

Train No. 3.
LEAVE—Thief River Falls at 3:45 P. M.
Silverton at 4:10 P. M.
Mavie at 4:35 P. M.
ARRIVE—Goodridge at 5;00 P. M.

Going West
To Thief River Falls

Train No 2
LEAVE--Goodridge at 8:45 A. M.
Mavie at 9:10 A. M.
Silverton at 9:35 A. M
ARRIVE--Thief River Falls at 10:00 A. M.

Train No. 6.
LEAVE--Goodridge at 1:45 P. M
Mavie at 2:15 P. M.
Silverton at 2:45 P. M.
ARRIVE--Thief River Falls at 3:30 P. M.

Train No 4.
LEAVE--Goodridge at 5:15 P. M.
Mavie at 5:40 P. M.
Silverton at 6:05 P. M.
ARRIVE--Thief River Falls at 6:30 P. M.

Cash For Hides and Furs.

If you have Hides or Furs for sale, bring them to the Oklee meat market and get the highest market price in cash.

Meat Market,
Oklee, Minn.

Anton Ellingson, of Erskine, Minn. was up visiting his brother Andrew Ellingson of Highlanding this week, and looking after his business interests here.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

A new insane hospital is to be built in northern Minnesota, and we would suggest Thief River Falls as the proper place to build it.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists. Price 75c per bottle.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

BILIOUS, HEADACHY, SICK "CASCARETS"

Gently cleanse your liver and sluggish bowels while you sleep.

Get a 10-cent box.

Sick headache, biliousness, dizziness, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath—always trace them to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months. Adv.

WANTED TO CONTINUE GAME

Secretary Lane Couldn't Understand Defeat in Golf While He Had Clubs to Play.

Josephus Daniels, secretary of the navy, was invited the other day to go out and play golf.

"I can't play it," said Daniels; "I made up my mind some time ago not to go in for golf until they change the rules."

"How do you mean?"

"Well, until they change the rules and make it as good a game as shinny."

That recalls the tale they tell about the time Franklin K. Lane, now secretary of the interior, first undertook the mastery of golf.

Two enthusiasts over the game lent a large set of clubs to Lane and they played a round. When they had reached the last hole Lane walked over to the nearest teeing place and began attempts to drive off with each club in his sack, one after another.

"The game's all over," they explained, gently.

"Well," asked Lane, picking up another kind of club, "can't I play my hand out?"—New York Sun.

Pan-American Union.

The Pan-American union is an official organization made up of the twenty-one republics of the American continent. Its office is in Washington and its executive officer is John Barrett, with the title of director general of the Pan-American Union. The governing board which controls its activities is composed of the diplomatic representatives at Washington of each of these nations, with the secretary of state of the United States as its chairman. Its home is in a beautiful white marble palace which cost one million dollars, of which Andrew Carnegie gave three quarters of a million dollars and the various governments gave a quarter million dollars.—Leslie's Weekly.

No Change.

"He became run down from his overworking himself at agricultural pursuits, and the doctor advised a change of occupation, which is why he came back to town and set up as a fashionable dentist."

"That's no change of occupation. He's still cultivating achers."

Solace.

"Ah," he murmured, "if there were only something in this mundane world that would solace all these vague yearnings, satisfy one's wildest longings, and fill the aching void within!"

"Well, what's the matter with pie?"

THREE REASONS

Each With Two Legs and Ten Fingers.

A Boston woman who is a fond mother writes an amusing article about her experience feeding her boys.

Among other things she says: "Three chubby, rosy-cheeked boys, Bob, Jack, and Dick, respectively, are three of our reasons for using and recommending the food, Grape-Nuts, for these youngsters have been fed on Grape-Nuts since infancy, and often between meals when other children would have been given candy.

"I gave a package of Grape-Nuts to a neighbor whose 3-year-old child was a weazened little thing, ill half the time. The little tot ate the Grape-Nuts and cream greedily and the mother continued the good work, and it was not long before a truly wonderful change manifested itself in the child's face and body. The results were remarkable, even for Grape-Nuts.

"Both husband and I use Grape Nuts every day and keep strong and well and have three of the finest, healthiest boys you can find in a day's march."

Many mothers instead of destroying the children's stomachs with candy and cake give the youngsters a handful of Grape-Nuts when they are begging for something in the way of sweets. The result is soon shown in greatly increased health, strength and mental activity.

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Look in pkgs. for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

CAPTURED RUSSIANS RESTING BY THE ROADSIDE

Copyright, Underwood & Underwood

From the eastern theater of the war comes this interesting photograph showing Russian infantry and Cossacks, captured by the Germans in the battle of Stuckoff, resting by the roadside on their way to the German concentration camp at Loniczyca.

TEUTON AIRMEN DROP BOMBS ON DUNKIRK, FRANCE

KILL SIX AND INJURE FOURTEEN OTHERS—FRENCH AND BRITISH CHASE GERMAN AEROPLANES.

ZEPPELIN REPORTED LOST IN NORTH SEA

Dutch Fishermen Assert They Saw Large Airship Founder, but Were Unable to Assist the Aircraft—British Airman Hurls Explosives on Bruges.

Paris, Jan. 25.—A semi-official note just issued says that a number of German aviators attacked Dunkirk, throwing eighty bombs. The victims numbered twenty, six ofw hom are dead. A large warehouse was set afire by one of the bombs.

French and English aviators, who chased the German aeroplanes, brought down one at Bray-Dunes, on the Belgian frontier. Its two occupants were made prisoners.

Kill Two German Aviators.

London, Jan. 25.—The correspondent of the Daily Mail at Havre, in his report on the aeroplane attack on Dunkirk, says:

"Several German aeroplanes dropped bombs on Dunkirk. One of them was brought down at Great Dunes, between Dunkirk and Furnes, and the two German airmen this machine contained were killed. Then unexploded bombs still were attached to the aeroplane."

Drops Bombs on Bruges.

Amsterdam, via London, Jan. 25.—A British airman dropped bombs on the important Bruges, Belgium, docks, according to news which has reached here. The result of the attack is not yet known. The aviator escaped unhurt, although he was attacked by the Germans.

Zeppelin Lost in North Sea.

London, Jan. 25.—Dutch fishermen arriving at Noordwijk, Holland, asserted that they saw a large airship men, dispatches add, were unable to assist the aircraft. The description of the vessels given by the men indicates that it was a Zeppelin. Noordwijk is a watering place of The Netherlands, seven miles northwest of Leyden.

London, Jan. 25.—Although the reports of another Zeppelin raid on England seem to have been false there has been a striking renewal of aerial activity on the continent. The Germans have raided Dunkirk in force and British airmen launched an attack upon Bruges.

The German raid on Dunkirk resulted in considerable loss of life and damage to property. One account says ten aeroplanes took part in it. British aeroplanes assumed the defensive and succeeded in bringing down one of the visitors.

Other Raids Expected.

This method of defense is regarded by English experts as more likely to prove effective than the anti-air craft guns with which the defenses of Dunkirk bristle. It is believed here that the British raid on Bruges will be followed up by other attacks, as the Bruges docks are the head of the Zeebrugge ship canal system, which the Germans are using for transportation of the men, munitions and even heavy artillery.

Great Northern Official Dies.

Portland, Ore., Jan. 23.—William D. Scott, for several years general manager of the Spokane, Portland & Seattle railway, a Hill line, and one of J. J. Hill's proteges, who rose from brakeman to one of the highest officials of the Great Northern, died here of heart disease, the end coming after attacks at intervals of two weeks. The funeral will be held here as soon as word is received from St. Paul, as it is probable that several of the highest officials of the Great Northern will be in attendance at the last rites.

DEFENDS BELGIAN INVASION

GERMAN CHANCELLOR DENIES NEUTRALITY PACT BELITTLED.

Declares He is Surprised That Phrase "Scrap of Paper" Caused Unfavorable Impression.

General Field Headquarters of the German Armies, (in France) via Berlin and London, Jan. 26.—"I am surprised to learn that my phrase, 'A scrap of paper,' which I used in my last conversation with the British ambassador in reference to the Belgian neutrality treaty, should have caused such an unfavorable impression in the United States The expression was used in quite another connection, and the meaning implied in Sir William Edward Goschen's report and the turn given to it in the biased comment of our enemies are undoubtedly responsible for this impression."

The speaker was Dr. Theobald von Bethmann-Hollweg, the German imperial chancellor, and the conversation occurred at the German army field headquarters in a town of northern France, and in a villa serving as the office and dwelling for the imperial chancellor, for the foreign minister, Gottlieb von Jagow, and for the members of the diplomatic suite accompanying Emperor William afield.

The chancellor apparently had not relished the subject until his attention was called to the extent which the phrase had been used in discussion of the responsibility of the war. He then volunteered to give an explanation of his meaning. In substance it was that he had spoken of the treaty not as a scrap of paper for Germany, but "as an instrument which had become obsolete through Belgium's forfeiture of its neutrality"; and that Great Britain had quite other reasons for entering into the war, compared with which the neutrality treaty appeared to have only the value of a scrap of paper.

"My conversation with Sir William Edward Goschen," said the Chancellor, "occurred Aug. 4. I had just declared in the reichstag that only dire necessity and only the struggle for existence compelled Germany to march through Belgium, but that Germany was ready to make compensation for the wrong committed."

U. S. NEEDS MERCHANT SHIPS

Hill, Redfield and Ship Owner Debate Question of Government Owned Vessels, at St. Louis.

St. Louis, Jan. 25.—A three-cornered debate between James J. Hill of St. Paul, Secretary of Commerce Redfield and Welding Ring, a shipper and ship owner of New York, developed at the National Foreign Trade convention here.

Mr. Hill was not present but a paper which he had prepared was and this drew forth a reply from Secretary Redfield in defense of the plan for government owned steamships, and a rejoinder from Ring.

"Freedom for our foreign trade" was the title of Mr. Hill's paper. He said the "indispensable" condition for such freedom was adequate ocean carriage in American ships. To buy service by big subsidies was, he declared, a losing game. The need of merchant ships in America was almost as great as that of other nations for munitions of war."

Rescued Crew Reaches New York.

New York, Jan. 25.—Eighteen members of the crew of the British steamer Chareas, which was sunk by the German auxiliary cruiser Prinz Eiten Frederich off Port Carral, Chile, Dec. 7, reached this port on board the steamer Panama from Cristopal.

Arrest 32 Deputy Sheriffs.

Roosevelt, N. J., Jan. 25.—Thirty-two sheriff's deputies, charged with murder, are being held without bail in the Middlesex county jail at New Brunswick, charged with being responsible for the shooting of strikers here last Tuesday. Two of the idle employes of the American Agricultural Chemical company died of their wounds and nearly a score were hurt in the clash, alleged to have been precipitated by deputies guarding the company's plants.

SHIP PURCHASE BILL IN SENATE STARTS BATTLE

PRESIDENTIAL POLITICS AND 1916 CAMPAIGNS INVOLVED IN SITUATION BEFORE THE UPPER HOUSE.

WILSON'S DISCIPLINE IS DECLARED FAILING

Senator Cummins Assails Measure and Takes Occasion to Attack President Because of His Recent Indianapolis Speech—Efforts Have Failed.

Washington, Jan. 25.—Presidential politics and jockeying for position in 1916 are involved in the situation which exists in the senate in the fight over the president's ship purchase bill. There is an evident falling off in the discipline which the president has heretofore exerted over both houses of congress, and there are indications that the test of the administration strength is close at hand.

Attacks President Wilson.

An address of more than usual significance was that made by Senator Cummins of Iowa, listed as a Progressive Republican, in which he assailed the ship purchase bill and took occasion to attack the president because of his recent Indianapolis speech.

Senator Cummins' remarks indicate that the efforts made by the Democratic caucus in amending the provisions of the bill in order to keep the Progressive Republicans in line, have failed, and that the Republican senators who are still described by the prefix have decided to cast loose from even a tentative adherence to the program of the administration.

Declares Ship Bill Dangerous.

Referring to the ship purchase bill, the Iowa senator described it as "one of the most reactionary and dangerous proposals ever made public." He declared the administration was not entitled to be called progressive. Referring to the president's recent Indianapolis speech, the Iowa senator said:

"I predict it will pass into history as a lamentable attempt of a president to forget the courtesy and dignity always looked for in one who occupies the most exalted office in the world."

He criticized the president for attempting to whip congress into line, and referring to the tariff and currency laws, said it approached "deceit" to call them "progressive."

Previous to the attack by Senator Cummins, which was regarded as a tentative announcement of his own candidacy for the Republican nomination for the presidency, the Democratic senators in caucus had made amendments which they believed would hold several of the progressive senators in line.

Amend White House Plan.

Under the plan which came from the White House, the shipping board was to have been composed of the secretaries of the treasury, of commerce and the postmaster general. This was amended so that the board would consist of the secretaries of the treasury and of commerce and three civilians who had had experience in oversea business. It also limited the capital stock to $20,000,000. It also provided that the corporation should be incorporated under the laws of the District of Columbia.

Obregon Denies Report.

El Paso, Texas, Jan. 23.—Gen. Alvaro Obregon, commander of the main group of the Carranza forces, denied in a telegram to local agents that he had entered into an agreement with General Eulalio Gutierrez for the overthrow of Carranza.

Mexico City, via El Paso, Texas, Jan. 23.—In an interview Colonel Roque Gonzales Garza, temporary executive of Mexico, said that a majority of the officials of the different departments of the government were continuing their duties.

GERMAN CRUISER IS SUNK; 762 MEN LOST IN BATTLE

ATTEMPT BY TEUTON SQUADRON TO REPEAT ATTACK ON ENGLISH COAST TOWNS IS FAILURE.

TWO BATTLE CRUISERS SERIOUSLY DAMAGED

British Ships Suffer Only Slight Injury—Clash Occurred Between Light Cruisers and Destroyers—Only 123 of Crew Are Saved.

London, Jan. 26.—An attempt by a German cruiser squadron to repeat the attack recently made on Scarborough, the Hartlepools and other British coast towns was frustrated by the British patrolling squadron, and in a running fight the German armored cruiser Bluecher was sunk and two German battle cruisers were seriously damaged.

The British ships suffered only slight injury. So far as is known only 123 of the Bluecher's crew of 885 were saved.

A battle also occurred between the light cruisers and destroyers, accompanying the bigger ships, but the result of this engagement has not yet reached the admiralty.

The British were superior in ships engaged, weight of armament and speed, and the flight of the German ships into the mine and submarine infested field possibly saved them from further losses.

Bluecher Re-rigged Last Year.

The Bluecher was a cruiser of 15,550 tons displacement, and although commissioned in 1908, was completely re-rigged last year. She was not classed as a battle-cruiser, but was in the next class to those formidable fighters. With her were the Derflinger, Germany's latest battle cruiser, which had just left the builders' hands, and the battle cruisers Seydlitz and Moltke, the latter a sister ship of the Goeben, formerly of the German, but now of the Turkish fleet, which was recently reported damaged by the Russians in the Black Sea.

The British squadron, commanded by Vice Admiral Sir David Beatty, who also was in command at the battle off Helgoland last August, consisted of the battle cruisers Tiger, Lion, Princess Royal, New Zealand and Indomitable. The first three of these cruisers mount eight 13.5 inch guns each, and even the New Zealand and Indomitable carry 12 inch guns, which are equal to those of the Derflinger, the only one of the German ships that had better than 11 inch guns.

Sight German Cruisers.

The official report issued by the Press Bureau gives the following account of the engagement:

Early in the morning a British patrolling squadron of battle cruisers and light cruisers, under Vice Admiral Sir David Beatty, with a destroyer flotilla under Commodore Tyrwihitte, sighted four German battle cruisers, several light cruisers, and a number of destroyers steering westward, and apparently making for the English coast.

"The enemy at once made for home at high speed. They were at once pursued and at about 9:30 a. m. action was joined between the battle cruisers Lion, Tiger, Princess Royal, New Zealand and Indomitable on the one hand and the Derflinger, Syedlitz, Moltke and Bluecher on the other. A well contested running fight ensued. Shortly after 1 o'clock the Bluecher, which had previously fallen out of line, capsized and sank.

"Admiral Beatty reports that two other battle cruisers were seriously damaged. They were, however, able to continue their flight and reached an area where danger from German submarines and mines prevented further pursuit.

"No British ships have been lost and our casualties in personnel at present reported are slight, the Lion, which led the line, having only eleven wounded and none killed.

Survivors Are Few.

"One hundred and twenty-three survivors have been rescued from the Bluecher's crew of 885 and it is possible that others have been saved by some of our destroyers. No reports of any destroyer or light cruiser fighting have yet been received at the admiralty, though some apparently has taken place.

"Their lordships have expressed their satisfaction to Vice Admiral Sir David Beatty."

To Probe Warship Accident.

Washington, Jan. 25.—Under the usual naval procedure, Rear Admiral Howard, commander of the Pacific fleet, will appoint a board of officers to investigate the explosion on the cruiser San Diego, resulting in the death of five sailors and the wounding of eight others. Officials said that likely the inquiry is under way. The result will later be review by a board and it will determine also whether the circumstances of the accident warrant court martial proceedings.

WOMAN IN BAD CONDITION

Restored To Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Montpelier, Vt.—"We have great faith in your remedies. I was very irregular and was tired and sleepy all the time, would have cold chills, and my hands and feet would bloat. My stomach bothered me, I had pain in my side and a bad headache most of the time. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me lots of good and I now feel fine. I am regular, my stomach is better and my pains have all left me. You can use my name if you like. I am proud of what your remedies have done for me."—Mrs. MARY GAUTHIER, 21 Ridge St., Montpelier, Vt.

An Honest Dependable Medicine

It must be admitted by every fair-minded, intelligent person, that a medicine could not live and grow in popularity for nearly forty years, and to-day hold a record for thousands upon thousands of actual cures, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, without possessing great virtue and actual worth. Such medicines must be looked upon and termed both standard and dependable by every thinking person.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Frank Comment.

In his very, very early youth Mr. Mumpser had been a pretty child. His friends did not believe this was possible, and even he had forgotten all about it until one day he unearthed a painting of himself at that period from among the old lumber.

This he handed to his wife as some compensation for his present somewhat worm-eaten appearance.

"There, Alice," said Mrs. Mumpser, proudly exhibiting the picture to the servant. "That is a portrait of your master, painted when he was a child."

Alice gazed open-mouthed at the production.

"Lor', mum," she said, after some moments, "what a pity it is we have to grow up, ain't it?"—London Answers.

Heartless Prophetess.

"Harold says that after we are married he will want me to dress like a queen."

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne. "And for a while he will be as proud as a king. After that he will grumble like a taxpayer."

A Stitch in Time

Colds, fevers and germ diseases are pretty sure to overwork the kidneys and leave them weak. In convalescence, in fact, at any time when suspicion is aroused by a lame, aching back, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness or disordered urine, the use of Doan's Kidney Pills is a stitch in time that may avoid serious kidney disease.

No other medicine is so widely used, so freely recommended or so generally successful.

A Minnesota Case

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

Alfred Edward Priebe, 1710 N. Fourth St., Minneapolis, Minn., says: "For two years I had attacks of kidney complaint. My back bothered me terribly and the kidney secretions caused me much annoyance. I tried most everything I knew of for relief, but wasn't helped and I got discouraged. Finally I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they completely cured me. I never suffer from kidney trouble now."

Get Doan's at Any Store, 50c a Box

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

FOSTER-MILBURN CO., BUFFALO, N. Y.

Make the Liver Do its Duty

Nine times in ten when the liver is right the stomach and bowels are right.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

gently but firmly compel a lazy liver to do its duty.

Cures Constipation, Indigestion, Sick Headache, and Distress After Eating.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

CANCER

Tumors, Lupus, successfully treated without knife or pain. All work guaranteed.

Come, or write for Free Book.

Dr. Williams, Specialist on Cancer

2904 University Av. S. E. Minneapolis.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM

A toilet preparation of merit.
Helps to eradicate dandruff.
For Restoring Color and Beauty to Gray or Faded Hair.
50c. and $1.00 at Druggists.

SYRUP OF FIGS FOR A CHILD'S BOWELS

It is cruel to force nauseating, harsh physic into a sick child.

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on — castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well-founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and that a teaspoonful given today saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Adv.

The Conqueror's Return.

Mr. Mouatt, born tired, also father of a large family, spent most of his married life in bed, while Mrs. Mouatt worked in the glass factory, just to keep things moving. One morning Mr. Mouatt became impregnated with the large idea of getting out of bed at last, and offering his services to his country. On calling at Mrs. Mouatt's one day last week, a lady found her in tears.

"Why, Mrs. Mouatt, what is the matter? Has your husband been wounded?"

"No, miss." (Loud sniffles.)

"Well, dear me! I hope he has not been killed!"

"Oh, it's worse than that, miss! 'E's coming 'ome!"—Judge.

A GLASS OF SALTS WILL END KIDNEY-BACKACHE

Says Drugs Excite Kidneys and Recommends Only Salts, Particularly if Bladder Bothers You.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.—Adv.

His Choice.

Just after the fall of Bloemfontein soldiers were called for, owing to the scarcity of civilians, to work the railway. The weary "Tommies" were lying in a camp one night after a hard day's work, when a sergeant called out:

"Any of you men want to put your names down as railway porters, drivers, stokers, half-boiled clerks, or for any other appointments connected with the railway?"

Silence, broken only by snores. Then one "Tommy" slowly raised his head and drowsily muttered:

"Put me down as a sleeper, sergeant."—London Tit-Bits.

TENDER SENSITIVE SKINS

Quickly Soothed by Cuticura. Nothing Better. Trial Free.

Especially when preceded by a hot bath with Cuticura Soap. Many comforting things these fragrant supercreamy emollients may do for the skin, scalp, hair and hands and do it quickly, effectively and economically. Also for the toilet, bath and nursery.

Sample each free by mail with Book. Address postcard, Cuticura, Dept. XY, Boston. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

Not What He Meant.

"I'll bet I can tell you what you are laughing at."

"I'll bet you can't. Perhaps your nose doesn't look as funny as you imagine it does."

The Opportunist.

He—I love the true, the good, the beautiful, the—

She—Oh, George, this is so sudden!

U. S. DETERMINED TO SEE FOREIGN TRADE INCREASE

NATION CONVINCED BY EUROPEAN WAR THAT COMMERCE ABROAD IS VITAL ELEMENT IN PROSPERITY.

ALL ELEMENTS UNITE IN PATRIOTIC CO-OPERATION

James A. Farrell, Steel Corporation Head, at Foreign Trade Convention in St. Louis, Tells of Advantage Brought by War —Redfield Speaks.

St. Louis, Jan. 23.—"One week of the European war did more than 10 years of academic discussion to convince Americans that foreign trade is a vital element in prosperity. No doubt remains that the nation is determined to see its foreign commerce safeguarded and increased. Differences of opinion relate only to method."

This statement was made by James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel corporation, at a banquet of the foreign trade convention here.

All Elements United.

"All elements are united in patriotic co-operation for the common end," Mr. Farrell said.

"What advantage the European war brings us depends largely upon changes in industrial trade relations that cannot be forecast. Meanwhile, the interests of the United States are sufficient to warrant a proper respect for neutral commerce and the United States will, in maintaining its trade at as high a level as a just regard for belligerent interests permits, serve the larger and permanent interests of those not engaged in hostilities.

"Whatever may be the politcal outcome of the European war it is apparent that each of the belligerents will find it essential vigorously to recover its foreign trade, to repair the ravages of its domestic commerce, to provide labor to soldiers returned to peaceful pursuits and to ameliorate the burden of taxation.

To Exploit U. S. Products.

"Diplomacy of the future, as of the past, will be intimately concerned with commercial aggrandizement. It is, therefore, of vital consequence to America's future that advantage be taken of the present opportunity to exploit the products of American invention and establish a firm foothold in the markets of the world, which neither political effort, tariff discrimination, nor low prices successfully can assail.

"Under the shipping registry over 100 vessels have been transferred to American registry. Some of the onerous restrictions of the navigation laws were suspended by executive order. It should be remembered that this notification is not a repeal of existing navigation laws, but merely a suspension. While there may be differences of opinion as to the proper policy of up-building the merchant marine, it appears to be generally recognized that as long as these restrictions are not legislatively repealed, the possibility of an enlarged American merchant marine competing successfully with the ships of other nations in time of peace will be a matter of slow growth."

Secretary of Commerce Redfield departed from his prepared speech at the convention to impress on his auditors the great opportunities for foreign trade that the war has brought American business men. He said:

"A manufacturer expecting to enter the South American market recently told me that as a preliminary he investigated the conditions of his competitors in Europe and found that it would take them four years to recover from the effects of the war, by which time he hoped to be so entrenched that his product could not be dislodged."

RELEASE AMERICAN SAILORS.

German Authorities Arrested Crew of Cotton Steamer Greenbrier at Bremen, Says Consul.

Washington Jan. 22.—While the American government awaited Great Britain's explanation of its seizure of the American cotton steamer Greenbrier, it developed that American sailors of its crew, as well as those of the cotton ship Carolyn, had been arrested by German authorities at Bremen.

In a brief dispatch informing the state department that the sailors had been released from detention and were now free to join their ship when they left the port, the American consul at Bremen gave the first information that the sailors had been arrested and added no details.

Super-Submarine a Success.

London, Jan. 25.—The Daily Mail's Copenhagen correspondent says he learns from Hamburg that one of the new German super-submarines has just finished trial runs in the Bay of Helgoland and that she proved well suited for the purpose for which she was constructed. This giant submarine, the correspondent adds, is of the type that carries supplies for three months, and is not under the necessity of putting into a port or having recourse to the parent ship.

STATE BREVITIES

Brainerd.—The heaviest snow of the season now spreads over Crow Wing county and north in Minnesota & International railway territory. Loggers hail the snow with joy.

Caledonia.—At the annual meeting of the Caledonia Commercial club the following officers were elected: President, Dr. W. E. Browning; vice president, J. E. Stenehjem; secretary, Charles A. Dorival; treasurer, R. D. Sprague.

Faribault.—Labor unions of this city are organizing an ice company, which will be incorporated for $10,000. They will erect a building to hold 5,000 tons of ice. Work will be begun at once. The bricklayers, masons, cigarmakers and teamsters are interested.

St. Paul.—Governor Hammond has granted a requisition for the return of S. T. Dakin to Iowa, where he is alleged to have obtained property under false pretenses. R. H. McCarty, sheriff of Washington county, Iowa, has come to St. Paul to take Dakin back.

Faribault.—The foundry and machine shop owned by A. Anderson & Sons were badly damaged by fire, the loss being more than $5,000. Valuable patterns that cannot be replaced were destroyed. The foundry part of the building is a wreck. The firm will rebuild.

Austin.—The grand jury has returned seven indictments against George Robertson charging him with misappropriation of $726.80, license money paid him as Mower county auditor by the villages of Dexter, Waltham, Adams, Sargeant and Elkton. Bond was fixed at $3,000.

Belle Plaine.—Jacob Franziscus of this borough celebrated his 100th birthday this month. He was born in Luxemburg four months before the battle of Waterloo was fought. Since 1861 he has lived in Belle Plaine. Still hale and hearty, he expects to exceed the age of his father, who lived to be 102.

Montevideo.—The annual city election has just been held. The "drys" carried the day, winning by 156 votes. Last year they won by only 34 votes. The following officers were elected: Mayor, A. L. McCargar; aldermen, L. R. Moyer, W. J. Smith, Fred Borene and C. J. Anderson; treasurer, J. O. Anderson; constables, A. D. Wadsworth and Oscar Bergstrom.

Anoka.—A special election has been called for Feb. 9 to submit to a vote of the people an ordinance regulating the issuance of licenses to sell intoxicating liquors within the city of Anoka. If carried, it provides that no license be issued or renewed unless there is a sworn petition, signed by a majority of the legal voters of the city, asking such grant or renewal.

Mankato.—While Alex Bashaw and a crew of men were excavating for a street at the intersection of North Fifth and Fountain streets, they unearthed a number of bones over eight feet beneath the surface. Upon close examination it was found that these were the remains of elk, deer and buffalo. A buffalo skull in a fairly good state of preservation was found.

Minneapolis.—Two persons found unconscious from poisoning in downtown lodging houses are at the city hospital and physicians say there is little hope for their recovery. A woman who registered at the Mankato hotel as Mrs. Caroline Craig, but who later said she was Caroline Daltz, was found unconscious from gas poisoning. Hotel employes who smelled the gas and broke the door found her near death and the gas jet open.

St. Paul.—C. A. Leaym, who waived examination in police court on a charge of bigamy, was held to the grand jury. Leaym is alleged to have married wife No. 2 in Duluth about a month ago. Recently Mrs. Leaym II discovered a letter from Mrs. Leaym I urging her husband to return to his home in Milwaukee. Leaym is expected to renounce his second wife and throw himself upon the clemency of the court, according to his counsel.

Aitkin.—At the annual meeting of the Aitkin-Deerwood Telephone company the directors elected were C. P. DeLaittre, J. B. Galarneault, F. E. Krech and Herman Moork of Aitkin, and J. B. Hage of Deerwood. The directors elected officers as follows: President, C. P. DeLaittre; vice president, J. B. Galarneault, succeeding J. B. Hage of Deerwood; secretary, F. E. Krech, succeeding F. M. Shook, and manager and treasurer, Herman Moork.

Mankato.—The Blue Earth County Pure Seed association is to hold its annual meeting in this city Feb. 17, 18 and 19, and will have a seed fair in connection, for which the merchants of Mankato will offer premiums of cash and merchandise to the amount of $500 or more. Five premiums will be given on the different classes of corn, wheat, oats, rye, barley, flax, clover, timothy and alfalfa seed, alfalfa hay and potatoes, and especial premiums will be offered for exhibits of corn by boys, who competed in the state contest.

Northfield.—Alfred Noyes, the English poet, will deliver two addresses here. He will speak at the Carleton college vesper service on Sunday afternoon, Jan. 31, and will make an address Tuesday evening, Feb. 2. Noyes is one of the prominent figures in English literary circles. For a year he has traveled in America, and is giving a series of lectures under the auspices of various American colleges. He comes to Northfield as a special lecturer.

Granite Falls.—The vote on license at an election here was 239 against to 145 for.

TALK ON WESTERN CANADA

Facts Don't Lie—Western Canada Is Full of Facts—Here Are Three of Them.

1. C. T. Moore, Underhill, Man. Came from Bruce County, Ontario, 1882, with a capital of $2.00. Homesteaded quarter section. Now owns 2,800 acres for which he paid average of $20.00—worth today $40.00 per acre.

2. James Steel, Battleford, Saskatchewan. Came from Perthshire, Scotland, 1904. His fare advanced to bring himself and family to Canada. Took up homestead, which he sold later $25.00 per acre, buying 1,000 acres at $15.00 per acre. Has been very successful in mixed farming. Values land now at $40.00 per acre, and is worth $60.00. "If I had remained in the Old Country my gray hairs would have been a passport to the poor house," he says.

3. H. J. Smith, Clover Bar, Alberta. Came from North Michigan, 1893, without capital. Now farming 800 acres, valued at $200 per acre. Purchased originally at $15.00 per acre. Engaged in mixed farming. Cows average him $150.00 a year.

All this talk about the exploitation of labor by capital, class distinction, living wage, high cost of living, and so forth, doesn't hold the slightest interest for the Canadian farmer. Why? Because he has proved that you can't begin too poor to become rich in Canada; that free homesteads preclude the possibility of being robbed of freedom and independence; that the high cost of living can't hurt the man who grows most of his own necessities; that his labor brings reward in exact and just proportion to time and intelligence invested.

If those who whine at urban conditions would give a little time to investigating those suburban, they would likely spy a clear way out of their difficulties. For the first step, drop a card to any Canadian Government Agent.—Advertisement.

A New Cure.

A bedpost has not generally been regarded so much as an eye-opener as an eye-shutter, but if a story that comes from Boston is true—and what story from Boston was ever untrue—our oculists should go to school to the handmaids of Morpheus. Mr. Frank H. Hayes, who has been stone blind for nine years, so the tale runs, struck his head violently against the bedpost on arising, and was astonished a few minutes afterward to find that his sight had been entirely restored. We do not know whether the virtue of this cure lay in the bedpost or in the fact that it was a Boston bedpost, but if it was really effected in this way there would seem to be a good deal in such inanimate objects not heretofore dreamed of in the philosophy of optics. One of the morals of this modern miracle would seem to be that "knocking" is sometimes a very efficacious process, and that the only way to make some folks see things is by knocking them into their heads.—Baltimore Sun.

GRANDMA USED SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HER GRAY HAIR

She Made Up a Mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to Bring Back Color, Gloss, Thickness.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of the famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time, by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.—Adv.

In the Beginning.

"Say, Adam," remarked Eve at the breakfast table, "I need a new gown. What kind shall I get?"

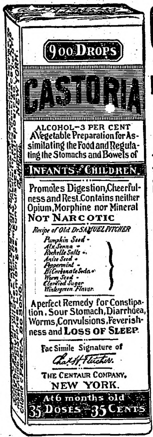
"Oh, don't bother me," growled Adam, who was trying to peruse the morning paper. "I don't care a fig what kind you get. But as it's the first of the year, perhaps it would be just as well to turn over a new leaf."

In Mineralogy.

Professor—Name the largest known diamond.

Mr. A.—The ace.

You never miss the water until the courts get hold of the stock and squeeze it out.



900 DROPS
CASTORIA
ALCOHOL—3 PER CENT
A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of
INFANTS & CHILDREN
Promotes Digestion, Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral
NOT NARCOTIC
Recipe of Old Dr SAMUEL PITCHER
Pumpkin Seed
Alx. Senna
Rochelle Salts
Anise Seed
Peppermint
Bi Carbonate Soda
Worm Seed
Clarified Sugar
Wintergreen Flavor
A perfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP.
Fac Simile Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK.
At 6 months old
35 DOSES—35 CENTS

Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

Mothers Know That Genuine Castoria Always Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. In Use For Over Thirty Years

CASTORIA

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

WANTED A PERMANENT BOND

Mite of Seven Years Had Worked Out Solution of Problem to His Satisfaction.

He is the merest mite, only seven, and his widowed mother was married the other day for the second time to "daddy"—a really very nice person who had long been fast friends with the stepson-elect and had no idea of being an interloper.

There are problems to be figured out—even when you are only seven.

"Mother," asked the mite, "who are you going to marry when daddy dies?"

"Why, my dear," she replied, "what a curious question."

"Well," responded the mite, "when father died you married daddy—and now, when daddy dies, I know just who I want you to marry."

"Why, my little son!" exclaimed the perplexed mother. "You shouldn't speak like that. Daddy isn't going to die."

"Yes mother, I know, but he might die. Then, if he ever does, mother, I want you to promise me that you'll marry me—'cause then—then, you see—we would never have to be separated."

Thus, even at seven, does a heart know its own sorrow.

Khaki for the Navy.

Naval medical authorities, after experience gained in naval operations at Vera Cruz, are of the opinion that white clothing, particularly white hats, are too easily penetrated by the sun's rays and are therefore unsuitable for use in the tropics. It is recommended that only khaki or forestry neutral clothing be supplied to the navy for landing parties.—The Pathfinder.

YOUR OWN DRUGGIST WILL TELL YOU
Try Murine Eye Remedy for Red, Weak, Watery Eyes and Granulated Eyelids; No Smarting—just Eye comfort. Write for Book of the Eye by mail Free. Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago

Developing.

Irene—Don't you think that travel brings out all that is in one?

Ire—Yes; especially ocean travel.—Judge.

Formation of Opinions.

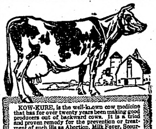
"What do you think of the president's speech?"

"I don't like it!"

"Have you read it?"

"No. When I disagree with a man's politics I don't have to read his speeches to know I don't like 'em."

Man is of few days and full of condensed meanness.



KOW-KURE, is the well-known cow medicine that has for over twenty years been making good producers out of backward cows. It is a tried and proven remedy for the prevention or treatment of such ills as Abortion, Milk Fever, Scouring and Lost Appetite.

Try a package of KOW-KURE on your poorest milker and note results. It is sold by druggists and feed dealers in 50c and $1.00 packages.

Write us for valuable free book, "The Cow Doctor."

Dairy Association Co.
Lyndonville, Vt.

KOW-KURE

Six Blizzard Belt Apple Grafts

For Testing Our named varieties of HARDY Foster Mother Root Apple Grafts make vigorous, early bearing, heavily fruiting, clean hearted, long lived trees. To prove their worth, we offer 6 Grafts (rooted) for testing, if you will send 10c to help cover cost and mailing expense. They will bear barrels upon barrels of apples in a few years' time. Catalogue telling about other Blizzard Belt fruits, EVERBEARING STRAWBERRIES, etc., FREE. Write today. The Gardner Nursery Co., Box 883 Osage, Ia.

BEST MARKET for
POULTRY—VEAL—CREAM
HIDES—EGGS—BEANS
Write us for Price List and Tags.
THE R. E. COBB CO., 14 E. 3rd Street, St. Paul, Minn.

CLOVER BEST ON EARTH
Wisconsin grown seed recognized the world over as hardiest, most vigorous. BIG SEED CATALOG FREE.
John A. Salzer Seed Co., Box 717 La Crosse, Wis.

A real guarantee on roofing!

A useless risk is to buy roofing not guaranteed by a responsible concern. When you buy our roofing you get the written guarantee of the world's largest manufacturers of roofing and building papers

Roofings, like most people, prove their worth by the test of time

Buy materials that last

Certain-teed

Ask your dealer for products made by us—they bear our name.
Asphalt Roofings
(All grades and prices)
Slate Surfaced Shingles
Asphalt Felts
Deadening Felts
Tarred Felts
Building Papers

Roofing
1-ply guaranteed 5 years
2-ply guaranteed 10 years
3-ply guaranteed 15 years

Insulating Papers
Wall Boards
Plastic Roofing Cement
Asphalt Cement
Roof Coating
Metal Paints
Out-door Paints
Shingle Stains
Refined Coal Tar
Tar Coating—Pitch

General Roofing Manufacturing Company
World's largest manufacturers of Roofing and Building Papers
New York City Boston Chicago Pittsburgh Philadelphia Atlanta Cleveland Detroit
St. Louis Cincinnati Kansas City Minneapolis San Francisco Seattle London Hamburg Sydney

BIG MONEY IN ONIONS!!

In 1914 an acre Salzer's Cabbage brought $250; an acre Onions, $300.
Special Introduction Collection for 12c
When Gideon marshalled his hosts at Kedron, he selected but 300 QUALITY men to win his great victory. So Salzer for forty-one years has been selecting, improving and originating new Vegetable varieties, until to-day his list contains only the cream, the very, very best! Only QUALITY SEEDS! We do want you to test them and hence gladly mail you, for 12c postage, our big Seed Catalogue free, with one generous package each:
Phila. First Early Cabbage; May 1st Carrot; Early Cucumber;
All Summer Long Lettuce; A Mixture of Onions; Juicy Radish.
All six packages for but 12c, contains enough seed to supply you with rich, juicy vegetables, and lots and lots of them, during the early spring and summer.
Read the Red River Potato King's Romance in Salzer's Catalogue.

JOHN A. SALZER SEED CO BOX 717. LA CROSSE, WIS.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3,1879.

If that National House Wives' League can study out how they can compel a farmer to sell his wheat for 65 cents a bushel when he can get $1.50 by sending it to Europe, they have got the problem of the high cost of living solved. If an embargo is placed on the shipment of wheat, it would be a good plan to place an embargo on the American farmers to keep them from immigrating to Canada.

President Wilson is after the fellows who are responsible for the high price of wheat and has sanctioned a probe which has been started by the department of Justice. Judging from his actions on the tariff question and at this time the president is opposed to high prices for grain.—Norman County Index.

The Democratic party have always claimed in their campaigns that the price of wheat was ruled by foreign demand, now President Wilson has been asked to place an embargo on the shipment of wheat to depress prices in the United States, but we are of the opinion that the president is too wise to try to interfere in the wheat market unless there should be an unlawful corner to raise prices.

Salary For County Officers.

Our retiring County Auditor Fasel cleaned up a little over one thousand dollars of extra fees the past year, as shown by the last financial statement, the greater part of it being taken out of the ditch tax paying farmers. We do not know that he is really to blame, but as the Socialists say, "It is the system." The legislature should pass a law to place all county officials on a straight salary, then have them turn over all fees collected by them to the County Treasurer. The present method of electing county officers and placing them in a position to enrich themselves at the expense of the tax payers is an outrage. This office is not the only one that is a source of high revenue in the shape of fees, although the other ones do not have to show up in print so plain, The Farmers' Alliance in Polk County placed all the county officers on a straight salary, and they have remained there ever since. The Register of Deeds gets a salary of $1500 a year, for doing the work, and two years ago he turned in about $7000 into the County Treasurer's office, and there were three well qualified candidates run for that Register of Deeds office last fall. The newer counties of northern Minnesota are the ones that pay the largest revenue to the Auditor's and Register's office, owing to the ditching fees and the many transfers of realestate. They are also settled by people of moderate means, who need all their surplus cash to make county improvements and build bridges. Then why cannot our present legislature get up to the date of the old Farmers' Alliance and pass a law to place all county officials on a straight salary, and have them turn all fees over to the County Treasurer? Why not conduct the county business the same as private business is conducted? Did you ever hear of a man working in a bank and collecting the interest due the bank in addition to his salary?

The state legislature is besieged by a certain class of people who want to make their living by farming the state. They of course keep a strong lobby working for appropriations, and if the legislature would give them all they ask for, the state would soon pass into the bankrupt column.

O'NEILL IS RIGHT.

Instead of building the new normal school at Bemidji, Senator O'Neill would increase the allowance for high school normal departments, so as to supply the rural schools, which call for 2,000 new teachers a year in Minnesota alone.

"Our normal school graduates want to teach in high and graded schools," he says. "If they can't get such positions in Minnesota, they will go to North Dakota or somewhere else to get them."

Judging from the above that normal school appropriation is likely to meet some strong opposition in the Senate.

Any school officer of a rural district knows that the above quotation from Mr. O'Neill is true, for as soon as you try to hire one of those normal graduates to teach a first grade school in the country they will stick up their nose, and say: "It is too far from town." They never stop to consider that the parents of the children they are asked to teach paid taxes to help build that normal school where they were educated.

STOP THE CHILD'S COLDS THEY OFTEN RESULT SERIOUSLY.

Cold's, Croup and Whooping Cough are children's ailments which need immediate attention. The after-affects are often most serious. Don't take the risk—you don't have to. Dr. King's New Discovery checks the Cold, soothes the cough, allays the Inflammation, kills the Germs and allows Nature to do her healing work. 50c. at your Druggist. Buy a bottle to-day.—adv.

MANY DISORDERS COME FROM THE LIVER

ARE YOU JUST AT ODDS WITH YOURSELF?

DO YOU REGULATE LIVING?

Are you sometimes at odds with yourself and with the world? Do you wonder what ails you? True you may be eating regularly and sleeping well. Yet something is the matter! Constipation, Headache, Nervousness and Bilious Spells indicate a Sluggish Liver. The tried remedy is Dr. King's New Life Pills. Only 25c. at your Druggist. Bucklen's Arnica Salve for Skin Eruptions.—adv.

TRY THIS FOR NEURALGIA.

Thousands of people keep on suffering with Neuralgia because they do not know what to do for it. Neuralgia is a pain in the nerves. What you want to do is to soothe the nerve itself. Apply Sloan's Liniment to the surface over the painful part—do not rub it in. Sloan's Liniment penetrates very quickly to the sore, irritated nerve and allays the in inflammation. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25 cents of any druggist and have it in the house—against Colds, Sore and Swollen Joints, Lumbago, Sciatica and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief.—adv.

CHILDREN'S COUGHS—CHILDREN'S COLDS BOTH ARE SERIOUS

When one of your little ones shows symptons of an approaching Cold, give it Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey at once. It acts quickly, and prevents the Cold growing worse. Very healing—soothes the Lungs, loosens the mucous, strengthens the system. It's guaranteed. Only 25c. at your Druggist. Buy a bottle to-day. Bucklen's Arnica Salve for Sores.—adv.

Subscribe for THE SUNBEAM.

WE HAVE $150,000.00 TO LOAN ON FARMS IN

PENNINGTON COUNTY

Write Or Call on Us At FIRST NATIONAL BANK

THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN.

DO YOUR BANKING WITH FARMERS STATE BANK

GOODRIDGE - - MINNESOTA

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS $12,000.

5 per cent paid on time deposits.

Fire and Torrado Insurance Written in Responsible Companies.

FARM LOANS A SPECIALITY

J. M. BISHOP, President JAY PAYNE Vice-President

NICK BUNDHUND, Cashier

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Jan 1st. 1914.

Department of the Interior U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Dec. 28th 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Matt Bakken, of Rhoda, Minn. who on April 8th, 1909, made Homestead Application Serial No. 04712, for N. ½ N. W. ¼ & S. E. ¼ N. W. ¼, Sec. 9, and who on April 16th, 1909 made additional Homestead Application Serial No. 04735, for S. W. ¼ N. W. ¼ Sec. 9, Township 152 N. Range 40. West Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make Commutation Proof, to establish claim to the land above described before N. W. Tarrant Municipal Judge for the city of Thief River Falls, Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 2d. day of February, 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses: Edward Singer, M. E. Hyland, Ole Skrieland, of Rhoda, Minn. Stephen Singer of Kratka, Minn.

Peter M. Ringdal, Register.

THE COUNTY FAIR

By Peter Radford

Lecturer National Farmers' Union

The farmer gets more out of the fair than anyone else. The fair to a city man is an entertainment; to a farmer it is education. Let us take a stroll through the fair grounds and linger a moment at a few of the points of greatest interest. We will first visit the mechanical department and hold communion with the world's greatest thinkers.

You are now attending a congress of the mental giants in mechanical science of all ages. They are addressing you in tongues of iron and steel and in language mute and powerful tell an eloquent story of the world's progress. The inventive geniuses are the most valuable farm hands we have and they perform an enduring service to mankind. We can all help others for a brief period while we live, but it takes a master mind to tower into the realm of science and light a torch of progress that will illuminate the pathway of civilization for future generations. The men who gave us the sickle, the binder, the cotton gin and hundreds of other valuable inventions work in every field on earth and will continue their labors as long as time. Their bright intellects have conquered death and they will live and serve mankind on and on forever, without money and without price. They have shown us how grand and noble it is to work for others; they have also taught us lessons in economy and efficiency, how to make one hour do the work of two or more; have lengthened our lives, multiplied our opportunities and taken toil off the back of humanity.

They are the most practical men the world ever produced. Their inventions have stood the acid test of utility and efficiency. Like all useful men, they do not seek publicity, yet millions of machines sing their praises from every harvest field on earth and as many plows turn the soil in mute applause of their marvelous achievements.

The growing of legumes will retard soil depletion and greatly add to its power to produce.

FARMER RADFORD ON WOMAN SUFFRAGE

The home is the greatest contribution of women to the world, and the hearthstone is her throne. Our social structure is built around her, and social righteousness is in her charge. Her beautiful life lights the skies of hope and her refinement is the charm of twentieth century civilization. Her graces and her power are the cumulative products of generations of queenly conquest, and her crown of exalted womanhood is jeweled with the wisdom of saintly mothers. She has been a great factor in the glory of our country, and her noble achievements should not be marred or her hallowed influence blighted by the coarser duties of citizenship. American chivalry should never permit her to bear the burdens of defending and maintaining government, but should preserve her unsullied from the allied influences of politics, and protect her from the weighty responsibilities of the sordid affairs of life that will crush her ideals and lower her standards. The motherhood of the farm is our inspiration, she is the guardian of our domestic welfare and a guide to a higher life, but directing the affairs of government is not within woman's sphere, and political gossip would cause her to neglect the home, forget to mend our clothes and burn the biscuits.

RURAL SOCIAL CENTERS

We need social centers where our young people can be entertained, amused and instructed under the direction of cultured, clean and competent leadership, where aesthetic surroundings stir the love for the beautiful, where art charges the atmosphere with inspiration and power, and innocent amusements instruct and brighten their lives.

To hold our young people on the farm we must make farm life more attractive as well as the business of farming more remunerative. The school house should be the social unit, properly equipped for nourishing and building character, so that the lives of our people can properly function around it and become supplied with the necessary elements of human thought and activity.

Education is a developing of the mind, not a stuffing of the memory. Digest what you read.

Old men have visions, young men have dreams. Successful farmers plow deep while sluggards sleep.

Napoleon's Name.

A Greek scholar called attention to a very curious coincidence about the name of Napoleon. If you take away the first letter of his name you have "apoleon;" take away the first letter of that word, and you have "poleon;" do this successively down to the last syllable, and you have "leon," "eon" and "on." Put these several words together in this order, Napoleon on oleon leon eon apoleon poleon, and you have a Greek phrase the literal translation of which is "Napoleon, being the lion of peoples, went about destroying cities."—Exchange.

FIRST STATE BANK,

Of Plummer Minnesota.

You Run Your Business With a Check Book—How About Your Home?
BILL

"BILLS, bills, bills—nothing but bills!" frequently is the complaint of the head of the family. No man would think of running his business WITHOUT A CHECK BOOK. How about YOUR home? The running of the home today is a BUSINESS PROPOSITION.

Open a CHECKING ACCOUNT With Us at Once,

J. A. DUFFY President, Henry Enderlie, Cashier

FARMERS & MERCHANTS STATE BANK

Okleε Minn.

The rapid growth of this bank is the best evidence that its policy and methods meet with the approval of the people in our community.

You will find this bank as liberal in its dealings as is consistent with sound banking.

We are at all times prepared to discuss your requirements with you and invite consultation.

Pay your bills with checks on this bank.

Farm Loans At Lowest Rates And On Easy Terms.

Six per cent interest paid on time deposits.

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS—————$14,500.00

J. A. C. Torgerson, V. P. W. B. Torgerson, Cashier.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Jan. 29th 1915.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Jan. 22nd, 1915.

Notice is hereby given that Carl P. Anderson, of Erie Minn. who on November, 26th, 1907, made Homestead Entry No. 1373, Serial No 04591, for the E ½ N E ¼ and who on July 1st, 1911 made Additional Homestead Application Serial No. 06368 for the W ½ N E ¼ all in Section 30 Township 153 N. Range 39 West Fifth Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Five Year Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U.S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls, Minnesota on the 19th day of March 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses: Lars C. Fevig, Olof O. Omlid, Nick Meyers, Chris Odegaard, all of Erie, Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal, Register.

Notice For Publication.

First pub. in The Sunbeam Jan. 8th, 1915.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Jan. 6th. 1915.

Notice is hereby given that Thomas G. Rome, of Rhoda, Minnesota, who on February 8th, 1912, made Homestead Application, Serial No. 07282, for Lots 5 and 6, Section 6 Township 152 N. Range 40 W 5th principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make Five Year proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls, Minn. on the 16th, day of February 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses: Sam B Swanson, Ole G. Skreland, of Rhoda, Minn., [illegible] William G Hunt, of Sunbeam Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

PETER M. RINGDAL, Register.

We have for sale one of the best quarter sections of land in the town of Highlanding, located one mile south of Highlanding, Creamery. This farm will be sold cheap as the owner is a non resident and desires to use the money invested in other business. For terms and full particulars call on W. G. Hunt, Sunbeam, Minn

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Jan. 8th 1915.

Department of the Interior, U.S. Land Office, at Crookston Minn. Dec. 31st, 1914.

Notice is hereby given that George T. Christofferson, of Erie, Minn. who on May 3rd, 1912 made Homestead Application Serial No. 07903, for S. W. ¼ Section 25 Township 153 N. Range 39 W. 5th, Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Commutatition Proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for District of Minn. at Thief River Falls, Minn. on the 18th day of February, 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses: Hilmer C. Iverson, Anders H. Vake, Ole K. Lien, Generius Christofferson, all of Erie Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal, Register.

MONEY TO LOAN ON FARM LAND

MACKEY J. THOMPSON
FARM MORTGAGES
ST. PAUL, MINNESOTA

CONTRACTS, FIRST AND SECOND MORTGAGES BOUGHT

U. S. Mail.

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 1.05 p. m., on Tuesday Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.55 p.m

Wm. G. Hunt, p.m.

W. G. Hunt

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. XIV. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1915 NO. 47.

THE LOCAL NEWS

Dry wood is bringing very good prices at Goodridge now.

Marshall Shedd is still lingering in Wisconsin, on his winter visit.

Joe Thompson's personal injury case was put over until the June term of court.

Mr. and Mrs. Gunder Asbjornson of Malone were transacting business at Highlanding yesterday

We have been busy this week getting out timber for a new barn, which we will build this spring.

The Narveson brothers, Carl and Ole were over and sawed up our year's supply of fire wood Monday and Tuesday.

The weather took a change to a warmer tone on January 30th, and we have been having fine winter weather since that time.

Miss Marie and Otto Causin, Lenard McAndress, and Miss Myrtle Hunt visited at the Klemmetson home Sunday evening.

We understand that a new post master is to be appointed at Erie, to take the place of John Lattimore who has removed to Goodridge.

Clifford Shosten and family will move up on their farm in the town of Star in the spring, where Clifford expects to break eighty acres and seed to flax.

So warm was the ditching cases at Thief River Falls that a subpoena was served on C. L. Clark Saturday morning at one o'clock, to go to Thief River Falls and testify on Saturday.

Later reports from the burning of the Catholic Church, at Thief River Falls, are that the fire was out before destroying the church, and that the loss sustained was covered by insurance.

An old fellow was getting off the following lingo bragging on his son: "Mine boy Stephen's head is just full of business, he don't play cards or drink viskey, but just tends to business all the time."

The farmers were not in any way interested in the ditching law suits tried in District Court last week, as they had paid for the work as per contract price, and the law suits were about the division of the money.

The Winton-Nichols Lumber Company have purchased the Fosston Lumber yard, and now have yards at Thief River Falls, Goodridge, Mavie and Fosston. If you are going to build this spring it will pay you to call on them and get prices before buying elsewhere.

There was a big law suit at Thief River Falls last week over ditches in eastern Pennington county in which the bonding companies and contractors and a few bankers took part. The main fight centered on Jud. ditch No. 2, on which considerable attorney eloquence was used, but that did not help much toward digging the ditch.

Twenty-five game wardens in Minnesota have been dropped from the pay-rolls of the game commission, owing to a shortage in the amount of money appropriated for their department. Among those who were dropped was Wm. Munch of Crookston, whose efficient services in this section, have received considerable comment.—T. R. Falls News-Press.

If the people of eastern Polk county really want County Division, now is the time for them to unite Erskine, McIntosh, and Fosston and send a strong lobby to St. Paul, and get an amendment tacked onto that St. Louis County Division Bill, that would give them the same chance to divide Polk county that they have to divide St. Louis county. Then they would get County Division.

Martin Hyland and Matt Bakken, of Rhoda, drove down to Thief River Falls Monday, where Mr. Bakken made final proof on his homestead Tuesday.

The Hyland boys had a large amount of feed to grind last Monday, but they rushed it through fast, and the farmers went home satisfied. They grind on Mondays and Fridays.

A Hard Fought Case

One of the hardest fought law suits in District Court last week, was the one between Sutliff and Griffith, Plaintiffs, and the bonding company on Judicial Ditch No 2, Defendents. This contract was let to Maseau, who assigned it to the Merchants State Bank, of Red Lake Falls to secure payment for money advanced to do the work which he did not do, but assigned his contract to the Plaintiffs in the above entitled action, who completed the ditch. It was a case of one party doing the work and of another one getting too much pay for the labor he had done. The case was bitterly fought by the bonding company, but the plaintiffs recovered a little over five thousand and three hundred dollars for the work done. It was a hard case for the jury to decide, and they took over twelve hours to deliberate on it, as it was a case of paying for labor on one side and protecting parties who had advance money in good faith on the other side.

FOR SALE

One 20-35 H. P. Avery Gas Tractor. One Avery "self lift" six bottom gang with stubble and breaking bottoms. One Avery 32-54 Grain Separator. One 500 gal. Gasoline Tank. This outfit has not been used very much and is nearly as good as new. All complete goes for $2300,00. Might take land in exchange. For further information write,

Omundson Bros.
Thief River Falls, Minn.
Kratka Route.

EAT

When you are

AT GOODRIDGE, Call at the Goodridg Restaurant and get A cup of HOT COFFEE, or a good warm dinner for 25 cents. Don't forget the sign of

EAT

BARBER SHOP IN CONNECTION

STEPHENSON BROS. Prop.

NOTICE OF DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP.

Notice is hereby given that A. C. Ellingson and Adolph Ellingson, doing a general mercantile business at Highlanding, Minn., under the firm name of Ellingson Bros., is this day dissolved by mutual consent, the business having this day been sold to Signa Ellingson who will henceforth continue the business. All bills owing by the firm of Ellingson Bros. will be paid and settled by the said Signa Ellingson and all bills and accounts due the firm of Ellingson Bros. are hereby made due and payable to the said Signa Ellingson.

Dated at Highlanding, Minn., this 25th day of January, 1916.

A. C. Ellingson.
Adolf Ellingson.

LUMBER AND BUILDING MATERIALS.

If you are thinking of building a house, barn or any other building this year, it will pay you well to see us.

We carry complete stocks of lumber and all other kinds of building materials at all our yards, and would be pleased to have you inspect same at any time.

We would be pleased to help you plan and estimate the cost of any building you are thinking of erecting this year, and it is understood we do so with no obligation on your part to build

IF YOU ARE INTERESTED IN SILOS, we are Agent for the Celebrated Arctic Silos, which are the very best on the market. These Silos have stood the test of 30 degrees below zero without freezing, which no other Silo has done.

Better come in and talk it over.

WINTON-NICHOLS LUMBER COMPANY.
—Yards at—
Goodridge, Mavie, Thief River Falls and Fosston, Minn.

Go to S. P. Johnson, at Oklee

"The Right Place"

Boys Suits from $1.25, to $4.50 per suit. Mens suits, former price $25 00. Now selling for $16.00. $15.00 suits now selling for $8.50

$8.50 suits now selling for $4.50.

Men's shoes from $1.25 to $3.50. Former price $4 00 now $3 25.

Ladies shoes $1.50 to $3.00.

Prints 5 cents per yard. Gingham 8 cents to 10 cents per yard.

All Dry Goods at cost. Men's Caps goes at any price.

Sugar for this week is $6 00 per 100 lbs. Good coffee for 18 cents to 30 cents a pound. Bargains in all kind of goods.

S. P. JOHNSON, Oklee, Minn.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Three Hundred Ninety Five, and 78—100 ($395.78) Dollars, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by Manuel Niemi and Ida Niemi, his wife, mortgagors, to the Merchants State Bank of Red Lake Falls, mortgagee, bearing date the 15th, day of March 1913, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Pennington, and State of Minnesota on the 26th day of April 1913 at 9:00 o'clock A. M, in Book 1 of mortgages on page 475.

NOW THEREFORE, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, VIZ:

The North West quarter of South East quarter (N W ¼ of S E ¼) and East half of South East quarter (E ½ of S E ¼) of Section thirty-four (34) and North West quarter of South West quarter (N W ¼ of S W ¼) of Section thirty five (35) in Township one hundred fifty two (152) North, of Range thirty nine (39) West of the 5th. Principal Meridian in Pennington County, and the State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Pennington County at the front door of the court house in the City of Thief River Falls in said County and State on the 27th day of February A. D. 1915 at 10:00 o'clock A. M. of that day at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt of Three Hundred Ninety Five and 73—100 [$395.73] Dollars and the taxes, if any, on said premises and Twenty Five [$25.00] Dollars, attorney's fees as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

Dated January 9th. 1915
John C. Mathews,
Attorney for Mortgagee,
Red Lake Falls, Minn.
Merchants State Bank of
Red Lake Falls
J. A. Duffy,
Cashier

THE PRICHARD Co.

Thief River Falls Minn.

DEALERS IN LUMBER AND FARM MACHINERY.

Located west of the new Soo Depot. Give us a call, and look over our stock of Lumber and Farm Machinery.

H. O. KJOMME
Attorney and Counselor at Law
COUNTY ATTORNEY
Mcginn Block
Thief River Falls, - - Minn.

Wilhelm Michelet
U. S. COMMISSIONER
COURT HOUSE
THIEF RIVER FALLS,
MINN.

To Avoid Worry.

If you would avoid worry train yourself to be methodical and to act up to the good old maxim of never putting off till tomorrow what can be done today.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists. Price 75c per bottle.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Jan. 1st, 1915.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minnesota Dec. 29th 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Charles O. Asp, of Kratka, Minn., who on August 24th 1908, made Homestead Entry No, 0474, for S. E. ¼ Section 33, Township 153 N. Range 41 W. Fifth, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 18th day of February 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses: Ole S. Breiland, Ole A. Holdahl, Kettel Brekke, Drong O. Roisland, all of Kratka, Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

PETER M RINGDAL,
Register.

Cuts, Burns,

Bruises, Sores, Wounds and Piles quickly healed with Arnica Salve. It prevents infection, is antiseptic, soothing, healing. Try it once. Money Back If It Fails. The Original and Genuine.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve

Heals the Hurt

All Druggists and Dealers, 25c.

WOOD FOR SALE.

I have all kinds of wood for sale, both green and dry, at reasonable prices.

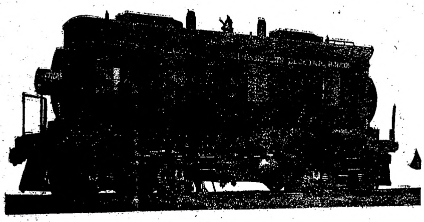
L. W. Wojnarowski,
Section 8, Town of Hickory

Legal Lore.

"As a lawyer how would you advise me to sue for a girl's hand?"

"Take the case to court and ask for immediate trial."—Baltimore American.

Minnesota Northwestern Electric Railway Co.



TIME TABLE.

Going East

Train No. 1.
LEAVE—Thief River Falls at 7:15 A. M.
Silverton at 7:40 A. M.
Mavie at 8:05 A. M.
ARRIVE—Goodridge at 8:30 A. M.

Train No. 5.
LEAVE—Thief River Falls at 10:00 A. M.
Silverton at 11:10 A. M.
Mavie at 11:40 A. M.
ARRIVE—Goodridge at 12:10 A. M.

Train No. 3.
LEAVE—Thief River Falls at 3:45 P. M.
Silverton at 4:10 P. M.
Mavie at 4:35 P. M.
ARRIVE—Goodridge at 5:00 P. M.

Going West

To Thief River Falls

Train No. 2
LEAVE—Goodridge at 8:45 A. M.
Mavie at 9:10 A. M.
Silverton at [illegible] A. M.
ARRIVE—Thief River Falls at 10:00 A. M.

Train No. 6.
LEAVE—Goodridge at 1:45 P. M.
Mavie at 2:15 P. M.
Silverton at 2:45 P. M.
ARRIVE—Thief River Falls at 3:30 P. M.

Train No. 4.
LEAVE—Goodridge at 5:15 P. M.
Mavie at 5:40 P. M.
Silverton at 6:05 P. M.
ARRIVE—Thief River Falls at 6:30 P. M.

Cash For Hides and Furs.

If you have Hides or Furs for sale, bring them to the Oklee meat market and get the highest market price in cash.

Meat Market,
Oklee, Minn.

Their Glee.

"He boasts that he came of a fine old family."

"Yes, and how they must have laughed when he left!"—Judge.

Precaution is better than repentance.—Greek Proverb.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE COLONEL'S GOLD MINE

Out in Gregory County, South Dakota, lives Colonel Johnson, the famed Alfalfa King of that great section.

About thirty years ago he left Wisconsin for that domain. All he had was willing hands, a clear brain and a bright vision. Today he is the owner of thousands of acres, president of several banks.

He has found a veritable gold mine in his thousand-acre Alfalfa field, and what is of particular interest to you and me is that his first Alfalfa Seed, twenty-five years ago or more, was purchased from the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis. The Colonel says: "The best-paying crop in hay, or grass, or pasture food is Alfalfa. It outranks everything in money value."

Salzer's Alfalfa is good on your own farm, for three to five tons of rich hay per acre, and with the aid of "Nitragen" (see my catalog) its growth is absolutely certain.

For 10c in Postage

We gladly mail our Catalog and sample package of Ten Famous Farm Seeds, including Speltz, "The Cereal Wonder;" Rejuvenated White Bonanza Oats, "The Prize Winner;" Billion Dollar Grass; Teosinte, the Silo Filler, Alfalfa, etc., etc.

Or Send 12c

And we will mail you our big Catalog and six generous packages of Early Cabbage, Carrot, Cucumber, Lettuce, Radish, Onion—furnishing lots and lots of juicy delicious Vegetables during the early Spring and Summer.

Or send to John A. Salzer Seed Co., Box 717, La Crosse, Wis., twenty cents and receive both above collections and their big catalog.

Requisite for Optimism.

"What are the qualifications for membership in your international optimist club?" asked the philanthropist's friend.

"Well, in the first place, you've got to speak English with an American accent."

"CASCARETS" ACT ON LIVER; BOWELS

No sick headache, biliousness, bad taste or constipation by morning.

Get a 10-cent box.

Are you keeping your bowels, liver, and stomach clean, pure and fresh with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passageway every few days with Salts, Cathartic Pills, Castor Oil or Purgative Waters?

Stop having a bowel wash-day. Let Cascarets thoroughly cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour and fermenting food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken or cause any inconvenience, and cost only 10 cents a box from your store. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have Headache, Biliousness, Coated Tongue, Indigestion, Sour Stomach or Constipation. Adv.

Appropriate Name,

"What do you call this vine on your wall?"

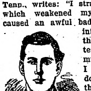
"I call it the bouncer vine."

"Why do you give it such a name as that?"

"Because it is always throwing out suckers."

SUFFERED FOR FOUR YEARS.

Mr. J. M. Sinclair of Olivehill, Tenn., writes: "I strained my back, which weakened my kidneys and caused an awful bad backache and inflammation of the bladder. Later I became so much worse that I consulted a doctor, who said that I had Diabetes and that my heart was affected. I suffered for four years and was in a nervous state and very much depressed. The doctor's medicine didn't help me, so I decided to try Dodds Kidney Pills, and I cannot say enough to express my relief and thankfulness, as they cured me. Diamond Dinner Pills cured me of Constipation."



Mr. J. M. Sinclair.

Dodds Kidney Pills, 50c. per box at your dealer or Dodds Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Write for Household Hints, also music of National Anthem (English and German words) and recipes for dainty dishes. All 3 sent free. Adv.

Rather Mixed.

"I don't like that deal you're in."

"Don't worry; you won't be answerable if it's questionable."

Some persons are misunderstood because they do not know their own minds.

WILSON DECLARES ERA OF SUSPICION HAS PASSED AWAY

MAKES CONFIDENT PREDICTION THAT COUNTRY SOON WILL ENTER UPON PERIOD OF GREAT PROSPERITY.

MAZE THAT CHECKED ENTERPRISE IS CLEARED

Uncertainties Are Being Removed, Common Understandings Are Possible and a Universal Co-operation, He Asserts, Outlines Progress.

Washington, Feb. 1.—Another confident prediction that the country soon will enter upon a new era of enterprise and prosperity was voiced by President Wilson in a speech before the convention of the American Electric Railway Association.

Speaking to the business men and through them to the world of business generally, the president outlined what the Democratic congress has tried to accomplish through its trust legislation and declared that while a test period would be required to determine whether the correct remedy had been applied, he believed "the maze of interrogation points" which had checked enterprise for 20 years had been cleared away.

No One to Be Suspicious.

With a common understanding regarding business reached, he said, henceforth nobody is going to be suspicious of any business just because it is big. He gave some of the "rules of the game" which he thought ought to be followed, heading the list with publicity—"not doing anything under cover."

"I have always maintained that the only way in which men could understand each other is by meeting one another.

"If I believed all I read in the newspapers I would not understand anybody. I have met many men whose horns have dropped away the minute I was permitted to examine their character.

Sees Prosperity at Hand.

"It seems to me that I can say with a good deal of confidence that we are upon the eve of a new era of enterprise and of prosperity. Enterprise has been checked in this country for almost 20 years because men were moving amongst a maze of interrogation points. They did not know what was going to happen to them. All sorts of regulations were proposed and it was a matter of uncertainty what sort of regulation was going to be adopted. All sorts of charges were made against business, as if business were at fault, when most men know the great majority of business men were honest, were public spirited, were intending the right thing, and the many were made afraid because the few did not do what was right.

Necessary Thing is to Agree.

"The most necessary thing, therefore, was for us to agree, as we did by slow stages agree upon the main particulars of what ought not to be done, and then to put our laws in such shape as to correspond with that general judgment. I for one have never doubted that all America was of one principle. I have never doubted that all Americans believed in doing what was fair and honorable and of good report. But the method, the method of control by law against the small minority that was recalcitrant against these principles was a thing that it was difficult to determine upon. And it was a very great burden, let me say, to fall on a particular administration of this government to have to undertake practically the whole business of final definition. That is what has been attempted by the congress now about to come to a close. It has attempted the definitions for which the country had been getting ready, or trying to get ready, for nearly half a generation.

Uncertainties Being Removed.

"It will require a period of testimony to determine whether they have successfully defined them or not, but no one needs to have it proved to him that it was necessary to define them and remove the uncertainties, and that the uncertainties being removed, common understandings are possible and a universal co-operation.

Italy Calls Troops to Colors.

Rome, Feb. 1.—A royal decree has been issued calling to the colors the Italian soldiers of the first category, born in 1888 and belonging to the field artillery and also the Alpine troops and the soldiers of the third category born in 1891, 1892, 1893 and 1894 belonging to the Alpine troops.

Children Hurt in Storm.

New Orleans, Feb. 1.—Twenty boys and girls from 4 to 16 years of age were injured when a building at St. Alphonsus Orphan Asylum collapsed in a heavy wind storm. Two boys are in a dangerous condition. The other children are suffering from fractured limbs and minor injuries.

Fifty children were in the building alone when it was hit by the storm. The nuns were attending prayer in the chapel. Thirty children escaped unhurt.

FIVE BRITISH VESSELS SUNK BY SUBMARINE

THREE VESSELS LOST IN IRISH SEA RAID—TWO SHIPS TORPEDOED IN BRITISH CHANNEL.

GERMAN SUBMARINE U-21 EASILY MAKES HER ESCAPE

This Under-water Craft Is the Same Which Torpedoed British Cruiser Pathfinder in September and Later Destroyed Two British Steamers.

London, Feb. 2.—The toll taken by the German submarine U-21 in its raid in the Irish Sea in the vicinity of Liverpool still stands at three ships—the steamers Ben Cruachen, Linda Blanche and the Kilcoan, the latter a small vessel. The crew of the Kilcoan was landed on the Isle of Man by a coastwise steamer.

In addition a German submarine also has torpedoed two British steamers in the English channel near Havre, the Tokomaru and the Icaria.

Submarine Very Active.

The Irish Sea raider easily made her escape and shipping interests, confident that she has returned to her base, ordered a resumption of normal traffic.

This under-water Emden is the same vessel which last September torpedoed in the North Sea the British cruiser Pathfinder with a loss of 246 lives, and later destroyed two British steamers off Havre. She found numerous other vessels on the water to which she has centered her activities.

In addition to the vessels she is known to have sunk, several other steamers were chased by her. These include the steamer Graphic with 100 passengers and crew of 40, and the smaller boats, Atreus, Ava, Kathleen and Endymion. All these vessels escaped in zigzag flight.

Graphic Warns Other Ships.

The Graphic's captain had his passengers don life belts and sent all the members of the crew to the stoke hole so the steamer could keep a full head of steam in flight.

The captain also took the precaution to warn by wireless vessels from coming into the zone of the submarine's activity.

The Allan line steamer, Scandinavian, from St. John, N. B., Jan. 22, for Liverpool, with 500 passengers on board, learned of the raid of the U-21 and put into Queenstown. After remaining there for a short time she proceeded for Liverpool.

The steamer Leinster from Holyhead to Kingtown, reports that she was chased by a German submarine for 15 minutes off the Kish light vessel, but succeeded in escaping. The Kish light vessel is opposite the mouth of Dublin Bay.

NEW FIGHT IN CARPATHIANS

Teuton Allies Assume Vigorous Offensive Against Russians Between Dukla and Wiskow Passes.

London, Feb. 2.—For the fourth time since the commencement of the war the Carpathian mountains between Dukla and Wiskow passes are the scene of a pitched battle. The previous battles were between Russians and Austro-Hungarians, but in that which is now developing the Austrians and Hungarians have the assistance of the German armies and are assuming a vigorous offensive.

Despite this, the Russian reports assert that the preliminary fighting has turned to the advantage of Russia and that prisoners and guns have been captured.

Simultaneously, the Austro-Germans are concentrating armies in the mountains between Bukowina and Transylvania, to prevent an attempt by the Russians to outflank them, and on the Roumanian and Serbian frontiers, to check any effort of the armies of these countries to take a hand in the fighting, on the result of which Austria stakes much.

The Russians also are pushing their efforts in East Prussia, while the Germans continue their attack on the Russian positions in Central Poland. These operations, however, are secondary to the battle in the Carpathians, the outcome of which is likely to have a marked effect on the future operations of the war.

Turks Reach Sinai Peninsula Towns.

Cairo, via London, Feb. 1.—The Turkish outposts have reached the vicinity of Tor and Kubri, on the Sinai peninsula. Up to the present the fighting has consisted only of small outpost clashes. Tor is on the Gulf of Suez, about 150 miles south of Suez.

Wants Another Cotton Ship.

New York, Jan. 30.—Edward N. Breitung, owner of the steamship Dacia, which the British government has announced it would seize if it sailed from Galveston as contemplated, with a cargo of cotton, is negotiating with the Ward line for the purchase of the steamer Seguranca. Mr. Breitung's intention, it became known, is to convert the Seguranca, a passenger ship, into a cotton-carrying freighter. The Seguranca is due to arrive here Sunday from Havana.

FRUIT LAXATIVE FOR SICK CHILD

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm tender stomach, liver and bowels.

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs" that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish, or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleaning" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Adv.

She Concentrated in General.

An editor of the Ohio State Journal went to see a vaudeville performer who does a dozen or more interesting stunts in an almost perfect way. Then he returned, the editor returned, to his sanctum and wrote an excellent little sermon for the young on the beauties of concentration.

This recalls the story of the Chicago woman who told Author Arnold Bennett that his famous chapter on "Concentration" had greatly aided her.

"Why," she said, "I never knew what it was to concentrate before."

The author was interested.

"And on what have you concentrated, madam?" he asked.

"Oh, on lots and lots of things," she replied.

QUIT MEAT IF KIDNEYS BOTHER AND USE SALTS

Take a Glass of Salts Before Breakfast If Your Back Is Hurting or Bladder Is Irritated.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acids of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.—Adv.

Byplay Minstrels.

"Mister Interlocutor, can you tell me the difference between an Irish soldier and a Scotch soldier when fighting in the trenches with the allies?"

"No, Mr. Bones, I cannot. Will you elucidate the difference?"

"One says he is kilt with the cold and the other says he is cold with the kilt."

HAIR OR NO HAIR?

It Is Certainly Up to You and Cuticura. Trial Free.

Hot shampoos with Cuticura Soap, followed by light dressings of Cuticura Ointment rubbed into the scalp skin tend to clear the scalp of dandruff, soothe itching and irritation and promote healthy hair-growing conditions. Nothing better, cleaner, purer.

Sample each free by mail with Book. Address postcard, Cuticura, Dept. XY, Boston. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

Quick Work.

"Rome wasn't built in a day."

"That just goes to show how much more powerful than human agencies the forces of nature are."

"Explain."

"What it took man centuries to build, a little old earthquake can destroy in about forty seconds."

When Your Eyes Need Care

Use Murine Eye Medicine. No Smarting—Feel Fine—Acts Quickly. Try it for Red, Weak Sore Eyes and Granulated Eyelids, Murine i compounded by our Oculists—not a "Paten Medicine"—but used in successful Physicians Practice for many years. Now dedicated t the Public and sold by Druggists at 50c pe Bottle. Murine Eye Salve in Aseptic Tubes 25c and 50c. Write for Book of the Eye Free Murine Eye Remedy Company, Chicago. Adv

England has over 3,000 women law clerks.

What's Doing in Minnesota

St. Cloud.—Between 400 and 500 men employed in the repair shop, paint shop and wood mill at the Great Northern shops have gone to work on a five-day week schedule. A nine-hour day will continue to prevail and it is expected a full six-day week will be resumed early in the spring.

Mapleton.—The Maple River Burns club has organized for another year by electing T. B. Taylor president, H. C. Hotaling, vice president; A. J. Ellis, secretary; William Morrow, treasurer, and these and William McQueen, R. B. Hanna, B. F. Taylor, John Morrow and B. F. McGregor an executive committee.

St. Cloud.—While Ludwig Hofmann, a clerk, was lying in wait in the G. M. Shaefer store at Albany, a man suspected of several robberies entered the store at night. He and the young clerk engaged in a scuffle in which the robber wrenched Hofmann's gun away and shot him through the arm and then escaped.

Mankato.—Charles McHenry, about whom nothing is known here, was brought to the city in a state of coma and died without being able to speak. It is known he was a member of the I. O. O. F. and M. W. A. orders, and it is thought that he once lived near Madison, Wis. The remains are being held in the hope that relatives may be found.

Virginia.—D. D. McEachin of Hibbing, Attorneys J. H. Peregrine, E. J. Larson and W. J. Archer of Virginia and ex-Senator James P. Boyle of Eveleth were appointed a committee to frame a bill to be presented to the state legislature for the division of the present St. Louis county into two parts. The meeting was held in the law office of Attorney M. H. McMahon.

Wegdahl.—The Wegdahl Farmers' Co-operative association has held its first annual meeting and after paying expenses of organizing, setting aside 10 per cent, of earnings for a surplus fund, and 3 per cent. for depreciation of building and fixtures, a cash dividend of 8 per cent. on the capital stock was declared and also a purchase dividend of 4 per cent. to stockholders and 2 per cent. to non-stockholders.

Owatonna.—Once again has Mrs. W. J. McLaughlin of Owatonna, butter expert, demonstrated her right to the title. She captured first prize at the Minnesota Dairymen's convention here for dairy butter. Her score was 92½. She received warm praise from the assembled dairy authorities and experts. She recently attracted attention as the only woman student in the dairy department of the state university.

Cyrus.—Clifford Squires, who committed suicide at Minot, N. D., had been working for his board at the home of the Tollefsons near this place. He left Cyrus after forging the name of C. O. Tollefson to a check for $10 and getting the cash from it. He hired an auto to convey him to Morris, where he took a train for Minot. He would have been 21 years of age in March. His parents died several years ago.

St. Cloud.—A delegation of 50 Camels have arrived from Minneapolis and St. Paul on a special car. They were augmented here by Camels from Brainerd lodge attracted by the program arranged for the dedication of the new Camels' home here. The Minneapolis degree team conferred the work when a class of 40 was admitted to membership. A social session with vaudeville followed the business meeting.

Duluth.—George K. Robertson jointly indicted with Joseph Regali and Zigmund Zalk on a charge of grand larceny in the first degree, in connection with the alleged theft of about $40,000 worth of copper anode plates from a Northern Pacific box car in November, 1913, was brought to trial before Judge Fesler and a district court here. The defendants demanded separate trials and Robertson's case was called first.

Northfield.—The annual Ware oratorical contest between the seniors of Carleton and St. Olaf colleges will be held on Feb. 19 in the Northfield Congregational church. The contest is one of the most important forensic events of the year for both colleges. The Carleton orators are Robert Calhoun, Lyall Day and Grant Willard. St. Olaf's are A. Rustad, Andrew Meldahl and H. Bakken. Carleton has won this contest the last two years, last year winning all three places.

Bemidji.—Not a single saloon remains in towns along the Soo line between Plummer and Duluth, a distance of 232 miles, Remer and Shovel Lake having been ordered closed by Special Officers Brandt and Carson of the Indian department. The saloons at Remer have been doing a landsale business since the closing order became effective in other cities of the treaty territory. The saloons will close Feb. 1. It is rumored that Northome will be the next village to be closed and this will clasp the "lid" on the entire treaty territory north of Moorhead.—The petition of the prohibition workers of this city to have the saloon question submitted to the voters February 16, at the general election, has been filed. The "drys" believe they are in the majority at present, and an aggressive campaign will be conducted by them the next two weeks to overcome the apparent strength of the "wets."

Hastings.—In the South St. Paul fire department case to determine whether the city council has the legal right to buy a motor truck for the department, testimony was closed and briefs will be submitted later

Better Biscuits Baked With

You never tasted daintier, lighter, fluffier biscuits than those baked with Calumet. They're always good—delicious. For Calumet insures perfect baking.

RECEIVED HIGHEST AWARDS
World's Pure Food Exposition, Chicago, Illinois.
Paris Exposition, France, March, 1912.

CALUMET
BAKING POWDER
NOT MADE BY THE TRUST
CALUMET
BAKING POWDER
CALUMET BAKING POWDER CO.
CHICAGO

You don't save money when you buy cheap or big-can baking powder. Don't be misled. Buy Calumet. It's more economical—more wholesome—gives best results. Calumet is far superior to sour milk and soda.

For interior finishing of your house use

Rock Board

An improved wall board, in the place of lath and plaster.

If your dealer does not have it write to us and we will have our agent nearest to your home call on or write you.

Rockford Paper Box Board Co.
ROCKFORD, ILL.

Six Blizzard Belt Apple Grafts

For Testing Our named varieties of HARDY Foster Mother Root Apple Grafts make vigorous, early bearing, heavily fruiting, clean hearted, long lived trees. To prove their worth, we offer 6 Grafts (rooted) for testing, if you will send 10c to help cover cost and mailing expense. They will bear barrels upon barrels of apples in a few years' time. Catalogue telling about other Blizzard Belt fruits, EVERBEARING STRAWBERRIES, etc., FREE. Write today. The Gardner Nursery Co., Box 863 Osage, Ia.

DANCE The Fox Trot, Hesitation, Maxixe, Lulu Fado, etc. Book of instructions, seven dances, 35c; single dances, 10c. Address MILWAUKEE SCHOOL OF DANCING, Mack Block, Milwaukee, Wis.

Minnesota Directory

BEST MARKET for
POULTRY—VEAL—CREAM
HIDES—EGGS—BEANS
Write us for Price List and Tags.
THE R. E. COBB CO., 14 E. 3rd Street, St. Paul, Minn.

SHIP YOUR LIVE STOCK TO
Rogers & Rogers
S. St. Paul Minn. 27 yrs. experience in commission business. Ref. any mercantile agency or business house in St. Paul. Orders filled for stock cattle. Satisfaction guaranteed.

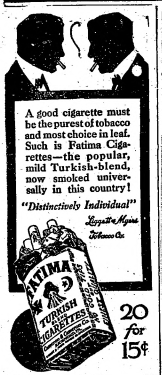
EYES EXAMINED FREE

ARTIFICIAL EYES
JAMES E. LEE, Optician
528 Nicollet Ave., Minneapolis

J. N. JOHNSON & CO.,
815 Nicollet Ave., Minneapolis
Jobbers-Dealers
Rubber Tires
Accessories, Fire Department Equipment. Write for catalog and Special Discounts.

STOVE REPAIRS
Send us the name and number of your stove and we can furnish you the parts at small cost. Great Western Stove & Repair Co., 312 Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis

HUDSON & THURBER CO.
MODOC DRY CELLS
HERMIL HARD OIL
STANDARD LITTER CARRIERS
CARTON THRESHER BELTS
Only Complete Stock of Implement Supplies
MINNEAPOLIS and OMAHA



A good cigarette must be the purest of tobacco and most choice in leaf. Such is Fatima Cigarettes—the popular, mild Turkish-blend, now smoked universally in this country!

"Distinctively Individual"

Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

20 for 15¢

Conservative Estimate.

Jem Snedeker, an East Tennessee farmer, would only admit that the sun had a bright side by speculating that the other side was probably dark. The preacher, looking over Jem's farm said that the wheat crop looked fine and plentiful. But Jem put it this way:

"It's a pretty good crop, what there is of it—an' there's right smart of it, sech as it is!"

Nothing equals Dean's Mentholated Cough Drops for Bronchial weakness, sore chests, and throat troubles—5c at all Druggists.

A timid person is frightened before a danger; a coward during the time; and a courageous person afterward.—Richter.

England now has 1,500,000 surplus women.

Don't Give Up!

Nowadays deaths due to weak kidneys are 72% more common than 20 years ago, according to the census. Overwork and worry are the causes. The kidneys can't keep up, and a slight kidney weakness is usually neglected.

If you have backache or urinary disorders, don't mistake the cause. Fight the danger. More care as to diet, habits, etc., and the use of Doan's Kidney Pills ought to bring quick relief.

A Wisconsin Case

Mrs. Jane Smith, 6 Clay St., Menasha, Wis., says: "My back ached terribly and I was so miserable I could hardly get out of bed. My feet and ankles swelled and my whole body was bloated. I lost forty-five pounds in weight and doctors didn't seem to help me. Finally I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they saved my life. The cure they made has lasted for years."

Get Doan's at Any Store, 50c a Box
DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS
FOSTER-MILBURN CO., BUFFALO, N.Y.
Every Picture Tells a Story

Neuralgia

There is no need to suffer the annoying, excruciating pain of neuralgia; Sloan's Liniment laid on gently will soothe the aching head like magic. Don't delay. Try it at once.

Hear What Others Say

"I have been a sufferer with Neuralgia for several years and have tried different Liniments, but Sloan's Liniment is the best Liniment for Neuralgia on earth. I have tried it successfully; it has never failed."—F. H. Williams, Augusta, Ark.

Mrs. Ruth C. Claypool, Independence, Mo., writes: "A friend of ours told us about your Liniment. We have been using it for 13 years and think there is nothing like it. We use it on everything, sores, cuts, burns, bruises, sore throat, headaches and on everything else. We can't get along without it. We think it is the best Liniment made."

SLOAN'S LINIMENT

is the best remedy for rheumatism, backache, sore throat and sprains.

At all dealers, 25c.

Send four cents in stamps for a TRIAL BOTTLE

Dr. Earl S. Sloan, Inc.
Dept. B. Philadelphia, Pa.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Washington, D.C. Books free. Highest references. Best results.

IF HAIR IS TURNING GRAY, USE SAGE TEA

Don't Look Old! Try Grandmother's Recipe to Darken and Beautify Gray, Faded, Lifeless Hair.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant. Adv.

And many a man's so called dignified silence is due to the lamentable fact that he doesn't know what to say.

Quite Obvious.

Tramp—It is needless to ask the question, madam. You know what I want.

Lady—Yes, I know what you want badly, but I've only one bar of soap in the house, and the servant is using it. Come again some other time.—London Tit-Bits.

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.
In Use For Over 30 Years.
Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

Proverb Didn't Apply.

Mrs. Brown was in the kitchen helping Nora, the cook, prepare supper.

"It's an old saying," she remarked to Nora, "that 'too many cooks spoil the broth.' What do you think?"

"Sure, mum," she replied, "there's nothing to worry about. There's only one cook here."—National Monthly.

The Asylum's Advantage.

At the orphan asylum the childless Mrs. Hathaway, who had selected an infant for adoption, suddenly showed trepidation.

"Will I have to keep the baby if it doesn't suit my husband?" she asked, hesitatingly.

"Of course you won't have to keep it," responded the accommodating matron. "You can bring the kid back and exchange it any time. We're not arbitrary, like the stork."

Napoleon's Confidence.

Jusa before his marriage Napoleon received the appointment of commander in chief of the army of Italy; he was then twenty-six. "You are rather young," said one of the directors, "to assume responsibility so weighty and to take command over veteran generals."

"In one year," Napoleon replied, "I shall be old or dead."

"We can place you in command of men only," said Carnot, "for the troops are in need of everything and we can furnish you with no money to provide supplies."

"Give me only men enough," Napoleon answered, "and I ask for nothing more; I will be answerable for the result."—Table Talk and Opinions of Napoleon Bonaparte.

OUR NATIONAL DISEASE
Caused by Coffee.

Physicians know that drugs will not correct the evils caused by coffee and that the only remedy is to stop drinking it.

An Arkansas doctor says:

"I was a coffee drinker for many years and often thought that I could not do without it, but after years of suffering with our national malady, dyspepsia, I attributed it to the drinking of coffee, and after some thought, determined to use Postum for my morning drink.

"I had the Postum made carefully according to directions on the pkg. and found it just suited my taste.

"At first I used it only for breakfast, but I found myself getting so much better, that I had it at all meals, and I am pleased to say that I have been relieved of indigestion. I gained 19 pounds in 4 months and my general health is greatly improved.

"I must tell you of a young lady in Illinois. She had been in ill health for many years, the vital forces low, with but little pain. I wrote her of the good that Postum did me and advised her to try it.

"At the end of the year, she wrote me that she had gained 40 pounds in weight and felt like herself again."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

The cost per cup of both kinds is about the same.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

—sold by Grocers.

BLUE EARTH SOLON WARNED AGAINST ANTI-SUFFRAGISTS

ARDENT SUPPORTER OF WOMAN SUFFRAGE CAUSE RECEIVES PETITION AT OPENING OF SENATE.

EMBARGO RESOLUTION PASSED IN THE SENATE

"City Manager" to Be in Charge of Public Utilities and Improvements in Cities of Fourth Class, Provided for in Bill Introduced by Senator Nelson of Luverne.

St. Paul, Jan. 30.—Frank E. Putnam of Blue Earth, who is known in the Senate as one of the most ardent supporters of the Woman Suffrage cause, was asked by a large number of women in his district 'not to be influenced by the arguments of city women opposed to the extension of the franchise to women."

This petition was read by George W. Peachey, Senate clerk, shortly after the opening of the session. It was said in the Senate that there was every likelihood of the Sageng Suffrage Bill being placed on special orders for some date early in the week. Should this plan be carried out the bill will probably be disposed of by the end of the week, but a certain section of the suffrage supporters are of the opinion that the better procedure would be to wait until the County Option Bill is out of the way. The fight on the latter measure is scheduled for Thursday at 2 p. m.

Provides for City Manager.

A "city manager," who shall be in charge of all public utilities and public improvements in cities of the fourth class, is provided for in a bill introduced in the Senate by Senator Samuel B. Nelson of Luverne. The city manager wil be ex-officio city surveyor, engineer, street commissioner, recorder and clerk. The bill also provides the election of a civil service commission of 30 members, who shall serve without compensation. In every city to which this act is applicable there shall be a public utilities board, consisting of three members of the commission. The board wil be invested with governing power which is now in the hands of the City Council.

Bills carrying appropriations of several million dollars were introduced at the session. The regular budget for the Education Department, as introduced by Senator P. A. Gandrud, was set at $2,442,900 for 1916 and $2,668,450 for 1917. The amount to be expended in the maintenance of normal schools for 1916 and 1917 was set at $758,110. This appropriation was introduced by Senator F. H. Peterson.

Senate Passes Embargo Resolution.

The Bendixen embargo resolution, which was the subject of a warm debate when introduced in the House, was passed through the Senate with only one dissenting vote, that of Richard Jones, the Socialist Senator from Duluth.

A bill to appropriate $55,218.39 for the purpose of widening and deepening the Chippewa river in Pope and Swift counties was brought in by Senator Ganrud and referred to the committee on drainage.

A bill which had as its objective the protection of the lives of theatrical performers was introduced by Senator J. G. Callahan of Minneapolis. By the terms of this measure all counterweighting of scenery used on any theater stage must be done by means of incombustible weights carried on steel cables operated in grooves. Counterweighting now is chiefly done by means of sandbags suspended by hempen ropes. This bill also was referred to the committee on labor.

FAVORS COUNTY OPTION BILL

Senate Temperance Committee to Report on Senator Peterson's "Official" Measure.

St. Paul, Jan. 29.—With the casting vote of Chairman P. A. Sandrud as the deciding factor, the senate temperance committee decided to report favorably on Senator F. H. Peterson's "official" county option bill.

The measure was the subject of a public hearing in the senate chamber earlier in the afternoon, when adherents and opponents of the measure discussed its good and bad points for nearly three hours.

Senators voting for the bill were P. A. Gandrud, Fred D. Vibert, J. L. Vermilya, Theodore C. Blomgren and E. E. Lobeck. Those who opposed its recommendation for passage were John W. Pauly, Albert L. Ward, Peter Van Hoven and Pierre A. Hilbert.

To Change Workmen's Act.

St. Paul, Feb. 1.—Amendments which, it is predicted, will make the Minnesota workmen's compensation law the best in the United States will be officially recommended to the legislature by the state commissioner of labor.

These amendments were indorsed by a conference called by the commissioner and attended by representatives of the Minnesota Federation of Labor, Minnesota Employers' Association, the mining companies and the department of labor.

MAY VOTE COUNTY OPTION

Three Prohibitionists Hold Center of Stage in Battle Waged to Carry or Defeat Bill.

St. Paul, Feb. 1.—Three Prohibitionists, one in the senate and two in the house, now hold the center of the stage in the battle waged to carry or defeat the anti-saloon league county option bill.

The position of the three avowed Prohibitionists is an extraordinary one. It is said at this time that probably all three will vote for county option.

On the other hand, the three are confronted with the knowledge that only a few months ago, when the gubernatorial campaign was on and county option was the main issue between the two leading candidates, the state leaders of the Prohibition cause declared openly that adoption of a county option measure would "put the temperance forces to sleep for twenty-five years."

It is no secret that the actual Prohibitionists do not believe in county option. They are and for some time have been on the outs with the views of the anti-saloon league, the organization which carries the county option banner.

There is one senator who is a known Prohibitionist. He is E. E. Lobeck of Alexandria, Douglas county. A. V. Anderson, Goodhue county, and Carl A. Wold, also of Alexandria, are the two house members who are known to be out and out Prohibitionists.

WOULD UNITE TWIN CITIES

Westlake to Introduce Bill Authorizing Municipalities to Organize Under Single Government.

St. Paul, Jan. 29.—The first definite step toward a realization of the perhaps somewhat Utopian dream of the Twin Cities is promised by Senator E. J. Westlake of Minneapolis, who has announced that he will introduce in this legislature a bill authorizing the municipalities of Minneapolis and St. Paul to organize under a single government.

House Opposes Food Embargo.

St. Paul, Jan. 29.—With but eight dissenting votes, the House of Representatives went on record as opposed to an embargo on the exportation of foodstuffs to nations involved in the European war.

The resolution fathered by Representative C. M. Bendixen of Morgan, urging members of Congress from Minnesota to fight steps for an embargo, was adopted by a vote of 98 to 8.

Opposition that flared up failed to reappear.

Before the introduction of the Bendixen resolution, Representative J. H. Hynes of St. Paul introduced a resolution calling upon Congress to place an embargo on foodstuffs and to take more rigid measures to prevent exportation of munitions of war. The resolution had practically no support.

Those who voted against the resolution were: A. O. Devold, Minneapolis; James Dwyer, Minneapolis; J. H. Hynes, St. Paul; A. L. Lennon, Minneapolis; B. G. Novak, Minneapolis; C. L. Sawyer, Minneapolis; Fred Seebach, Red Wing; John Swanson, Minneapolis.

Debate Political Articles.

St. Paul, Jan. 29.—The House occupied itself with debate on the bill which would regulate letters of a political nature written to and published in newspapers. The bill would demand that the writer sign his name and also that the newspaper give any politician so attacked right to reply at equal length. There was offered an amendment providing that the politician pay for the space occupied for his defense. Others desired to make both pay the newspaper. Gunnar Bjornson, himself an editor, said he was for anything that would bring money into the coffers of the country editor, but thought that neither letter nor reply should be paid for. The bill was "progressed."

To Raise Auto Licenses to $5.

St. Paul, Jan. 29.—The first real debate in the Senate chamber came when the Palmer automobile bill was up for consideration by the members sitting as a committee of the whole. More than a score of Senators expressed their views.

The speakers, with practically no exceptions, were divided into two classes, those who favored the present charge, of $1.50 for an automobile license and those who believed that the amount should be increased to approximately $5. In the end the adherents of the higher charge won over their opponents and their amendment was carried without any dissenting votes.

To Probe State Printing.

St. Paul, Jan. 30.—A resolution declaring that the amount spent by the state for printing is far in excess of its actual needs and providing for an investigation of the entire matter by the committee on printing, was adopted by the Minnesota house of representatives.

To Dissolve Villages.

St. Paul, Jan. 30.—Representative A. F. Larson's bill providing dissolution of villages having less than 50 inhabitants was recommended for passage by the house committee on villages. It developed that the bill is drawn about the little village of Banning. Sandstone is dry. Banning, less than two miles away, has one saloon. The six voters in the town insist upon retaining the saloon. When the census discloses that the village has less than 50 inhabitants the saloon will be killed.

Sick Women Made Well

Reliable evidence is abundant that women are constantly being restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The many testimonial letters that we are continually publishing in the newspapers—hundreds of them—are all genuine, true and unsolicited expressions of heartfelt gratitude for the freedom from suffering that has come to these women solely through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Money could not buy nor any kind of influence obtain such recommendations; you may depend upon it that any testimonial we publish is honest and true—if you have any doubt of this write to the women whose true names and addresses are always given, and learn for yourself.

Read this one from Mrs. Waters:

CAMDEN, N.J.—"I was sick for two years with nervous spells, and my kidneys were affected. I had a doctor all the time and used a galvanic battery, but nothing did me any good. I was not able to go to bed, but spent my time on a couch or in a sleeping-chair, and soon became almost a skeleton. Finally my doctor went away for his health, and my husband heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got me some. In two months I got relief and now I am like a new woman and am at my usual weight. I recommend your medicine to every one and so does my husband."—Mrs. TILLIE WATERS, 530 Mechanic Street, Camden, N.J.

From Hanover, Penn.

HANOVER, PA.—"I was a very weak woman and suffered from bearing down pains and backache. I had been married over four years and had no children. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound proved an excellent remedy for it made me a well woman. After taking a few bottles my pains disappeared, and we now have one of the finest boy babies you ever saw."—Mrs. C. A. RICKRODE, R.F.D., No. 5, Hanover, Pa.

Now answer this question if you can. Why should a woman continue to suffer without first giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial? You know that it has saved many others—why should it fail in your case?

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No one sick with woman's ailments does justice to herself if she does not try this famous medicine made from roots and herbs, it has restored so many suffering women to health.

Write to LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO. (CONFIDENTIAL) LYNN, MASS., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

HORSES FOR EUROPE

Europe is buying thousands of horses from the United States for the war. The army agents refuse all horses that are not in good condition and free from contagious and infectious diseases. When the buyers come you must be ready to sell. Keep YOUR horses in salable condition, prevent and cure Distemper, Pink Eye, Epizootic, Catarrhal and Shipping Fever by using the largest selling veterinary remedy

SPOHN'S DISTEMPER COMPOUND.

Absolutely safe for all ages. One bottle cures a case. 60 cents and $1 the bottle. $5 and $10 the dozen. Write for free booklet, "Distemper, Causes and Cure." SPOHN MEDICAL COMPANY, Chemists and Bacteriologists, GOSHEN, INDIANA

SPOHN'S DISTEMPER CURE

The New Reading.

"Where there's a will there's a way."

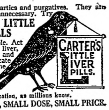
"Yes, and the way is generally one how to break it."

NO BAKING POWDER MORE WHOLESOME THAN ALUM POWDERS.

Washington, D. C.—Alum baking powders are no more harmful to a person than any other baking powders.

Such is the conclusion of the referee board of consulting scientific experts of the department of agriculture as the result of experiments to determine the influence of aluminum compounds on the nutrition and health of man. The report gives the results of three sets of extensive experiments on human subjects conducted independently by members of the board and was in response to questions put to it by the department of agriculture. The board's report was unanimous and was signed by Ira Remsen, president of Johns Hopkins university, Chairman: Russell H. Crittendon, professor of physiological chemistry in Yale university and director of the Sheffield Scientific school: John H Long, professor of chemistry in Northwestern university; Alonzo E. Taylor, professor of physiological chemistry in the University of Pennsylvania, and Theobald Smith, professor of comparative pathology in Harvard.

It is a wonderful help to our education to pass on to others that which we have learned. There is no impression without expression. — E. Hovey.



Don't Persecute Your Bowels

Cut out cathartics and purgatives. They are brutal, harsh, unnecessary. Try CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

Purely vegetable. Act gently on the liver, eliminate bile, and soothe the delicate membrane of the bowel. Cure Constipation, Biliousness, Sick Headache and Indigestion, as millions know.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature

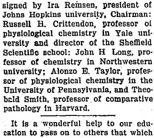
Brent Good

BLACK LEG LOSSES SURELY PREVENTED by Cutter's Blackleg Pills. Low-priced, fresh, reliable; preferred by Western stockmen, because they protect where other vaccines fail. Write for booklet and testimonials. 10-dose pkge. Blackleg Pills $1.00 50-dose pkge. Blackleg Pills 4.00 Use any injector, but Cutter's best. The superiority of Cutter products is due to over 15 years of specializing in vaccines and serums only. Insist on Cutter's. If unobtainable, order direct. The Cutter Laboratory, Berkeley, Cal., or Chicago, Ill.

CANCER Tumors, Lupus, successfully treated without knife or pain. All work guaranteed. Come, or write for Free Book. Dr. Williams, Specialist on Cancer 2904 University Av. S.E. Minneapolis.

CORN-OATS-RYE Wisconsin yields on top—Salzer's specialties helped do it. BIG SEED CATALOG FREE. John A. Salzer Seed Co., Box 717, La Crosse, Wis.

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 6-1915.



WAITING FOR YOU

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Yes, waiting for every farmer or farmer's son — any industrious American who is anxious to establish for himself a happy home and prosperity. Canada's hearty invitation this year is more attractive than ever. Wheat is higher but her farm land just as cheap and in the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta

160 Acre Homesteads are Actually Free to Settlers and Other Land at From $15 to $20 per Acre

The people of European countries as well as the American continent must be fed—thus an even greater demand for Canadian Wheat will keep up the price. Any farmer who can buy land at $15.00 to $30.00 per acre —get a dollar for wheat and raise 20 to 45 bushels to the acre is bound to make money—that's what you can expect in Western Canada. Wonderful yields also of Oats, Barley and Flax. Mixed Farming is fully as profitable an industry as grain raising. The excellent grasses, full of nutrition, are the only food required either for beef or dairy purposes. Good schools, markets convenient, climate excellent.

Military service is not compulsory in Canada but there is an unusual demand for farm labor to replace the many young men who have volunteered for service in the war. Write for literature and particulars as to reduced railway rates to Superintendent Immigration, Ottawa, Canada; or to

R. A. GARRETT
311 Jackson Street, St. Paul, Minn.
Canadian Goverment Agent.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3.1879.

CONSIDER YOUR INTEREST

It is amusing to hear the large number of sensational stories that can be sprung on a simple proposition of trying to get the Red Lake River declared non-navigable, so we can get bridges across it, the same as they do across Clearwater river. We have endeavored to place the facts before the people as they are, and if they prefer to have this government fence remain to hinder the development of the country, we will try and stand it if the rest of you can. But don't expose your ignorance by saying that you are opposed to it for the reason that it will make higher taxes.

There is a certain amount of your county taxes goes to the road and bridge fund, and if your territory does not require any bridges, the money is placed where they do require bridges, and in this county it will of course be put in at or below Thief River Falls, where Red Lake River is a non-navigable stream. You farmers of eastern Pennington County pay your equal share into that road and bridge fund, with no prospect of getting one dollar of it back. With this river as it is now the west end of the county can have their bridges built from your taxes while you can sink or swim when you want to cross Red Lake River.

We have waited ten long years for the government to dredge or make some improvements on this river, and there will be no more prospect of them doing it ten years hence than there is to-day. Step and consider the facts as they are and present a solid front on this proposition to build up the country in which you live.

A bill is to be introduced in the present legislature to consolidate the cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis. We would like to see this done, as it would make a nice city for Minnesota to boast of.

Representative Stenvick has got a good sized job on hand, if he passes the bill introduced by him to prohibit all Sunday amusements including theatrical and moving picture entertainments. We never heard that Clearwater county was ever bothered by these entertainments enough to make it necessary to pass a law to prohibit them.

The government agents are holding down the saloon lid in the territory covered by that 1855 treaty good and tight. One benefit has been noted by lumbermen all ready, and that is that the men remain in camp now and work steadily, as there is no place to go to spend their money for drink.

The present high prices for grain has greatly encouraged the farmers of this locality to continue raising grain. A large number of farmers had almost decided to quit raising wheat for seventy-five cents a bushel as that price only about pays the cost of production, with very little if any profit.

It would certainly be a poor advertisement for the wheat producing states to place an embargo on the shipment of wheat and flour, so as to compel the American farmer to sell his grain for seventy-five cents a bushel, while the Canadian farmer was selling for one dollar seventy-five cents.

The state legislature have passed a resolution protesting against any embargo being placed on the shipment of wheat and flour to Europe.

The last book gotten out by the State Board of Immigration advertising northern Minnesota was certainly a "hummer." The illustrations are all taken from actual fields of grain and grass. Write to the State Board of Immigration for a copy, read it, and then send it to some friend in an eastern state.

The Duluth Herald have been devoting some space to finding an issue for the Republican party in 1916. That is easy enough to find, as they can make it on the tremendous increase of the high cost of living, and get a large amount of their campaign timber from the speeches made by President Wilson in the last campaign. There will be plenty of issues all right, as the Democratic party is already on record as having closed thousands of American factories and driven them out of business, and now they would place an embargo on the shipment of grain and flour to Europe so as to drive the American farmers to Canada. Oh, there will be an issue all right, and a repetition of the McKinley campaign. The common people will make the issue, as it is easy to make an issue when you have plenty of timber to build from.

COLDS ARE OFTEN MOST SERIOUS
STOP POSSIBLE COMPLICATIONS.

The disregard of a Cold has often brought many a regret. The fact of Sneezing, Coughing, or a Fever should be warning enough that your system needs immediate attention. Certainly Loss of Sleep is most serious. It is a warning given by Nature. It is man's duty to himself to assist by doing his part. Dr. King's New Discovery is based on a scientific analysis of Colds. 50c. at your Druggist. Buy a bottle to-day.—adv.

THE LIVER REGULATES. THE BODY
A SLUGGISH LIVER NEEDS CARE.

Someone has said that people with Chronic Liver Complaint should be shut up away from humanity, for they are pessimists and see through a "glass darkly." Why? Because mental states depend upon physical states. Biliousness. Headaches, Dizziness and Constipation disappear after using Dr. King's New Life Pills. 25c. at your Druggist. —adv.

IT REALLY DOES RELIEVE RHEUMATISM.

Everybody who is afflicted with Rheumatism in any form should by all means keep a bottle of Sloan's Liniment on hand. The minute you feel pain or soreness in a joint or muscle, bathe it with Sloan's Liniment. Do not rub it. Sloan's penetrates almost immediately right to the seat of pain, relieving the hot, tender, swollen feeling and making the part easy and comfortable. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25 cents of any druggist and have it in the house—against Colds, Sore and Swollen Joints, Lumbago, Sciatica and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief. Buy a bottle to-day.—Advertisement.

STOP THAT COUGH—NOW.

When you catch Cold, or begin to Cough, the first thing to do is to take Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey. It penetrates the linings of the Throat and Lungs and fights the Germs of the Disease, giving quick relief and natural healing. "Our whole family depend on Pine-Tar-Honey for Coughs and Colds," writes Mr. E. Williams, Hamilton, Ohio. It always helps. 25c. at your Druggist.—Adv.

WE HAVE
$150,000.00
TO LOAN ON FARMS IN
PENNINGTON COUNTY
Write Or Call on Us At FIRST NATIONAL BANK
THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN.

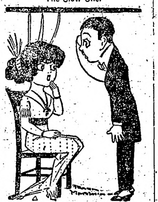
DO YOUR BANKING WITH
FARMERS STATE BANK
GOODRIDGE - - MINNESOTA
CAPITAL AND SURPLUS $12, 000.
6 per cent paid on time deposits
Fire and Torrado Insurance Written in Responsible Companies.
FARM LOANS A SPECIALITY
J. M. BISHOP, President JAY PAYNE Vice-President
NICK BUNDHUND, Cashier

Subscribe for THE SUNBEAM

A Fateful Game of Chess.

It is a Spanish tradition that the fate of Columbus overhung on a game of chess. For years the great navigator had haunted the Spanish court, trying to interest some one in his plans, but at last he determined to abandon the country and visit France. The night before his intended departure he sought an audience with the queen to communicate his intentions and to take his leave. The queen asked him to wait while she made another effort to interest the king. She found Ferdinand engaged at a game of chess and, disturbing him by her entrance, caused him to lose a piece. Annoyed and irritated by the incident, the king, after rudely denouncing Columbus and his schemes, informed Isabella that the result of the petition would depend on the result of the game. It grew worse, and the chances were all against the launching of the expedition. But the queen, overlooking the board, whispered to her august spouse a suggestion relative to a move that would be advantageous. The king followed the advice, the complexion of the game was quickly reversed, and Columbus' dream of years was realized at last.

The Slow One.



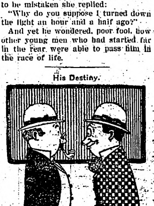
"Would you," he said after they had been in the dark for a long time, "be angry with me if I were to kiss you?"

She was silent for a moment. Then in tones the meaning of which was not to be mistaken she replied:

"Why do you suppose I turned down the light an hour and a half ago?"

And yet he wondered, poor fool, how other young men who had started far in the rear were able to pass him in the race of life.

His Destiny.



"That fellow has such loose business methods."

"Then he'll end in a tight place."—Baltimore American.

Tenniel's Mustache.

The later portraits of Sir John Tenniel, the famous cartoonist of London Punch, show him wearing a full beard and mustache, but his most familiar appearance was with a mustache only, a long and curly specimen, worthy of one of Ouida's guardsmen. The story of how he came to grow it is interesting.

After the Crimean war the return of the soldiers with full beards started a fashion against which three Punch artists protested. One day, being out on horseback together, they solemnly halted at crossroads and swore on their uplifted hunting crops never to wear hair on lip or chin. Tenniel was one of the party, Leech another and R. T. Pritchett the third.

Leech alone remained true to the vow. Pritchett went to Skye, and on his return with a mustache called on Tenniel. He thrust his head in at the cartoonist's door and dumbly waited. "You scoundrel!" was Tenniel's exclamation. "Then I, too, must!" And he did.

He Ought to Know.

Lady—I should like to look at a flat which I see is for rent in this building, but no one has answered my bell.

Man—I'll show it to you. Right this way, mum.

"Well, this is something like it. The rooms will suit, I'm sure. What sort of a janitor have they here?"

"The very best in the city, mum."

"Obliging?"

"The kindest hearted gentleman to be found anywhere, mum."

"Honest?"

"As the day is long, mum."

"Is he attentive to his duties?"

"He's just workin' himself to death, mum. Always thinkin' up some new thing to make folks comfortable."

"Well, I declare! I wouldn't lose this flat for the world. Where is the janitor now?"

"I'm him, mum."—Kansas City Star.

The Green Flames.

The greatest discovery of borax ever made was the result of the purest chance. A number of years ago a man named Aaron Winters was prospecting for gold or other precious metals in that American inferno known as Death valley. He had his wife with him, and they two worked together until their provisions were at an end; then, bitterly disappointed at their ill success, they started back toward civilization. The first night they camped in Ash valley. Here they lit a fire and prepared to cook their supper. Mrs. Winters called her husband's attention to the peculiar green tinge of the flames. He did not speak, but with shaking hands scratched away the earth and suddenly shouted: "We're rich, Rose; we're rich! It's borax!" He was right. They subsequently sold their claim for a very large sum.

Rebuked.

"Guilty or not guilty?" asked a Dutch justice of a prisoner.

"Not guilty."

"Den vat you vant here? Go about your business!"

Free speech is a precious right, and so is free action. But the tongue has no more right than the hand to abuse its freedom.

FIRST STATE BANK,
Of Plummer Minnesota.

You Run Your Business With a Check Book – How About Your Home?
BILL

"BILLS, bills, bills—nothing but bills!" frequently is the complaint of the head of the family. No man would think of running his business WITHOUT A CHECK BOOK. How about YOUR home? The running of the home today is a BUSINESS PROPOSITION.

Open a CHECKING ACCOUNT With Us at Once,
J. A. DUFFY President, Henry Enderlie, Cashier

FARMERS & MERCHANTS STATE BANK
Oklee Minn.

The rapid growth of this bank is the best evidence that its policy and methods meet with the approval of the people in our community.

You will find this bank as liberal in its dealings as is consistent with sound banking.

We are at all times prepared to discuss your requirements with you and invite consultation.

Pay your bills with checks on this bank.
Farm Loans At Lowest Rates And On Easy Terms.
Six per cent interest paid on time deposits.
CAPITAL AND SURPLUS———————$14,500.00
J. A. C. Torgerson, V. P. W. B. Torgerson, Cashier.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Jan. 29th 1915.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land office at Crookston Minn. Jan. 22nd, 1915. Notice is hereby given that Carl P. Anderson of Erie Minn. who on November, 26th, 1907, made Homestead Entry No. 1373. Serial No 04591, for the E ½ N E ¼ and who on July 1st, 1911 made Additional Homestead Application Serial No. 06368 for the W ½ N E ¼ all in Section 30 Township 153 N. Range 39 West Fifth Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Five Year Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U.S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls. Minnesota on the 10th day of March 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses: Lars C. Fevig, Olof O. Omlid, Nick Meyers, Chris Odegaard, all of Erie, Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal.
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First pub. in The Sunbeam Jan. 8th, 1915.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Jan. 6th, 1915. Notice is hereby given that Thomas G. Rome, of Rhoda, Minnesota, who on February 8th, 1912, made Homestead Application, Serial No. 07282, for Lots 5 and 6, Section 6 Township 152 N. Range 40 W 5th principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make Five Year proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota; at Thief River Falls, Minn. on the 16th day of February 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses: Sam B. Swanson, Ole G. Sireland, of Rhoda, Minn., Andrew Feland, William G. Hunt, of Sunbeam, Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

PETER M. RINGDAL,
Register.

We have for sale one of the best quarter sections of land in the town of Highlanding, located one mile south of Highlanding Creamery. This farm will be sold cheap as the owner is a non resident and desires to use the money invested in other business. For terms and full particulars call on W. G. Hunt, Sunbeam, Minn

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Jan. 8th 1915.

Department of the Interior U.S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Dec. 21st, 1914.

Notice is hereby given that George T. Christofferson, of Erie, Minn. who on May 3rd, 1912 made Homestead Application Serial No. 07903, for S. W. ¼ Section 25 Township 153 N. Range 39 W. 5th. Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Commutation Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for District of Minn. at Thief River Falls, Minn. on the 18th day of February, 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses: Hilmer C. Iverson, Anders H. Vake, Ole K. Lien, Generius Christofferson, all of Erie Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register.

MONEY TO LOAN ON FARM LAND
MACKEY J. THOMPSON
FARM MORTGAGES
ST. PAUL, MINNESOTA
CONTRACTS, FIRST AND SECOND MORTGAGES BOUGHT

U. S. Mail.

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 1.05 p. m., on Tuesday Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4:55 p.m

Wm.G. Hunt, p.m,

W. G. Hunt
Notary Public
ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. XIV. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1915 NO. 48.

THE LOCAL NEWS

Ye editor made a business trip to Goodridge Monday.

Goodridge have a fire department organized.

There is a prospect for a heavy immigration to northern Minnesota this summer.

The electric train from Goodridge to Thief River Falls is always on time.

Sam B. Swanson of Rhoda, was a business visitor here Tuesday.

Mrs. Joseph LaCounte went down to Thief River Falls Wednesday of this week.

Narveson Bros. have been busy sawing the year's supply of fire wood for Henry Arndt this week.

A large building is being constructed at Goodridge to be used for a city hall, with a pool room on the ground floor.

There is to be a grand ball at the Wojnarowski hall in the town of Hickory on saturday evening February 20th. First class music. Plenty of stable room for horses. All are invited.

The business men of Goodridge report that business is rather slow at present, as there is very little grain being delivered there now, which is undoubtedly occasioned by the rapid raise in prices.

Mrs. C. L. Clark received a letter from Deer Park, Wisconsin last night, stating that her mother was very sick and not expected to recover, and she left for there this morning.

We have been filling up our ice house this week, and while it is some labor the convenience of having ice during the hot weather more than compensates for the trouble and expense.

We regret that the notice of the Potato Contest to be held at Thief River Falls, February 16th came too late for publication in this issue, as we did not have the space for it.

The Kratka Creamery has been leased to a creamery man from Iowa, who will run it this season. This creamery has not been running for the past five years owing to lack of patronage, but the present renter claims a list of patrons that will justify him in running it.

Philipp Heideman of Roland left the women folks to do the chores at home, and went to the pinery last fall. That is one advantage that a poor man has, who is making a start in northern Minnesota, as he can obtain employment at good wages during the winter season, if he is willing to work.

FALSE REPORTS

The farmers living south of Sunbeam post-office are making an effort to have the mail carrier turn and drive one and one half miles west, when he had drove one and one half miles north of Rhoda post-office. The matter was referred to the postmasters at Rhoda and Sunbeam. Sunbeam post-office reported that the distance would be the same, and that eleven additional farmers would get mail service on the route via, G. Swanson, Ole Skreland, K. M. Kratzer. Joseph LaCounte, Louis LaCounte, W. H. Wilde, Knute Olson, T. G. Rome, Andrew Feland, Ole Overvold, Even J. Sund and Gunder Asbjornson would get mail service in mail boxes if the mail came this way, which the people know who live on the line are facts. Now let us see what the post-master at Rhoda reported. He reported that there was no laid out or traveled road this way. That there would eight mail boxes be deprived of service between Sunbeam and one and one half miles north of Rhoda. That there would not be one additional mail box erected on the proposed change of route. He expected of course that no one would ever see or hear about this report except the Fourth Assistant Post Master General. What is your opinion of a man that is doing business in this country and a post master that would get down so low into the falsehood ditch as to make a report of that kind? We don't know whether he got his professional son Stephen from Kratka to help him compose the report or not, but the above is what he reported. We have been in business a good many years, but for trickery, and deceptive reports to the Post Office Department those Singers take the cake, and would undoubtedly run away with the whole baker if they could in order to compel the farmers to travel long distances to get their mail, so they would land at their country stores to buy goods

Farmers' Elevator.

The farmers tributary to Plummer, and the business men of that place met on January 29th, and organized to build a Farmers' Cooperative Elevator at Plummer this year. A Board of Directors was elected and preparations made to begin taking shares at once. The business men of Plummer are alive to the fact, that their village did not get their share of the grain tributary to that place this year, owing to what the farmers considered a combination between the elevators to depress prices and grades, as they claim the same quality of wheat was graded one or two grades higher at Oklee than it was at Plummer. The new elevator will be built this season, which will restore the confidence of the farmers in the Plummer market.

HIGHLANDING SPECIALS.

Christian Wold has been on the sick list the past week.

Clifford Shosten purchased a new cutter on Monday.

Andrew Nelson will soon start sawing logs at his mill.

Narveson Bros. and Shosten Co. are sawing wood around H'l'd'g.

Clifford Shosten has purchased a new ice plow, and taken the contract to put up the season's ice for the Highlanding Creamery.

Judging by the large number of loads of wood passing through Highlanding now days, the prairie farmers must be laying in their summer's supply of fire wood.

At a meeting of the Commercial Club last Monday evening it was decided to organize a fire company. A. Tharaldson was chosen chief. C. Shosten assistant chief. A. Ellingson recorder. S. L. Holm treasurer. T. S. Jacobson foreman. Wm. Shosten, Joe Thompson and Ole Halvorson trustees. Edward Singer starter. It was decided to purchase a fire bell and a chemical engine.

BIDS WANTED.

Bids will be received by the Highlanding Co-operative Creamery Association until March 1st, for the sale of buttermilk for the season. Board having right to accept or reject bids.

Highlanding Co-op Cr'y Ass'n,
Amanda Dunn, Sec'y.

The wheels of the post office department most grind slowly when a village of the size of Goodridge cannot get a post office.

LUMBER AND BUILDING MATERIALS.

If you are thinking of building a house, barn or any other building this year, it will pay you well to see us.

We carry complete stocks of lumber and all other kinds of building materials at all our yards, and would be pleased to have you inspect same at any time.

We would be pleased to help you plan and estimate the cost of any building you are thinking of erecting this year, and it is understood we do so with no obligation on your part to build

IF YOU ARE INTERESTED IN SILOS, we are Agent for the Celebrated Arctic Silos, which are the very best on the market. These Silos have stood the test of 30 degrees below zero without freezing, which no other Silo has done.

Better come in and talk it over.

WINTON-NICHOLS LUMBER COMPANY.
—Yards at—
Goodridge, Mavie, Thief River Falls and Fosston, Minn.

Go to S. P. Johnson, at Oklee

"The Right Place"

Boys Suits from $1.25 to $4.50 per suit. Mens suits, former price $25.00. Now selling for $16.00. $15.00 suits now selling for $8.50

$8.50 suits now selling for $4.50.

Men's shoes from $1.25 to $3.50. Former price $4.00 now $3.25.

Ladies shoes $1.50 to $3.00.

Prints 5 cents per yard. Gingham 8 cents to 10 cents per yard. All Dry Goods at cost. Men's Caps goes at any price.

Sugar for this week is $6.00 per 100 lbs. Good coffee for 18 cents to 30 cents a pound. Bargains in all kind of goods.

S. P. JOHNSON, Oklee, Minn.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Three Hundred Ninety Five, and 73—100 ($395.73) Dollars, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by Manuel Niemi and Ida Niemi, his wife, mortgagers, to the Merchants State Bank of Red Lake Falls, mortgagee, bearing date the 15th. day of March 1913, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Pennington, and State of Minnesota on the 26th day of April 1913 at 9:00 o'clock A. M. in Book 1 of mortgages on page 475.

NOW THEREFORE, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, VIZ:

The North West quarter of South East quarter (N W ¼ of S E ¼) and East half of South East quarter (E ½ of S E ¼) of Section thirty-four (34) and North West quarter of South West quarter (N W ¼ of S W ¼) of Section thirty five (35) in Township one hundred fifty two (152) North, of Range thirty nine (39) West of the 5th. Principal Meridian in Pennington County, and the State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Pennington County at the front door of the court house in the City of Thief River Falls in said County and State on the 27th day of February A. D. 1915 at 10:00 o'clock A. M. of that day at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt of Three Hundred Ninety Five and 73—100 [$395.73] Dollars and the taxes, if any, on said premises and Twenty Five [$25.00] Dollars attorney's fees as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law:

Dated January 9th, 1915
John C. Mathews,
Attorney for Mortgagee,
Red Lake Falls, Minn.
Merchants State Bank of
Red Lake Falls
J. A. Duffy,
Cashier

THE PRICHARD Co.

Thief River Falls Minn,

DEALERS IN LUMBER AND FARM MACHINERY.

Located west of the new Soo Depot. Give us a call, and look over our stock of Lumber and Farm Machinery.

H. O. KJOMME
Attorney and Counselor at Law
COUNTY ATTORNEY
Megina Block
Thief River Falls, - - Minn.

Wilhelm Michelet
U. S. COMMISSIONER
COURT HOUSE
THIEF RIVER FALLS,
MINN.

NOTICE OF DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP.

Notice is hereby given that A. C. Ellingson and Adolph Ellingson, doing a general mercantile business at Highlanding, Minn., under the firm name of Ellingson Bros., is this day dissolved by mutual consent, the business having this day been sold to Signa Ellingson who will henceforth continue the business. All bills owing by the firm of Ellingson Bros. will be paid and settled by the said Signa Ellingson and all bills and accounts due the firm of Ellingson Bros. are hereby made due and payable to the said Signa Ellingson.

Dated at Highlanding, Minn., this 25th day of January, 1915.
A. C. Ellingson,
Adolf Ellingson.

To Avoid Worry.

If you would avoid worry train yourself to be methodical and to act up to the good old maxim of never putting off till tomorrow what can be done today.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists. Price 75c per bottle.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

EAT

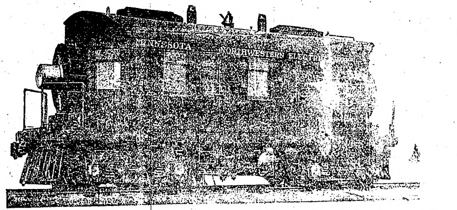
When you are AT GOODRIDGE, Call at the Goodridge Restaurant and get A cup of HOT COFFEE, or a good warm dinner for 25 cents. Don't forget the sign of

EAT

BARBER SHOP IN CONNECTION

[illegible] Prop.

Minnesota Northwestern Electric Railway Co.



TIME TABLE.

Going East

Train No. 1.
LEAVE—Thief River Falls at 7:15 A. M.
Silverton at 7:40 A. M.
Mavie at 8:05 A. M.
ARRIVE—Goodridge at 8:30 A. M.

Train No. 5.
LEAVE—Thief River Falls at 10:00 A. M.
Silverton at 11:10 A. M.
Mavie at 11:40 A. M.
ARRIVE-Goodridge at 12:10 A. M.

Train No. 3.
LEAVE-Thief River Falls at 3:45 P. M.
Silverton at 4:10 P. M.
Mavie at 4:35 P. M.
ARRIVE-Goodridge at 5:00 P. M.

Going West

To Thief River Falls

Train No. 2
LEAVE--Goodridge at 8:45 A. M.
Mavie at 9:10 A. M.
Silverton at 9:37 A. M
ARRIVE-Thief River Falls at 10:00 A. M.

Train No. 6.
LEAVE--Goodridge at 1:45 P. M
Mavie at 2:15 P. M.
Silverton at 2:45 P. M.
ARRIVE--Thief River Falls at 3:30 P. M.

Train No. 4.
LEAVE--Goodridge at 5:15 P. M.
Mavie at 5:40 P. M.
Silverton at 6:05 P. M.
ARRIVE--Thief River Falls at 6:30 P. M.

Cash For Hides and Furs.

If you have Hides or Furs for sale, bring them to the Oklee meat market and get the highest market price in cash.

Meat Market,
Oklee, Minn.

The Dear Girls.

"I don't like my new gown very well," said the young lady recently. "The material is awfully pretty and the style is all right, but it needs something to improve the shape of it."

"Why," suggested her dearest friend, "don't you let some other girl wear it?"—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

IS CHILD CROSS, FEVERISH, SICK

Look, Mother! If tongue is coated, give "California Syrup of Figs."

Children love this "fruit laxative," and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver and bowels so nicely.

A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels, and the result is they become tightly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sours, then your little one becomes cross, half-sick, feverish, don't eat. sleep or act naturally, breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomach-ache or diarrhoea. Listen, Mother! See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well child again.

Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs" because it is perfectly harmless; children love it, and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Adv.

Knew the Ropes.

Bacon—You can depend on him.

Egbert—Are you sure?

"Oh, positively. He knows all the ropes."

"How do you know?"

"Because he worked for a long time in one of those factories where they make cheap cigars."

Salzer's White Bonanza Oats.

Made C. J. Johnson of Lincoln Co., Minn., famous in growing 243 bushels from 2½ bushels sown last spring. Can you beat that in 1915? Wont you try?

This great Oat has taken more prizes and given bigger and larger yields throughout the United States than any Oat known. It's enormously prolific. Just the Oat for Iowa, Minn., Wis., Ill., Ind., Mich., Ohio, Neb., Pa., N. Y., Kansas and Missouri.

We are America's headquarters for
Alfalfa and Potatoes
Timothy, Clovers and Farm Seeds.

For 10c In Postage

We gladly mail our Catalog and sample package of Ten Famous Farm Seeds, including Speltz, "The Cereal Wonder;" Rejuvenated White Bonanza Oats, "The Prize Winner;" Billion Dollar Grass, Teosinte, the Silo Filler, etc., etc.

Or Send 12c

And we will mail you our big Catalog and six generous packages of Early Cabbage, Carrot, Cucumber, Lettuce, Radish, Onion—furnishing lots and lots of juicy delicious Vegetables during the early Spring and Summer.

Or send to John A. Salzer Seed Co., Box 717, La Crosse, Wis., twenty cents and receive both above collections and their big catalog.

Seems So.

Mr. Bacon—I understand it requires about fifteen days for the human body to recover from the loss of two consecutive nights' sleep.

Mrs. Bacon—And don't you suppose those fiendish cats in the back yard know that?

WHEN KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE GLASS OF SALTS

Eat Less Meat If Kidneys Hurt or You Have Backache or Bladder Misery —Meat Forms Uric Acid.

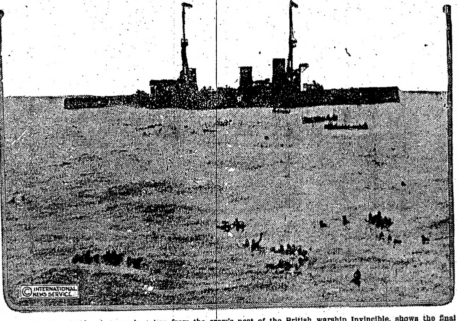
No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.—Adv.

Monuments to men really great are superfluous.

FINAL SCENE IN GREAT NAVAL BATTLE



This remarkable photograph, taken from the crow's nest of the British warship Invincible, shows the final scene in the battle between the English and German fleets off the Falkland islands. In the foreground are the survivors of the German flagship, and boats from a British dreadnaught are seen starting out to pick them up.

ATTITUDE OF U. S. AS TO WAR ZONE TEXT UNCERTAIN

PRESIDENT WILSON AND CABINET COME TO NO DECISION AS TO WHETHER THERE WILL BE A PROTEST.

HOISTING OF U. S. FLAG BY BRITISH DISCUSSED

Raising of Stars and Stripes on British Steamer Lusitania, After Charge by Germany That Neutral Flags Had Been Used, May Cause Inquiry.

Washington, Feb. 9.—Although the text of Germany's official memorandum explaining the admiralty's proclamation of a submarine campaign against enemy merchant ships has been delayed in transmission and did not reach the State Department from Ambassador Gerard, publication in the press of the text of the document produced a profound impression on officials and diplomats in the national capital.

As the memorandum revealed that German naval commanders had been given orders "to avoid violence" to neutral ships, it was regarded as much more reassuring than the brief proclamation, though there was some uneasiness over the suggestion in the memorandum that efforts to torpedo enemy merchant ships might unintentionally strike neutral vessels.

Comes to No Decision.

President Wilson and his cabinet have come to no decision as to whether there will be any protest from the United States government, but it is believed that some inquiry might be made to determine what steps are planned to take off passengers and crew from enemy merchant ships as well as neutral vessels, the former because of the great number of American citizens accustomed to travel to Europe on passenger steamers belonging to belligerent powers. The declaration of London provides that all persons aboard an enemy merchant ship must be saved before the vessel is destroyed.

Officials generally were non-committal as to what the position of the United States government might be, but if assurances are given that merchant ships will not be summarily destroyed without giving an opportunity for persons aboard to be saved, it was regarded as certain that the American government, observing strict neutrality, would not protest against the proclamation of the sea zones.

Hoists American Flag.

It was apparent among high officials that the hoisting of the American flag on the British steamer Lusitania immediately after the charge had been made in the German admiralty's proclamation that neutral flags had been ordered used by Great Britain, introduced a phase of the situation which is more likely to call forth diplomatic discussion than the proclamation itself.

Begins Fiftieth Year in Bed.

New York, Feb. 5.—Miss Mollie Fancher, 67 years old, Brooklyn's famous invalid, has begun her fiftieth year in bed and received and answered messages from friends all over the country. In June, 1865, Miss Fanches sustained the injuries that have made her an invalid and an object of interest to physicians. On Feb. 3, 1866, she became helpless and resigned herself to a life in bed. Despite her affliction Miss Fancher has been happy and contented during all these years.

RULERS ARE EYE-WITNESSES

RUSSIAN EMPEROR WATCHES STRUGGLE FOR WARSAW.

Kaiser Joins German Generals in Poland and Visits Trenches— Furious Battle Rages.

London, Feb. 9.—With the German and Russian emperors as eye-witnesses, the armies of Russia and Germany still are contending for the positions which protect the Polish capital of Warsaw from the invaders. The Russian emperor has been at Russian headquarters for several days, and the German report announces that the German emperor has joined his generals and has actually visited some of the troops in their trenches.

Nothing has been disclosed as to the progress of the battle which, when the last reports were received, was raging with unabated fury.

The Russians, according to the official statement, had strengthened their positions on the western bank of the Bzura river, which they had crossed near its mouth, and captured another German vantage point.

They also captured a long line of German trenches near Borjimow, which has been the center of most desperate fighting.

New Battle in East Prussia.

In East Prussia another big battle is developing.

With regard to all this fighting the German official report simply says:

"No essential events have taken place."

The fighting in the west is merely a retpetition of that of the preceding days.

There have been lively artillery duels and a few infantry attacks, in which both sides claim to have gained some ground.

The Italian report of the return of Baron Burian, the Austro-Hungarian foreign minister, from his visit to the German emperor, says that the Austrian cabinet found the results satisfactory, but were not inclined to give Trentino to Italy and part of Transylvania to Roumania as the price of continued neutrality on the part of those countries.

Turkey has at last given Italy satisfaction for the Hodaida incident. The British consul has been released and the Italian flag saluted.

BODY IS FOUND IN THICKET

Death of Alonzo G. Gardner of Baltimore Caused by Shot in Back —Brother Is Missing.

Welaka, Fla., Feb. 8.—The body of Alonzo G. Gardner of Baltimore was found in a dense palmetto thicket along the banks of Raft creek, near Georgetown, Fla. Death had been caused by a shot in the back of the head. Gardner and his brother, Horace, of Springfield, Mass., have been missing for three weeks.

No trace of Horace Gardner has been found, but the authorities believe he, too, is dead. It is thought both men were killed for the purpose of robbery. The pockets of the brother just found had been turned wrong side out. Both are said to have carried considerable money.

Search for the men was begun immediately after a negro pilot returned here alone Jan. 22 with a yacht the brothers had engaged for use on a hunting trip up the Ocklawaha river. The negro soon afterward disappeared and efforts to find him have failed.

To Hear Case of Dynamiter.

Washington, Feb. 6.—State Department officials say that the next step in the case of Werner Horn, who attempted to destroy a railroad bridge at Vanceboro, Me., would have to be taken by Canadian authorities before a United States commissioner in Maine. Until the hearing is completed and all the evidence gathered there no action will be taken on the formal application for extradition made by Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British ambassador, on behalf of the Canadian government.

AMERICAN FOOD SAVES BELGIUM FROM STARVING

IF SUPPLY IS DIMINISHED, INHABITANTS WILL DIE, CABLES CONGRESSMAN SCOTT FROM LONDON.

CARDINAL DELIGHTS IN DILEMMA OF GERMANS

Mercier's Eyes Twinkle as He Tells of Communication Asking Him to Deny Statements That He Had Been Deprived of Personal Liberty.

London, Feb. 9.—"The situation remains acute. If the supply of food is diminished Belgium will starve."

This message was cabled by former Congressman Charles F. Scott of Kansas, who is returning from an inspection of relief work in Belgium and France, to former Governor Walter R. Stubbs of Kansas.

While at Malines, Mr. Scott called upon Cardinal Mercier. He was accompanied by Pessain, the printer, who was fined for printing the now famous pastoral letter of the archbishop. Describing his interview with the prelate, Mr. Scott said:

Cardinal's Palace Shelled.

"Cardinal Mercier lives in a fine old palace. The throne room has a big hole in the roof and this, with other holes in the walls, to say nothing of broken windows, tells the story of stray shells which fell around the palace. No German soldiers were seen on guard.

"The Cardinal obviously enjoys the dilemma in which he has placed the Germans. His eyes twinkled as he told the story of his latest adventure. At 6 o'clock one morning, said the archbishop, a German officer and two soldiers brought a communication from the commander asking him to deny statements that he had been deprived of his personal liberty. The denial which had been prepared consisted of four or five typewritten sheets.

"Cardinal Mercier said he requested his callers to return in the evening for an answer, but the officer declared they must await a reply in the cardinal's room. At the archbishop's request, telephonic confirmation of this order was received. Describing his subsequent experience the cardinal said:

Grateful to Americans.

"'It is true no manacles were used to restrain me, but I was to have performed a service in Antwerp and was not permitted to go there. For three days I was restrained in my palace. Two days later I was asked to modify my letters nad wrote another. If the Germans are clever they will publish my first pastoral.'

"The archbishop smiled as he made the final statement. Asked if he had any message for Americans, he said:

"'Nothing except to give the people of your great country assurances of our gratitude. We would have starved had it not been for you. The work of your relief commission has been very efficient.'

Will Not Blockade German Ports.

London, Feb. 6.—Although the Morning Post and other London daily newspapers frequently have urged a blockade of German ports, thus cutting off all cotton and foodstuffs, the British foreign office repeatedly has declared that such a step is not contemplated and announces that its policy is the same as in the past. It is added that the British government has no thought of antagonizing neutral countries whose shipping would be stopped by the closing of the Baltic Sea.

ENGLAND AROUSED BY TEUTON THREAT TO BLOCKADS SEAS

GERMAN ADMIRAL CAUTIONS NEUTRAL SHIPPING AGAINST APPROACHING WESTERN COAST OF FRANCE.

U. S. REGARDS GERMAN THREAT AS SERIOUS

British Foreign Office Statement Indicates Government Authorities Take Threat as One Requiring Prompt Counterstroke—Plan to Sweep Seas Free of Submarines.

Berlin (by wireless to Sayville), Feb. 6.—The chief admiral of the staff of the German navy has issued the following official communication:

"England in on the eve of shipping numerous troops and large quantities of war material to France. Against these English transports we will proceed with all the means of warfare at our disposal.

"Neutral shipping is earnestly cautioned against approaching the northern or the western coast of France, as in these waters such vesels would run the serious danger of being confounded with ships whose purposes are warlike.

"The best route for the North sea is around Scotland."

A Most Serious Development.

Washington, Feb. 6.—Germany's declaration of a naval war zone around Great Britain and Ireland, including the English Channel and the northern passage of the Shetland islands, is regarded here as one of the most serious developments of the war.

It was regarded as highly possible, for one thing, that it would hasten the movement begun by the Latin-American countries for a speedy conference of neutral states to devise means to reduce losses to neutral commerce to a minimum. This movement, it is expected, will have the support of the European neutrals.

At first there were some intimations in administration circles that the declaration might be the subject of a protest by the United States, but the officials view develepd that there was little or no ground for that.

England Is Stirred.

London, Feb. 6.—Although referring sarcastically to Germany's threat to bottle up the British Isles by means of submarines as a "paper blockade," England is stirred by this latest development as it seldom has been since the outbreak of hostilities.

The press unanimously subordinates all other war news, not excepting the Turkish attempt to cross the Suez canal, to give prominence to the dispatches from Berlin, while the foreign office statement, following quickly the publication of the German decree, indicates that the government authorities take the German threat as one requiring a prompt counterstroke.

The German press hails this newly announced policy of the navy with great satisfaction.

Some English newspapers declare that the German announcement should, in the end, benefit England, in that it rightfully entitles the British government to declare contraband all foodstuffs destined for Germany.

To Order Destroyers Home.

The British statement says the authorities are considering "more stringent measures against German trade."

It is reported on good authority that orders for part of a British flotilla of destroyers to detach itself from the North sea fleet and report for duty in waters nearer home will be issued.

Call German Threat a Bluff.

Part of this destroyer fleet, it is expected, will be assigned the task of sweeping the seas free of German submarines. Others will be detailed to convoy merchantmen after Feb. 18, when the German admiralty decree becomes effective, until such time as the admiralty is positive that the German undersea terrors no longer menace shipping. It is possible that a few British cruisers of the Royal type will be assigned to convoy duty to allay the fears of timid shipowners.

Admiralty shipowners frankly declare the latest German threat a bluff. Neither admiralty officials nor representatives of the big shipping interests would concede for the moment that Germany could carry out its threat to shut off England's food supplies.

Britain turned its eyes toward America. What the United States will say to the German admiralty's announcement that neutral ships may be endangered by German submarines was considered only second in importance to the German proclamation itself.

German Dynamiter in Jail.

Vanceboro, Me., Feb. 6.—Werner Horn, who says he is a German officer, and in that capacity tried to blow up the international railway bridge here, has been removed from here to serve a sentence of thirty days at Machias for the damage the explosion caused on this side of the Canadian border. The case is now ended so far as the state is concerned. The next move, it is expected, will be by the federal authorities, who are concerned with the application of the extradition of the dynamiter to Canada.

THIS WOMAN'S SICKNESS

Quickly Yielded To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Bridgeton, N.J.—"I want to thank you a thousand times for the wonderful good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered very much from a female trouble. I had bearing down pains, was irregular and at times could hardly walk across the room. I was unable to do my housework or attend to my baby I was so weak. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did me a world of good, and now I am strong and healthy, can do my work and tend my baby. I advise all suffering women to take it and get well as I did."—Mrs. FANNIE COOPER, R.F.D., Bridgeton, N.J.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Constipation Vanishes Forever

Prompt Relief—Permanent Cure

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS never fail. Purely vegetable — act surely but gently on the liver. Stop after dinner distress—cure indigestion, improve the complexion, brighten the eyes.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

CANCER

Tumors, Lupus, successfully treated without knife or pain. All work guaranteed.
Come, or write for Free Book.
Dr. Williams, Specialist on Cancer
2904 University Av. S. E. Minneapolis.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM
A toilet preparation of merit.
Helps to eradicate dandruff.
For Restoring Color and Beauty to Gray or Faded Hair.
50c. and $1.00 at Druggists.

Attitude of the Believer.

I feel that goodness and truth, and righteousness are realities, eternal realities, and that they cannot be abstractions, or vapors floating in a spiritual atmosphere, but that they necessarily imply a living, personal will, a good, loving, righteous God, in whose hands we are perfectly safe, and who is guiding us by unfailing wisdom.—Thomas Erskine.

SOFT WHITE HANDS

Under Most Conditions If You Use Cuticura. Trial Free.

The Soap to cleanse and purify, the Ointment to soothe and heal. Nothing better or more effective at any price than these fragrant supercreamy emollients. A one-night treatment will test them in the severest forms of red, rough, chapped and sore hands.

Sample each free by mail with Book. Address postcard, Cuticura, Dept. XY, Boston. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

Breaking It Diplomatically.

Little Girl (in disgrace to mother, as she enters nursery)—Do you love me, mummy?

Mother—Yes, darling.

Little Girl—Do you love me very much?

Mother—Of course, darling.

Little Girl—Well, I've frown my pudden under the table.

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

In Use For Over 30 Years.

Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

So He Got Wet.

Mother—Why didn't you run for home when you heard that a shower was coming up?

Willie—'Cause I knew I wouldn't get wet unless it came down.

Sore Eyes Granulated Eyelids, Eyes inflamed by exposure to Sun, Dust and Wind quickly relieved by Murine Eye Remedy. No Smarting, just Eye Comfort. At Your Druggist's 50c per Bottle. Murine Eye Salve in Tubes 25c. For Book of the Eye Free ask Druggists or Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago

"CASCARETS" FOR SLUGGISH BOWELS

No sick headache, sour stomach, biliousness or constipation by morning.

Get a 10-cent box now.

Turn the rascals out—the headache, biliousness, indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and foul gases—turn them out to-night and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse your stomach; remove the sour, fermenting food; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret to-night straightens you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head, sweet stomach and clean, healthy liver and bowel action for months. Children love Cascarets because they never gripe or sicken. Adv.

SHOW SUPREMACY OF SOUL

Bright Spots in Dark Incidents of the Great Conflict Going on in Europe.

Courage is the universal possession of the German, the Englishman, the Frenchman, the Belgian, the Austrian, the Russian and the Japanese. The stories of individual coolness and daring are so many that they have almost ceased to attract special attention. The other day, when the British dreadnaught Formidable went down in a storm, crushed like an egg shell by torpedoes or mines, its captain—Loxley—was on the bridge as it sank; and his last words were: "Steady, men; it's all right; keep cool; do not get in a panic; be British." Every officer was at his post; many of them had lighted cigarettes. This stirring exhibition of the fact that the man does not die when his body falls in the trenches or sinks in the ocean can be matched in every navy and army. All Europe is fighting for invisible things. There never was such universal and commanding evidence that the soul of humanity is supreme and invincible.—From the Outlook.

For Steadfast Peace.

God puts within our reach the power of helpfulness, the ministry of pity; he is ever ready to increase his grace in our hearts, that as we live and act among all the sorrows of the world we may learn by slow degrees skill and mystery of consolation. "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." There is no surer way of steadfast peace in this world than the active exercise of pity; no happier temper of mind and work than the lowly watching to see if we can lessen any misery that is about us; nor is there any better way of growth in faith and love.—Francis Paget.

For She Liked Them.

Patience—According to two English scientists, the sense of smell in man, because of the practice of kissing, is gradually being destroyed.

Patrice—Good! Do you suppose the time is coming when the boys won't notice the onions?

The Masters.

Flatbush—You know he's got a picture of one of the old masters at his house.

Bensonhurst—Which wife is it?

"I Eat Grape-Nuts the Year Round and it agrees with me," writes a doctor, "better than any breakfast food on the market—unless there is one I have not tried.".

Grape-Nuts is scientifically prepared to agree with both strong and weak digestions. Long baking—about 20 hours—partially pre-digests the starch cells for quick, easy assimilation.

Besides, Grape-Nuts supplies, in concentrated form, all of the nutriment of wheat and barley, including the invaluable mineral elements often lacking in ordinary food.

Wax-sealed—crisp—ready to eat—and economical.

"There's a Reason" for Grape-Nuts

—sold by Grocers.

ROCKEFELLER AND CARNEGIE DEFEND THEIR FOUNDATION

TESTIFY BEFORE COMMISSION ON INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS—NEITHER BELIEVES INSTITUTIONS A MENACE.

DESIRE TO PROMOTE THE WELFARE OF MANKIND

Steel Magnate Reveals That Donations Total $324,657,599 and Declares His Business Is to Do All the Good He Can in This World.

New York, Feb. 8.—John D. Rockefeller, Sr., and Andrew Carnegie have testified before the Federal commission on industrial relations. They defended the foundations which they have endowed with their wealth and neither would say he believed the institutions constituted a menace to the religious, political or educational liberty of the people of the United States. A desire to promote the welfare of mankind and that alone, they said, prompted them to establish the foundations which bear their names.

Widely different was the manner in which these two men faced the commission and the audience, composed largely of representatives of labor, Socialists, individualists and members of the Industrial Workers of the World. Mr. Carnegie went to the witness stand from a seat in the audience.

Mr. Carnegie enjoyed that. When he left the stand he said he had not spent such a pleasant afternoon in many years.

Gifts Total $324,657,599.

In his testimony Mr. Carnegie revealed that up to the close of last year his donations totalled $324,657,599. His present business, he said, was to do all the good he could in this world. He sketched the growth of his steel business and said "he never had such a good time in his life" as when he was talking to his employes. The men liked him too. "When they call you 'Andy' instead of Andrew or Mr. Carnegie, you know the boys are your friends," said he.

Mr. Carnegie referred to an article which he published in 1888, in which he expressed the opinion that "the man who dies thus rich, dies disgraced." In this article Mr. Carnegie wrote that the day was not far distant when the man who died leaving behind him millions of available wealth, which were free for him to administer during life, would pass away "unwept, unhonored and unsung," no matter to what use he might leave his fortune.

True Gospel of Wealth.

"Such, in my opinion," Mr. Carnegie said, "is the true gospel concerning wealth, obedience to which is destined some day to solve the problem of the rich and the poor and to bring 'peace on earth, among men good will.'"

Since the Carnegie pension fund was founded by himself and the United States Steel corporation, retired employes of the corporation have received in pensions $1,575,021, Mr Carnegie testified. Last year the total disbursements from the fund amounted to $511,967. There were 2,521 beneficiaries.

"The hero fund, which I was privileged to found," Mr. Carnegie continued, "has always interested me most deeply, perhaps because the idea came to me through personal experience. I could not rest until I had founded hero funds with a capital of $11,790,000.

Rockefeller Testifies.

Mr. Rockefeller was assisted to the witness stand by members of his personal staff.

Seating himself with much difficulty he started to read his answers but his voice was scarcely audible.

Mr. Rockefeller appeared to have aged considerably since he last gave testimony in public. He spoke very slowly and calmly. He declared that his sole motive was to devote a portion of his fortune to the services of his fellow men. He said he regarded the right to rescind the charters of the foundations as sufficient guarantee against abuse of the funds. He told about his meeting with J. F. Welborn, president of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company, and W. L. Mackenzie King at a time when there was labor trouble in Colorado.

He told how he directed his business enterprises and the part he played in the administration of the foundations. He said he would accord all men the right to organize, workingmen and business men as well, providing they kept within the proper limitations with respect to the law and the safeguarding the general interests of the public.

Mr. Rockefeller said he would be happy to surrender his holdings either in whole or in part and let the workers have a voice in the board of directors just as well as all other stockholders do, thus giving them of the profits of their labor. He would be very happy, he said, to see the workers be his partners in business.

As for the $100,000,000 he had given to the Rockefeller Foundation reverting to himself or his heirs in the event of the legislature rescinding the charter of the foundation, Mr. Rockefeller said he "Had never allowed himself to worry about that."

STATE NEWS

◆

Resume of Important Happenings of Past Few Days.

HAMMOND TALKS AT SHOW

Declares It Is Matter of State Pride That Minneapolis Should Be Classed With New York.

Minneapolis, Feb. 6.—While the attendance at the automobile show was not so large as on the previous night, when people got into automobiles to escape being crowded uncomfortably and found themselves marooned in a sea of humanity, it nevertheless was larger than on society day last year, and so broke a record, as has every day of the show so far this week.

Dealers and attendants wore full dress. There were several floral displays and at some exhibits flowers were given as souvenirs.

Governor Hammond, escorted by a committee from the Real Estate board, whose monthly meeting he had attended, arrived shortly before 10 o'clock and made a short address, being greeted by a tooting of horns by the way of applause at the close. His remarks were very flattering to the management of the show. He said that the automobile, which has shortened distances, saved time, brought pleasure into the lives of many by giving healthful recreation, is proving to be one of the great factors of development of the Northwest. It is a matter of state pride, he declared, that Minneapolis should be classed with New York, Detroit, and Chicago, on the national circuit, as the recognized distribution point for automobiles for the West.

MERCHANT PLEADS GUILTY

Admits Receiving Stolen Goods in Connection With Extensive Boxcar Robberies at Eyota.

Winona.—Isaac Rubenstein was brought here from Rochester and pleaded guilty before Judge Snow to receiving stolen goods in connection with the recent extensive boxcar robberies unearthed at Eyota. Rubenstein maintained he did not know the goods he received, 60 pairs of shoes and 14 dozen pair of overalls, were stolen until he had paid $45 on the purchase. Then he was warned to be careful how he handled the goods, which aroused his suspicions. Instead of reporting at once to the authorities he hid the goods in a barn and there they were found when the place was investigated under a search warrant. Rubenstein brought half a dozen well-known citizens of Rochester here to testify to his reputation for honesty and fair dealing, and these men and his attorney urged leniency. Judge Snow imposed a fine of $100 and the payment of all costs incurred by Olmsted county in the prosecution. The ringleader in the Eyota boxcar burglaries, Frank Brooks, a notorious yegg, is still at large, but Nathan Miller and J. P. Cody have been sent to the penitentiary at Stillwater and Carl Miller is serving a six months' sentence in the Olmsted county jail.

Northfield to Have Institute.

Northfield.—Under the auspices of the high school a farmers' institute will be held in Northfield, Friday, Feb. 12. In order to bring the institute into the homes of the farmers and reach every member of the family the institute speakers will be taken to club meetings in farm homes in the evening. The speakers will be Forest Henry of Dover; L. D. Staples of St. Cloud; J. P. Andrews of Faribault, and Miss Edna Lowe, formerly of the Carleton college faculty.

Northfield is working for a $20,000 armory for Company D. One to cost $16,000 is assured, and a campaign for additional funds is being carried on in order to equip the armory as a community center.

Walks 104 Miles; Wins Bride.

St. Cloud.—It was not for nought that W. J. Madson of Princeton, walked 52 miles to this city. So elated is he over the success of his trip that he has left on the return hike of 52 miles. Two weeks hence he will return, but then by the speediest conveyance at his command, for while in St. Cloud announcement of his engagement to Miss Emma McCarty was made. The marriage will be performed at the cathedral Feb. 16.

Pioneer Dies from Injuries.

Albert Lea—Christian P. Peterson, a pioneer settler of this city, received an injury which resulted in his death at a hospital shortly after.

Special Agent Files Complaints.

St. Cloud.—The arrest of Gust Paddock and complaints against fifteen others entered in justice court by Special Agent Fred Hagen have resulted in a chain of alleged thefts from Great Northern cars and storehouses here and at the shops. Hagen was detailed to the matter several weeks ago and believes he has good cases against all. The complaints charge theft of coal and wood, car doors converted into fuel, trees cut on railroad property and used as wood, besides entrance into merchandise cars.

GOVERNMENT FILES SUIT

Would Have Set Aside Deeds Given by Indians Who Inherited Their Lands.

Fergus Falls.—Judge J. H. Hinton, special attorney for the interior department is investigating matters in connection with Indian land cases that are to be brought by the government.

The government has completed the filing of cases relating to the annulment of titles to lands claimed through purchase from direct allottees, and over 1,200 of these were filed here in all. A new line of suits is now to be brought and these may number several hundred. The new suits are to cancel deeds given by Indians who inherited their lands, and government agents are investigating about 1,000 of such cases.

Where it is found that the heirs were adult mixed bloods, the deeds, which they have given will not be attacked, but where it is found that they are full bloods or minors, the government will bring suits to set aside any conveyances they may have made.

The law says that the lands of full bloods and minors of the mixed bloods shall be held in trust by the United States, and it is consequently held that all conveyances made by such persons, even where estates were regularly probated, are void. There are many such cases on the White Earth reservation.

In numerous cases, white men obtained deeds from minors of the mixed bloods, and later, when they came of age, had them sign deeds, but it is contended that in such cases the original transactions were fraudulent and that the taking of subsequent deeds from the persons to the same lands was a continuance of the original transaction, and consequently fraudulent.

IS SAID TO CARRY TYPHOID

Farmer's Wife Had Disease 20 Years Ago and Still Develops Bacteria —Board Investigates.

Fergus Falls.—The state board of health finds that there is a typhoid carrier residing about two miles north east of this city in the town of Aurdal. The carrier is the wife of a farmer and had typhoid fever 20 years ago. She recovered and has been in good health since, but still develops the germs of the disease and transmits it to others as readily as though she were seriously ill.

Typhoid has broken out in the neighborhood from time to time and physicians have been at a loss to account for it. Last summer, Dr. Norman, a veterinary surgeon, was called to the farm to look after a sick animal, and the woman, who is neighborly and hospitable, presented him with a section of a cheese which he took home. Four of the members of his family ate the cheese and came down with typhoid fever a few weeks later.

The facts were reported to the state board of health, and an investigator has been here and bacteriological examinations made at the state university confirm the suspicion that the woman is a carrier of the disease. Physicians say they can trace 16 cases at least directly to her. Boards of health cannot very well quarantine such cases as this, as it would mean a life quarantine, but she will be asked not to sell any more milk or cheese—as the germs develop readily in milk—and to take other precautions against giving infection.

Interstate Farmers' Club Meets.

Taylors Falls.—The regular February meeting of the Interstate Farmers' club will be held in Taylors Falls.

There will be an exhibit of seed grain, with P. C. Rouser of the St. Croix Falls high school in charge. Harland Blanding of St. Croix Falls will speak in the forenoon. Professor John T. Stewart of the University Farm, will address the meeting on "Drainage." Then will come a debate on the question, "Resolved that muscle is more essential than brains for successful farming." L. G. Strum and Wallace Fountain, both of St. Croix Falls, will have the affirmative, and Ed. McKenzie of St. Croix Falls, and W. W. Willoughby of Sunrise, Minn., will have the negative.

Scarlet Fever Disappears:

St. Cloud.—With less than a score of cases of scarlet fever at Rockville and with a resumption of school sessions after but one death resulted from the disease, Dr. Lampson of the state board of health believes the contagion will soon disappear. The board's representative is making a house-to-house canvass in the vicinity of Rockville and has found the disease in several farm homes.

District Court Term Opens.

Mankato.—The February term of the district court has opened with Judge W. L. Comstock presiding, this being his first term of district court. The civil calendar includes 25 new cases, but the criminal list is very small, and contains no important cases.

Pioneer Woman Dies at Anoka.

Anoka.—Mrs. Kate Holgate, widow of Levering Holgate, died at the G. A. R. cottages here and was buried at the old home at Elk River. She was about 70 years of age and is survived by two daughters, Mrs. L. D. Seeman of Linton, N. D., and Mrs. Robert Stewart of Palmdale, Cal. Mrs. Holgate was a pioneer of the upper Mississippi river valley, coming to Minneapolis in 1856. She was a member of the Appomattox Relief corps of Minneapolis and of Mary Livermore G. A. R. circle of Anoka.

CANADA ONE OF THE WORLD PROVIDERS

Although Canada's real start in national development as pointed out by the Buffalo Commercial, came slowly and late, as compared with that of the United States, it is now well under way, and very soon there will be a marvelous expansion in agriculture, mining and manufacturing.

The paper above mentioned says that "heretofore the development of Canada, like that of the United States, has been westward, but unlike this country, the Dominion has a great territory to the North, which has been regarded as all but uninhabitable, but in which recent research has proven there are possibilities of development almost inconceivable." After making complimentary reference to the resources of the country tributary to the Hudson Bay, which will be opened up when the railroad now under construction is completed, the Commercial further says "there are those living today who will see our neighbor on the north a great and powerful nation, and a not insignificant industrial and commercial rival of the United States. The war may retard, but it cannot destroy, Canada's future. And in this expansion no one will more heartily rejoice than the people of the United States, because the prosperity of the Dominion is bound to increase our own."

Herein is the spirit that dominates the Dominion Government when it extends an invitation to Americans to assist in developing the resources that Canada possesses, whether they be mineral, forest, industrial, commercial or agriculture. Both countries will benefit and the United States will be a gainer by having as a neighbor a country whose resources are as great and varied as are those of Canada.

In comparing the United States along with other nations of the world in producing and importing foodstuffs, the Agricultural Outlook published by the United States department of agriculture says:

The United States in recent years has been as large an importer of foodstuffs as exporter; therefore she cannot be classed as a surplus producer of foodstuffs. This is contrary to popular impression. It is true that she is an exporter of certain articles, but she is an equally large importer of other articles. In this classification tea and coffee are included with foodstuffs. In edible grains the production is 23 per cent more than the amount retained; the production of meats is six per cent more—that is, exports of meat equal six per cent of that retained in the United States for consumption; the production of dairy products is 20 per cent more than consumed; the production of poultry is just about equal to consumption; of vegetables, one per cent less.

An investigation into the production, imports and exports of food products of various countries indicates that England produces about 53 per cent of her food requirements, and imports (net) about 47 per cent; Belgium produces 57 per cent, and imports 43 per cent; Germany produces 88 per cent, and imports 12 per cent; France produces 92 per cent, and imports eight per cent; Austria-Hungary produces 98 per cent, and imports two per cent; Russia produces 110 per cent of her requirements, and exports an equivalent of about 10 per cent; Canada produces 23 per cent more than she consumes; Argentina produces 48 per cent more than she consumes; the United States produces practically no more than she consumes (i. e. exports and imports of foodstuffs almost balance).

With this information before the reader, it is not a difficult matter to direct attention to the fact that Canada stands in a pre-eminent position in the matter of grain and cattle production, and with a large territory yet unoccupied she will always maintain it.—Advertisement.

A Limited Journey.

Ed—He seems to be wandering in his mind.

Fred—Well, he can't stray far.

SAGE TEA DARKENS GRAY HAIR TO ANY SHADE. TRY IT!

Keep Your Locks Youthful, Dark, Glossy and Thick With Garden Sage and Sulphur.

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use tonic called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look years younger. Adv.

The heart of a pretty girl may be as chilly as a dog's nose.

The General Says:

Why accept a doubtful guarantee on roofing when you can get one signed by the largest manufacturer of roofing and building papers in the world, with a saving in cost in the long run?

Certain-teed Roofing

is guaranteed in writing 5 years for 1-ply, 10 years for 2-ply, and 15 years for 3-ply, and the responsibility of our big mills stands behind this guarantee. Its quality is the highest and its price the most reasonable. For sale by dealers everywhere.

General Roofing Mfg. Company

World's largest manufacturers of Roofing and Building Papers

New York City Boston Chicago Pittsburgh Philadelphia Atlanta Cleveland Detroit St. Louis Cincinnati Kansas City Minneapolis San Francisco Seattle London Hamburg Sydney

Not Guilty.

May was taken down South to visit her relations. For the first time in her young life she was thrown in contact with little darkies. Her admiration and awe was great. Meeting a little negro boy one day, she screwed up courage to ask him his name.

"I is dun called David," said the boy.

"Oh!" exclaimed May, her face lighting up with surprise and pleasure, "are you the David that killed Goliath?"

The little black boy gave a frightened glance around, and, beginning to whimper, he shrieked: "Naw, I ain't nebber teched him."

For the treatment of colds, sore throat, etc., Dean's Mentholated Cough Drops give sure relief—5c at all good Druggists.

His Collection.

Wife—John, the bill collector's at the door.

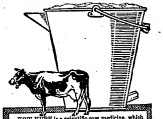
Hubby—Tell him to take that pile on my desk.—Penn State Froth.

Cigarettes are the mildest and most pleasing form of tobacco. Three out of four smokers prefer FATIMAS to any other 15c cigarette.

"Distinctively Individual"

Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

FATIMA
TURKISH BLEND CIGARETTES
20 for 15¢



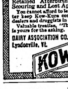
KOW-KURE is a scientific cow medicine, which has a direct and lasting tonic effect on the organs of digestion. For over twenty years it has been the standard medicine for the prevention and treatment of such common cow ailments as Abortion, Retained Afterbirth, Barrenness, Milk Fever, Scouring and Lost Appetite.

You cannot afford to let a cow get down in health. Better keep Kow-Kure constantly on hand. Sold by feed dealers and druggists in 60c and $1.00 packages.

Valuable treatise, "The Cow Doctor," is yours for the asking.

DAIRY ASSOCIATION CO.
Lyndonville, Vt.

KOW-KURE



Six Blizzard Belt Apple Grafts

For Testing Our named varieties of HARDY Forest Mother Root Apple Grafts make vigorous, early bearing, heavily fruiting, clean hearted, long lived trees. To prove their worth, we offer 6 Grafts (rooted) for testing. If you will send 10c to help cover cost and mailing expense. They will bear barrels upon barrels of apples in a few years time. Catalogue telling about other Blizzard Belt fruits, EVERBEARING STRAWBERRIES, etc., FREE. Write today. The Gardner Nursery Co., Box 651 Osage, Ia

POTATO LOW PRICES

Salzer's Pedigree Potatoes helped put Wisconsin way on the top with its enormous potato yield. We can do same for you. BIG SEED CATALOG FREE

John A. Salzer Seed Co., Box 717, La Crosse, Wis

BEST MARKET for POULTRY—VEAL—CREAM HIDES—EGGS—BEANS

Write us for Price List and Tags

THE R. E. COBB CO., 14 E. 3rd Street, St. Paul, Minn

Virginia Farms and Homes

FREE CATALOGUE OF SPLENDID BARGAINS

R. B. CHAFFIN & CO., Inc., Richmond, Va

WANTED to hear from owner of good farm for sale. Send description and price. Northwestern Business Agency, Dept. A, Minneapolis, Minn

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3,1879

The members of the legislature made haste to pass the bill for legislative expenses, but they are not in any hurry to appropriate the cash to pay the states' bills to the poor publishers for publishing the Constitutional Amendments last fall.

The headlines of the daily newspapers now days are something like this: "Germans and Russians in deadly conflict for supremacy." "Slaves beaten in Prussia." "Allies press forward." and what strikes the farmers is, "Wheat is still raising."

It looks as if that anti-suffrage league were backed up by some private interests that are terribly afraid to let the women vote, but there is enough sentiment in favor of it to justify the present legislature in submitting the proposition to the voters at the next general election. We are decidedly in favor of allowing the women of this state just as good a right to go to election and vote as the men have.

There was never a time that the American farmer had a better prospect ahead of him than he has at the present time. While the past few years have been discouraging as to prices for farm products the future looks very bright, and the farmer who now sticks to his business will surely reap his reward. By hastening to make improvements on their farms, and a light crop last year, a number of farmers find themselves badly in debt, yet if they now improve their opportunity, it will only be a few short years before they can lift that mortgage from their farms.

One of the important topics to be considered at the Farm Crops Show meetings to be held at Crookston, Feb. 16-19, is the weed problem. Supt. Selvig, of the Agricultural Shool is anxious to have farmers club members and others who are vitally interested in solving this problem discuss the problem of weed eradication in order that some action may be taken in the near future. Information is not lacking as to how to destroy weeds. The problem is to have united efforts in all parts of the valley to get rid of them and keep them out.

The legislators from this section of the state will undoubtedly urge any legislation that will do what all agree should be done, check the further spread of weeds, and gradually eradicate them. No unreasonably drastic measure should be enacted, but some effective law is needed.—Crookston Times.

We don't to put in any great kick against the grinding of the wheels of justice, but it seems to us that a premium has been given for the stealing of a large quantity of wheat, and an example made of the poor devil who only stole a few bushels. The fellow who stole a lot of it in Pennington county, got as punishment an order to report to Pete Wald once in a while that he was now a good fellow and had quit stealing wheat from other men's granaries, while the fellow who stole only a few bushels got ninety days in the Red Lake County jail.

MORAL: When you start out stealing wheat. be sure to steal a lot of it, or at least enough to entitle you to a parole, instead of being sent to jail.

It is intimated that there was an extensive trade made in the state senate last week, in which votes on the iron ore tax were traded for county option votes, but of course the people will not know much about it until later on.

From present indications the European war has only just fairly got started, for when you hear as powerful nations as England, France and Russia say, "We are sure to win this war." Then read the same confident prediction from the German side, you can be sure of a long continued struggle, as neither side will be easily exhausted. In the meantime look out for $2.00 a bushel wheat next fall.

While other parts of the country are talking about soup kitchens and "flop" houses and are holding parades of the unemployed, Bemidji is sending out an S. O. S. for men and teams with which to carry on extensive lumbering operations which include an effort on the part of the T. B. Walker interests to remove the timber from 30,000 acres so that the land may be leased for agricultural purposes in five acre tracts to minors and other persons.—Bemidji Sentinal.

COLDS ARE OFTEN MOST SERIOUS
STOP POSSIBLE COMPLICATIONS.

The disregard of a Cold has often brought many a regret. The fact of Sneezing, Coughing, or a Fever should be warning enough that your system needs immediate attention. Certainly Loss of Sleep is most serious. It is a warning given by Nature. It is man's duty to himself to assist by doing his part. Dr. King's New Discovery is based on a scientific analysis of Colds. 50c. at your Druggist. Buy a bottle to-day.—adv.

THE LIVER REGULATES THE BODY
A SLUGGISH LIVER NEEDS CARE.

Someone has said that people with Chronic Liver Complaint should be shut up away from humanity, for they are pessimists and see through a "glass darkly." Why? Because mental states depend upon physical states. Biliousness, Headaches, Dizziness and Constipation disappear after using Dr. King's New Life Pills. 25c. at your Druggist —adv.

All the Same.

The "horny handed" calls what he lives on "pay," the skilled mechanic "wages," the city clerk "salary," the banker "income," a landowner "rent roll," a lawyer "fees," a burglar "swag," but it all comes to the same in the end.—London Scraps.

IT REALLY DOES RELIEVE RHEUMATISM.

Everybody who is afflicted with Rheumatism in any form should by all means keep a bottle of Sloan's Liniment on hand. The minute you feel pain or soreness in a joint or muscle, bathe it with Sloan's Liniment. Do not rub it. Sloan's penetrates almost immediately right to the seat of pain, relieving the hot, tender, swollen feeling and making the part easy and comfortable. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25 cents of any druggist and have it in the house—against Colds, Sore and Swollen Joints, Lumbago, Sciatica and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief. Buy a bottle to-day.—Advertisement.

STOP THAT COUGH—NOW.

When you catch Cold, or begin to Cough, the first thing to do is to take Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey. It penetrates the linings of the Throat and Lungs and fights the Germs of the Disease, giving quick relief and natural healing. "Our whole family depend on Pine-Tar-Honey for Coughs and Colds," writes Mr. E. Williams, Hamilton, Ohio. It always helps. 25c. at your Druggist.—Adv.

WE HAVE

$150,000.00

TO LOAN ON FARMS IN

PENNINGTON COUNTY

Write Or Call on Us At FIRST NATIONAL BANK

THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN.

DO YOUR BANKING WITH
FARMERS STATE BANK

GOODRIDGE - - MINNESOTA

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS $12, 000.

6 per cent paid on time deposits

Fire and Tornado Insurance Written in Responsible Companies.

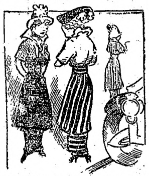
FARM LOANS A SPECIALITY

J. M. Bishop, President   Jay Payne Vice-President

Nick Bundhund, Cashier

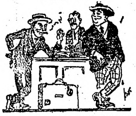
Sufficient.



Mabel—She has six reasons for leaving him. In the first place, his money was all gone.

Edith—Never mind the other five.—Chicago News.

A Good One.



Brown—Gruet is a good salesman.

Jewett—Yes, he could sell a bald headed man a preparation to remove superfluous hair.—Boston Globe.

A Mulberry Tree Legend.

The mulberry, "wisest of trees," as Pliny termed it, really "likes" London and fruits profusely even in the grounds of the Charterhouse, at murky Smithfield. London mulberry trees are mainly derived from a fad of James I., who wanted to found a silk growing industry. With the proverbial folly of a pedant, the British Solomon introduced the black mulberry, disliked by silkworms, instead of the white variety, which forms their food. The black mulberry had been planted by Cardinal Pole at Lambeth in 1555, and there were still older specimens in the garden of Syon House. According to a pretty Greek legend, all mulberries were originally white, but a mulberry tree was growing beside "Ninny's tomb" when Pyramus and Thisbe died there, and the blood of the lovers turned the fruit to its present color.

Origin of the Onyx.

When waters charged with carbonate of calcium derived from limestone are allowed to evaporate they deposit their load in the form of sinter, or tufa. This process can be observed at many thermal and "petrifying" springs and also in the formation of stalactites and stalagmites in limestone caverns. In this way large masses of compact carbonate are formed, some of them of great beauty. The so called "onyx marbles," of which the Mexican "onyx" is a familiar example, are formed in this way. Some rock of this class is stalagmitic in caverns, and some of it is formed by springs. Its variations in color and texture, to which its ornamental character is largely due, are commonly produced by impurities or inclusions, such as oxide of iron or even mud and clay.—New York Telegram.

Enormous Rainfall In Hawaii.

The rainfall on the island of Hawaii varies greatly, ranging from the enormous downpour of 353 inches a year in the upper Waipio valley to twenty inches on some of the slopes of Hualalai. The only surface streams on the island are found along the northeast coast between Hilo and Kohala. Waipio river, according to the United States geological survey, is the largest stream on the island and has been partly developed for irrigation. At Kapoho, on the east point of the island, warm water flows from seams in the rocks. These warm springs flow into a pool about 100 feet long, 25 feet wide and 20 feet deep. The pool is entirely surrounded by rocks, and its color varies in shade from a beautiful blue to violet. Waiapele, or Green lake, is a body of fresh water in the pit of an old crater near Kapoho. This lake covers an area of about five acres and is fed by springs below the surface. A pumping plant takes water from this lake for domestic use and for irrigation.

Military Music.

"No one in time of peace can understand what war is," writes Rev. Charles E. Jefferson in the Woman's Home Companion. "We may prepare for it, but we do not realize what it is we are preparing for. Military preparations are quite interesting, even exciting. Boys and girls are always fascinated by the paraphernalia of battle. Never have the instruments of war been so intricate and sparkling as now. All the trappings of the military world are alluring.

"Military music is full of piercing notes, which set the corpuscles of the blood dancing. But military music is not the music of war. The music of war is the groans of wounded and dying men and the sobs of broken hearted women. Military music is one of the embroidered veils thrown over the face of war to make boys think that war is glorious."

Ancestry of the Hen.

Darwin believed that our domestic fowls are descended from the jungle fowls of India. As other authorities have sometimes disputed his view, the statement of Charles William Beebe, curator of ornithology at the New York zoological park, is especially interesting: "After studying all four species of feral Gallus in their native haunts as well as many examples of natural and artificial hybridizing and reviewing the evidence from all points of view I can find no reason to attribute the ancestry of all varieties of our domestic fowls to other than the red jungle fowl of India."

Inquisitive.

"Yes, Henry writes very good letters from college. They show a strong thirst for knowledge. He never writes without asking for information."

"That's fine. What does he ask?"

"He always asks, 'When are you going to send me some more money?'"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Girl Workers In Japan.

The number of factory girls newly recruited every year in Japan is 200,000, of whom only 80,000 go home. The remaining 120,000 never return. They go from one factory to another or go into other occupations, never thinking of going home.—World of Labor.

FIRST STATE BANK,
Of Plummer Minnesota.

You Run Your Business With a Check Book – How About Your Home?
BILL

"BILLS, bills, bills—nothing but bills!" frequently is the complaint of the head of the family. No man would think of running his business WITHOUT A CHECK BOOK. How about YOUR home? The running of the home today is a BUSINESS PROPOSITION.

Open a CHECKING ACCOUNT With Us at Once.

J. A. DUFFY President,   Henry Enderlie, Cashier.

FARMERS &
MERCHANTS
STATE BANK

Oklee   Minn.

The rapid growth of this bank is the best evidence that its policy and methods meet with the approval of the people in our community.

You will find this bank as liberal in its dealings as is consistent with sound banking.

We are at all times prepared to discuss your requirements with you and invite consultation.

Pay your bills with checks on this bank.
Farm Loans At Lowest Rates And On Easy Terms.
Six per cent interest paid on time deposits.
CAPITAL AND SURPLUS——————$14,500.00
J. A. C. Torgerson, V. P.   W. B. Torgerson, Cashier.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Jan. 29th 1915.

Department of the Interior., U. S. Land office at Crookston, Minn. Jan. 22nd. 1915.

Notice is hereby given that Carl P. Anderson of Erie Minn. who on November, 26th, 1907, made Homestead Entry No. 1373, Serial No 04591, for the E ½ N E ¼ and who on July 1st, 1911 made Additional Homestead Application Serial No. 06365 for the W ½ N E ¼ all in Section 30 Township 153 N. Range 39. West Fifth Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Five Year Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet U.S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls. Minnesota on the 10th day of March 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Lars C. Fevig, Olof O. Omlid. Nick Meyers, Chris Odegaard, all of Erie, Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal.
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First pub. in The Sunbeam Jan. 8th. 1915.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. Jan. 6th. 1915.

Notice is hereby given that Thomas G. Rome, of Rhoda, Minnesota, who on February 8th 1912, made Homestead Application, Serial No. 07282, for Lots 5 and 6, Section 6 Township 152 N. Range 40 W 5th principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make Five Year proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls, Minn. on the 16th. day of February 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Sam B Swanson, Ole G. Sareland, of Rhoda, Minn., Andrew Fenand, William G. Hunt, of Sunbeam Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register.

We have for sale one of the best quarter sections of land in the town of Highlanding, located one mile south of Highlanding Creamery. This farm will be sold cheap as the owner is a non resident and desires to use the money invested in other business. For terms and full particulars call on W. G. Hunt, Sunbeam, Minn.

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Jan. 8th 1915

Department of the Interior. U.S. Land Office, at Crookston Minn. Dec. 31st, 1914.

Notice is hereby given that George T. Christofferson, of Erie, Minn. who on May 2nd. 1912 made Homestead Application Serial No. 07903, for S. W. ¼ Section 25 Township 153 N. Range 39 W. 5th. Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Commutation Proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner, for District of Minn. at Thief River Falls, Minn. on the 18th day of February, 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Hilmer C. Iverson, Anders H. Vake, Ole K. Lien, Generius Christofferson, all of Erie Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal,
Register

MONEY TO LOAN ON FARM LAND

MACKEY J. THOMPSON
FARM MORTGAGES
ST. PAUL, MINNESOTA

CONTRACTS, FIRST AND SECOND MORTGAGES BOUGHT

U. S. Mail.

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 1.05 p. m., on Tuesday Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.55 p.m

Wm. G. Hunt, p.m.

W. G. Hunt
Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL

THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. XIV. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 19, 1915 NO. 49.

THE LOCAL NEWS.

Subscribe for THE SUNBEAM

There is to be a big ball at the Wojnarowski hall in the town of Hickory to-morrow night.

WOOD FOR SALE.

I have all kinds of wood for sale, both green and dry, at reasonable prices.

L. W. Wojnarowski,
Section 8, Town of Hickory

There was a fairly good sized crowd attended the Palmen ball at the Eric hall last Saturday evening, and a very pleasant time was reported by all.

Read the notice of auction sale of farm machinery published in another column. This will be a good chance to get machinery cheap, and good new machinery.

S. P. Johnson the Oklee merchant has got a large increase in his business by letting the farmers of this territory know that he was in business at Oklee through the columns of THE SUNBEAM.

Philipp Heideman will sell all his farm machinery, horses and cattle at Public Auction at his farm, in Deer Park township on Tuesday March 2nd, on the usual terms of sale.

Engvold Husby Auctioneer
Henry Enderle, Clerk.

Ljot Sigurdson took his eight year old daughter Hilda to Grygla last week, where she had a difficult operation performed, by the removal of some bones that were growing in her nostrils, which had begun to affect her hearing. She at the same time had an operation on one of her tonsils, which was enlarged. She is now doing nicely and is expected to soon recover.

C. W. Johnson and Torger Langie of Malone made this office a pleasant call to-day. They have not had any mail since last Friday. That is the mail route that Stephen Singer, postmaster at Kratka reported to the post office department that a letter mailed at Malone post office would reach Thief River Falls on the same day it was mailed. Both gentlemen gave their SUNBEAM subscription a jog ahead for one year.

NOTICE!

Personal Property Tax becomes delinquent March 1st, when a penalty of 10 per cent is added. Personal Property Tax unpaid April 1st is collected by the sheriff. The last day of February is on Sunday, so the last day to pay Personal Property Tax without penalty is on February 27th.

Respectfully,
Theo. H. Liden,
County Treasurer.

We had a fall of snow of about four inches on last Saturday evening and on Sunday the wind blew a gale and piled it up in heaps, something like the old style blizzard, but as the weather was mild there was no great amount of suffering caused by the storm. The warm weather of Wednesday and yesterday has settled the snow down so that all the roads are now open for travel.

We receive by every mail a statement of the railroad's side of the proposed strike of the western engineers and firemen. Their side would make it appear that the engineers and firemen were now receiving higher wages than they were entitled to, but there is one fact certain and that is, that all laboring men must receive a raise in wages proportionate to the tremendous increase in the high cost of living.

That Embargo On Wheat.

Now comes the news that the mayor of New York and a committee will ask President Wilson to place an embargo on the shipment of wheat to foreign countries so as to stop the raise in the price. A request of that kind looks as if the mayor of New York considered this country an absolute monarchy with President Wilson for czar. The present high prices of wheat proves what the Democratic party have always claimed, viz: That the price of wheat was ruled by the world's market, and surely our Democratic friends would not want to close up the world's market to our American farmers. President Wilson cannot control the wheat market even if he is president of the United States, and we hope to see the prices advance until the farmers can afford to have carpets on their floors, a respectable suit of clothes for Sunday, and an automobile to drive to church with.

A HARD FOUGHT CASE.

Some of our readers might conclude from our article of Feb. 5th, that the Merchants State Bank of Red Lake Falls was interested in the District Court case between the Northern Drainage Company and the Equitable Surety Co. tried at the last term of District Court. The Merchants State Bank was not at all financially interested in the out come of that lawsuit, and its cashier Mr. Duffy only appeared as a witness to some of their contracts, we write this to explain the facts to our readers who might come to the conclusion from our article published two weeks ago that the Merchants State Bank was a party to the suit, which they were not.

FOR SALE

One 20-35 H. P. Avery Gas Tractor. One Avery "self lift" six bottom gang with stubble and breaking bottoms. One Avery 32-54 Grain Separator. One 500 gal. Gasoline Tank. This outfit has not been used very much and is nearly as good as new. All complete goes for $2300.00. Might take land in exchange. For further information write,

Omundson Bros.
Thief River Falls, Minn.

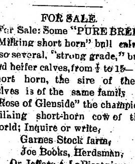
FOR SALE.

For Sale: Some "PURE BRED" "Milking short horn" bull calves also several, "strong grade," bull and heifer calves, from ½ to 15—16 short horn, the sire of these calves is of the same family as "Rose of Glenside" the champion milking short-horn cow of the world; Inquire or write,

Garnes Stock farm,
Joe Books, Herdsman,
Or Jeffers & LaBissoniere,
Red Lake Falls, Minnesota.

Love of the brother we see will help us to the love of the Father we do not see.—William Watson.

Mother's Advice.



"That young feller has been calling on daughter several weeks, hasn't he?"
"Yes, pa."
"I think I'll ask him what his intentions are."
"Give him time, pa. He probably doesn't know himself yet."—Philadelphia Press.

LUMBER AND BUILDING MATERIALS.

If you are thinking of building a house, barn or any other building this year, it will pay you well to see us.

We carry complete stocks of lumber and all other kinds of building materials at all our yards, and would be pleased to have you inspect same at any time.

We would be pleased to help you plan and estimate the cost of any building you are thinking of erecting this year, and it is understood we do so with no obligation on your part to build.

IF YOU ARE INTERESTED IN SILOS, we are Agent for the Celebrated Arctic Silos, which are the very best on the market. These Silos have stood the test of 30 degrees below zero without freezing, which no other Silo has done.

Better come in and talk it over.

WINTON-NICHOLS LUMBER COMPANY.
—Yards at—
Goodridge, Mavie, Thief River Falls and Fosston, Minn.

Go to S. P. Johnson, at Oklee
"The Right Place"

Boys Suits from $1.25, to $4.50 per suit. Mens suits, former price $25 00, Now selling for $16.00. $15.00 suits now selling for $8.50

$8.50 suits now selling for $4.50.

Men's shoes from $1.25 to $3.50. Former price $4 00 now $3 25.

Ladies shoes $1.50 to $3.00.

Prints 5 cents per yard. Gingham 8 cents to 10 cents per yard.
All Dry Goods at cost. Men's Caps goes at any price.
Sugar for this week is $6.00 per 100 lbs. Good coffee for 18 cents to 30 cents a pound. Bargains in all kind of goods.

S. P. JOHNSON, Oklee, Minn.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Three Hundred Ninety Five, and 73—100 ($395.73) Dollars, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by Manuel Niemi and Ida Niemi, his wife, mortgagors, to the Merchants State Bank of Red Lake Falls, mortgagee, bearing date the 15th. day of March 1918, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Pennington, and State of Minnesota on the 26th day of April 1918 at 9:00 o'clock A. M. in Book 1 of mortgages on page 475.

NOW THEREFORE, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, VIZ:

The North West quarter of South East quarter (N W ¼ of S E ¼) and East half of South East quarter (E ½ of S E ¼) of Section thirty-four (34) and North West quarter of South West quarter (N W ¼ of S W ¼) of Section thirty five (35) in Township one hundred fifty two (152) North, of Range thirty nine (89) West of the 5th. Principal Meridian in Pennington County, and the State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Pennington County at the front door of the court house in the City of Thief River Falls in said County and State on the 27th day of February A. D. 1915 at 10:00 o'clock A. M. of that day at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt of Three Hundred Ninety Five and 73—100 ($395.73) Dollars and the taxes, if any, on said premises and Twenty Five ($25.00) Dollars attorney's fees as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

Dated January 9th, 1915

John C. Mathews,
Attorney for Mortgagee,
Red Lake Falls, Minn.

Merchants State Bank of
Red Lake Falls
J. A. Duffy,
Cashier

THE PRICHARD Co.
Thief River Falls Minn.
DEALERS IN LUMBER AND FARM MACHINERY.
Located west of the new Soo Depot. Give us a call, and look over our stock of Lumber and Farm Machinery.

H. O. KJOMME
Attorney and Counselor at Law
COUNTY ATTORNEY
Noginn Block
Thief River Falls, - - Minn.

Wilhelm Michelet
U. S. COMMISSIONER
COURT HOUSE
THIEF RIVER FALLS,
MINN.

To Avoid Worry.

If you would avoid worry train yourself to be methodical and to act up to the good old maxim of never putting off till tomorrow what can be done today.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists. Price 75c per bottle.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

One View of Golf.

"Pop, what is golf?"

"Golf, my son, is just the same as work, except that you get paid for work."—Pittsburgh Press.

A Good Start.

"He offers me a platonic affection."

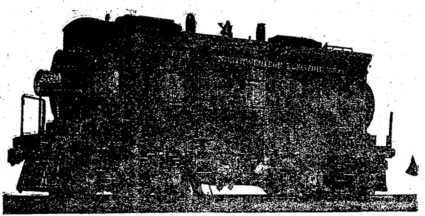
"Well, take it. A platonic affection often leads to the real thing."—Pittsburgh Post.

Experience teaches a lot of things we never cared to learn.—Judge.

Tired!
Are you tired? run down? nervous? Is everything you do an effort? No! it is not laziness. You are ill; Your system needs a tonic. Your Stomach, Kidneys and Liver need stirring up. Nothing will do this better than
Electric Bitters
50c. and $1.00 All Druggists

EAT
When you are
AT GOODRIDGE, Call at the Goodridg Restaurant and get A cup of HOT COFFEE, or a good warm dinner for 25 cents. Don't forget the sign of
EAT
BARBER SHOP IN CONNECTION
STEPHENSON BROS. Props.

Minnesota Northwestern Electric Railway Co.



TIME TABLE.

Going East

Train No. 1.
LEAVE—Thief River Falls at 7:15 A. M.
Silverton at 7:40 A. M.
Mavie at 8:05 A. M.
ARRIVE—Goodridge at 8:30 A. M.

Train No. 5.
LEAVE—Thief River Falls at 10:00 A. M.
Silverton at 11:10 A. M.
Mavie at 11:40 A. M.
ARRIVE—Goodridge at 12:10 A. M.

Train No. 8.
LEAVE—Thief River Falls at 3:45 P. M.
Silverton at 4:10 P. M.
Mavie at 4:35 P. M.
ARRIVE—Goodridge at 5:00 P. M.

Going West

To Thief River Falls

Train No. [illegible]
LEAVE—Goodridge at 8:45 A. M.
Mavie at 9:10 A. M.
Silverton at [illegible] A. M.
ARRIVE—Thief River Falls at 10:00 A. M.

Train No. 6.
LEAVE—Goodridge at 1:45 P. M.
Mavie at 2:15 P. M.
Silverton at 2:45 P. M.
ARRIVE—Thief River Falls at 3:30 P. M.

Train No. 4.
LEAVE—Goodridge at 5:15 P. M.
Mavie at 5:40 P. M.
Silverton at 6:05 P. M.
ARRIVE—Thief River Falls at 6:30 P. M.

Cash For Hides and Furs.
If you have Hides or Furs for sale, bring them to the Oklee meat market and get the highest market price in cash.
Meat Market,
Oklee, Minn.

CONTRACTS, FIRST AND SECOND MORTGAGES BOUGHT
FARM MORTGAGES
MONEY TO LOAN ON FARM LAND

DEFECTIVE PAGE

WOMAN WOULD NOT GIVE UP

Though Sick and Suffering; At Last Found Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Richmond, Pa. — "When I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was in a dreadfully rundown state of health, had internal troubles, and was so extremely nervous and prostrated that if I had given in to my feelings I would have been in bed. As it was I had hardly strength at times to be on my feet and what I did do was by a great effort. I could not sleep at night and of course felt very bad in the morning, and had a steady headache.

"After taking the second bottle I noticed that the headache was not so bad, I rested better, and my nerves were stronger. I continued its use until it made a new woman of me, and now I can hardly realize that I am able to do so much as I do. Whenever I know any woman in need of a good medicine I highly praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound." — Mrs. FRANK CLARK, 3146 N. Tulip St., Richmond, Pa.

Women Have Been Telling Women

for forty years how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored their health when suffering with female ills. This accounts for the enormous demand for it from coast to coast. If you are troubled with any ailment peculiar to women why don't you try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? It will pay you to do so. Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

No Wonder.

"Do you think the world is getting better, Mr. Gadson?"

"Surest think you know! It's getting better every day."

"In spite of the war?"

"Oh, yes."

"I'm surprised to find you so optimistic."

"You wouldn't be if you knew what I knew."

"And what is that?"

"I've already cleaned up half a million in wheat and expect to make more."

The Only One.

"There goes Rev. Dr. Fourthly, one of our most prominent ministers. He stands on a pinnacle alone."

"Because of his great sanctity?"

"No. He's the only minister in town who hasn't preached an antitango sermon."

Some men are so lucky that they even fall down when nobody is around to see.—St. Joseph Gazette.

Merit is quickly discovered by progressive young men. Fatima Cigarettes are selected by three out of four smokers of 15c cigarettes. They enjoy the mild, delightful Turkish blend.

"Distinctively Individual"

Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

20 for 15¢

FATIMA
TURKISH BLEND CIGARETTES
GOLD TIPS
FINEST QUALITY

Six Blizzard Belt Apple Grafts

For Testing Our named varieties of HARDY Foster Mother Root Apple Grafts make vigorous, early bearing, heavily fruiting, clean hearted, long lived trees. To prove their worth, we offer 6 Grafts (rooted) for testing, if you will send 10c to help cover cost and mailing expense. They will bear barrels upon barrels of apples in a few years' time. Catalogue telling about other Blizzard Belt fruits, EVERBEARING STRAWBERRIES, etc., FREE. Write today. The Gardner Nursery Co., Box 563 Osage, Ia.

LADY SOLICITORS, IN EVERY DISTRICT WANTED BY LARGE CHEMICAL HOUSE, TO MAKE HOUSE TO HOUSE CANVAS, SELLING ABSOLUTELY NECESSARY PREPARATORY ARTICLES, THAT MUST BE HAD BY EVERY LADY. REFINED AND EASY WORK; NO SAMPLES TO CARRY. QUICK SALES, EXPERIENCE UNNECESSARY. WORKERS CAN MAKE $100.00 PER WEEK. BEAUTIFULLY COLORED PRINTS FURNISHED FREE. CONSUMERS CHEMICAL CORPORATION, CONSUMERS BUILDING, CHICAGO, ILL.

CORN-OATS-RYE

Wisconsin yields on top—Salzer's specialties helped do it. BIG SEED CATALOG FREE.
John A. Salzer Seed Co., Box 717, La Crosse, Wis.

BEST MARKET for
POULTRY—VEAL—CREAM
HIDES—EGGS—BEANS
Write us for Price List and Tags
THE R. E. COBB CO., 14 E. 3rd Street, St. Paul, Minn

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Patent Lawyer, Washington, D.C. Advice and books free. Rates reasonable. Highest references. Best services.

U. S. AMBASSADOR INVITED BY KAISER TO A CONFERENCE

INDICATES AMERICAN NOTE HAS PRODUCED AN IMPRESSION OF SUPREME IMPORTANCE IN GERMANY.

SUBMARINE BLOCKADE BEGINS IN FEW DAYS

Washington Believes Gerard Will Explain at Length American Viewpoint—Italy Makes Protest Against Sea War one Created by Teutons.

London, Feb. 15.—The German emperor, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from The Hague, has invited the American ambassador to Germany, James W. Gerard, to a conference at eastern headquarters.

Washington, Feb. 15.—Press reports announcing that the German emperor had invited Ambassador Gerard to confer with him at the battlefront, were read with keen interest by officials of the United States government. Aside from the indication that the American note had produced an impression of supreme importance, it was thought that the emperor had decided on a conference so quickly because only four days remain before the German admiralty's proclamation for a submarine campaign on merchant ships goes into effect.

To Explain American View.

It was believed here that the ambassador might explain at length the American viewpoint as he is reported to have done in a conference with the imperial chancellor immediately after the note was presented at the foreign office. In many quarters it was supposed that one of the chief purposes of the informal conference with ambassador Gerard was to elicit from the American government some understanding as to its position regarding shipments of conditional contraband destined to Germany's civilian population.

The long supplementary reply from the British government to the American note of protest of Dec. 26 has not been transmitted in full, but officials expect a complete copy of it will be ready for their perusal shortly.

At the German embassy it was said no word had been received from Berlin to indicate how soon a reply to the American note might be looked for.

Italy Protests to Germany.

Rome, Feb. 15.—Italy made virtually the same representations to Germany as did the United States concerning neutral shipping in the sea war zone created by the recent German proclamation, it was made known here.

Italy, however, did not send a note to Berlin nor did she take any formal step, limiting her action to friendly observations through the Italian ambassador to Germany.

GO FOR ALLEGED DYNAMITER

Officers Will Bring Schmidt to Los Angeles for Trial on Charges of Murder.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 15.—Officers have left for New York to bring Matthew A. Schmidt to Los Angeles for trial on charges of murder growing out of the dynamiting of the Los Angeles Times building Oct. 1, 1910, when 21 men lost their lives.

Schmidt is an alleged confederate of James M. McNamara, convicted of having dynamited the Times building, and of John J. McNamara, his brother, convicted of having dynamited the Llewellyn Iron Works in Los Angeles Dec. 25, 1910. Both the McNamaras are in prison.

Schmidt, who was arrested in New York, was indicted for murder at the same time as were the McNamaras and David Caplan. His arrest leaves only Caplan at liberty.

According to W. J. Ford, assistant district attorney at the time of the trial of the McNamaras, Schmidt was thought to have come to Los Angeles with J. B. McNamara just previous to the destruction of the Times building.

McNamara and Schmidt are alleged to have returned to Los Angeles Sept. 29, two days before the blowing up of the Times building.

Funston Succeeds Bliss.

San Antonio, Texas, Feb. 15.—Major General Frederick Funston, who will succeed General Tasker H. Bliss as commander of the department of the south, arrived here from San Francisco. Formal transfer of the department will take place at once.

U. S. Has Powerful Radio Plant.

Washington, Feb. 15.—Although the entire plant has not been completed and the station, as yet, is equipped only to receive mesages, such excellent results are being daily obtained from the radio towers at Darien, on the Isthmus of Panama, that officials feel that the United States is now in possession of a most powerful military naval adjunct. With two out of the three great 600-foot towers completed messages are being received without difficulty from San Francisco and Arlington.

"CASCARETS" FOR LIVER, BOWELS

For sick headache, bad breath, Sour Stomach and constipation.

Get a 10-cent box now.

No odds how bad your liver, stomach or bowels; how much your head aches, how miserable and uncomfortable you are from constipation, indigestion, biliousness and sluggish bowels —you always get the desired results with Cascarets.

Don't let your stomach, liver and bowels make you miserable. Take Cascarets to-night; put an end to the headache, biliousness, dizziness, nervousness, sick, sour, gassy stomach, backache and all other distress; cleanse your inside organs of all the bile, gases and constipated matter which is producing the misery.

A 10-cent box means health, happiness and a clear head for months. No more days of gloom and distress if you will take a Cascaret now and then. All stores sell Cascarets. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a cleansing, too. Adv.

DOWN TO BASE OF SUPPLY

Manager of Supply Company Forced to a Compromise With Receipt of Large Order.

The tea companies were fighting each other for the trade of the town. The Bee Tea company gave premiums with each pound of tea, while the Gee Tea company did not. The result was that the latter concern was being pushed to the wall. Finally the Gee Tea people realized that they must give premiums or quit.

So, after careful consideration, they decided to give a quart of milk with each pound of tea. Business picked up at once.

"I understand you give a quart of milk with each pound of tea," said a lady one day.

"Quite right," answered the manager.

"Well, I'm Mrs. Ketchem of Holdem & Starvem. We operate a string of ten boarding houses here. I want 150 pounds of tea. Do I get 150 quarts of milk?"

"Why—er—I think so," stammered the manager. "Will you wait till I go back and look over the supply?"

In a minute he came back.

"Madam," he whispered, "I have figured up and I find that if you will take 200 pounds of tea we can give you a cow."

Advantage of Silencer.

This crash of the bullet makes the value of the Maxim silencer very little, so far as military efficiency is concerned, in the way that the fiction writer imagines the silencer to be useful, but not to prevent the enemy from discovering the position of the men firing as many fancy.

Its value lies in the fact that it eliminates fully half of the recoil of the rifle from the action of the gases in its chambers, and it gives the officers much better control over the fire, because of the lessened noise of the rifles. It cuts down the roar of the Springfield to about the noise of the .25-20 and thus the roar of the rifles at the firing line is much reduced, and the commands of the officers can be heard.—Outing.

So Paw Says.

Little Lemuel—Say, paw, what is a philosopher?

Paw—A philosopher, son, is a man who bears with resignation the toothache of another man.

KNOW NOW

And Will Never Forget the Experience.

The coffee drinker who has suffered and then been completely relieved by changing from coffee to Postum knows something valuable. There's no doubt about it.

"I learned the truth about coffee in a peculiar way," says a California woman. "My husband who has, for years, been of a bilious temperament decided to leave off coffee and give Postum a trial, and as I did not want the trouble of making two beverages for meals I concluded to try Postum, too. The results have been that while my husband has been greatly benefited, I have myself received even greater benefit.

"When I began to drink Postum I was thin in flesh and very nervous. Now I actually weigh 16 pounds more than I did at that time and I am stronger physically and in my nerves, while husband is free from all his ails.

"We have learned our little lesson about coffee and we know something about Postum, too, for we have used Postum now steadily for the last three years and we shall continue to do so.

"We have no more use for coffee—the drug drink. We prefer Postum and health."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

The cost per cup of both kinds is about the same.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

—sold by Grocers

RECOMMEND WHEAT EMBASGO

NEW YORK MAYOR'S FOOD COMMITTEE REPORTS.

Would Prevent Further Increase in the Price of Bread by Stopping Exports.

New York, Feb. 15.—An immediate embargo on the exportation of wheat to prevent further increase in the price of bread, is recommended for consideration by the federal government in the report of Mayor Mitchel's food committee, submitted by George W. Perkins, the chairman. The opinion is expressed in the report that if wheat continues to be exported at the present abnormal rate, the price of bread will soar much higher.

Mayor Mitchel has forwarded the report to President Wilson.

The withholding of wheat by the farmers for higher prices and speculation on the basis of continued heavy export, are given by Mr. Perkins as the causes for the high prices.

"In the six months since the war began," declares the report, "we have exported many millions of bushels more than we exported in the preceding thirty months.

"In the judgment of this committee this situation is causing farmers and middlemen to hold their wheat and is causing all classes of speculators to be very confident of higher prices. Your committee feels that the time has arrived for our federal government to state whether it is in favor of an immediate embargo, and if not, what conditions, in its opinion, would have to arise to justify such action.

WILL REORGANIZE U. S. ARMY

War Department Gives Plans for Field Army Ready to Respond to Call.

Washington, Feb. 15.—Details of the War Department's plan for organizing the regular army and the militia of the various states into field armies ready to respond without confusion to a call for emergency service are given in a circular issued by the militia division of the department.

Creation of twelve militia divisions, with headquarters in each district, is contemplated. Each state is assigned its definite quota of troops to be furnished. In the four proposed field armies there will be in all 316,264 enlisted men, in addition to some thousands who would be employed in time of actual war at depots and in transportation operations.

The circular shows that most of the states already maintain as many men as will be needed in the infantry and light artillery branches, but there is a serious shortage in coast artillery, cavalry and sanitary corps.

States, consequently, are urged to transfer their unutilized infantry units to other branches of the service to complete their share in the divisional organizations.

FRENCH AEROPLANES AND GERMAN ZEPPELIN CLASH

Geneva, via Paris, Feb. 15.—A thrilling aerial battle between a Zeppelin dirigible baloon and three French aeroplanes was witnessed by thousands of German and French troops in the trenches a little south of Muelhausen in Upper Alsace.

The Zeppelin came from the Black Forest and was sailing toward Belfort when it met the aeroplanes which were flying much lower. A battle ensued and the conflict lasted for about forty minutes, both sides keeping up a continuous fire.

The aeroplanes struggled to reach a higher level which would place them above the dirigible and had almost succeeded when the Zeppelin retired to the north at great speed.

THE WEATHER.

Minnesota and Wisconsin—Snow today; tomorrow fair.

GRAIN AND LIVE STOCK.

Minneapolis Grain.

Minneapolis, Feb. 15.—Wheat—May, $1.45¾; July, $1.40¾; No. 1 northern, $1.49¾; No. 2 northern, $1.46¾; No. 1 durum, $1.54; No. 3 corn, 73¼c; No. 3 white oats, 57¼c; barley, malting, 80c; No. 2 rye, $1.24; No. 1 flax, $1.85½.

Duluth Grain.

Duluth, Feb. 15.—Wheat—May, $1.46½; July, $1.42⅝; No. 1 northern, $1.46½; No. 1 durum, $1.54.

South St. Paul Live Stock.

South St. Paul, Feb. 15.—Cattle—Steers, $5@7; cows, $4@5.50; calves, $7.75@8.75; hogs, $6.10@6.40; sheep and lambs $8@8.25.

Butter, Eggs and Poultry.

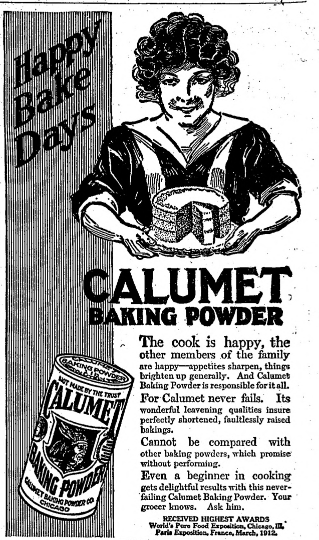
Minneapolis, Feb. 15.—Butter—Creamery extras, 30c; extra firsts, 29c; firsts, 28c; seconds, 27c; dairies, extra firsts, 24c; package stock, 20c.

Eggs—Fresh prime firsts, new cases, dirties and checks out, 26½c; current receipts, rots out, $7.20; checks and seconds, doz., 16c; dirties, doz., 18c.

Live Poultry—Turkeys, fat 10 lbs. and over 14c; thin and small, 9c; cripples and culls, unsalable; roosters, 9c; staggy cockerels, 10@11c; hens, 4 lbs. and over, 14c; hens, 3 to 4 lbs., 11@12c; 3 lbs. and under, 9c; geese, fat, 10c; ducks, 12½; guineas, doz., $5; springs, lb., 12½c.

Coal Operator Crushed Under Auto.

Great Falls, Mont., Feb. 15.—Edward Gerber of Sand Coulee, one of the wealthiest coal operators in the Northwest, was crushed to death last night under the steering wheel of his auto when it overturned near Fields Junction on the road to Sand Coulee. Mr. Gerber was driving to his home and with him were two young women of Sand Coulee. The auto suddenly swerved and plunged into the ditch. The girls were thrown clear and escaped unharmed.



Happy Bake Days
NOT MADE BY THE TRUST
CALUMET BAKING POWDER
CALUMET BAKING POWDER CO. CHICAGO

CALUMET BAKING POWDER

The cook is happy, the other members of the family are happy—appetites sharpen, things brighten up generally. And Calumet Baking Powder is responsible for it all.

For Calumet never fails. Its wonderful leavening qualities insure perfectly shortened, faultlessly raised bakings.

Cannot be compared with other baking powders, which promise without performing.

Even a beginner in cooking gets delightful results with this never-failing Calumet Baking Powder. Your grocer knows. Ask him.

RECEIVED HIGHEST AWARDS
World's Pure Food Exposition, Chicago, Ill.
Paris Exposition, France, March, 1912.

You don't save money when you buy cheap or big-can baking powder. Don't be misled. Buy Calumet. It's more economical—more wholesome—gives best results. Calumet is far superior to sour milk and soda.

When the Laws Met.

The Laws sat about the long green table. All the fundamentals were there save one. Even the decrepit Salic Law was present, dozing between the Mosaic Laws and the Law of Primogeniture.

The chairman, the Law of the Land, called the meeting to order.

"Are we all present?" he asked.

It was the Blue Laws who responded.

"I don't see nothin' of the Law of Nations," he squeaked.

"The Law of Nations has been abolished," the chairman sharply replied. "The business of the convention will now proceed."

Very Much So.

"Didn't you think the operatic prima donna had an unusually high voice?"

"I should say she had! My seat cost me five dollars."

The truly dignified man is never ashamed to lay aside his dignity for the purpose of doing his duty as he sees it.

A "Flying" Malady.

The doctors are puzzled concerning a strange malady that has broken out at more than one aeroplane works, and has in one case ended fatally. The malady in some respects resembles yellow jaundice, and it is, rightly or wrongly, attributed to contact with an aeroplane "dope," or to inhaling its odor.

Further particulars need not at the moment be indicated, but it has been suggested that the source of the trouble may be amyl acetate, which is used as a "dope" solvent. Some mystery attaches to the affair, the precise nature of the malady not having yet been determined, in spite of close examination and analysis; and, of course, until success is attained in this direction no satisfactory precautions or remedy can be devised.

Stubborn Colds and irritated Bronchial Tubes are easily relieved by Dean's Mentholated Cough Drops—5c at Druggists.

Sugar beets can be grown successfully in Ireland recent government experiments show.

Certain-teed ROOFING

If you want a wall board that will give you the best service at the lowest cost—one that keeps the rooms warmer in winter and cooler in summer—ask your dealer about

Certain-teed Wall Board

Tests made on six high grade Wall Boards show that Certain-teed is the strongest and that it resists dampness and water better than any other Wall Board.

It can be used in houses, offices, factories, etc. Permanent and temporary booths can be quickly and inexpensively built with Certain-teed Wall Board. It can be applied by any careful workman who follows directions.

Our Certain-teed roofings are known and have made good all over the world.

For sale by dealers everywhere, at reasonable prices

General Roofing Mfg. Company
World's largest manufacturers of Roofing and Building Papers

New York City, Boston, Chicago, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Atlanta, Cleveland, Detroit, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Kansas City, Minneapolis, San Francisco, Seattle, London, Hamburg, Sydney

At each of our big mills we make the following products:

- Asphalt Roofings
- Slate Surfaced Shingles
- Asphalt Felts
- Deadening Felt
- Tarred Felts
- Building Papers
- Insulating Papers
- Wall Boards
- Plastic Roofing Cement
- Asphalt Cement
- Roof Coating
- Metal Paints
- Out-door Paints
- Shingle Stains
- Refined Coal Tar
- Tar Coating

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Canada is Calling You to her Rich Wheat Lands

She extends to Americans a hearty invitation to settle on her FREE Homestead lands of 160 acres each or secure some of the low priced lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

This year wheat is higher but Canadian land just as cheap, so the opportunity is more attractive than ever. Canada wants you to help to feed the world by tilling some of her soil—land similar to that which during many years has averaged 20 to 45 bushels of wheat to the acre. Think what you can make with wheat around $1 a bushel and land so easy to get. Wonderful yields also of Oats, Barley and Flax. Mixed farming is fully as profitable an industry as grain growing.

The Government this year is asking farmers to put increased acreage into grain. Military service is not compulsory in Canada but there is a great demand for farm labor to replace the many young men who have volunteered for service. The climate is healthful and agreeable, railway facilities excellent, good schools and churches convenient. Write for literature and particulars as to reduced railway rates to Superintendent Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or to

R. A. GARRETT
311 Jackson Street, St. Paul, Minn.

Canadian Government Agent

MOTHER! LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE

If cross, feverish, constipated, give "California Syrup of Figs"

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is ofttimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Adv.

ONE ON SECRETARY DANIELS

Head of the Navy Evidently Not an Expert as to the Odor of Alcoholic Liquors.

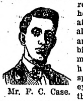
A story is going the rounds in Washington about Secretary of the Navy Daniels which may or may not reflect credit on that official, according to the point of view. According to this story the secretary was one morning conferring with an officer and in the middle of his conference interrupted the proceedings to say: "This is the second morning that I have smelled whisky on your breath, sir!"

To which the officer is said to have replied: "I beg your pardon, Mr. Secretary, it was whisky yesterday, but it is gin this morning."

No name has been allowed to leak out in connection with this story, and it may be that there is more fiction than fact in it.—Boston Transcript.

A GRATEFUL ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

Mr. F. C. Case of Welcome Lake, Pa., writes: "I suffered with Backache and Kidney Trouble. My head ached, my sleep was broken and unrefreshing. I felt heavy and sleepy after meals, was always nervous and tired, had a bitter taste in my mouth, was dizzy, had floating specks before my eyes, was always thirsty, had a dragging sensation across my loins, difficulty in collecting my thoughts and was troubled with shortness of breath. Dodds Kidney Pills have cured me of these complaints. Dodds Kidney Pills have done their work and done it well. You are at liberty to publish this letter for the benefit of any sufferer who doubts the merit of Dodds Kidney Pills."



Mr. F. C. Case.

Dodds Kidney Pills, 50c. per box at your dealer or Dodds Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Write for Household Hints, Dainty Recipes; also music of National Anthem. All 3 sent free. Adv.

Her Travels.

Two little Los Angeles girls were talking about the big cities of the United States. Rosie, who had traveled a great deal, and had been in many of these places, was telling Goldie about them, at the latter's request.

"I want to go to Mexico very much," concluded Rosie. "I have never been out of the United States."

"Haven't you?" asked Goldie, in tones of superior pity. "Why, I have. I have been in San Francisco and Nebraska."

SAGE TEA AND SULPHUR DARKENS YOUR GRAY HAIR

Look Years Younger! Try Grandma's Recipe of Sage and Sulphur and Nobody Will Know.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy.' You will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this old, famous recipe, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. Adv.

True.

"If I had your hopeful disposition I would be worth a million dollars."

"No, you wouldn't."

STATE BREVITIES

Pipestone.—Former State Senator Severt B. Duea has taken a position as cashier of the Security bank here, following the purchase of a large block of stock of the institution.

St. Cloud.—After an interruption of only a few weeks, officials at the Great Northern shops here have announced a resumption of the six-day week schedule. Between 400 and 500 men were reduced to five-day weeks for a short period, but the shop will operate in all departments on full schedule henceforth.

Caledonia.—The Caledonia high school debating team will clash with the Hastings high school trio here on the evening of Feb. 26.—Each team won the championship in its district. The Caledonia team will uphold the negative of the question, government ownership and operation of all telephone and telegraph lines.

Fergus Falls.—The police raided the premises of O. E. Setter of this city and found a quantity of wet goods. Setter appeared in justice court and was fined $100 on the charge of selling liquor illegally and was then taken before Judge Moen of the municipal court and charged with running an illegal drinking place. He pleaded guilty to this also and paid a fine of $80.

St. Cloud.—The program for the nineteenth annual meeting of the Central Minnesota Educational association that will attract from 400 to 500 teachers to the St. Cloud normal March 18, 19 and 20, was announced by the officers. President George E. Vincent of the university will be one of the speakers, sharing honors with Dr. H. W. Shryock, president of the state normal university of Carbondale, Ill.

Bemidji.—County Auditor James L. George has let the contract for judicial ditch No. 27, which will run southeast of Baudette, a distance of about 30 miles, and will cost Beltrami county practically $63,000. The contract was let to George E. Brown of Litchfield, and the work will be begun in the early spring. Two dredges will be used and the ditch will probably be completed by July.

Minneapolis.—Worry over the disappearance of her son, John Hanlon, 16 years old, a year ago, caused Mrs. John Hanlon, 822 University avenue northeast, Minneapolis, to go insane, and she is in a sanatorium. The police were notified that the boy was seen in Aberdeen, S. D., a week ago, and the Aberdeen police have been requested to hunt for him. It is believed the reason of his mother may be saved if he returns home.

Pipestone.—Pipestone people are greatly interested in the bill before the state legislature which allows cities of the fourth class to hold elections for all precincts at one polling place. The Pipestone city hall is in the center of town and has always served as one voting place, but it has always been necessary to provide a second, that the two wards of the city might have separate voting places. This city is in favor of the passage of the measure.

Montevideo.—The Montevideo fire department held its second annual banquet at the Dunn house. The guests of honor were members of the city council and Fire Chief Ringer of Minneapolis. Chief Ringer spoke on "Fire Apparatus Equipment." Letters from chiefs of the department of Fairmont, St. Cloud, Aberdeen and Owatonna were read. The local department responded to fourteen fire calls in 1914; the total fire losses were $3,600.

Fergus Falls.—A special term of the United States court opened here with Judge Morris on the bench, for the trial of 25 Indian land cases of a peculiar character. The cases are those where mixed blood minors gave deeds to land, and later, when they became of age, gave new deeds. The government brought the suits before the minors became of age, and contends that the giving of new deeds after they become of age was a continuation of the original transaction.

Hastings.—A farmers' short course, live stock, poultry and agricultural show will be held in Hastings March 2 to 6, and preparations are being made by farmers from both Dakota and Washington counties for the event. Cash premiums to the amount of over $400 will be offered. The officers selected are: President, Professor P. S. Jordan, agriculturist in the Hastings high school; secretary, W. M. Hageman; treasurer, John Heinen. A feature of the program will be the drama, "Back to the Farm."

Albert Lea.—The frozen body of a well dressed man was found about 10 feet from the main line of the Milwaukee track near Alden. One foot was sticking out of a snowbank when discovered by section men. The clothing covering the man was new, even to his hat, socks, shoes, overcoat and overshoes. One ankle was broken and a severe bruise was discernible across his head. Nothing was found on or about him which would disclose his identity. He was about 40 years of age and of medium build.

Alexandria.—The school district of this city voted an issuance of bonds of $72,000 for a new high school, and $3,000 for additional grounds for one of the ward schools. Between 800 and 900 votes were cast and the building proposition carried by only 24 votes. The school board expects to have the building ready for the opening of school next fall.

Winona.—The board in charge of the consolidated school at Lewiston, one of the leading consolidated schools in Minnesota, has re-elected Edward S. Billings, as superintendent and agriculturist for another year.

TAKE A GLASS OF SALTS WHEN BLADDER BOTHERS

Harmless to Flush Kidneys and Neutralize Irritating Acids—Splendid for the System.

Kidney and Bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in avoiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink, which quickly relieves bladder trouble.—Adv.

A New Anecdote.

Queer requests are often received for prescriptions, which might puzzle either doctor or chemist, far more skilled than the proprietor of the ordinary drug store. Here is one recently reported by Morris Wade: It is a note from an excitable mother, whose nerves were apparently as much in need of treatment as the digestion of her infant:

"My little baby has et up its father's parish plaster. Please to send an anecdote by the inclosed little girl."—Youth's Companion.

Alfalfa PUREST ON EARTH

More than 30 years ago Salzer's Catalog boomed Alfalfa, years before other seedsmen thought of its value. Today Salzer excels! His Alfalfa strains include Grimm, (Montana Liscom, Agr. College inspected). Salzer's Dakota Registered No. 30—all hardy as oak.

For 10c in Postage

We gladly mail our Catalog and sample package of Ten Famous Farm Seeds, including Speltz, "The Cereal Wonder;" Rejuvenated White Bonanza Oats, "The Prize Winner;" Billion Dollar Grass; Teosinte, the Silo Filler, Alfalfa, etc., etc.

Or Send 12c

And we will mail you our big Catalog and six generous packages of Early Cabbage, Carrot, Cucumber, Lettuce, Radish, Onion—furnishing lots and lots of juicy delicious Vegetables during the early Spring and Summer.

Or send to John A. Salzer Seed Co., Box 717, La Crosse, Wis., twenty cents and receive both above collections and their big catalog.

At Last It's Reached.

Father Vaughan tells a good story of a certain minister who was preaching on "Perfection." "Did you ever know anyone to be perfect?" he asked. "Did you ever read of any man or woman who was quite perfect?"

As he paused and looked around among his audience, a pale-faced woman rose up and said: "Yes, from all accounts, my husband's first wife was perfect."

IS EPILEPSY CONQUERED?

New Jersey Physician Said to Have Many Cures to His Credit.

Red Bank, N. J. (Special).—Advices from every direction fully confirm previous reports that the remarkable treatment for epilepsy being administered by the consulting physician of the Kline Laboratories, of this city, is achieving wonderful results. Old and stubborn cases have been greatly benefited and many patients claim to have been entirely cured.

Persons suffering from epilepsy should write at once to Kline Laboratories, Branch 48, Red Bank, N. J., for a supply of the remedy, which is being distributed gratuitously.—Adv.

An Old Contention.

"How did she happen to decide that he was her soul mate?"

"He was demonstrating a new dance at her house and broke a costly vase."

"I don't see how she figured that out."

"Neither do I, but there is a great deal in the philosophy of women that can't be figured out."

Free to Our Readers

Write Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago, for 48-page Illustrated Eye Book Free. Write all about your Eye Trouble and they will advise as to the Proper Application of the Murine Eye Remedies in Your Special Case. Your Druggist will tell you that Murine Relieves Sore Eyes, Strengthens Weak Eyes. Doesn't Smart, Soothes Eye Pain, and sells for 50c. Try It in Your Eyes and in Baby's Eyes for Scaly Eyelids and Granulation. Adv.

Perplexed.

Inquisitive Incubator Chick—"Say, do they figure your birthday from the day you're laid or the day you're hatched?"—Puck.

PROCESS OF STEWING

REGULATION OF HEAT IS THE MAIN CONSIDERATION.

On That Account It Is Best to Use Gas, When Possible—Glazed Earthenware Jar Should Be Receptacle Employed.

Stewing is a method of food preparation that approaches the soup-making process. It is to some extent a proceeding that occupies a middle position between boiling and baking; the latter is often called roasting. In stewing, the cook's endeavor should be to extract from the meat its nutritive juices, and then to employ those juices, suitably treated, to finish cooking the remainder of the meat. For successful stewing, the most important point is the power of regulating the heat at which the operation is conducted. In order to stew successfully the heat must be absolutely under the cook's control. The up-to-date cook, therefore, prefers gas for stewing purposes on account of the perfect control that can be exercised over the temperature.

For successful stewing, meat should be divided into small portions for the easy extraction of the juices. Where bones exist, these should be broken into small pieces, and form an under layer in the stewing vessel. The meat and bones ought always to be placed in cold water and the water should cover everything in the pan or jar. The lid or cover should be carefully secured, and the temperature must be gradually raised to a steady heat, which must, of course, be below boiling. The extraction of the meat juices then proceeds, and when vegetables are to be added to the stew they are placed in the vessel at a later stage. Boiling and stewing are by no means the same process. The proper temperature for stewing is about 180 degrees Fahr. As almost everybody knows, the boiling point is 212 Fahr.

A glazed earthenware jar with a tight-fitting cover is most useful for stewing meat, or for making soups. If it has no cover, one should be constructed by fitting a plate or saucer on top of the jar and brown paper should then be tied over it. A jar with a cover saves this trouble, and is, therefore, worth the extra expense. Earthenware or stone jars are very easily kept clean, and food does not spoil when left in them, as it may do if left in a metal pan. They can be placed on the top of the stove or in the oven when it is necessary to reheat the food contained in them, or if placed in a pan of boiling water the contents of the jar will cook slowly without attention from the cook. A meat stew can be served in the jar in which it has been cooked, if it is neither too large nor too high. It must of course, be wiped dry and a napkin may be neatly folded around it. By this process the great advantage of a very hot dinner may be obtained in the coldest weather, even when the whole family does not reach the home at exactly the same hour, as a stone or eartheuware jar, having been thoroughly heated, will retain the heat for some time.—American Cookery.

Lobster Cutlets.

Melt one teaspoonful of butter, add two tablespoonfuls of flour and cook thoroughly. Add one cupful of boiling water and cook until thick, stirring constantly. Add two cupfuls of chopped lobster meat. Season with salt, paprika, lemon juice and minced parsley. Take from the fire, add the beaten yolk of an egg and cool. Shape into cutlets, dip into egg and crumbs and fry in deep fat. Stick a lobster claw into the small end of each cutlet.

Bean Pot Roast.

Take one pound of beef, a cheap cut is just as good if it is free from veins. Cut in pieces about an inch square. Put in all the fat, too. Put in a bean pot, just cover with water and put in the oven. As water boils away add a little more. When about half done add a little salt. When ready to serve take from oven and put it in the spider. Thicken with a little flour mixed with water. The gravy is a rich brown.

Creamed Sardines.

Remove skin and bones from two boxes of sardines, then add four finely chopped hard-boiled eggs, five tablespoonfuls of bread crumbs, two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, one and one-fourth cupfuls of milk, one-half saltspoonful of salt, big dash of red pepper. Heat this mixture to a boiling point, then pour it over four slices of buttered toast.

Fried Cabbage.

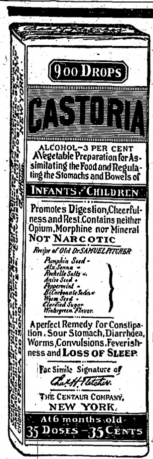
Shave very thin enough cabbage to fill a quart measure. Put in granite stewpan, sprinkle with salt and pour on two cupfuls boiling water. Cook rapidly until water has evaporated. Then add two tablespoonfuls milk, one of butter, a dash of pepper and fry brown.

Raw Carrots.

Take nice, fresh, crisp carrots scrape and put through a food chopper, using the coarse knife. To each pint of carrots add two tablespoonfuls melted butter, one teaspoonful sugar and salt to taste. Serve on lettuce leaves.

When Washing Overalls.

All the paint marks can be removed from overalls by letting them soak for a day in turpentine.



900 DROPS

CASTORIA

ALCOHOL—3 PER CENT

A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of INFANTS & CHILDREN

Promotes Digestion, Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral NOT NARCOTIC

Recipe of Old Dr SAMUEL PITCHER

Pumpkin Seed -
Alx. Senna -
Rochelle Salts -
Anise Seed -
Peppermint -
Bi Carbonate Soda -
Worm Seed -
Clarified Sugar
Wintergreen Flavor.

A perfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP.

Fac Simile Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK.

At 6 months old
35 DOSES—35 CENTS

Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

Mothers Know That Genuine Castoria Always Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. In Use For Over Thirty Years

CASTORIA

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

SPOHN'S DISTEMPER CURE

For DISTEMPER Pink Eye, Epizootic Shipping Fever & Catarrhal Fever

Sure cure and positive preventive, no matter how horses at any age are infected or "exposed." Liquid, given on the tongue; acts on the Blood and Glands; expels the poisonous germs from the body. Cures Distemper in Dogs and Sheep and Cholera in Poultry. Largest selling live stock remedy. Cures La Grippe among human beings, and is a fine Kidney remedy. 50c and $1 a bottle; $5 and $10 a dozen. Cut this out. Keep it. Show to your druggist, who will get it for you. Free Booklet, "Distemper, Causes and Cures." Special Agents wanted.

SPOHN MEDICAL CO., Chemists and Bacteriologists GOSHEN, IND., U. S. A.

Find Live Duck in Fish.

A strange specimen of the angel fish was caught by Captain Palmer at Sound Beach, who removed from it two ducks. The wicked fish had stolen the ducks from J. Kennedy Tod's Innis Arden estate. One was alive.

The fish was struggling in the water when seen by Captain Palmer, and was landed with a pair of ice tongs.

The fish is a yard long, and its mouth is 6 by 8 inches. It was frozen in a cake of ice at the Maher ice plant and is exhibited in the window of a market here.—Greenwich (Conn.) Dispatch to New York World.

DISTRESSING PIMPLES

Removed by Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Trial Free.

Smear them with the Ointment. Wash off in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water and continue bathing for some minutes. Repeat on rising and retiring. These fragrant supercreamy emollients do much for the skin, and do it quickly.

Sample each free by mail with Book. Address postcard, Cuticura, Dept. XY, Boston. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

Speaking of the War.

Patience—I certainly am a foolish girl.

Patrice—What now?

"Why, I followed that advice, 'See America First,' and now there's hardly anything left in Europe to see!"

In the last 25 years the population of Germany has increased from 48,000,000 to 66,000,000.

Doesn't Go Very Far.

Redd—What do you think of his new car?

Greene—Oh, it's all right as far as it goes.

Your Liver Is Clogged Up

That's Why You're Tired—Out of Sorts—Have No Appetite.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS will put you right in a few days.

They do their duty. Cure Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion and Sick Headache.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature Brent Good

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

CANCER

Tumors, Lupus, successfully treated without knife or pain. All work guaranteed. Come, or write for Free Book. Dr. Williams, Specialist on Cancer 2904 University Av. S. E. Minneapolis.

BLACK LEG

LOSSES SURELY PREVENTED by Cutter's Blackleg Pills. Low-priced, fresh, reliable; preferred by Western stockmen, because they protect where other vaccines fail. Write for booklet and testimonials.
10-dose pkge. Blackleg Pills $1.00
50-dose pkge. Blackleg Pills 4.00
Use any injector, but Cutter's best.
The superiority of Cutter products is due to over 15 years of specializing in vaccines and serums only. Insist on Cutter's. If unobtainable, order direct. The Cutter Laboratory, Berkeley, Cal., or Chicago, Ill.

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 8-1915.

A Draft—You Catch Cold—Then Follows

Coughs, Cold Stiff Neck Neuralgia

Especially in the piercing pain of neuralgia or the dull throb of headache is Sloan's Liniment wonderfully relieving. Laid lightly on the part where the pain is felt, it gives at once a feeling of comfort and ease that is most welcome to the overwrought sufferer.

Hear What Others Say:

"There are no Liniments that equal Sloan's. My husband has neuralgia very often, he rubs Sloan's on his face and that is the last of it."—Mrs. V. J. Brown, Route 1, Box 121, Halls, Tenn.

"I have used Sloan's Liniment for family use for years and would not be without it. We have raised a family of ten children and have used it for croup and all lung trouble; also, as an antiseptic for wounds, of which children have a great many, it can't be beat. My wife sprained her ankle last summer and it was in bad shape. Sloan's Liniment applied enabled her to be as good as ever in a week. I have used it several times for sprains and rheumatism."—John Newcomb, R. R. No. 2, Keokuk, Iowa.

SLOAN'S LINIMENT

It works like magic, relieving Lumbago, Rheumatism, Sprains and Bruises. No rubbing—just lay it on. Price 25c. All dealers. Send four cents in stamps for TRIAL BOTTLE. Sent to any address in the U.S.

DR. EARL S. SLOAN, Inc. Dept. B. Philadelphia, Pa.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3,1879

Red Lake County have set the date for their county fair for July 27, 28 and 29th. The Pennington county fair will be held the following week.

Germany has declared a blockade of the English Channel, with submarines, and warns all American ships that it is dangerous to go that way, which warning they should heed, and not get into that European mix up.

It now looks as if England had no further complaint coming because the German Navy does not come out and fight, for when they declare a blockade of the English coast to shut off supplies being shipped into England, they must have a few submarines and men of war handy to make their blockade effective.

Cato Sells, Commissioner of Indian affairs, is said to be a strict Prohibitionist, and he can be depended upon to enforce that 1855 treaty, and close as many saloons as he possibly can under it. Saloon men outside of the territory are liable to have notice served on them to close up, if they ship liquor into prohibited territory, or furnish it to anyone that is letting Indians get it.

Senator O'Neill had quite a severe fight in the senate to get his proposed constitutional amendment to permit the loaning of state school funds on improved farms passed. This amendment was voted down last fall and it will undoubtedly meet the same fate in the 1916 election; as the cities are opposed to it, and the farmers will not vote on it; thus letting it go by default.

From the amount of howls being let out of the anti-county optionists about the two senators from St. Louis county voting for county option, some people might think that they were wholesale liquor dealers. If they got any support for election by promises to oppose county option, of course they done wrong to vote for county option; otherwise they were free moral agents to vote as they pleased.

The Oklee Herald claims that Representative Stenvick is stealing some of Mr. Duffy's campaign timber to incorporate into his bill for the reduction of the contract rate of interest. That is right, and again we say that the campaign for members of the legislature from this district was not fought in vain; as the people will get the best representation that lies in the power of our members from this district to give them.

The Scientific American is showing up the total unpreparedness of the United States for war, and how easy it would be for an army and navy of a foreign nation to land and gobble up this little strip of land called the United States. But it appears that foreign nations do not believe all they read, for if they did they would undoubtedly send over a small crusier that they could spare from the European war and gobble up America. It is easy enough to see that the Scientific American articles are written in the interest of ship builders to try to throw a scare into the American people, so they can secure more contracts for building men of war.

AUCTION SALE

The following list of NEW farm machinery, manure spreaders, wagons, buggies, and harnesses will be sold at auction, FEBRUARY 26th, 1915, at the Sundahl Bros.' barn back of the Auditorium in Thief River Falls, Minnesota.

This property is all BRAND NEW. Not an old or used article in entire stock. All to be sold at your own figures, to the highest bidder.

Sale commences at 12:30 P M. sharp. Be on hand or you will miss some bargains.

Should the date set be stormy bad weather, sale will be held the following day.

LIST.

8 Litchfield Manure Spreaders.
1 Grand Detour Gang Plow.
2 Oliver Gang Plows
10 P. & O. Gang Plows.
2 P. & O. Sulky Plows.
2 Triple Gang Rock Island Plows
4 Steel Lever Harrows.
6 Drills.
1 Corn Planter.
3 Smut Mills.
1 Top Biggy, single.
1 Surrey.
1 Johnson Mower.
2 sets low wagon trucks.
1 Medium Plymouth Wagon truck
2 Regular wagon running gears.
1 Wagon complete.
1 Disc Harrow.
1 International Cream Separator.
1 no. 12 DeLaval cream Separator
3 Feed Mills.
6 Sets of Double Harnesses.
3 Dixie Horse Hoe.
8 Climax Weeders; these weeders are manufactured for the purpose of fighting sow thistle and Canada Thistle, and are very effective in their operations.

TERMS.

All sums of $10.00 and under, cash; On all sums over $10.00 bankable paper will be taken until Dec. 1st, 1915. No property to be removed until settled for.

Empire Farms Company.
Thief River Falls, Minn.
Jesse LaBree — Auctioneer.
Citizens State Bank — Clerk.

COLDS ARE OFTEN MOST SERIOUS
STOP POSSIBLE COMPLICATIONS.

The disregard of a Cold has often brought many a regret. The fact of Sneezing, Coughing, or a Fever should be warning enough that your system needs immediate attention. Certainly Loss of Sleep is most serious. It is a warning given by Nature. It is man's duty to himself to assist by doing his part. Dr. King's New Discovery is based on a scientific analysis of Colds. 50c. at your Druggist. Buy a bottle to-day.—adv.

THE LIVER REGULATES THE BODY
A SLUGGISH LIVER NEEDS CARE.

Someone has said that people with Chronic Liver Complaint should be shut up away from humanity, for they are pessimists and see through a "glass darkly." Why? Because mental states depend upon physical states. Biliousness, Headaches, Dizziness and Constipation disappear after using Dr. King's New Life Pills. 25c. at your Druggist. adv.—

STOP THAT COUGH—NOW

When you catch Cold, or begin to Cough, the first thing to do is to take Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey. It penetrates the linings of the Throat and Lungs and fights the Germs of the Disease, giving quick relief and natural healing. "Our whole family depend on Pine-Tar-Honey for Coughs and Colds," writes. Mr. E. Williams, Hamilton, Ohio. It always helps. 25c. at your Druggist.—Adv.

WE HAVE
$150,000.00
TO LOAN ON FARMS IN
PENNINGTON COUNTY
Write Or Call on Us At FIRST NATIONAL BANK
THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN.

DO YOUR BANKING WITH
FARMERS STATE BANK
GOODRIDGE - - MINNESOTA
CAPITAL AND SURPLUS $12, 000.
6 per cent paid on time deposits
Fire and Torrado Insurance Written in Responsible Companies.
FARM LOANS A SPECIALITY
J. M. BISHOP, President JAY PAYNE Vice-President
NICK BUNDHUND, Cashier

Duffy Buys Bank.

Controlling interest in the Farmers National Bank of Red Lake Falls was bought by John A. Duffy, cashier of the Merchants State Bank last week. The two banks will continue to do business at their usual locations. Mr Duffy was elected president of the Farmer National Bank.

The grain speculators created a slight slump in the price of wheat last week, but they can't hold the price down; unless they can stop that European war.

IT REALLY DOES RELIEVE RHEUMATISM.

Everybody who is afflicted with Rheumatism in any form should by all means keep a bottle of Sloan's Liniment on hand. The minute you feel pain or soreness in a joint or muscle, bathe it with Sloan's Liniment. Do not rub it. Sloan's penetrates almost immediately right to the seat of pain, relieving the hot, tender, swollen feeling and making the part easy and comfortable. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25 cents of any druggist and have it in the house—against Colds, Sore and Swollen Joints, Lumbago, Sciatica and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief. Buy a bottle to-day.—Advertisement.

All the Same.

The "horny handed" calls what he lives on "pay," the skilled mechanic "wages," the city clerk "salary," the banker "income," a landowner "rent roll," a lawyer "fees," a burglar "swag," but it all comes to the same in the end.—London Scraps.

Not an Admirer.

"Your husband loves horses, doesn't he?"

"No," replied young Mrs. Torkins.

"But he is always going to the races."

"Yes. But the way he talks about the horses after he gets home is something dreadful."—Washington Star.

Deductions.

"I rejected both Jack and William last night."

"I know it. I saw them shaking hands on the golf links this morning."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Pernambuco.

Pernambuco means "the mouth of hell," in allusion to the violent surf that is always seen at the mouth of its chief river.

Russia in Asia.

Russia has no colonies, properly so called. Its possessions in Asia are merely reserve grounds for surplus population.

A Puzzle.

Bacon—There's one thing I can't understand. Egbert—What is that? Bacon—When a couple get married they become one. But they say it takes two to make a quarrel.

The Borrower Bit.

A theatrical manager asked an author-actor down to a watering resort as his guest from Saturday to Monday. The actor accepted with alacrity and went down with the full intention of borrowing $500 from the manager before he returned to London. The time passed very quickly, however, and the would be borrower kept putting off the evil moment, hoping for a more favorable opportunity to prefer his request. When Sunday night came he decided to leave it till they were returning to town together. They seemed to be getting on so nicely that he did not wish to spoil it.

What was his horror and consternation when next morning, in answer to his inquiry for his host, the waiter said:

"He left, sir, by the early train for town and said I was to give you this note."

The letter ran as follows:

"Dear Old Chap—Had to leave early. Kindly pay the bill and let me know what I owe you when we meet in town.—Yours, L."—London Mail.

Couldn't Face Failure.

In 1782 James Price, a distinguished amateur chemist and fellow of the British Royal society, announced that he had succeeded in inventing a method of converting mercury and other inferior metals into gold and silver. He conducted a series of experiments in the presence of a number of men of rank and science which were apparently successful. Some of the gold thus produced was presented to the king, and the University of Oxford, hearing of this, immediately conferred on Price the honorary degree of M. D. But a fierce controversy arose, and he was requested to prove the truth of his discovery before the Royal society. He assented, and on the appointed day the critics assembled at his house. He received them cordially, and then, stepping to one side, he swallowed a flask of laurel water and died in a few moments. He had, it is thought, made a mistake in his experiments and had not the moral courage to own it.—London Standard.

Genuine Wit.

Benjamin Moore, the second bishop of New York, was a man noted in his day for his ready wit—a quality that his wife apparently shared with him. A dinner was given by some one of Gouverneur Morris' friends when he was about to depart for Europe. Bishop Moore and his wife were of the party. In the course of the conversation Mr. Morris observed that since he was going abroad he had made his will and, turning to Bishop Moore, said to him:

"My reverend friend, I have bequeathed to you my complete stock of impudence."

Bishop Moore replied: "Sir, you are not only very kind, but you are very generous. You have left me by far the largest portion of your estate."

Mrs. Moore immediately added, "My dear, you have come into possession of your inheritance remarkably soon."—Youth's Companion.

FIRST STATE BANK,
Of Plummer Minnesota.

You Run Your Business
With a Check Book -
How About Your Home?
BILL

"BILLS, bills, bills—nothing but bills!" frequently is the complaint of the head of the family. No man would think of running his business WITHOUT A CHECK BOOK. How about YOUR home? The running of the home today is a BUSINESS PROPOSITION.

Open a CHECKING ACCOUNT With Us at Once

J.A.DUFFY President, Henry Enderlie, Cashier

FARMERS & MERCHANTS STATE BANK
Oklee Minn.

The rapid growth of this bank is the best evidence that its policy and methods meet with the approval of the people in our community.

You will find this bank as liberal in its dealings as is consistent with sound banking.

We are at all times prepared to discuss your requirements with you and invite consultation.

Pay your bills with checks on this bank.
Farm Loans At Lowest Rates And On Easy Terms.
Six per cent interest paid on time deposits.
CAPITAL AND SURPLUS————————$14,500.00
J. A. C. Torgerson, V. P. W. B. Torgerson, Cashier.

We have for sale one of the best quarter sections of land in the town of Highlanding, located one mile south of Highlanding Creamery. This farm will be sold cheap as the owner is a non resident and desires to use the money invested in other business. For terms and full particulars call on W. G. Hunt, Sunbeam, Minn

Store Sarcasm.

TRY OUR HOME MADE BREAD

Woman—Have you any other varieties of nuts here beside these?

Grocer's Clerk—The boss an' the stenographer will be in directly; they are out tangoing.—Washington Star.

Mistake Somewhere.

"That shoe clerk must have mistaken me for another customer."

"Why so?"

"Because when I was trying on my shoes he asked me how I liked the last, and I never bought a pair there before in my life."—New York World.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Jan. 29th 1915.

Department of the Interior., U. S. Land office at Crookston Minn. Jan. 22nd, 1915. Notice is hereby given that Carl P. Anderson of Erie Minn. who on November, 25th, 1907, made Homestead Entry No. 1373, Serial No 04591, for the E ½ N E ¼ and who on July 1st, 1911 made Additional Homestead Application Serial No. 06365 for the W ½ N E ¼ all in Section 30 Township 153 N. Range 39 West Fifth Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Five Year Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U.S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls, Minnesota on the 10th day of March 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:
Lars C. Fevig, Olof O. Omlid, Nick Moyers, Chris Odegaard, all of Erie, Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal.
Register.

U. S. Mail,

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 1.05 p. m., on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.
Arrives on the same days, at 4.55 p.m

Wm.G. Hunt, p.m,

W. G. Hunt
Notary Public
ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. XIV. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 26 1915 NO. 49.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

THE LOCAL NEWS.

Subscribe for THE SUNBEAM

C. L. Clark is busy getting out his summer's fire wood.

John Homme of Erie was transacting business here yesterday.

Mr. Ellingson is having his store refitted with the latest improved mantle lamps.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Quirk were on a shopping expedition to Highlanding yesterday.

Wm. A. Swanson of Deer Park township made this office a pleasant call Tuesday.

The snow has been going off slowly every day, which has about ruined the sleighing.

The Highlanding Creamery will open up for the season on March 15th.

Mrs. W. G. Hunt and daughter Myrtle, were over to Highlanding yesterday on a small shopping tour.

W. H. Wilds received an imported bird dog from Scotland this week, which he takes great pride in exhibiting.

W. G. Hunt met with an accident Monday by slipping and falling on ice, which has laid him up for repairs for a few days.

The Highlanding Creamery was fortunate in getting up their summer's supply of ice before the great February thaw.

The charge of "The Light Brigade" did not amount to much, compared to some of the charges made in the present war, if newspaper reports are true.

Don't make up a wry face over this fine weather and say: "We will surely get our pay for it in March." March may try to beat February in giving us fine weather.

Philipp Heideman will sell all his farm machinery, horses and cattle at Public Auction at his farm, in Deer Park township on Tuesday March 2nd, on the usual terms of sale.

Engvold Husby Auctioneer
Henry Enderle, Clerk.

We note by looking over the delinquint tax list that quite a lot of land held under homestead entry is advertised for taxes. Remember that there is a ditch tax against your land which you must pay, and it is advertised in the tax list as unknown. Look this matter up and pay your ditch taxes, or the first thing you know you will not have any more land than a jack rabbit.

NOTICE!

Personal Property Tax becomes delinquent March 1st, when a penalty of 10 per cent is added. Personal Property Tax unpaid April 1st is collected by the sheriff. The last day of February is on Sunday, so the last day to pay Personal Property Tax with out penalty is on February 27th.

Respectfully,
Theo. H. Liden,
County Treasurer.

Of the twenty-three original homesteads taken in the township of Highlanding on the south side of Red Lake River, there are now ten of them that are occupied by actual residents and the ballance are held for speculation. Of the nine residents, two are bachelors without families. The north side of the river is about the same. Where are the children of school age to draw the special state aid, and hire high priced teachers? Consider these facts before you get into a proposition that will tax you off from your farms, with a consolidated school district.

Mrs. Joe LaCourte is quite seriously ill this week.

Mrs. Ole Overvold has a brother from North Dakota visiting her this week.

Mrs. C. L. Clark's mother is still hovering between life and death at Deer Park, Wis., which keeps Mrs. Clark at her bed side.

Who says Mexice is not civilized? General Carranza has ordered that Jack Johnson the pugilist be arrested and turned over to the U. S. authorities.

The people of Perham, Ottertail county are trying to get an amendment to the County Division bill of St. Louis county, so they can divide Ottertail county, and the fellows of eastern Polk county who want county division should be down there helping them.

That Elwell Law.

Judging by the howls let out by a few of northern Minnesota's automobile owner editors, there is a strong sentiment in the northern part of the state against the repeal of this law. Such are not the facts, and the true sentiment of the farmers who have to have their lands assessed to build these automobile roads are in favor of its prompt repeal. The farmer tax payers of southern Minnesota are the ones that are making that big legislative fight for its repeal, and any representative of the farmers interest, who is their friend and protector at other times besides just before his election, will vote AYE when his name is called, to repeal a law that was passed by the cities to levey taxes on the farmers lands, to build automobile roads.

FOR SALE.

For Sale: Some "PURE BRED" "Milking short horn" bull calves also several, "strong grade," bull and heifer calves, from ½ to 15—16 short horn, the sire of these calves is of the same family as "Rose of Glenside" the champion milking short-horn cow of the world: Inquire or write,

Garnes Stock farm,
Joe Books, Herdsman,
Or Jeffers & LaBissoniere,
Red Lake Falls, Minnesota.

Bedlam.

The word "bedlam" is a corruption of the word "Bethlehem" and originated as a synonym for chaos at the time when the house of Bethlehem, occupied by a sisterhood of London, became an insane asylum. The treatment of the insane in the early part of the sixteenth century was not well understood, and, according to the theories then prevalent, it was necessary to frighten the patient out of his lunacy. All sorts of awful expedients were resorted to, among them "surprise floors," which slipped from under the feet; "surprise baths" and floggings at the periods of most severe illness; hence the name "bedlam," the result of incorrect spelling possibly, came easily to stand for awful things.

Weight of Air.

There is no uniform weight for air. For instance, say the weight of a cubic foot of air at sea level is 1,700 grains. With the pressure removed, by its elevation to an altitude of 10,000 feet, its weight would be about the half of 1,700 grains. In other words, the cubic foot at ten or twelve thousand feet above the sea would expand to two cubic feet, each of about 850 grains weight.

No Hip Pocket.

Romantic—Why is Cupid always pictured as carrying bow and arrow?

Sensible Maid—He has no facilities for carrying a gun.—Washington Star.

LUMBER AND BUILDING MATERIALS.

If you are thinking of building a house, barn or any other building this year, it will pay you well to see us.

We carry complete stocks of lumber and all other kinds of building materials at all our yards, and would be pleased to have you inspect same at any time.

We would be pleased to help you plan and estimate the cost of any building you are thinking of erecting this year, and it is understood we do so with no obligation on your part to build.

IF YOU ARE INTERESTED IN SILOS, we are Agent for the Celebrated Arctic Silos, which are the very best on the market. These Silos have stood the test of 30 degrees below zero without freezing, which no other Silo has done.

Better come in and talk it over.

WINTON-NICHOLS LUMBER COMPANY.
—Yards at—
Goodridge, Mavie, Thief River Falls and Fosston, Minn.

Didn't Mean That.

Groom—Here's a little present, Jack. I was certainly lucky to have you for my best man.

Jack—Don't mention it. I hope I may do the same for you many times.—Chicago News.

Queer Story of a Grave.

A curious barren mound is to be seen in Montgomery churchyard. Whatever the cause, there is plainly to be seen a strip of sterility in the form of a cross among a mass of verdure. With the mound a melancholy legend is connected. It is called "Robert's Grave," and the story is that beneath this barren hillock lie the remains of an innocent man who was hanged on mistaken evidence. It is said that while the man stood on the gallows with the rope round his neck he solemnly declared, as a proof of his innocence, that grass should never grow on his grave. And even so it was and is. Any one who attempts to frustrate the fulfillment of this prophecy by sowing grass on this spot pays the penalty with his life. Instances are given of individuals who have been rash enough to do so and have met their doom soon afterward.—Cardiff Western Mail.

Embarrassing.

In South Africa General French earned the title of "the shirt sleeved general." Mr. Chisholm says in "Sir John French." General French was often to be seen walking about in camp in shirt sleeves. One afternoon a correspondent rode up to the lines and, seeing a soldier sitting on a bundle of hay smoking a dilapidated looking old briar pipe, asked where the general was.

"The old man is somewhere about," coolly replied the soldier.

"Well, just hold my horse while I go and search for him."

"Certainly, sir," and the smoker rose obediently and took the bridle.

"Can you tell me where the general is?" inquired the correspondent of a staff officer farther down the line.

"General French? Oh, he's somewhere about. Why, there he is, holding that horse's head!"

And the officer pointed directly to the smoker, still tranquilly pulling at his pipe and holding the horse.

City of Magnificent Distances.

When the government was moved to Washington in 1800 it was far from being a satisfactory place of residence. The city was laid out in the wilderness. They "took to the woods" for a capital city. It was the first time that a government had actually gone into the wilds and selected a site for a capital and laid out its city on a well defined plan. As beautiful as we consider Washington today, the minister from Portugal, the Abbe Corea, who was considered one of the greatest wits of his time and who in 1816 called it "the city of magnificent distances," so named it purely in derision. In that day there was little but distance in the city. As late as 1842 Charles Dickens, after his visit, wrote that "its streets begin in nothing and lead nowhere."—Frederick L. Fishback in National Magazine.

WOOD FOR SALE.

I have all kinds of wood for sale, both green and dry, at reasonable prices.

L. W. Wojnarowski,
Section 8, Town of Hickory.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Cash For Hides and Furs.

If you have Hides or Furs for sale, bring them to the Oklee meat market and get the highest market price in cash.

Meat Market,
Oklee, Minn.

THE PRICHARD Co.

Thief River Falls Minn.

DEALERS IN LUMBER AND FARM MACHINERY.

Located west of the new Soo Depot. Give us a call, and look over our stock of Lumber and Farm Machinery.

H. O. KJOMME
Attorney and Counselor at Law
COUNTY ATTORNEY
Mcginn Block
Thief River Falls, — — Minn.

Wilhelm Michelet
U. S. COMMISSIONER
COURT HOUSE
THIEF RIVER FALLS,
MINN.

Ancestors.

Our ancestors are very good kind of folks, but they are the last people I should choose to have a visiting acquaintance with.—Sheridan.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists. Price 75c per bottle.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Coral Powder.

The debris left from coral, after it has been made into articles of jewelry, etc., is crushed, scented and sold as tooth powder at a high price by East Indian perfumers.

Domestic Bliss.

Mrs. Newed (to her husband)—I cook and cook and cook for you, and what do I get? Nothing! Mr. Newed—You're lucky. I always get indigestion.

Tired!

Are you tired? run down? nervous? Is everything you do an effort? No! it is not laziness. You are ill. Your system needs a tonic. Your Stomach, Kidneys and Liver need stirring up. Nothing will do this better than

Electric Bitters

50c. and $1.00 All Druggists

EAT

When you are

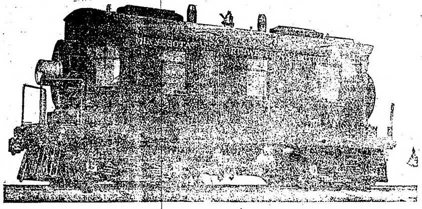
AT GOODRIDGE, Call at the Goodridge Restaurant and get A cup of HOT COFFEE, or a good warm dinner for 25 cents. Don't forget the sign of

EAT

BARBER SHOP IN CONNECTION

STEPHENSON BROS. Props.

Minnesota Northwestern Electric Railway Co.



[illegible]

Going East

Train No. 1.

LEAVE—Thief River Falls at 7:15 A. M.
Silverton at 7:40 A. M.
Mavie at 8:05 A. M.
ARRIVE—Goodridge at 8:30 A. M.

Train No. 5.

LEAVE—Thief River Falls at 10:00 A. M.
Silverton at 11:10 A. M.
Mavie at 11:40 A. M.
ARRIVE-Goodridge at 12:10 A. M.

Train No 3.

LEAVE-Thief River Falls at 3:45 P. M.
Silverton at 4:10 P. M.
Mavie at 4:35 P. M.
ARRIVE-Goodridge at 5:00 P. M.

Going West.

To Thief River Falls.

Train No. 2

LEAVE--Goodridge at 8:45 A. M.
Mavie at 9:10 A. M.
Silverton at [illegible] M
ARRIVE--Thief River Falls at 10:00 A. M.

Train No. 6.

LEAVE--Goodridge at 1:45 P. M
Mavie at 2:15 P. M.
Silverton at 2:45 P. M.
ARRIVE--Thief River Falls at 3:30 P. M.

Train No. 4.

LEAVE--Goodridge at 5:15 P. M.
Mavie at 5:40 P. M.
Silverton at 6:05 P. M.
ARRIVE--Thief River Falls at 6:30 P. M.

CONTRACTS, FIRST AND SECOND MORTGAGES BOUGHT
MACKEY-THOMPSON FARM MORTGAGES ST. PAUL MINNESOTA
MONEY TO LOAN ON FARM LAND

DEFECTIVE PAGE

U. S. VESSEL LADEN WITH COTTON SUNK IN THE NORTH SEA

STEAMER EVELYN BOUND FOR BREMEN IS BLOWN UP OFF COAST OF GERMANY—CREW SAVED.

SUBMARINE OR MINE IS BELIEVED CAUSE

Secretary Bryan Instructs Ambassador Page at London and Ambassador Gerard at Berlin to Make Exhaustive Inquiry As to the Facts.

Washington, Feb. 23.—The United States government has been officially advised of the destruction of the first American vessel on the high seas since the outbreak of the European war. American Consul Fee at Bremen cabled that the steamer Evelyn and her cargo of cotton bound for Bremen had been "blown up at Borkum" just off the coast of Germany, but that the crew had been saved. The cause—submarine or mine—was not given in the dispatch.

After a conference with President Wilson, Secretary Bryan cabled Ambassador Page at London, and Ambassador Gerard at Berlin to make an exhaustive inquiry as to the facts, and if the crew was landed at either of their respective jurisdictions to furnish every care and convenience to Captain Smith and the men, so that they might return home safely.

Zones Not Exactly Defined.

Although the extent of the sea zones of war proclaimed by Germany was never defined exactly, the Borkum Islands are considered far distant from the danger areas of submarines, although the waters of that vicinity are filled with mines for defensive purposes, through which Germany always has piloted incoming ships. At the German embassy it was pointed out that the accident must have been caused by a mine, as Germany, sorely in need of cotton, would have no object in topedoing a vessel laden with such a cargo for German consumption.

Early press dispatches from Berlin, announcing the loss of the vessel by a mine, caused somewhat of a sensation in this capital, where the tension has been more or less pronounced over the situation in the war zones since the dispatch of warning notes by the United States to both Great Britain and Germany. It was practically conceded that if the cause of the accident was proved to be a mine, there probably would be no ground for diplomatic action by the United States, as the laying of mines is not prohibited by any international convention now in force.

American Consul Cables.

American Consul Fee's cablegram, forwarded from Bremen through the American consul general at Rotterdam, Holland, gave the State department meager information. It said:

"Steamer Evelyn, Captain Smith, agents Bull & Company, New York, blown up at Borkum. Crew saved. Ship and cargo lost."

Secretary Bryan repeated the American consul's telegram immediately to Ambassador Page at London and Ambassador Gerard at Berlin, with instructions to learn all possible facts concerning the occurrence and give every care to the crew if landed in their respective jurisdictions.

It was generally taken for granted that the vessel was blown up by a mine, but the omission of any mention of cause introduced an element of speculation.

It practically had been decided by the Washington government to make no reply either to the British or German notes concerning the use of neutral ensigns, or possible attacks by submarines on neutral vessels in the new sea zone of war.

Added significance was attached generally to this policy because of the implication that the strong warning sent to both Great Britain and Germany might now be followed by a crisis in the relations of this government with the belligerent if, through their practices, American vessels or lives were lost.

Newspaper Plant Destroyed.

Des Moines, Iowa, Feb. 22.—The building and entire plant of the Register and Leader, morning, and Des Moines Tribune, afternoon newspapers here, were destroyed by fire. The loss exceeds $200,000, about three-fourths of which was covered by insurance.

Gardner Cowles, publisher and principal owner of the two papers, said the plant would be rebuilt immediately. The cause of the fire is unknown.

No U. S. Mail Lost.

Washington, Feb. 22.—Although United States mail is constantly going directly or indirectly to every country in the world, so far not one bag has been lost through the activities of the war fleets of the European belligerents. Postmaster General Burleson said he expected no interference with the mail service to result from Germany's sea war zone proclamation. It was pointed out that the mail steamers are fast vessels, carrying passengers and little cargo of the kind belligerents would seek to destroy.

ONE DAY'S TOLL IN THE GREAT NAVAL WARFARE

VESSELS SUNK.

Evelyn, American steamer; sunk by mine off Borkum island in North Sea; captain and twenty-seven of crew saved.

Downshire, Irish coasting steamer; sunk by submarine off Calf of Man in Irish Sea; crew saved.

British transport (?), with troops; reported in Berlin as sunk.

British steamer (?), accompanying transport; reported in Berlin as sunk.

Minesearcher of allies reported by Berlin as sunk by mine near Nieuport.

VESSELS DAMAGED

Saturno, Italian fishing boat, damaged by Austrian torpedo boats in Adriatic Sea near Antivari; none of crew injured.

Gesu, Italian fishing boat; fired on by Austrian torpedo boats in Adriatic Sea near Antivari; none of crew injured.

LONDON AGAIN THREATENED

AEROPLANE DROPS MISSILES 50 MILES FROM CITY.

Hostile Aviator Causes Damage to Houses at Colchester—Machine Makes Off to Sea.

London, Feb. 23.—A Braintree dispatch says that at about 8:30 o'clock at night a hostile aeroplane dropped missiles supposed to be incendiary bombs on the fields close to Braintree, but they did no damage. At 8:40 o'clock an aeroplane passed over Colchester, which lies about fifty miles northeast of London.

It dropped a bomb which buried itself in a garden, where it exploded, doing damage to the rear of a house and smashing the windows of other houses. No one was hurt.

The aeroplane, said to be a German, which dropped bombs at Marks Bay, six and one-half miles west of Colchester, and near Coggesshall, but no serious damage resulted. The machine was last reported as making off to sea.

TWO BRITISH SHIPS ARE REPORTED SUNK

Berlin, by wireless to Sayville, L. I., Feb. 22.—The report of the sinking of a British transport with troops and the accompanying steamer reached Berlin too late for comment by the morning papers.

All of the papers, however, feature the report in the first page headlines, together with reports of the sinking of other vessels by submarines or mines.

LAST OF JAMES GANG IS DEAD

Unparalleled Career of Crime During Civil War Kept Dozen States in Terror.

Excelsior Springs, Mo., Feb. 20.—Frank James, one of the last surviving members of the notorious James gang, died on his farm near here. James, who was 74 years old, had been in ill health several months and was stricken with apoplexy early yesterday.

One of the last members of a notorious robber band, whose unparalleled career of crime during the Civil War and the unsettled period that followed, kept the people of a dozen states in terror, Frank James had been living the life of a quiet farmer for more than thirty years.

GERMAN SUBMARINE SINKS IRISH STEAMER

London, Feb. 22.—The small Irish coasting steamer Downshire was sunk by a German submarine off Calf of Man, an island in the Irish sea. The Germans gave the crew five minutes in which to leave their ship. The crew landed at Dundrum, County Down, Ireland.

The submarine which sank the Downshire was the U-12. The Germans fired three shots at the steamer before her captain hove to. After the crew of the Downshire had taken to the boats, the Germans placed a bomb amidships of the steamer and exploded it, and the Downshire sank in a few minutes.

KAISER WILL DIRECT SUBMARINE BLOCKADE

London, Feb. 19.—The Daily Mail correspondent says he learned from Hamburg that the belief prevails there that Emperor William is going to Helgoland personally to direct Germany's submarine blockade. The wheat shortage in Germany, the correspondent adds, was concealed until the last moment for fear of discouraging the people. It is much greater than has hitherto been believed. Germany will only escape famine by a narrow margin.

Turkey Yields to Greece.

London, Feb. 20.—Turkey has yielded to the demand for satisfaction made by Greece because of the insult offered an attache of the Greek legation at Constantinople. The director general of police of Constantinople has visited the Greek legation in that city and in the presence of all the members of the staff he formally expressed his regret at the insult offered the Greek naval attache. He promised further that an official communication to this effect would be published in the press.

GERMANY'S REPLY ADDS TO CONCERN OF U. S. OFFICIALS

FRIENDLY TONE OF NOTE, HOWEVER, GIVES HOPE OF UNDERSTANDING AS TO NEUTRAL SHIPPING.

WILSON AND BRYAN READ COPY WITHOUT COMMENTS

Holland and Scandinavian Countries Are Apprehensive Concerning Situation and Have Consulted United States—Look for Removal of Causes.

Washington, Feb. 20.—Germany's reply to the American note of warning against any attacks on American vessels or lives in the new sea zones of war served to increase, rather than to diminish the concern of officials of the United States government over possible complications. The friendly tone of the communication, however, made a favorable impression and gave some hope that an understanding for the protection of neutrals yet might be obtained.

Officials Are Apprehensive.

Officials were apprehensive over the formal statement in the note that Germany disclaimed all responsibility for what might happen to neutral vessels venturing in the danger areas. The additional warning, too, that mines would be laid by Germany in the water surrounding Great Britain and Ireland, was regarded by them not only as menacing to ships carrying legitimate cargoes, but as likely to add further to the interruptions which American commerce has suffered since the outbreak of the war.

President Wilson and Secretary Bryan read the press copy of the German note, the official text being delayed in transmission. It is expected shortly. While no comment was made at either the White House or the State Department the feeling of grave concern was manifest.

That other neutral countries, especially Holland and the Scandinavian countries, also are apprehensive concerning the situation and have consulted the United States has become known. While there is no understanding implying joint action, if any neutral vessels are sunk the Washington government has made it plain that it is in accord with the steps already taken, by other neutral powers, copies of their notes and representations having been furnished to officials here.

Await Note From England.

Secretary Bryan refused to reveal what steps the United States would take if American vessels or lives were lost.

It was intimated in some official quarters that the United State is looking for the removal of some of the causes of the present complication in the forthcoming answer from England to the American note concerning the misuse of flags.

It was pointed out that if categorical assurances were given by Great Britain and her allies that none of their vessels would be permitted to fly the American or other neutral flags, the safety of American vessels in the war zones would be guaranteed and German submarines would be obliged to visit and search neutral vessels for contraband before destroying them as prizes. In this case, it was added, the dangers for neutral vessels laden with noncontraband cargoes would be confined only to mines, the indiscriminate laying of which on the high seas would be a subject of protest by the United States unless pilots or safe channels were given.

GERMANY'S VIEWS SET FORTH IN REPLY TO U. S.

Great Britain is, with the toleration of neutral governments, not only supplied with such goods as are not contraband, but with goods which are regarded by Great Britain if sent to Germany, as absolute contraband.

* * *

Germany trusts that the neutrals who so far have submitted to the disadvantageous consequences of Great Britain's hunger war in silence, or merely registered a protest, will display for Germany no smaller measure of tolerance, even if German measures, like those of Great Britain, present new terrors of naval warfare.

* * *

The German government is resolved to suppress the importation of war materials to Great Britain and her allies, and she takes it for granted that neutral governments, which so far have taken no steps against trafficking in arms with Germany's enemies, will not oppose forcible oppression by Germany of this trade.

* * *

If it is a formal right of neutrals to take no steps to protect their legitimate trade with Germany, and even to allow themselves to be influenced in the direction of the conscious and wilful destruction of their trade, on the other hand they have the perfect right, which they unfortunately do not exercise, to cease contraband trade, especially in arms, with Germany's enemies.

* * *

Germany is as good as cut off from her over-seas supply by the silent or protesting toleration of neutrals.

STATE NEWS

Resume of Important Happenings of Past Few Days.

SECTION GROWS FINE CORN

Todd County Exhibits Splendid Display of Maize and Alfalfa at Long Prairie Show.

Long Prairie.—Todd county farmers are progressive. This was proven by the wonderful display of corn and alfalfa exhibited at the Todd county corn show held at Long Prairie. Members of the Crop Breeders' association and visiting experts who were in attendance say the Todd county show excelled any ever held in the state.

For four years the farmers of the county have made a specialty of growing a few varieties of corn. The result has been that the product is now a high type of its kind and its growers claim for it the distinction of being a thoroughbred Todd county corn. The Todd County Breeders' association has gone so thoroughly into corn breeding that two distinct varieties have been developed. One is especially adapted for sandy land and the other for heavy clay soil. The same seed, it has been demonstrated, will not thrive equally upon both light and heavy land and the successful development and breeding of a seed adapted for a particular kind of soil is a great step forward.

Besides the corn display, there was a large exhibit of alfalfa, all of which was grown in Todd county.

The principal address was made by Professor Peter Miller of the Morris state farm school. The farmers were entertained at a motion picture show which was featured by three reels taken on the Minnesota state fair grounds at the 1914 fair.

Forty-eight farmers subscribed for stock in the Todd County Agricultural society. These subscriptions came in upon the announcement of an agricultural hall to be built upon the fair grounds the coming summer.

Firemen Lose Nozzle; House Burns.

Robbinsdale.—Members of the Robbinsdale fire department were considerably wrought up over reports that some one had borrowed the nozzle from the chemical apparatus to wet down a lawn last summer, had failed to bring it back and for that reason the fire that burned the home of N. T. Sidwell couldn't be put out. The nozzle was not borrowed by a citizen but was lost at the fire.

Theodore C. Snider, former member of the Minneapolis fire department, who operates the Robbinsdale chemical, said that when the apparatus was set and ready the nozzle was missing and that it could not be found. "No one knew how it came to be lost," said Mr. Snider.

"The village has a smaller chemical and that one was used. I went to Chief C. W. Ringer of the Minneapolis department to get another nozzle but learned a little later that our original nozzle had been found. It was on the apparatus when it reached the fire, but was lost there."

Wheaton Institute Well Attended.

Wheaton.—An institute at White Rock, S. D., was attended by 400 farmers. The principal speakers were H. E. Kiger, county agent; J. E. Palmer, superintendent of schools, Wheaton; W. J. Rupert, Wheaton, and C. R. Billings, county agent, Breckenridge. Domestic science demonstrations were made by Miss Laura Taylor of the Wheaton high school.

This was the best institute ever held in this section. A similar one was held at Tintah, Minn., with the same speakers. Though there was a severe storm, more than 150 farmers attended.

At both of these meetings the livestock situation, seed and seed testing, and similar farm problems were discussed. At Dumont, Minn., F. W. Murphy of Wheaton made an interesting address on "The Commercial Club, the Business Man and the Farmer." There were 350 farmers in attendance.

Alleged Forger Captured in Virginia.

Duluth.—Emery Salyards, said to have been known here under the name of Charles L. Thomas, and in La Crosse, Wis., under the name of Edward D. Sands, is under arrest at Richmond, Va., according to a report of the Duluth police. The police charge that Salyards, who is said to have been known as a business man in La Crosse, passed worthless checks in many cities and declared that he is wanted by the police in Winnipeg and Walla Walla, Wash. It is charged he escaped from Walla Walla penitentiary.

To Repeal Smallpox Ordinance.

St. Cloud.—The city council has declined to accede to the requests of the health department to repeal sections of the health ordinance that refer to smallpox quarantine regulations, and conflict with state board regulations. The city board of health would permit vaccinated persons to come and go at will into and from homes in which smallpox exists and permit vaccinated children to attend school from such homes. The council gave first reading to the repeal and then refused to take the decisive vote.

M. & ST. L. BUYS IOWA ROAD

President Newman Erb Denies Sale of Minneapolis Line to Soo or Canadian Pacific.

Minneapolis, Feb. 20.—After conferring with Edmund Pennington, president of the Soo Line, Newman Erb, president of the Minneapolis & St. Louis road, denied that negotiations were being made to sell the M. & St. L. to the Soo Line or to the Canadian Pacific. Mr. Erb said that his presence in Minneapolis concerned the taking over of the Des Moines & Fort Dodge road by the M. & St. L.

A meeting of the stockholders of the Des Moines & Fort Dodge road will be held in Des Moines, when the sale of the 134 miles of trackage and all property to the M. & St. L. will be authorized. There will be another meeting of the stockholders of the M & St. L. in Minneapolis, when the transaction will be ratified. Mr. Erb was here to arrange the details of the two meetings with W. H. Bremmer, general counsel of the M. & St. L. The St. Louis has operated the Des Moines & Fort Dodge road, which runs from Des Moines to Ruthven, on a lease for about three years. Negotiations for the sale have been pending for some time.

Deans of Normal Schools Meet.

Moorhead.—The first annual gathering of the deans of the normal schools of Minnesota was concluded with a dinner at Comstock hall of the Moorhead normal, at which the women of the faculty were present. Annual sessions of the deans will be held in the future and the present meeting is regarded as having been highly beneficial. Miss Richards of Winona presided for the first session and Mrs. Milne of Duluth at the second. Subjects of a technical nature relating to the work of the deans were discussed. They were addressed by Percy Mackaye of New York, and at noon entertained at luncheon by the domestic science department of the normal, following which Miss Stoner, dean of women at the agricultural college, and Miss Foster, dean of Fargo college, addressed the deans. The latter part of the afternoon was spent in visiting the agricultural college in Fargo.

Woman's Auxiliary Meets at Mankato.

Mankato.—The midwinter meeting of the woman's auxiliary of the board of missions of the Mankato deanery of the Episcopal diocese of Minnesota will be held in this city. A sermon will be preached in the forenoon by Bishop F. A. McElwain. Mrs. C. E. Conant, deanery president, of Wells, will preside at the business session. A conference on the work of the junior auxiliary will be held, led by Miss Elizabeth Yardley of Minneapolis. There will be a conference of the mission study class, led by Miss Mary C. Smith of Minneapolis, diocesan educational secretary. The meeting will close with a conference on the general work and organization of the woman's auxiliary, led by Mrs. H. C. Theopold of Faribault, diocesan president.

Farmers Vote to Continue Fight.

Winona.—The annual meeting of the Winona County Farmers' association was held here to consider principally how to continue the fight to prevent road improvement in the county under the Elwell law and the proposed issuance of about $500,000 of road bonds. The farmers present voted to continue the fight. The following officers were elected: President, J. G. Dyar, Saratoga; vice president, John Evenson, Minnesota City; secretary A. J. Rick, Homer; treasurer, J. W. Thompson, Lewiston. It was voted to hold the annual meetings of the association on Lincoln's birthday after this.

Minister's Son Takes Up Work.

Rochester.—George Gamble, son of the late Rev. G. H. Gamble, has announced that he will enter the ministry, taking up the work, he says, left undone by his father. He is a medical student at the state university, but in making his declaration to Rev. E. R. Pope, state superintendent of Baptist missions, declared that the moment he received the news of his father's death he vowed to discontinue his medical studies and enter the ministry. William Gamble, another son, who is a teacher in the northern part of the state, has planned to enter foreign mission fields.

Bemidji Re-elects Mayor.

Bemidji—William McQuaig was re-elected mayor by a plurality of 175 votes over Hiram Simons and Morris Kaplan. Kaplan was the Socialist candidate. The total vote was 729. George Stein was re-elected city clerk, winning over J. Peterson. George W. Rhea was renamed city treasurer over Fred M. Malzahn, and Thomas Lloyd was re-elected city assessor over Joseph C. Harris. Frank Lycan was elected alderman at large. His opponent was E. W. Hannah, a Socialist. Harris, who ran for assessor, was also a Socialist.

Primary Elections Held at Winona.

Winona.—The largest vote ever cast at a primary election in Winona was polled when nominations were made for the city election to be held April 5. The total vote was only 100 less than that cast at the city election itself two years ago. W. A. Hodgins swept the city for mayor, receiving more votes than cast for all his opponents together, so that his election to this office in April seems reasonably assured. This is the first time in Winona that nonpartisan nominations for city offices have been made

SYRUP OF FIGS FOR A CHILD'S BOWELS

It is cruel to force nauseating, harsh physic into a sick child.

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on — castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well-founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and that a teaspoonful given today saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Adv.

His Point of View.

"What is your idea of matrimony?" asked the fair maid who was still occupying the anxious seat.

"Well," rejoined the wise chap who had balked at the hurdle, "it's probably all right for those who haven't enough worry."

The Female of the Species.

"I tell you, sir," said the sad-eyed passenger with the bargain-counter tie, "all women are born gamblers."

"That's right," observed the button drummer. "And they nearly always win when they play hearts to catch diamonds."

When Your Eyes Need Care

Use Murine Eye Medicine. No Smarting—Feels Fine—Acts Quickly. Try it for Red, Weak, Sore Eyes and Granulated Eyelids. Murine is compounded by our Oculists—not a "Patent Medicine"—but used in successful Physicians' Practice for many years. Now dedicated to the Public and sold by Druggists at 50c per Bottle. Murine Eye Salve in Aseptic Tubes, 25c and 50c. Write for Book of the Eye Free. Murine Eye Remedy Company, Chicago. Adv.

Remark Hard to Explain.

Everyone had gathered in the drawing-room after dinner, and all were feeling contended with themselves as well as at peace with the outside world, when it was suggested as a pastime that every lady should state the gift she most coveted, and the possession of which she would most prize. With prompt acquiescence each registered her choice. Mrs. Wellman wished for the most exquisite jewels extant. Mrs. King desired to be the best-dressed woman in society, Mrs. Drayton preferred to own the handsomest turnouts, while Mrs. Smith craved popularity. Robinson, springing from his chair, exclaimed "Heavens! don't any of you care for beauty?" Some of them still think it was intentional.

Safety First.

John Sharp Williams stepped out of the senate chamber in response to the card of Bob Gates, who is a Washington correspondent of distinguished appearance and much political sapience.

Bob asked him a number of questions and then, in parting, he asked:

"By the way, senator, have you got a good cigar about you?"—putting the request under the head of unfinished business.

"No, I haven't but one left—and I just now bit the end off it preparatory to lighting it," replied John Sharp.

"If I'd just been a minute or two sooner—" suggested Bob.

"Not exactly," said the senator. "The fact is, when I started out here I bit the end off the cigar just for fear you might ask for it."

THE DOCTOR'S WIFE

Agrees With Him About Food.

A trained nurse says: "In the practice of my profession I have found so many points in favor of Grape-Nuts food that I unhesitatingly recommend it to all my patients.

"It is delicate and pleasing to the palate (an essential in food for the sick) and can be adapted to all ages, being softened with milk or cream for babies or the aged when deficiency of teeth renders mastication impossible. For fever patients or those on liquid diet I find Grape-Nuts and albumen water very nourishing and refreshing.

"This recipe is my own idea and is made as follows: Soak a teaspoonful of Grape-Nuts in a glass of water for an hour, strain and serve with the beaten white of an egg and a spoonful of fruit juice for flavouring. This affords a great deal of nourishment that even the weakest stomach can assimilate without any distress.

"My husband is a physician and n uses Grape-Nuts himself and orders it many times for his patients.

"Personally I regard a dish of Grape-Nuts with fresh or stewed fruit as the ideal breakfast for anyone—well or sick."

In stomach trouble, nervous prostration, etc., a 10-day trial of Grape-Nuts will usually work wonders toward nourishing and rebuilding and in this way end the trouble. Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Look in pkgs. for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

MEAT CLOGS KIDNEYS THEN YOUR BACK HURTS

Take a Glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers You—Drink Lots of Water.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys, they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.—Adv.

Her Preference.

Young Mawks had decided to enlist and go to war, and his wife was objecting.

"But, darling," he argued, "even if I were killed, just think how fine it would be to be the widow of a hero."

"Oh, no, Wilfred," pleaded the young wife earnestly, her mind reverting to a familiar proverb: "I would rather be the wife of a live jackass than a dead lion."—Judge.

SELF SHAMPOOING

With Cuticura Soap Is Most Comforting and Beneficial. Trial Free.

Especially if preceded by touches of Cuticura Ointment to spots of dandruff and itching on the scalp skin. These supercreamy emollients meet every skin want as well as every toilet and nursery want in caring for the skin, scalp, hair and hands.

Sample each free by mail with Book. Address postcard, Cuticura, Dept. XY, Boston. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

She Went.

"See how I can count, mamma," said Kitty. "There's my right foot. That's one. There's my left foot. That's two. Two and one make three. Three feet make a yard, and I want to go out and play in it."

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over 30 Years.

Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

Falmouth is probably the oldest port in England. It was used by the Phoenicians at least 2,500 years ago.

KOW-KURE, the great cow medicine, has such a wonderful tonic effect on the genital and digestive organs that many cow ailments commonly regarded as serious can be prevented or promptly relieved. Kow-Kure is invaluable in treating Abortion, Retained Afterbirth, Barrenness, Milk Fever, Scouring and Lost Appetite.

Sold by feed dealers and druggists; 50c and $1.00. Valuable book, "The Cow Doctor," free.

DAIRY ASSOCIATION CO.
Lyndonville, Vt.

KOW-KURE

The Wretchedness of Constipation

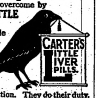
Can quickly be overcome by CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Purely vegetable—act surely and gently on the liver. Cure Biliousness, Headache, Dizziness, and Indigestion. They do their duty.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good



CANCER

Tumors, Lupus, successfully treated without knife or pain. All work guaranteed. Come, or write for Free Book. Dr. Williams, Specialist on Cancer
2904 University Av. S. E. Minneapolis.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM

A toilet preparation of merit. Helps to eradicate dandruff. For Restoring Color and Beauty to Gray or Faded Hair. 50c. and $1.00 at Druggists.

SUFFRAGE FIGHT TO COME BEFORE SENATE FEB. 25

VOTE ON MEASURE PROBABLY WILL BE TAKEN NEXT THURSDAY—SENATOR SAGENG RETURNS TO DESK.

COUNTY OPTION BILL IS MADE A SPECIAL ORDER

Prospect Is for Full Attendance in the House for the Vote Next Wednesday—Flurry Prevails When it Is Learned That Spooner May Be Absent.

St. Paul, Minn.—A vote on the woman's suffrage bill in the senate will probably be taken Thursday, Feb. 25. Senator O. O. Sageng, absent because of illness for a week, has returned to his desk and announced that he would probably call the bill up for debate that day at 2 p. m.

"I want to talk to some of the suffrage leaders before I ask for a special order for the bill," he said, "but I shall probably ask for the order Tuesday."

Suffrage leaders and anti-suffragists have been hard at work for the last week and a lively fight is expected.

The F. H. Peterson county option bill was made a special order in the house for Wednesday, Feb. 24, at 11 a. m., on recommendation of the temperance committee.

A flurry prevailed for a while among the county optionists on the discovery that L. C. Spooner, who had been counted for the bill, had an engagement to speak in Granite Falls Wednesday night, making it necessary for him to leave early Wednesday. After the supporters of the bill had tried in vain to get a postponement of the special order to Feb. 25, Gunnar B. Bjornson called up Granite Falls by long distance and obtained a postponement of Mr. Spooner's speech.

The prospect is for a full attendance in the house for the county option vote.

FIGHT TO KEEP BILL FROM BEING RECALLED

An effort of Senator Lende to recall from the house Senator G. H. Sullivan's butterfat bill, passed by the senate Wednesday failed in the senate. When Senator Lende made the motion to recall S. F. 216, Senator Sullivan seconded it.

"What is the bill?" Senator Sullivan asked.

"The bill reducing the percentage of butterfat from three and one-fourth per cent to three per cent," replied Senator Lende.

The senate went into uproarious laughter and Senator Sullivan started the fight to keep the bill from being recalled.

The resolution was debated for half an hour.

On the roll call eight senators voted to recall it and 49 voted against it.

REPEAL OF CIVIL SERVICE LAW INDICATED IN HOUSE.

The house has indicated its ability to pass the Dwyer bill repealing the Minneapolis Civil Service law, and its intention so to do. After a spirited two hours of debate the House adopted a motion to recommend the Dwyer bill for passage. The vote was 55 to 48.

While it requires 66 votes to pass a bill, those determined to repeal the Civil Service Law say that among the absentees there were fully a score who are opposed to civil service as it exists in Minneapolis. They predict they will have no trouble in obtaining the additional 11 votes when the bill comes up for final passage. This is conceded by those who oppose the repeal bill, but they say this bill will be killed in the Senate.

Agitate for County Division.

Residents around Perham, in Otter Tail county, are agitating for county division again. They want to set off 18 townships in the northeastern part of the big county, with Perham as the county seat. This is the "wet" section of Otter Tail county and under county option the new county might vote "wet," but it is likely to be dried up soon by the Indian bureau. Alex Nelson of Perham, former house member, was down this week working to have the St. Louis county division bill amended so Otter Tail can take advantage of it. This bill allows a division by petition, without holding any election.

Solons Visit Girls' School.

A party of legislators went to Sauk Center to visit the state school for girls. From Sauk Center the party will leave for Morris, the home of Representative Lewis C. Spooner of Stevens county, where a banquet will be tendered Speaker H. H. Flowers by the citizens of Morris. Those comprising the party include Representatives Gunnar B. Bjornson, George W. Burrows, Knud Wefald, Carl A. Wold, J. H. Boyd, Frank E. Minnette and A. R. Hinds and Senator Pierce A. Hilbert.

SAYS BILL IS MERELY A PROTECTIVE MEASURE

St. Paul, Minn.—Efficiency and economy was the subject of protracted debate in the house of representatives when Sam Y. Gordon succeeded in securing adoption of his resolution for the appointment of a committee to investigate and report to the house on the so-called needless state departments and employes.

As the resolution originally stood, Mr. Gordon had appointed his own committee. When the matter came up again he offered an amendment providing for the appointment by the speaker of two members from each congressional district.

The amendment was quickly adopted.

Spooner Against Resolution.

An "S. O. S." call was sent out for Representative L. C. Spooner, chairman of the house efficiency and economy committee, who was absent from his seat. He hurried into the chamber and took a strong stand against the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. Gordon during the debate said that it was very apparent that the efficiency and economy bill would not be adopted at the present session, and that his resolution merely was a protective measure.

BILL WOULD ABOLISH HIGHWAY COMMISSION

The state highway commission will be abolished and road building will be placed in the hands of county boards if a bill introduced in the house by Representative John H. Boyd of Crookston becomes a law. Supervision of the distribution of funds would be in the hands of a commission composed of the secretary of state, the state auditor and the state treasurer, who would serve without additional compensation.

A similar bill was introduced in the senate by Senators J. H. Baldwin, C. L. Swenson, F. A. Duxbury, S. B. Nelson and J. A. Gandrud.

With several minor amendments attached to it, the bill recently introduced by Sam Y. Gordon authorizing political party conventions, reappeared in the house.

An eight-hour working day bill was introduced by Representative A. O. Devold, J. W. Woodfill and A. L. Lennon.

MINNETTE BILL LACKS CONTROL OF STOCK SALE

The Minnette state control telephone bill, recommended for passage by the House telephone and telegraph committee, again is lacking a section regulating issuance of stocks and bonds.

The present Minnette bill places the regulation of telephone companies under the state board of railroad and warehouse commission. In broad terms, it gives the railroad and warehouse commission the same powers over telephone companies operating in Minnesota as it has over the railroad and express companies.

Seek Relief From Cashman Act.

Workings of the Cashman distance tariff law have imposed a serious handicap on many villages in the state, according to Representative Ivor J. Lee of Glenwood, who has introduced a bill to amend the act and permit "long line" roads to meet competition of the "short line" roads at local points. Introduction of the Lee bill presages a struggle for relaxing some of the iron-clad conditions of the Cashman act which are being complained of in communities that are fairly fighting for their lives under conditions that now obtain.

Bill Provides For Party Conventions.

A bill that its authors will ask to have substituted for a former one, providing for party political conventions, was introduced in the Senate by Senators Edward Rustad and A. J. Rockne.

The bill allows members of the State Committees to determine the number of delegates from each precenict in the various Congresional and County Conventions. The bill introduced into the House by Representative S. Y. Gordon placed the number of delegates at five.

Tax on Fire Premiums.

Asserting that the state fire marshal's office reports have not shown how the money it has received during the last year had been spent, Senator A. J. Rockne put an amendment on the bill requiring the tax on fire insurance premiums to be paid into the state treasurer's office. The bill was passed as amended by the senate. It had formerly provided that the money would be paid direct to the state fire marshal's office.

Bill Seeks Fees From Wards.

Senator H. M. Benson's bill requiring a fee of $10 a month to be paid from the estates of persons committed to the public institutions of the state whenever those estates can afford to make such payments or from their relatives, if able to pay, was recommened for passage by the Senate Committee on Public Buildings.

Favor Appropriation for Prison.

The bill authorizing the state board of control to set aside $57,000 out of the Stillwater prison fund for the construction of a woman's prison building, two barns and the purchase of a dairy herd, was recommended to pass by the house appropriations committee.

The committee also recommended the bill appropriating $5,000 to complete the Mustinka state ditch.

An appropriation of $1,000 for a commission to regulate uniform legislation met with disfavor and was killed.

Winter Chills Bring Kidney Ills

A spell of cold, damp weather is always followed by a fine crop of kidney troubles and backache.

Colds and chills damage the kidneys. Other troubles common to winter weather are just as bad. Grip, tonsilitis, quinsy, pneumonia or any other infectious disease hurts the kidneys by overloading the blood with poisons. The kidneys get worn, weak and inflamed trying to work it off.

It isn't hard to strengthen weak kidneys though, if you act quickly. At the first sign of backache, dizzy spells, headaches, loss of weight, nervousness, depression and painful, irregular kidney action, start using Doan's Kidney Pills. Rest the kidneys by simple eating, avoidance of overwork and worry, and getting more rest and sleep. A milk diet is fine.

This sensible treatment should bring quick benefit and prevent serious kidney diseases like dropsy, gravel and Bright's disease.

Clip this advertisement and mail it to the address below for a free trial of Doan's Kidney Pills, the best recommended kidney remedy in the world. You'll decide it worth a trial, when you read this enthusiastic testimony.

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

"I'd be all right only for my back."

A Total Wreck

Minnesota Man Tells of Terrible Suffering and Remarkable Cure

Anthony P. Kern, R. R. No. 7, Faribault, Minn., says: "From my birth I suffered untold misery from my kidneys. I was so bad most of the time that my life was a burden. I was often attacked by terrible dizzy spells and specks floated before my eyes. My back ached more or less and was a source of much annoyance. My heart was so badly affected that at times it almost stopped beating. I was always tired and discouraged and after I sat in a chair for a few minutes I fell asleep. After a hard day's work I complained of my back being lame. I kept getting worse all the time until I was a total wreck, unfit for anything. My hands and feet became swollen and my face became twice its natural size. I had a constant desire to pass the kidney secretions and they were filled with sediment. I finally used Doan's Kidney Pills and they restored me to the best of health."

DOAN'S KIDNEY
PILLS

"When Your Back is Lame—Remember the Name"

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

Sold by all Dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N.Y., Proprietors

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

THE EMBARGO ON WHEAT

The United States Wheat Production Admits of 100 Million Bushels for Export.

The talk in the press some little time back of placing an embargo on wheat, brought forcibly to the minds of the people of the United States a condition that may at some time in the near future face them. 100 million bushels of an export of wheat means a splendid revenue to the country as well as to the farmer, and if this were assured year after year, there would be reason for considerable congratulation. But last year's magnificent and abundant crop, which was estimated at 891 million bushels, cannot be expected every year. With a home consumption of 775 million bushels, and a production in many years of little more than this, the fact is apparent that at an early date the United States will have to import wheat. It will be then that the people of the United States will be looking to other markets for a supply. And it is then that the value of Western Canada lands will be viewed with considerable favor. The great area of wheat lands in Canada will then be called upon to provide the greatest portion of the old world's supply, and also, in the opinion of the writer, that of the United States as well. At present there are only about 12 million acres of these lands producing wheat. There are five times that many acres that can be brought under successful cultivation. Apart altogether from the value of these lands as wheat producers there is an increased value to them from the fact that the soil is especially adapted to the growing of many other kinds of grain as well as all manner of cultivated grasses, while the native grasses are a wonderful asset in themselves. The climate is especially favorable to the raising of live stock, such as horses, cattle, sheep and hogs. All these bring into the limelight the adaptability of the soil, the climate and all other necessary conditions, to the carrying on of dairy farming, in a most profitable way.

There is no question that high prices for all that the farmer can grow or raise will continue for some years, and this is the great opportune time to take advantage of what Western Canada offers. Lands may be had as a free grant. These are mostly long ways at the present time, but sooner or later will be well served by railways that are projected into these districts. Land may also be secured by purchase at reasonable price, and on easy terms from holders of same. In many cases farms partly improved may be rented. A Winnipeg paper said recently: "Canada wants American immigrants. They make good Canadian citizens." And then speaking of the erroneous impression that has gained some publicity in a portion of the United States press, says: "It cannot be too forcibly impressed upon the American mind that in coming to Canada they place themselves under the freest democracy the world knows. No citizen of this country, whether native or naturalized, can be compelled to military service. The only compulsion is the compulsion of conscience and patriotic duty. That is the motive that has prompted thousands of Canadians to offer their lives. They are fighting as free men."—Advertisement.

In After Years.

"Beauty," remarked the poetic youth, "may draw us with a single hair."

"During the courtship, yes," rejoined the bald-headed man with a sigh, "but after marriage she is more likely to grab a handful."

BILIOUS, HEADACHY, SICK "CASCARETS"

Gently cleanse your liver and sluggish bowels while you sleep.

Get a 10-cent box.

Sick headache, biliousness, dizziness, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath—always trace them to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months. Adv.

Reminiscence.

"I can remember when we could get an idea of how an election was going by taking a straw vote."

"We never depend on straw votes out our way. The only chance of learning which way the election was going was to discover which side had the most two-dollar bills."

GRANDMA USED SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HER GRAY HAIR

She Made Up a Mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to Bring Back Color, Gloss, Thickness.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of the famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time, by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.—Adv.

Too Much to Bear.

Friend—Why are you crying, Bobby?

Bobby—Ma whipped me because my face was dirty, and then washed it.—Judge.

They stop the tickle. Dean's Mentholated Cough Drops stop coughs quickly. A pleasant remedy—5c at all good Druggists.

The golden rule is all right, but the one used by a lot of people is only plated.

Smallpox Stamped Out.

Of 3,164 deaths in the great epidemic in Montreal 85 per cent were of children under ten years. It is estimated that 60,000,000 persons died of smallpox in Europe in the eighteenth century. The disease is practically stamped out now in civilized countries. Doctor Rotch reports that in Boston in 15 years there has been no death from smallpox in children vaccinated.

Decidedly Unneutral.

Mrs. Knicker—Is your husband neutral?

Mrs. Bocker—No; he blows up every bridge I give.

Certain-teed

A real guarantee on roofing!

A useless risk is to buy roofing not guaranteed by a responsible concern. When you buy our roofing you get the written guarantee of the world's largest manufacturers of roofing and building papers.

Buy materials that last

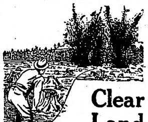
Certain-teed Roofing

—our leading product—is guaranteed 5 years for 1-ply, 10 years for 2-ply and 15 years for 3-ply. We also make lower priced roofing, slate surfaced shingles, building papers, wall boards, out-door paints, plastic cement, etc.

Ask your dealer for products made by us. They are reasonable in price and we stand behind them.

General Roofing Manufacturing Co.
World's largest manufacturers of Roofing and Building Papers

New York City, Boston, Chicago, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Atlanta, Cleveland, Detroit, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Kansas City, Minneapolis, San Francisco, Seattle, London, Hamburg, Sydney



Clear Land NOW!

FOR 1915 CROPS

Don't wait for warm weather. Get the stumps out in March and April by using

DU PONT RED CROSS EXPLOSIVES

They are LOW FREEZING, hence work well in cold weather without thawing. Follow President Wilson's advice, increase acreage and get the big profits from food crops in 1915 and 1916. Order Red Cross now. For nearest dealer's name and Farmer's Handbook of full instructions, write

DU PONT POWDER COMPANY
CHICAGO OFFICE McCORMICK BLDG.

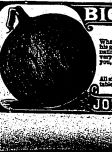
BEST MARKET for POULTRY—VEAL—CREAM HIDES—EGGS—BEANS Write us for Price List and Tags. THE R. E. COBB CO., 14 E. 3rd Street, St. Paul, Minn.

Sudan and Billion $ Grass Crops in 100 days from seeding! Produces enormously. Positive cure for hay shortage. BIG CATALOG FREE. John A. Salzer Seed Co., Box 717, La Crosse, Wis.

WOULD like to hear from owner having stock of merchandise or other business proposition for sale. Price must be right. O. O. Mattson, 922 Andrus Bldg., Dept. W., Minneapolis, Minn.

Virginia Farms and Homes FREE CATALOGUE OF SPLENDID BARGAINS. R. B. CHAFFIN & CO., Inc., Richmond, Va.

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 9-1915.



BIG MONEY IN ONIONS!!

In 1914 an acre Salzer's Cabbage brought $250; an acre Onions, $300.

Special Introduction Collection for 12c

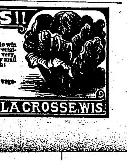
When Gideon marshalled his hosts at Kedron, he selected but 300 QUALITY men to win his great victory. So Salzer for forty-one years has been selecting, improving and originating new Vegetable varieties, until to-day his list contains only the cream, the very, very best! Only QUALITY SEEDS! We do want you to test them and hence gladly mail you, for 12c postage, our big Seed Catalogue free, with one generous package each:

Phila. First Early Cabbage; May 1st Carrot; Early Cucumber; All Summer Long Lettuce; A Mixture of Onions; Juicy Radish.

All six packages for but 12c, contains enough seed to supply you with rich, juicy vegetables, and lots and lots of them, during the early spring and summer.

Read the Red River Potato King's Romance in Salzer's Catalogue.

JOHN A. SALZER SEED Co. BOX 717. LA CROSSE, WIS.



THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Pennington County, Minnesota.

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3,1879

The first troops that went out from Canada to the European war are now in the trenches in France where they can face the German long range guns and get all the glory that they want out of it.

If there is to be an embargo placed on the shipment of wheat there should be one placed on shipments of cotton, so as to depress the price, for the northern wheat raiser. If we are to start the embargo business treat all parts of the country alike.

The fellows who want to place an embargo on the shipment of wheat must be twin brothers to the fellows who figured out how to reduce the price of meat by keeping all calves slaughtered for veal until they were four years old without allowing the farmer anything for feeding them.

Congressman Steenerson should have all the credit due him for his efforts to improve the rural mail service, but he can do very little with the present administration, as they are running behind steadily, and increasing the National debt, and of course have to practice economy on every corner.

Some of the farmers seem to be of the opinion that if the Red Lake River remains as it is that the government will build a bridge across it. We have been waiting for ten years for that government bridge, and we now favor pulling down their government fence so the people can have a right to build a bridge across this river as soon as they are able, and also a railroad company who want to construct a north and south line of railway through this country.

The post office department have again turned down any proposition for a better mail service for the town of Mayfield. But never mind boys, it is only two more years before there is likely to be a change in that department that will be able to see the injustice of giving one part of the country a daily mail service and another part a twice a week service. Of course that comes through the Singers of Kratka and Rhoda, as they have the pull with the powers that be, but the powers that be will find out what that pull amounts to when they need it.

Judging from the last week's issue of the Oklee Herald there is not a general merchandise store doing business in that village. This does not speak very well for the business men of that town who were so anxious to get a newspaper established there about a year ago. Our sympathy goes out to the unfortunate editor of the Herald, who got caught in a trap of promised liberal advertising, only to find that after he had established his paper, that the town had got what they wanted, and immediately withdrew their advertising as a useless expense, which of course will sooner or later kill their local paper, and place them in a position of not being able to get another one established there. The same thing usually happens in every new village that gets a newspaper started. After it is established and places them on the map they will pull out their adds, and some of them will borrow the paper to read to save the price of subscription.

Consolidated Schools

Rhoda, Minn.
Feby. 23, 1915.

Editor Sunbeam:—

Some time ago a few of our Mayfield farmers here began to talk consolidated schools, and was well on the way upon the strength of the information furnished by the state, upon the subject, but in order to come right down to the actual facts, in regard to the cost and maintenance of such a school. A letter was sent to County Superintendent of Schools of Clay County, Mr. S. O. Tang, and he gave me the following figures showing the running expenses of School District No. 78, which is a country consolidated school, for the year of 1914, as follows; (Class C)

Paid for teachers' wages	$2,570
" " feed & school supplies	$1,514.46
" " repairs and improving grounds	$296.60
" " library books	$25.00
" " Text books	$224.98
" " Transportation	1,394.50
" " all other purposes	513.80
Total	$6,539.34

These figures show the actual running expenses of such a school in operation. Now what other facts do we want? When we know the cost of the buildings, and have a clear idea of the whole affair, and can plainly see what we got to go up against, on such a proposition. Is it not time that we halt long enough to find out what this means in taxes? It surely is. Now to further prove to you what the tax payers in the above district No. 78 are up against we will give you an idea what they must contribute towards the support of this school. The total tax including town, school, county and state in district No. 78 is as follows. The lowest $118.66, average $138.85 and highest $162.39 per quarter section of land. Those people have no ditch taxes to pay. Are you ready to shoulder a burden of this kind in addition to what you already have? Let the people know the facts.

W. A. Swanson.

COLDS ARE OFTEN MOST SERIOUS

STOP POSSIBLE COMPLICATIONS.

The disregard of a Cold has often brought many a regret. The fact of Sneezing, Coughing, or a Fever should be warning enough that your system needs immediate attention. Certainly Loss of Sleep is most serious. It is a warning given by Nature. It is man's duty to himself to assist by doing his part. Dr. King's New Discovery is based on a scientific analysis of Colds. 50c. at your Druggist. Buy a bottle to-day.—adv.

THE LIVER REGULATES THE BODY

A SLUGGISH LIVER NEEDS CARE.

Someone has said that people with Chronic Liver Complaint should be shut up away from humanity, for they are pessimists and see through a "glass darkly." Why? Because mental states depend upon physical states. Biliousness, Headaches, Dizziness and Constipation disappear after using Dr. King's New Life Pills. 25c. at your Druggist. adv.—

STOP THAT COUGH—NOW

When you catch Cold, or begin to Cough, the first thing to do is to take Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey, It penetrates the linings of the Throat and Lungs and fights the Germs of the Disease, giving quick relief and natural healing. "Our whole family depend on Pine-Tar-Honey for Coughs and Colds," writes Mr. E. Williams, Hamilton, Ohio. It always helps. 25c. at your Druggist.—Adv.

WE HAVE
$150,000.00
TO LOAN ON FARMS IN
PENNINGTON COUNTY
Write Or Call on Us At FIRST NATIONAL BANK
THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN.

DO YOUR BANKING WITH
FARMERS STATE BANK
GOODRIDGE - - MINNESOTA
CAPITAL AND SURPLUS $12, 000.
6 per cent paid on time deposits
Fire and Torrado Insurance Written in Responsible Companies.
FARM LOANS A SPECIALITY
J. M. BISHOP, President JAY PAYNE Vice-President
NICK BUNDHUND, Cashier

McIntosh will again vote on the license question at their spring election, which shows that those favoring the licensing of saloons in that village like to be defeated.

Consolidated Schools

It looks strange to us to see people living in this sparsely settled region talking and getting up petitions for consolidated schools. Do the people who are living here want to tax themselves off from their farms to hire teams to draw one or two children five or six miles to school, passing vacant land all the way? If you have been led into signing one of these petitions, take a walk to-morrow morning and get your name off from that list.

Consolidated schools are supported principally by state aid that is obtained by attendance of school children. Where are your children around Erie and Highlanding to draw this money? Read the facts and figures published in another colum about the taxes paid by the farmers of Clay county who live in a consolidated school district.

We can't understand why our present county superintendent of schools should be trying to get consolidated schools in this locality, when he must certainly know that at least half of the land is unoccupied, and that to add this burden on top of the ditch tax, will drive what few farmers there are left out of the country.

IT REALLY DOES RELIEVE RHEUMATISM.

Everybody who is afflicted with Rheumatism in any form should by all means keep a bottle of Sloan's Liniment on hand. The minute you feel pain or soreness in a joint or muscle, bathe it with Sloan's Liniment. Do not rub it. Sloan's penetrates almost immediately right to the seat of pain, relieving the hot, tender, swollen feeling and making the part easy and comfortable. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25 cents of any druggist and have it in the house—against Colds, Sore and Swollen Joints, Lumbago, Sciatica and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief. Buy a bottle to-day.—Advertisement.

Distressing.

"And so you were held up abroad by the war. You suffered many inconveniences no doubt."

"Yes, indeed. Why, for weeks before I could get out there wasn't a tango parlor open."—Pittsburgh Press.

Prolific Fungi.

An average sized mushroom will produce as many as 1,800,000,000 spores; and a common toadstool shaggy cap has been shown to produce as many as 5,000,000,000. Fortunately for the other inhabitants of the world, however, the probability of successful growth of any given spore is somewhat remote.

The mushroom or toadstool plant is formed by fine filamentous threads which ramify beneath the soil, and if we assume that a successful plant of the mushroom or shaggy caps produces as many as ten mushrooms or toadstools we find that the chance against successful growth to maturity is respectively about 18,000,000,000 and 50,000,000,000 to one in the two species mentioned. Even more prolific than the mushrooms and toadstools proper is the giant puffball, a large specimen of which has been known to produce as many as 7,000,000,000,000 spores.—London Knowledge.

Empty Compliments.

Fifty years or more ago Sir Harry Smith, after whose wife Ladysmith was named, was governor of Cape Colony, and led a number of campaigns against the Kaffirs. Returning from a particularly lively one, he held a review of his troops, who were in a most dilapidated condition—barefooted, ragged and half starving.

When the time came for him to say a few words he lavished praise upon them, dwelling upon their bravery, endurance and even upon their soldier like appearance.

This last compliment was too much for the patience of the old color-sergeant. He stepped forward—tattered and unkempt—saluted most respectfully and then said:

"Begging your pardon, Sir 'Arry, we don't want no 'ammion: We want boots."

This outspoken criticism was fortunately taken in good part and shortly afterward the men got their boots.—London Scraps.

FIRST STATE BANK,
Of Plummer Minnesota.

You Run Your Business With a Check Book - How About Your Home?
BILL

"BILLS, bills, bills—nothing but bills!" frequently is the complaint of the head of the family. No man would think of running his business WITHOUT A CHECK BOOK. How about YOUR home? The running of the home today is a BUSINESS PROPOSITION.

Open a CHECKING ACCOUNT With Us at Once

J. A. DUFFY President, Henry Enderlie, Cashier

FARMERS &
MERCHANTS
STATE BANK
Oklee Minn.

The rapid growth of this bank is the best evidence that its policy and methods meet with the approval of the people in our community.

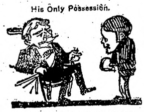
You will find this bank as liberal in its dealings as is consistent with sound banking.

We are at all times prepared to discuss your requirements with you and invite consultation.

Pay your bills with checks on this bank.
Farm Loans At Lowest Rates And On Easy Terms.
Six per cent interest paid on time deposits.
CAPITAL AND SURPLUS—————$14,500.00
J. A. C. Torgerson, V. P. W. B. Torgerson, Cashier.

We have for sale one of the best quarter sections of land in the town of Highlanding, located one mile south of Highlanding, Creamery. This farm will be sold cheap as the owner is a non resident and desires to use the money invested in other business. For terms and full particulars call on W. G. Hunt, Sunbeam, Minn

His Only Possession.



Colonel Gruff—You seem to have a good appetite.

Hungry Hawkins—Ah, sir, that's all I have left in the world that I can call my own.—Boston Traveler.

With Military Honors.

It is not universally known what is meant by a funeral "with full military honors." In such a funeral the coffin is borne on a gun carriage.

If the dead soldier was an infantryman his sword and helmet rest on his coffin.

At the funeral of a cavalry soldier his sword and helmet are fastened to the saddle of his horse, which is led immediately behind the gun carriage, and his top boots, with spurs attached, are fastened in the stirrups, with the toes pointing backward.

A firing party, drawn, if possible, from the deceased's regiment, fire three volleys over the grave, and the "Last Post" is then sounded by buglers.—Pearson's Weekly.

Why He Didn't Cry.

Mother—Goodness, how did you hurt your finger so?

Little Son—With a hammer.

"When?"

"A good while ago."

"I didn't hear you cry."

"No, mother. I thought you were out."—Stray Stories.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam Jan. 29th 1915

Department of the Interior., U. S. Land office at Crookston Minn. Jan. 22nd, 1915. Notice is hereby given that Carl P. Anderson of Erie Minn. who on November, 25th. 1907, made Homestead Entry No. 1373 Serial No 04591, for the E ½ N E ¼ and who on July 1st, 1911 made Additional Homestead Application Serial No. 06[illegible] for the W ½ N E ¼ all in Section 30 Township 153 N. Range 39 West Fifth Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Five Year Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U.S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls, Minnesota on the 10th day of March 1915.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Lars C. Fevig, Olof O. Omlid, Nick Meyers, Chris Odegaard, all of Erie, Minn.

Proof made according to law under which entry was made.

Peter M. Ringdal.
Register.

U. S. Mail.

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 1:05 p. m., on Tuesday Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.35 p.m

Wm. G. Hunt, p.m.

W. G. Hunt

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. XIV. SUNBEAM, PENNINGTON COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, MARCH 5, 1915 NO. 51.

THE LOCAL NEWS

Mrs. T. G. Rome made a pleasant call at Sunbeam yesterday.

K. M. Kratzer and W. G. Hunt were up to Goodridge Monday, after Marquis seed wheat.

There is to be a ball at the Wojnarowski hall in the town of Hickory, on Saturday evening March 13th. Good music. All are invited.

Advertisements are out for bids to carry the mail from Sunbeam to Rhoda post office for four years. Full information can be had by applying at Sunbeam post office.

The annual election for the town of Highlanding will be held at the Highlanding school house next Tuesday March 9th. The polls will open at 9 o'clock A. M. All voters invited to attend.

EOR SALE: 50 bushels of timothy seed which I will sell at five cents a pound. Also Northwestern dent seed corn for sale at five cents a pound.
C. Peterson, sec. 27, town of Kratka, post office Kratka.

Oklee has certainly established a great reputation as a wheat market this fall, and have undoubtedly handled more wheat the past fall than any other market in either Red Lake or Pennington counties.

The farmers of the town of Mayfield met at the Langie school house on last Sunday, and organized a farmers' club. They will meet at the same place on February 20th, at 2 o'clock P. M. to perfect the organization. All are invited to attend.

The roads are very bad at present, as there is neither sleighing or wheeling. If you use a wagon the deep snow drifts will be hard to get through, while with a sleigh you have plenty of bare ground to pull across, and spots of glarey ice that is difficult for an unshod horse to get over.

The county option enthusiasts will undoubtedly make haste to call elections to vote out license, but their haste might be their undoing. If they get the election called at the time the farmers are busy sowing their spring crops, the vote is likely to be very light in the country, where they must depend on getting a big majority in order to win.

We understand that the consolidated school proposition will be turned down in this part of Pennington county for the present. There is too much vacant land here to get the necessary scholars to have a consolidated school, and tax payers who expect to live here and make their home here should fight any move to consolidate the vacant farms of this territory into consolidated school districts.

One of postmaster Stephen Singer's latest moves is to try to get the government to establish rural free delivery, so as to gather up cancellation for Kratka post office. A fellow came up from near Mavie post office last week to try to get signers in the town of Highlanding, but he found that the people in Highlanding were "next" to Singer and his mail schemes, and would not sign his petitions. "When mine boy Stephen" gets one of his smart streaks on he can with dad's assistance fix up some great reports to send into the post office department, but he can not create settlers enough in his imagination, on the vacant lands in this territory to get rural free mail delivery.

Dr. W.O. Tessier of Oklee, was called out to visit Mrs. Joseph LaCounte last Sunday, who is very seriously ill.

Don't be led astray by good talkers, who are paid for talking into trying to consolidate schools in this locality, unless you want to pay $168.00 school tax on a quarter section of land.

Congressman Steenerson made the present administration sit up and take notice, in his speech made on February 18th. We will devote some space on comment on this speech next week.

Watch Your Mail Service.

We understand that the people living on the Rudell mail route and tributary to Rudell post office are making a practice of mailing their letters on the mail route, thus throwing the cancellation all into the Rhoda post office. This may be a little more convenient for the people living along the route, but it will sooner or later be the death of your present mail service. If the people of Mayfield township had mailed all of their letters at Malone post office, instead of placing them into mail boxes to be mailed at Kratka post office, they would now have a better mail service. The sure way to kill off mail routes is to do all mailing so as throw the cancellation to Rhoda and Kratka post offices, and if the people continue to do this it will not be long before they can drive or walk to Kratka or Rhoda post offices and get their mail, which is what the Singers are working for. If it is a little more inconvenient at the present time for you to mail letters at your home post office, it will pay you to do it if you do not want to be compelled to soon have to go to Kratka or Rhoda post offices after your mail.

